Now, Brother Editor, let's imagine a little. Brother Z sits pondering over his condition, wondering how he will ever get back on his feet. His cupboard is practically bare, his family without suitable attire, his car notes in arrears, duns, bills, notices in abundance. The mail carrier arrives at his house with an appeal from the Commission on Benevolences to put on an Every-Member Canvass for benevolences. What is normal reaction? Is he the man to do this? He's the key to the situation, isn't he? Right here the program of the church has become paralyzed. Here the enthusiasatic program so successfully launched at the General Conference strikes a stump, and is defeated in its purpose so far as that charge is concerned. Who is to blame? Certainly not the General Conference or the General Boards.

Then he opens another letter. It is from the Advocate, asking for subscriptions. Surely this is a worthy cause, but a people that will not pay the preacher certainly will not subscribe to the church paper. If he goes to them for any cause, the only reply he gets is, "Why, we haven't even paid the pastor yet;" and here his argument stops. He's a whipped man, and everyone he meets may easily read it on his countenance. He is called to be a minister of God, but his cause is defeated, and he is as truly nailed to a cross as was the Master on Calvary. The shame, the ignominy of it all is more than a mere human can bear. His creditors say he is a dead beat, his enemies say he is a crook, his friends say he is a bad manager. I do not see a grain of truth in either statement. He is a victim of a serious fault in our Church—he's an unpaid pastor.

Brethren of the laity, if you will start anew and see that your pastor gets a check for his salary up to date, and see that it stays that way throughout the year, he will come out like cotton that receives a bountiful supply of nitrate of soda or like a simmering fire to which needed fuel has been added. He will take on new life, the church will catch the spirit, and God will wonderfully bless you.

Take care of your pastor and he will take care of the church with the help of the Heavenly Father.

REV. CHARLES C. EVANS

By Rev. W. T. Griffin

That "death loves a shining mark" must be true when we look at the roll call of those of the Mississippi Conference who have so recently been called home. Ten noble men in two years having given a good account of themselves have crossed over the river. The last to answer the call was Charles C. Evans. On Christmas day, while on his way to Pachuta, Miss., to visit his daughter, alone in his car, he pulled his car outside the road, with his foot on the brakes, the engine still running, he quietly "fell on sleep" and was found the next morning, still sitting with glasses on, a smile on his face, his spirit had gone back to the God who gave it. But he was not alone, for, like Enoch, "he walked with God and God took him." This was and is still the consolation of his loving companion and children and those others who loved him.

On Sunday, December 28, his body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Heidleberg, where he served as pastor and where loved ones are buried. Rev. W. B. Jones, his former presiding elder, had charge of the services, assisted by Rev. J. F. Campbell and others.

Thus we have lost a true soldier of the Cross, a knightly soul, a chivalrous spirit. There never seemed to be a time when he was not ready for duty. He stood for what he believed to be right, even if odds were against him. Cringing fear was not in his make-up. His pure heart made him courageous. One felt all this when in his presence.

Quiet and reserved by nature, by grace humble, he was felt when attacking the wrong or defending the right. He loved his friends, but had a contempt for shams. Was always ready to "lend a hand"; accommodating to a degree, one could see his sincerity in his attitude, which was always cheerful, even his car, which he loved so much, was always ready for service. He always endeared himself to his congregation and to the public, wherever he was assigned. For thirty-nine years he went as a faithful minister of Jesus Christ.

He was a prophet as well as preacher. He believed with his whole heart, told it in a convincing way; his soul was on fire. He spoke with authority and he expected people to believe it, for he spoke out of the oracles of God. No one tired under his ministry. At Natchez he served five years, and they wished him longer. He visited from house to house and carried a message of life and hope.

A memorial service was held at Natchez and one expressed the sentiments of all by saying, "Brother Evans was such a rare soul, so fair, so true, so unselfish and kind and worthy of love." A prominent funeral director of the city wrote, "For twenty-five years I have been engaged in this sad work and have never found a minister who more freely, without thought of self or convenience, responded to all calls, for rich and poor alike," and "He was just as brave when a fight was on for civic righteousness."

Born October 1, 1863, in Jasper County; first married to Miss Lucy Greer in 1884. To this union were born six children. His wife died September, 1912. During 1914 he was married to Mrs. Josie Davis Childress, Waynesboro, Miss., and for seventeen years together they graced parsonages and ministered to the "flock of God."

He is survived by three sons, J. L. Trinidad, Colo.; Thomas, Magee, Ark.; A. B., Van, Texas; two daughters, Mrs. Pearl Hutcherson, Louisville, Miss.; Mrs. E. W. Thornton, Pachuta, Miss.

Charles C. Evans, from the Montrose Circuit, was admitted on trial into the seventy-eighth session of the Mississippi Annual Conference at Brookhaven, in 1891, Bishop E. R. Hendrix, presiding. His assignments were as follows: Homewood, 1892; Hillsboro, 1893-95; Shiloh, 1896; Satartia, 1897-1900; Benton, 1901; Roxie and Hamburg, 1902-03; Anguilla, 1904; Lucedale, 1905-06; Heidelberg and Vossburg, 1907-10; Decatur, 1911-13; Laurel, Kingston, 1914; Scooba, 1915-16; Bay St. Louis, 1917-18; Canton, 1919-20; Hazlehurst, 1921; Natchez, 1922-26; Centenary, McComb, 1927-28; Waynesboro, 1929, and Moss Point, 1930-31. He had just begun his second year at Moss Point.

Bishop Joseph S. Key ordained him deacon at Hazlehurst on December 10, 1893, and Bishop W. W. Duncan, elder at Yazoo City, December 8, 1895.

He served on important committees and boards of his Conference. For sixteen years he was a member of the Conference Board of Missions and the last two quadrenniums he was its president. In this capacity he gave intelligent leadership to the cause of missions during one of the most exacting periods of the board's service.

The Conference will miss him, his loved ones will miss him and so will one who joined the Conference the same day and for thirty-nine years we have been "pals," being often together. May heaven keep us true that we may all meet him on high.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE CHANGED

Dear Editor: Please announce that the Meridian District Conference will be held at East End, Meridian, instead of Scooba. The date remains the same as formerly announced—April 16-17. Bishop Collins Denny has very kindly promised to preside over the sessions of the conference.

Let all the pastors in the Meridian District, of the Mississippi Annual Conference, supply me with the names of their delegates to the District Conference not later than April 6. Also supply Rev. P. M. Caraway, pastor of East End Church, Meridian, with the names of your delegates and charge lay leaders. Let the local preachers remember they are required by the Book of Discipline to make written report to the District Conference.

GIVE FLOWERS NOW, IS URGED

Using as a background the beautiful and touching story of the anointing of Jesus by Mary of Bethany, recorded in Matthew 26:6-13, the Rev. G. A. Morgan, pastor of Mangum Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, spoke Sunday morning on the value of expressions of love and sympathy.

He said in part: "It is a beautiful custom to send flowers when people are dead; it means a great deal to the members of the sorrowing family.' But how much better to send a flower while the person is living. Florists advertise their line of business with the simple phrase, 'Say It With Flowers.' I am sure that the gift of a flower to the living would make the burdens of life much easier. Standing one day at the grave of a friend, a man who was held in high esteem by the citizens of the community, I looked at the beautiful floral offering and asked the question, 'Did any of us think to give him a flower while he was living?' By a flower we do not mean only the flower whose petals are painted by nature's God, but we mean a word of comfort, a word of cheer, a word of sympathy, a word of appreciation, a word of confidence, a friendly handshake, a kindness done. Many are longing for such an expression of love and sympathy and confidence. The world is dying for a little bit of love. How it cheers and helps us after we have done our best, though poor it may be, to have some one speak a kind word, a word of confidence, a word of encouragement. Sam Walter Foss said, 'Strew gladness on the paths of men—you will not pass this way again.' What a beautiful sentiment! Just a word of cheer, a word of confidence, a word of sympathy, or a word of forgiveness, helps more than we can know. None of us will ever know how comforting Mary's expression of love was to the sad-hearted Saviour. She said it with flowers. Jesus said: 'Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world, there shall also this, that this woman hath done, he told as a memorial of her.' At another time Jesus said: 'Inasmuch as ye fed the hungry or gave drink to the thirsty, or clothed the destitute, or visited the sick or those in prison, ye ministered unto me.' (Matt. 25:37-40).

"Let us be loyal in our devotion to Him who loved us and gave Himself for us; let us begin some work of love, do some deed of kindness, speak some word of cheer, seek some one who has wandered—something for Jesus, and thus 'Say It With Flowers.'"

The pastor closed the service by paying a glowing tribute to Dr. A. W. Turner, who has given the greater part of his life in the fight against Demon Rum. Turning to Dr. Turner, who was present, the pastor said: "Brother Turner, we love you and appreciate what you have done and what you are doing in your great fight against the liquor traffic. The people of Mangum Memorial, among whom you live and with whom you worship, love you and have confidence in you—they have told me so. You have meant a great deal to me, too. But I am wondering if any of us have ever told you that we love you and have confidence in you and appreciate what you are doing. Will you permit me this morning to try to atone for our failure in the past by presenting to you, in the name of Mangum Memorial, a bouquet of flowers? We are trying to say it with flowers." A very large congregation heard the pastor's sermon.

REPORTER.

A WORD CONCERNING DR. A. W. TURNER

It is a fact, quite well known, that for many years Dr. A. W. Turner has received an appointment at the Louisiana Conference as "Legislative Director of Louisiana Prohibition League." For eight years I was a member of the Board of Temperance and Social Service, who recommended the appointment of Dr. Turner to this work, and hence know something of his work. The other fact not so well known, is that in all that time Dr. Turner has only received the most meagre support.

I am not a member of that Board at present, but happen to know that since Conference Dr. Turner has received less than twenty dollars for his support and very few calls to fill any pulpits at all. I also know that a member of his family is critically ill and has been for some time, hence this letter to the Advocate.

Yesterday I took an offering in my church for Dr. Turner's work and despite the fact that it was a bad day and the regular attendance below normal, yet today I am mailing him a check for one hundred dollars. Brethren, why can't all of us take an offering for the work he is doing? Our people are in business straits and the depression is felt everywhere, but Methodist people love the cause of prohibition and believe in Dr. Turner and his work and if given opportunity will respond with a generous offering. Surely we will not continue to vote for a man to be given an appointment and then make no effort at all to provide even a meagre living in return for his faithful work! No man in Louisiana Methodism has done a finer work than Dr. Turner has done through these years and he has done it uncomplainingly. Surely his need will stir us to give him and the cause he represents our loyal support. I make my plea on the basis of the worthy cause he represents and upon the faithfulness of the man who has given himself without stint to the cause that all of us love.

INFANT BAPTISM

By C. G. Smith

"The baptism of young children is to be retained in the church." This significent statement is a part of our Methotist doctrine. It shows that infant baptism was a part of the church practice by the use of the word "retained," and also that the church has a right to retain or reject whatever doctrine or practice it considers expedient.

From an investigation of church statistics it appears that preachers have decided to let the old landmark of infant baptism pass out by disuse instead of by the difficult if not impossible methods of changing doctrine. It has been hinted that occasionally a Methodist preacher is not sound in this particular doctrine. In North Mississippi Conference 35 per cent of the preachers baptized no infants last year. Is faith made known by its work?

A comparison of the tendency is interesting. Sixty years ago, when this country was new, only 15 charges in the Conference failed to report baptism of infants. Now 59 charges are delinquent. In 1871, 2,066 adults and 1,081 infants were baptized, or 34 per cent of the baptisms were infant. Last year 2,263 adults and 348 infants were baptized, or only 13 per cent being infants. In other words 60 years ago 23,185 members dedicated 1,081 infants to the church, and last year 69,526 members furnished 348 infants.

An analysis of the statistical data is interesting. There seems no particular correlation between the presence of local preachers and infant baptisms. Some charges have local preachers and no infant baptisms, some vice versa. There is not always any correlation between the size of the charge and baptisms. In some districts nearly all the babies baptised were on the circuits. For example Aberdeen district had 41 on circuits and 3 on stations. Sardis runs 27 to 5. The delta section shows a higher ratio for the stations.

It is natural to expect a new country to have a high ratio of adult baptisms, as it has to be won by adult revivals. But when it gets settled and conditions normal you would expect the ratio of infant baptisms to increase gradually. Instead of growth by adult conversions you would naturally expect growth by children growing up within the church. This is the normal method of growth. Adult conversion is abnormal.

Infant baptism is a symbol that the child is born belonging to God and must be raised in such a manner that it will never depart from this saved state. It is a defiance to that damnable and horrible dortrine that there are infants in hell.

The main reason why we have no more infant baptisms is because preachers in charge do not insist on it. Some never mention it, privately or publicly.

For a man steeped in the traditions of the Methodist church and who feels that these traditions are in harmony with the spirit of the Master, the tendency of the conferences away from infant baptism is distressing. It shows that instead of depending on real growth and Christian nurture some have run off on a tangent of revivalism and are depending on that for the growth of the church.

There is another danger in neglecting infant baptism. If infant baptism falls off now adult membership a generation from now will be affected. Last year the North Mississippi Conference had 2,751 additions through profession of faith, and 2,263 adult baptisms, showing 488 of these had already been baptized, presumably in infancy. This is 140 more than the number of infants baptized. In 1929 there were 623 more received than baptised, or an excess over infant baptism of 248.

The real growth of the church is slow, sure, on the foundations of child training and Christian nurture. Every agency for the benefit of childhood must be strengthened. We must look after the little ones, and surely we can do it without neglecting the adults. When babies stop being born the country will decline, and when babies stop coming into the church it will decline. Is the church practicing spiritual birth control?

THE CHRISTIAN'S HOPE OF IMMORTALITY

soul after death. Briefly, the Master taught that He was the source of all life, and to be in fellowship with Him, by trustful obedience and consecrated service, was to possess a life that is deathless. "In Him was life; and the life was the light of men." John 1:4. "Because I live, ye shall live also." John 14:19. "If a man keep my word, he shall never taste of death." John 8:52. "He that believeth on the Son hath eternal life." John 3:36. To believe on Him is to have the true life, the life of God within the soul, bringing a "richness and fullness of being" which death cannot disturb. This is the Christian's hope of life beyond the grave. Phillips Brooks was not given to speaking of his religious experence, but one day he "lifted the veil of the most secret orisons of his soul" in conversation with a young preacher and spoke of the peace and joy which an in-dwelling Christ brought to his life. "I cannot tell you how personal this grows to me," he said. "He is here. He knows me and I know Him. It is no figure of speech. It is the realest thing in the world. And every day makes it realer. And one wonders with delight what it will grow to as the years go on." To have that experience is to have eternal life in this world and all worlds. "Christ in you, the hope of glory," was Paul's word to the Colossians. "I am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die," were the Master's words to the weeping sisters of Bethany. Jesus said: "He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day." John 6:54. This highly figurative language means that if we live in fellowship with Him here, we shall live forever with Him in glory. This is the Christian's hope of immortality.

The Home Circle

THERE IS NO DEATH

There is no death! The stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore,
And bright in heaven's jeweled crown
They shine for evermore.

There is no death! The dust we tread
Shall change beneath the summer showers
To golden grain or mellow fruit
Or rainbow-tinted flowers.

The granite rocks disorganize
To feed the hungry moss they bear;
The forest leaves drink daily life
From out the viewless air.

There is no death! The leaves may fall,
The flowers may fade and pass away;
They only wait through wintry hours
The coming of the May.

There is no death! An angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread.
He bears our best-loved things away,
And then we call them "dead."

He leaves our hearts all desolate;
He plucks our fairest, sweetest flowers,
Transported into bliss, they now
Adorn immortal bowers.

The birdlike voice whose joyous tones
Made glad these scenes of sin and strife
Sings now an everlasting song
Amid the trees of life.

And where he sees a smile too bright,
Or heart too pure for taint or vice.
He bears it to that world of light,
To dwell in Paradise.

Born unto that undying life,
They leave us but to come again;
With joy we welcome them the same,
Except in sin and pain.

And ever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread:
For all the boundless universe
Is life. There is no dead!

OUR BASIC TEACHING AGENCY

The work of Christian education begins, not in the church building, but in the Christian home. The education of the child, the progressive shaping of his personality, starts at the time of his birth. His first teachers are his parents. The influences that come into the child's life during the first six years mean more for the making of the future man or woman than the influences of any other successive six years.

The organized church, as a rule, through all of its teaching agencies outside the house, has access to the boy or girl or youth for only a small portion of one day in each week. But the home carries on its educative work for the greater part of seven days in each week.

The Sunday school at its best affords an artificial environment—an environment created for distinctly educational purposes. But within the home the child is amid the natural surroundings of life itself in its various activities and relations. The Christian religion is a thing of life. It finds its highest expression amid normal human relations. Therefore it can be taught better in the life of the home than in an environment in which the learner is placed for a limited portion of time for the specific purpose of education.

The family is the unit of society. If the church is to make notable progress in the Christianizing of society, it must seek first to Christianize the life of the family. It will not be difficult to put the world's industry, commerce; politics, international relations and race relations on a Christian basis if we will gradually improve the Christian quality of professedly Christian homes.

The home is God's first and holiest institution, established for the nurture and welfare and happiness of man. The church came into being many ages later than the home. The church should give due recognition to the home as the older, nobler, and more necessary institution. The church should aim to help the home, rather than to supplant it. The church can best perform its function of ministering to the moral and spiritual needs of man if it will endeavor first of all to spiritualize the life of the home.

The relation between the home and the church is vital to the life of both. The religion of Christ, working through the church of Christ, has greatly enriched the significance of the family and has given a new meaning to the home. Christian parents should recognize the debt of the home to the church and should consider the church but an extension of the home. The church should recognize the homes of its members as agencies of the church, and as the basic teaching agencies for planting the religion of Christ in the lives of the rising generation.

There will always be an important educational work to be done through the Sunday school and other inter-family groupings within the local church. But the leaders of the church should recognize that the possibilities of Christian education within the home are far greater than those of all agencies outside the home. They should recognize further that, if Christian education breaks down in the home, this condition will count much toward nullifying the work of the Sunday school and that of the Epworth League.

Sunday school workers frequently complain of the difficulty of getting parents to co-operate with the program of the Sunday school. This complaint indicates a very common but superficial view of the educational task of the church. The first step in the development of an adequate educational program in the local church must be that of bringing parents to realize their primary responsibility for the religious training of their children and leading parents into the use of proper methods of Christian education. The organization and development of the Sunday school should be regarded as secondary in importance to the development of effective Christian homes. The supreme problem is not that of getting parents to co-operate with the program of the Sunday school, but rather that of getting parents to adopt an adequate program of their own—a program with which the Sunday school workers will co-operate, and one that will be properly supplemented by the program of the Sunday school.

At the present time many influences are working for the destruction of the monogamic family. If these influences succeed, there will follow the overthrow of the church of Christ and the wreck of human society. In order to turn back the tide of divorce and to defeat the free-love propaganda, the church of Christ must make a counter offensive. Such a movement would be a carefully organized effort to place the responsibility of Christian education on Christian parents and to make our homes more efficient as agencies of Christian education.

The church cannot excuse itself on the ground that the task is difficult, and that the parents will resent any suggestion from the church. An intelligent and prayerful leadership in the local church can find a way to do effectively whatever is necessary for the progress of Christ's kingdom in the world.

The church cannot excuse itself on the score that modern conditions of life tend to draw people away from home and destroy the unity and the fellowship of the home. To dismiss the matter with such a statement is but to admit defeat for the church and for the gospel of Christ. If modern conditions of life tend to prevent the development of the home as an agency of Christian education, then under the leadership of the pulpit, the Christian home must defy modern conditions and must create conditions that will minister to its own perpetuity and increased usefulness.

If the church ever acquires a program of Christian education that will be adequate to the task of Christianizing the world, it must recognize the home as its basic teaching agency, and must bring Christian homes to a standard of educational efficiency that will make the Christianization of the world inevitable.

"OF SUCH IS THE KINGDOM"

Recently a number of men from various walks of life were assembled in a hotel corridor. They engaged in a discussion of the Scriptures, and it developed that many of these men had been careful readers.

Some one asked for opinions as to the most beautiful passage in the Bible. Several learned responses were given. One man, well known among Western plainsmen, and one who was not suspected of being a great student of the Bible, surprised his companions by saying: "Boys, there are just two things in that old book that I never get tired of hearing. One is the story of that little fellow, Samuel, and I shall never forget the picture in my good old mother's Bible, showing Samuel sitting in his little bed, and, in response to God's call, saying: 'Speak, Lord; for thy servant heareth.' But," continued the plansman, "the prettiest pen picture ever drawn is to be found in the tenth chapter of Mark."

His companions thought to test him, and one of them asked: "How do you know it is the tenth chapter of Mark?"

"I'll show you," said the plainsman; and going to the check room, he delved into a capacious gripsack and drew forth a well-fingered Bible. Standing in the center of the group of men, the plainsman read: "'And they brought young children to him, that he should touch them: and his disciples rebuked those that brought them. But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased, and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein. And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them.'"

Impressed with the plainsman's unsuspected familiarity with the Scriptures, his companions agreed that, after all, their unlettered friend was not far from the right when he said that the Sweetest Singer of all the ages gave to men the sweetest song of all the years when "he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them, saying, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God."

"They are idols of hearts and of households;
They are angels of God in disguise;
His sunlight still sleeps in their tresses,
His glory still gleams in their eyes.
These truants from home and from heaven,
They have made me more manly and mild;
And I know now how Jesus could liken
The kingdom of God to a child."

—From the book, "Of Such Is the Kingdom."

There are three types of Christians who respond to the call to service: 1. Rowboat Christians—have to be pushed wherever they go. 2. Sailboat Christians—Always go with the wind. 3. Steamboat Christians—make up their minds where they ought to go regardless of wind or weather.—Exchange.

THE DEATH OF DEATH AND THE GIFT OF ETERNAL LIFE

death." And this "life" is not mere survival, but it "is the resurrection of the body and the life everlasting." Mystery indeed, but the ocean man could wade would float no ships to sea. The whole man is to have eternal life through Christ. Sir Oliver Lodge says: "Christianity clearly supplements the mere survival of a discarnate spirit, a homeless wanderer or a melancholy ghost, with the warm and comfortable clothing of something that may be spoken of as a body. That is to say, it postulates a normally invisible and intangible vehicle, fitted to subserve the needs of future existence, as the present body subserves the needs of terrestrial life." Paul says: "God giveth it a body as it has pleased Him."

Charles Kingsley, when dying, said: "How beautiful is God." How surpassingly beautiful is the gift of God in Christ. He hath abolished the gloom of death and made the tombs of His beloved dead entrances through the gate-beautiful into the Temple of Eternal Life.

MEN'S NIGHT AT FIRST CHURCH, SHREVEPORT

On Tuesday night, March 10, Dr. J. R. N. Score, Houston, Texas, Dr. H. T. Carley, presiding elder, all the city ministers and a number of superannuates and other ministers from out in the state and the editor were favored guests at the annual men's banquet at First Church, Shreveport, where some three hundred men gathered for an evening of social fellowship and spiritual inspiration.

A number of the leading citizens of Shreveport of other faiths were also guests and the gathering was indeed a time of happy association of men of the city, regardless of church affiliation.

Mr. Randall Moore, president of the board of stewards, presided with the ease and dignity of a lay-bishop. He first introduced the lady guests of honor: Mrs. Smith, the mother of the pastor and Bishop Smith, Mrs. Hoyt M. Dobbs, Mrs. A. Frank Smith, Mrs. J. R. N. Score, Mrs. W. Angie Smith, and Miss Gatewood.

Mr. Moore then introduced as the principal lay speaker of the evening, Mr. Ollie Webb, president of the Louisiana Baptist Convention and assistant to the president of the Texas and Pacific railroad. Mr. Webb began his unique address in a happy vein and soon had his audience all with him and delivered an excellent address. It was a scriptural, practical, and uplifting message. As long as great corporations have men of such character and ability among their leaders, the public may be assured of honest dealing and a helpful contribution to the common welfare.

After his audience intuitively felt in their hearts that Mr. Webb was "on time" and his train was carrying dining cars filled with good things for the soul, he said, "I am just a slow freight and I now must side in for 'The Sunshine Special'—Bishop Smith."

Dr. George Sexton was presented and in happy spirit, he presented Bishop A. Frank Smith, D.D.; brother of the pastor and Bishop in charge of the Conferences in Oklahoma and Missouri, who delivered the principal address of the evening. Bishop Smith proved that he was a "Sunshine Special," for his message, while appropriate for the occasion, led his hearers up until the Sun of Righteousness was shining into their hearts and the strong men of a great church and a noble city felt the pressure of a challenge to the higher way of brotherliness and service. The address was a credit to himself and the great Church of which he has been providentially chosen a leader.

DR. W. ANGIE SMITH
Pastor First Church, Shreveport

The program was well planned and its movement was with ease. The music, entertainment features, the fellowship, messages, and the delicious menu so delightfully served by the ladies of the church all conspired to make it an event in the life of the church and city.

First Church, Shreveport, is equal in every way to the best churches in the entire connection. A membership of nearly 3500, with a versatile and gifted pastor who has a passion for souls and social righteousness, this great church faces an era of spiritual prosperity and enlarged usefulness to the connection and the world.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

Rev. W. C. Galceran, Jr., is in the midst of a revival at Prairie, Miss., Rev. J. E. Lawhorn, Brooksville, doing the preaching. We pray that a gracious revival may come to the church and community.

Mrs. Ellen Caven Millar, age 83, mother of Dr. A. C. Millar, editor of the Arkansas Methodist died at Conway, Ark., on Sunday, March 22. We extend sincere sympathy to Dr. Millar in his bereavement.

The Sardis District Preachers' Meeting is to be held at Byhalia, Miss., on Tuesday, April 14. An interesting program has been arranged for the day and a full attendance is requested by the program committee.

Rev. V. G. Clifford has planned for special pre-Easter services at First Church, Columbia, Miss On March 22, they celebrated the forty-first anniversary of their Epworth League and have recently organized a Boy Scout troup.

Rev. H. Conrad Blackwell, associate professor of Religion in Millsaps College, preached at Belzoni on Sunday morning, March 22. The pastor, Rev. S. H. Cathey, was at Oxford to preach the commencement sermon for the Lafayette Agricultural School.

C. W. Alford, Brookhaven District Epworth League secretary, has been leading the young people of that district in an advance in all the work. They have recently had special meetings at McComb and Wesson, which were attended by enthusiastic Leaguers from over the district.

Rev. W. L. Atkins, who is to be the pastor-host at the Aberdeen District Conference at Calhoun City, Miss., April 8-9, writes: "We are serving a fine people, the work has started off nicely and we are happy in our new field." We thank him for looking after the interest of the Advocate.

The children of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson broadcasted a program over WJDX on March 23, which was greatly enjoyed by all who heard them. Those who wish to hear the voice of our children may tune in on kilocycles 1270 and hear them in their next program on April 6.

Dr. H. T. Carley, presiding elder of the Shreveport district, suffered with influenza a few weeks ago, and has not quickly recovered. His physician has advised his not filling his engagements for several weeks. We wish Dr. Carley a full recovery.

Rev. J. B. Holyfield, the widely awake pastor at Magee, Miss., sent sunshine into the Advocate office by remitting a check for $24 to cover sixteen subscriptions to the Advocate. His work is making splendid progress along all lines, and with a quota of $185 on Kingdom Extension he has raised $200.

Rev. T. O. Prewitt, the vigorous and successful pastor of the Millsaps Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., visited his boyhood home, Ackerman, Miss., on a recent Sunday and preached for Brother Thrower at the 11 o'clock hour and at Sturgis in the evening. Rev. B. F. Lewis supplied the pulpit during his absence.

In the article concerning the dedication of the Winnfield Church, we were in error in stating that the building was erected under the ministry of Rev. P. M. Caraway. The building was started in 1918 under the ministry of Rev. R. S. Walton and completed during the pastorate of Rev. W. H. Jordan, now deceased.

Rev. W. F. Phillips, pastor on the Myrtle charge, North Mississippi Conference, is having good success in his work. The Kingdom Extension is equal to last year and all his revival meetings are planned and the various departments of the church are co-operating well. We thank Brother Phillips for his interest in the Advocate.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, was confined to his home for several days with an attack of influenza, but is now much improved. He has been giving himself fully to his work and it is hard for a bishop with heavy responsibilities to "wait," but influenza doesn't permit of a too early going forth. We trust the bishop may be fully restored.

Bishop and Mrs. Paul B. Kern are expected to land at San Francisco on April 8. Bishop Kern has been Itenerating in the far stretches of his district in the Orient and the church at home extends to him and Mrs. Kern a most cordial welcome. The bishop will be at the North Mississippi Conference Christian Education Assembly in June.

Dr. G. L. Morelock, secretary of the Board of Lay Activities, addressed the congregation of the Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., on "The Perfect Steward." Dr. Morelock drew interesting and helpful lessons from the life and ministry of Stephen. He is to lead in a Conference-wide meeting on lay activities at Jackson on April 2.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder of the Meridian, Miss., district, has the sympathy of all his friends in the death of his sister, Mrs. J. W. Hinnson, who passed away last week in Meridian. Interment was made at Quitman, in the family burying grounds. One by one our loved ones pass up to the city of God and wait for us at the beautiful gate.

His many friends will regret to learn that Dr. R. H. Wynn, pastor at Minden, La., continues sick. Presiding Elder W. R. Harvell is looking after the appointments during Dr. Wynn's absence. On Sunday, March 22, Dr. George S. Sexton, president of Centenary College, was the preacher and preached a helpful sermon on "A Wise Foundation of Life."

Rev. L. P. Wasson, presiding elder of the Greenwood, Miss., district, has entered vigorously upon the special effort to secure one hundred new cash subscriptions to the Advocate before May 15. In a letter to the editor he wrote: "Our pastors have pledged 164 subscriptions to the Advocate." We thank Brother Wasson for his efficient service in behalf of his Conference organ.

Mr. W. A. McKennon, for twenty years superintendent of the Sunday school at First Church, Shreveport, La., and a widely useful layman in his church and city, has resigned the superintendency and Mr. John S. Welsh has been appointed superintendent. That is a great school and we doubt not that Mr. Welsh will carry on successfully in his important relation.

Dr. H. F. Tolle, pastor, First Church, Tampa, Fla., is holding a revival meeting at Capitol Street, Jackson, Miss. The reports are that a gracious revival is in progress and large crowds are attending the services. Dr. Tolle was for five years pastor of this church and has many friends in the city. Rev. J. A. Smith, D.D., is the present pastor and is rejoicing in the splendid results of the revival.

Rev. H. A. Gatlin, presiding elder, Newton, Miss., district, announces that Bishop Collins Denny will be at the Newton District Conference at Forest, Miss., on April 14-15. Brother Gatlin reports that Rev. H. E. Raley, pastor, Harperville and Lena, was the first to raise his Kingdom Extension quota in full. So far as we are able to learn Brother Raley was the first in his Conference to report his payment in full.

The Ideal Bible Class of the First Methodist Church at Gulfport, Miss., at their annual meeting elected Mrs J. J. Pulliam president, Mrs. G. E. Fischel and Mrs. George Crosby vice-presidents, Mrs. Homer Williams secretary, Mrs. Jim Jones treasurer. Mrs. E. T. Riemann is the teacher, and Mrs. Mac. C. Anderson is her assistant. This class has been doing splendid work and making a significant contribution toward the success of the work at First Church.

O. C. Hull, Christian Education Extension secretary for the Mississppi Conference, was called from his services at Prentiss, Miss., to his home at Lawrence on account of the death of his grandchild, which occurred on March 28. The little one is the child of his son, Rayburn, and the funeral service was held at 3 p. m. on Sunday afternoon, March 29. We extend sincerest sympathy to those who are in sorrow over the going away of "one of His little ones."

Rev. Martin Hebert, pastor, Epworth, New Orleans, is having sucessful pre-Easter services. Dr. D. B. Raulins, Dr. O. W. Bradley, Dr. W. B. Morgan, Dr. M. S. Monk, and Dr. J. B. Peters were the preachers for the first week and the pastor is concluding the services this week. Revs. Ira Flowers and J. T. Harris directed the music during the first week. Epworth is one of the growing churches of the city and we trust this revival service will mean much to its life.

Mrs. F. A. Lane, wife of the lamented Rev. L. P. Lane, who, for a number of years, was a successful local preacher in Smith County, Miss, died at the home of her son, C. L. Lane, Lorena, Miss., on Friday, March 13. Funeral services were held at Gasque Chapel by her pastor, Rev. W. C. M. Baggett, who was assisted hy Rev. B. W. Ware, and Rev. D. W. Moulder, a Baptist minister. Mrs. Lane was the mother of Rev. W. H. Lane, pastor, Wiggins, Miss., and Mrs. B H. Williams, wife of the pastor at Osyka, Miss. These and other loved ones are extended sincere sympathy.

Senora Maria Frausto, of the Methodist Church in Mexico, who attended the Woman's Missionary Council, of the Methodist Epicopal Church, South, recently held in Memphis, was a visitor to Batesville, Sunday, March 22. She spoke at the Methodist church in the morning 11 o'clock hour, telling of the establishment of the autonomous Methodist Church in Mexico, recently set up by representatives from the Methodist Church in the United States, and of her work there as a native missionary. Senora Frausto was the house guest of Miss Daisy Pollard, a sister of Miss Myrtle Pollard, who went out from the Batesville Methodist church to Mexico several years ago as a missionary under the direction of the Woman's Council. These workers are assoiated in missionary work in Mexico.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

Mrs. Mary Frances Henry, age 85, passed away at 11:30 a. m., February 20, 1931, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Dunn, on Main St., Water Valley, Miss. Mrs. Henry was a member of the Methodist Church, but had heen denied the pleasure of attending church services for some time because of ill-health and the infirmities of advanced age. She was left a widow thirty-two years ago and upon her shoulders fell the responsibility of rearing a large family whose upright lives reflect much credit upon their mother. The deceased is survived by one son and five daughters, as follows: W. F. Henry, Mrs. C. E. Dunn, Water Valley Miss.; Mrs. H. F. Nunnery, Clarksdale, Miss.; Mrs. C. R. Belk, Bessemer, Ala.; Mrs. Eva Harrison, Memphis, Tenn.; Mrs. Alice Carlisle, Louisville, Ky.; also by a number of grandchildren and great grandchildren.

The funeral services for the subject of this sketch, BRO. JOHN SHARP PEPPER, aged 82 years, who passed away at his home, near Vaughan, Miss., Sunday morning, March 1, 1931, at 2 o'clock, were held at Ellison Church, with interment in the cemetery at Ellison Church, Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The services were conducted by the writer, in the presence of a large concourse of his dear relatives and warm friends. Infirmities due to old age was the cause of his death.

Bro. Pepper was born in Yazoo County, August 9, 1849, and in December, 1871, he was happily married to Miss Lenora Lessell, of Vaughan, Miss. One son and one daughter blessed this union. They are Wyche R. Pepper and Mrs. Hattie Presley, both residing near Vaughan, Miss. He was a faithful husband, a kind and gentle father and grandfather, a generous neighbor, and was always ready to lend a helping hand to one less fortunate than he. Besides his relatives, he will be sorely missed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. He had a great many relatives scattered abroad, and all who knew him were his unabated friends. He was noted for his geniality of spirit, always liberal with his church and with his fellowman.

Bro. Pepper was a successful farmer of the Vaughan community, and was a good and highly esteemed citizen of this splendid community, having lived here all of his lifetime.

In early life he was converted and joined the Methodist church, and he was a consistent member to the end of his earthly pilgrimage.

Into that bourne whence no traveler ever returns, my friend and brother, John Sharp Pepper, went, calm forespent, forespent.

His devoted wife, two children, fifteen grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, survive to mourn his demise.

Peace be to his ashes.

His pastor,
HILARY S. WESTBROOK.
Vaughan, Miss.

Brother MILTON LEAH RAYNER was born May 3, 1852, and eleven years afterwards was spiritually born and joined the Methodist Church. He was married to Miss Lovert McCory by Rev. Cotton, January 14, 1875. To this union God gave fourteen children, thirty grandchildren and twelve great-grandchildren. Four children preceded him to the better land, four boys and six girls are still living. He was a brother to the sainted Rev. B. S. Rayner, who departed this life September 3, 1905. Bro. Rayner died November 16, 1930. Many times during his sickness was my soul blessed as we prayed and talked together. Monday, November 17, 1930, assisted by Rev. J. E. McCron, the writer laid to rest in Hickory Cemetery, Hickory, Miss., his earthly remains in the presence of his wife, children, relatives and a host of friends. Everyone who knew Bro. Rayner knew him as a man of God. Weep not, loved ones, as those that have no hope, but so live that you may be one with him around the throne.

ALGIE S. OLIVER.

On March 13, 1931, my dear mother MRS. HARRIET GASQUE LANE, left us to be with Jesus. She had been with us a long time, passing away in her 89th year. Mother grew sweeter each day, and the sad, lonely feeling that comes to children who have had this experience comes to her children now. Yet God in His mercy did not let mother suffer in going.

Having spent a great deal of her time in my home, mother became a pet of the household. Our love for her cannot be expressed in words.

She was a great lover of the Bible and a constant reader of the same. The Advocate was also one of her dear friends. After she became too old to read it, she had someone read it aloud. Mother often spoke of heaven and those she longed to join there. Just recently she stated she was ready and anxious to go. It was the constant prayer of my sainted father that our family circle not be broken in heaven, and I feel that mother has gone to take her place.

Being a great lover of music, mother enjoyed all of the old hymns, and often asked that her favorites be played for her. She is now where she can enjoy the sweet music of God's angels in heaven.

Mother was laid away from the church named for her father, Gasque Chapel, to await our coming. There she will bask in the sunshine of God's love and drink from the water of life where she will know no thirst.

Farewell, Mother, there is a time coming when we can be reunited and have to part no more.

A devoted daughter,
MRS. B. H. WILLIAMS.

MRS. SALLIE PERRITT ROBERTSON was born October 18, 1855. She joined the Methodist church at the early age of 12. She was converted under the ministry of Rev. Cravins. She was happily married to R. A. Robertson, December 12, 1878. To this union were born ten children. Five survive. Sister Robertson was a true woman. The writer lived in her home one year and taught her children four years. So can testify to her sacrificial life. Her good husband preceded her to the glory land just a few years. Her faith was well established. She knew whom she had believed. Her last illness was from influenza and heart trouble. The preachers were always welcome in her home. Her husband was a faithful steward and many a night was spent by servants of God in her home. So she can claim a prophet's reward. Yes, she has gone where:

"No chilling winds, or poisonous breath,
Can reach that healthful shore;
Sickness and sorrow, pain and death
Are felt and feared no more."

H. W. LEDBETTER.

"Now I am glad to say I am a well woman, feel much stronger, years younger and my weight is 170 pounds. I do not only feel better, but I look better, so all my friends say.
"I shall never be without Kruschen Salts, will never cease taking my daily dose and more than glad to highly recommend it for the great good that is in it. Mrs. S. A. Solomon, New Bern, N. C., Jan. 1930." "P. S. You may think I am exaggerating by writing such a long letter but truly I feel so indebted to you for putting out such wnderful salts that I cannot say enough."
A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts 4 weeks costs but 85 cents at your druggist's and druggists the world over. Take one-half teaspoon in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast.
Attention to diet will help—cut out pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—the Kruschen way is the safe way to lose fat. Try one bottle and if not joyfully satisfied—money back.

AN APPRECIATED LETTER

Dear Dr. Decell: We feel that you and the readers of the Advocate might appreciate knowing just how much help this paper is to us in preparing our programs for zone meetings. In it each time we can find so much valuable material bearing on the subject selected for our meeting.

For our last meeting we chose the subject, "Neighbors," and after looking through several numbers of the Advocate we found many talks and beautiful little poems on this subject which we could successfully use.

The members on program, in giving their numbers, mentioned the fact that they were taken from the Advocate. So, in this way our paper was given quite a boost. Our district secretary commended us very much on our use of the Advocate and suggested that other zones in need of material for their zone meetings might also turn to the Advocate.

Sincerely,
MRS. W. C. McKAY.

BACK TO CARDUI

Lady Who Had Been In a Run-Down Condition Tells How She Got Well.

Mayo, Fla.—"I was greatly benefited after I took the Cardui Home Treatment," says Mrs. W. H. Trawick, of this place. "For several months I had been in bad health. I was run-down and weak.

"I dragged around from day to day, not feeling fit for anything. My back ached and often my sides hurt all night long. I could not sleep, and my nerves gave me a good deal of trouble.

"I had used Cardui several years before for a similar spell, so I got some for my trouble. I soon recovered and felt better than I had in a long time.

"After taking Cardui for several weeks, I began to feel stronger and to rest better. It is a fine medicine, and I have recommended it to friends."

Thousands of other women have taken Cardui to help them to build up their health. The good reports which have been received, telling of the experience of others, should encourage you to try Cardui, for your troubles.

Cardui is a purely vegetable remedy, and contains nothing harmful or injurious. It may be safely taken by women of all ages.

CHILDREN'S WORK, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

"World friendship is the spirit and theme for the children's division of the Woman's Missionary Society. Sharing and working together are the keynotes of its plan and purpose. Wherever our Church is at work an effort is being made to organize the children that they may have an opportunity to share with each other the best that they have—their games, folk songs, stories and customs—and that working together they may help to make the world for children everywhere a better place in which to live.

In keeping with this spirit of world friendship a new name has been given to the children's auxiliaries—to juniors, the Boys and Girls' World Club; to primaries, World Children's Circle. Boys and girls in such clubs and circles around the world will delight, we believe, to send gifts to each other, thrill to exchange letters and pictures and be keenly interested in reading in their magazine, reports of the fascinating work being done in far-away clubs.

A club or circle may be on the Honor Roll regardless of the standing of the division as a whole. That is, a Boy's and Girl's World Club meeting the requirements of its Standard of Excellence may receive an honor roll certificate. So, also, a World Children's Circle attaining its Standard of Excellence receives a roll of Honor Certificate. This is a part of the new plan, therefore, such certificates will be received at the close of the present year, and not for the work of the year just completed.

Many interesting features will be presented during our conference at Gulfport, April 7-10.

The pageant, "Celebrating Our New Names," will be given by the Boy's and Girl's World Club, of the First Church, under the direction of Mrs. E. H. Swearningin, superintendent.

The cabinet sent to the children of Mississippi by the children of Mexico will be on exhibition—this cabinet is filled with artistic work done by Mexican school children, and will be in charge of a young lady who will explain each article.

Because of numerous changes and readjustments, our work does not show a large numerical increase for 1930, but organizations and quality of work have made great advances. We have on roll 151 divisions, 2185 members, with 277 subscribers to "World Friends."

This will be an important conference, as a new superintendent of children's work will be elected.

MRS. STANLEY WILSON, Conference Superintendent.

ROSEDALE ZONE MEETING

The zone meeting of Zone Five, Alexandria District, held with Rosedale Auxiliary, Rosedale, La., February 21, was, according to the zone leader, Mrs. Knight, the banner meeting of the year. Of the five auxiliaries that constitute Zone Five, all were represented but Opelousas, whom we missed much. Melville had three representatives, Eunice, three; Lottie, five, and Rosedale was 100 per cent. the fourteen of her numbers being present. Mrs. O. E. Grant, district superintendent, was honor guest. There were other visitors, including Rev. Knight and his precious little daughter; Mrs. J. R. Mays, Mrs. Chas. Charleville, Miss Ethel Jefferson and Mr. Webster Holliday.

The meeting was opened at 10:30 a. m. by singing hymn, "I Love to Tell the Story." This was followed by a heart-touching prayer by Mrs. La Grange, of Lottie.

The devotional was led by Mrs. Eugene White of Melville, in the absence of Mrs. Pickett. She used biblical material from Hebrews, 11th Chapter, very effectively.

Mrs. D. B. Barrow and Miss Ethel Jefferson rendered, with their usual endearing manner, the "Welcome Song." Mrs. J. C. Zerange gave a very interesting talk on "What the Missionary Auxiliary Means to the Church and the Pastor." Special music followed, a duet, "Confidence," by Mrs. D. B. Barrow and Miss Ethel Jefferson, accompanied by Mrs. J. R. Mays, made lasting impressions. Mrs. S. T. Adams of Eunice told the beautiful Stewardship Story of the Voice, "Tithen Eggs," in a manner that made every word go home to the heart of the listener.

Following the morning session, which was closed with a prayer by Rev. Knight, lunch was served by Rosedale auxiliary and a period of friendly greetings and fellowship was enjoyed.

The afternoon program was opened with Missionary Hymn, and an earnest, searching prayer by H. E. Zerange, Melville.

World peace was discussed by Mrs. Ed. De Boer, Rosedale, followed by an inspiring talk on "Ways to Promote World Fellowship," by Mrs. M. H. Andres, Lottie. Then came the much enjoyed message of Mrs. Gront, district superintendent.

After a short business session, the meeting closed, everyone feeling that the Master had been glorified in the cause for which the W. M. S. stands in the world today, and the fellowship and friendship of the day made each one present a stronger daughter of the King.

ECHOES FROM COUNCIL MEETING AT MEMPHIS, TENN.

Reports from the council meeting held in Memphis, March 10-17 show that Mrs. J. W. Perry of Nashville, who has been vice-president since 1923, was elected president to succeed the late Mrs. F. F. Stephens. Mrs. J. C. Handy of San Augustine, Texas, who has been identified with the council for twenty years, was elected vice-president. She will be succeeded as a member at large by Mrs. B. M. Bowen at Nashville.

Atlanta was selected as the place of meeting in 1932. The pledge for 1931 amounted to $1,061,555—about $55,000 less than was given last year.

Mrs. Ina Davis Fulton made a plea for sacrificial giving because the economic depression has caused a slump of $65,000 in the Woman's missionary offering during 1930.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The Jackson District Standard Training school has just closed. In many ways this school was a high point in the progress of the development of a permanent program of training in the district. One of the interesting developments of this session of the school was the election of the officers and raising a continuation committee who would be charged with perpetuating the spirit of training throughout the district. This I think is a real forward movement and I trust that it will prove a most successful experiment.

We introduce to the Conference a new teacher for Standard Schools, Mrs. W. H. Watkins, Jackson, Miss. She taught her first class in the Jackson District school. She was greatly enjoyed and had a fine class. We appreciate this new teacher, which opens a new avenue to the workers of our Conference.

Soul's Chapel, on the Dalevilla charge, is the first Sunday school to send in its Sunday School Day Offering, and their receipt will be number one. We were greatly cheered by receiving this nice offering.

We again wish to call your attention to the method of handling the Sunday school day programs. A sample copy of the program has been sent to every superintendent in the Conference. To the mission Sunday schools has gone a letter giving them information in regards to the programs. You are to order the programs direct from Lamar and Whitmore.

Your board stands in need of your help perhaps more than ever in the history of church work. Frankly, without a large Sunday School Day offering we will face a situation that will be exceedingly undesirable.

We have request for Cokesbury schools now that will require an expenditure of more than twice as much money as we have promised for this work. We have opportunities to aid in three times as many Vacation Church School situations in mission territory than we have money to finance the work with.

We are planning on faith that the Sunday schools of the Conference will do two things to aid in this work. First, be regular in holding Missionary Sunday programs and sending in the offerings; second, give as much as possible to the Sunday school day offering. These two sources are the only sources of income for this work that we have.

I trust all the workers are enjoying the improvements in the Sunday school materials. I also think the materials for the Epworth Leagues have been improved.

Tylertown Epworth League was the first League to observe Anniversary Day that this office has heard about. I am sure that this program was helpful to the work and the workers at Tylertown. It is trusted that the income from this observance will be large enough for the Conference Board to put on a great program for the young people.

Pray for the work and the workers

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

By Doris Alford, Director of Children's Division

We have been most fortunate in securing the consent of Miss Mary Skinner, director of children's work for the General Board of Christian Education, to visit our Conference for a week, beginning April 12. A series of meetings have been scheduled during the week which will enable her to visit five of the seven districts. Pastors, superintendents and all workers with children are urged to look over the schedule printed below and plan to attend the meeting that will be held nearest their church.

April 12, 2:30 p. m., Galloway Memorial, Jackson, meeting with city organization of children's workers.

April 13, 9:30 a. m., Eucutta, institute, consideration of problems in children's work.

April 14, 9:30 a. m., Central Church, Meridian, Child Study Conference.

April 15, 9:30 a. m., Court Street Church, Hattiesburg, Child Study Conference.

April 16, 2:30 p. m., Adams Circuit, Institute, consideration of problems in children's work.

April 16, 7:30 p. m., Centenary, McComb, address by Miss Skinner.

April 17, 2:30 p. m., Jefferson St, Natchez, Institute.

April 17, 7:30 p. m., Jefferson St., Natchez, address by Miss Skinner.

Miss Skinner is not only most practical in her discussions of the work of Christian Education with children, but she never fails to give to those who hear her a new sense of the sacredness of the task that is theirs and a burning desire to perform the task in a finer way.

REPORT OF THE ADOLESCENT SECTION, CHRISTIAN EDUCATION INSTITUTES

More than ever before we found reason to be proud of the leaders of youth in our Conference attending the Christian Education Institutes. Last month our section grew in numbers as well as interest. We have never had so many workers present. The young people representing the various groups in the churches were welcome and added much to our discussion groups.

The interest created by the actual problems as they varied in each district group resulted in a worthwhile venture. Questions came one after another, and as we tried to find the answer, the siprit of the group proved their earnestness. The leaders were not afraid to tackle the most difficult situation and were frank and honest with each other in their statements.

One problem which seemed general was the lack of interest on the part of the pupils in studying their lessons Here the group agreed that it was their fault as much as the pupils'. Perhaps they did not make the lesson interesting enough, was their decision.

Some Epworth League problems came to the front. This time it was the worship service. Too many "scissors meetings," young people not taking enough of the responsibility of the work. Again recreation was their problem. This was a vital question We realized that most of the churches have failed here as the discussion of dancing and bridge came to the forefront. Each group who felt this was a problem with both leaders and youth, decidedly agreed that if the churches had an adequate program of recreation provided for their young people, a more wholesome social life would result. One group suggested that the leaders and mothers of the young people could help in this. They felt one night each week, at least, through volunteer workers, the church could be kept open for a real pleasant evening of music, games and eats. We could all do this if we were willing to give of our time and effort.

It was indeed gratifying to me to see that we are not afraid to face the issues and problems as they come in daily living. To hear the workers discuss their own failures and acknowledge their own shortcomings made us all determined to go home and begin anew, with patience, the task set before us. Someone expressed the thought of the groups in these words, "What the leaders are in character has as much influence if not more, than what they try to teach."

To both pastors and leaders of youth throughout our Cnference let me impress upon you the importance of sending the young people to the Epworth League Assembly. The date, June 8 to 12. Strive to make this Assembly the best in years. Let us take the motto, "All for Christ," and make it real in the hearts and lives of the youth in our church schools.

Our institutes this year were fine. May we carry the spirit of the groups throughout the year and live closer to the Christ, as we try to serve in our various places.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

It was my pleasure to spend a Sunday recently in Corinth. Rev. E. S. Lewis, the pastor of First Church, and Rev. W. O. Hunt, the pastor of South Side, were so kind as to allow me to preach for them. In the afternoon we had a workers' meeting at which we disucsssed the unified program of Christian education in the local church. This conference was largely attended. There seems to be a very keen interest in this program everywhere among the people. It is useless to say that the work moves along fine under the able leadership of the pastors and fine laity of the two churches in Corinth.

"BEST MEDICINE I HAVE EVER USED"

Only Remedy To Ever Have Done Me Any Lasting Good

Mrs. Lula Patterson

"I am glad to make this statemet in behalf of Miller's Herb Extract, formerly called 'Herb Juice'," says Mrs. Patterson, Birmingham, Ala. "This medicine has done me more good than anything I have ever used, and I have tried everything that promised relief with no results to speak of. When I began using Herb Extract I was underweight, and lost considerably in weight and strength, felt weak, nervous and badly rundown all the time. Each day I was in misery. I carried on with my work as best I could, just didn't want to give up, but it was agonies for me while I endured it. Friends knowing of my poor state of health, advised me to try a bottle or two of Herb medicine. They told me of numerous cases where it has actually brought health and strength to people when everything else had utterly failed to do any good. I started on the Herb medicine immediately. And to my surprise, I begun to improve rapidly and my continued use of this remarkable remedy has restored my health. I am free from constipation, bowels are regular, stomach is in fine condition. I sleep fine and eat hearty three times a day, have lots of energy; this means so much to me. I am actually gratified, beyond words to express, over my improved condition of health."

You don't need any pills with this medicine. It's a real medicine within itself, and guaranteed to give results.

A medicine you can take three or four bottles of without seeing any results is not much medicine. Miller's Herb Extract (known as Herb Juice) gives overnight results. Get it at your druggist.

This school is for the area about Ruleville and Drew, and all teachers, workers and interested people of that area are welcome to this school. This will be the seventh school for Ruleville. The other school will be held at Inverness, April 12-17, and the following courses will be offered there: Bible, New Testament Survey, instructor, R. G. Moore; Religious Education of Adults, instructor, R. G. Lord; Worhip in the Sunday School, instructor, Miss Pauline Wynn. We want all the workers in the area of this school to attend.

This week we are in the midst of a school at Columbus. Three courses are being offered, Bible, The Teachings of Jesus, instructor, R. G. Lord; A Study of Early and Middle Adolescence, instructor, Mrs. W. N. Duncan, and Junior Materials and Methods, Dr. P. J. Rutledge, instructor. About forty are enrolled in the three classes with quite a few others who are visiting the school. The spirit is as fine as I have ever seen in a school. Perfectly fine work is being done by those taking the courses. The way for the school was well prepared by the pastors, Revs. J. W. Ward and C. L. Rogers, and by Miss Pauline Wynn, together with the superintendents, Mr. D. C. Badger and Mr. Golding.

Have you received your Sunday School Day Programs yet? If not, send in your order now. It is but a short time now until time for the observance of the day. The third Sunday in April, the 19th, is the day.

Did you observe College Day last Sunday? If so, send us a note about it.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE

Dear Young People: Interesting news continues to come to our office from the Anniversary Day Observances. The pageant is being presented in a large number of churches. One interesting feature of the pageant is that it requires a large number of young people from the Sunday school and Epworth League to put it on properly, and thus interests a larger group than other type programs. It was certainly a pleasure to witness and take part in the pageant given at Springhill on the night of the 22nd. It was beautifully rendered. It showed that much preparation, forethought and real interest had been given it by all taking part. On Monday evening, I was in Homer and attended a practice of the Homer young people in their pageant, which will be rendered on the 29th They, too, are putting their best into it. I regret that I cannot be present. I shall enjoy being in Colfax on that day, and will assist in the Anniversary Day Observance at the morning hour. The Colfax and Montgomery young people are presenting a combined program. Their pastor, Rev. L. R. Nease, Jr., has planned an unusually attractive program. News comes from many other churches concerning their observance.

We wish we could say that these reports are one hundred per cent, but we can't say that until every pastor in Louisiana reports his date of observance. Won't you? Although the interest shown is as fine as that of previous years the offering has been much smaller from each church. With this falling off more churches will have to report if we retain our past record. Mr. Riggs has already received quite a few offerings, but none of them have exceeded the amount from that same church the year before. What we want, most of all, is to know that every church observes.

Are you preparing to be with us in Alexandria on the 7th and 8th of April? You will be delighted with the opportunity of knowing Dr. Walter Towner of Nashville. He is our newly-elected secretary of the Young People's Division and will help you solve your difficulties in your young people's division. He will conduct the Tuesday afternoon session in that division and a time for asking questions will be given you, so be ready with your own problems.

We consider this conference one of the greatest opportunities of the year. On Tuesday morning you will hear Dr. Clovis Chappell of Houston, Texas. Dr. Angie Smith of Shreveport will speak Tuesday evening, and Dr. Geo. Sexton of Centenary College will be heard Wednesday morning. The separate divisional sessions will be most instructive. Your office staff, headed by Dr. W. W. Holmes, wants you to be present. If we can be of assistance to you during your stay in Alexandria you will find our office on the second floor of the Educational Building and "Welcome" on the doormat.

Continue in your fine work, Leaguers. Our Conference days are fast coming to a close. When you reach the Assemblies in June you will have closed the records of your 1930-31 achievements. Will you be proud of what you have done?

Sincerely,

ELIZABETH LANGFORD.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE

Last Sunday evening we had the pleasure of visiting the Epworth Leagues at Holly Springs and taking part with them in their Anniversary program. This program had been well arranged and they had a good congregation out to enjoy the program. It was given at the regular preaching hour.

The Leagues at Holly Springs have been reorganized recently. They have a Senior League and an Epworth-Hi League. The pastor, Rev. N. J. Golding, is very much interested in the spiritual welfare of his young people and he has been very active in getting his Leagues well organized. Incidentally we learned that the young people at Holly Springs are also interested in their pastor and the work he is trying to do. It works both ways.

We were very favorably impressed with the work which is being done by the young people at Holly Springs. They are starting off in the right direction. They have made application for a charter and they are using the Epworth Era. The counsellor, Mrs. John P. Lester, has a Handbook and she is using it very consciencioусly. Mrs. Lester and Mrs. Gatewood, the other counsellor, are working very energetically at the task of leading their young people. They are also making an honest effort to raise their pledge money. They have the address of our treasurer, Brother S. E. Ashmore, and they are going to send their pledge money to him. So look out, Brother Sammy, they will be sending you some money pretty soon.

Mr. O. D. Hanna is counsellor for the Senior League at Holly Springs, and he is very active in the work. Mr. Hanna is also director of athletics in the school there. It is a very happy combination when we can get a man who will work in the school and in the church, too. The young people at Holly Springs believe in Brother Hanna, and they are following his splendid leadership. He is planning to send some of his young people to our Assembly at Grenada in June. They will have young people there from their Sunday school, too, as well as their Leagues. It is going to be a young people's assembly.

We believe that a large number of our Leagues have observe Anniversary Day. The district secretaries have been busy reminding our Leaguers of the fact that they should observe this day. Of course, if you did not observe this day last Sunday you may observe it some time later, but be sure to observe the day and take an offering. Send the offering to Rev. Samuel P. Ashmore, Webb, Miss. Let us try to raise at least $150 from this source this year.

Yours sincerely,

WM. L. ROBINSON.

KINSTON KINDLINGS

Our first quarterly conference was twenty days later this than last year, and the total financial budget spent at this conference was $327.75 more than at the same conference last year. Not bad! After intercessory prayer and thought and the assurance it would be done, the pastor out pastoral visiting had it suggested to him that those who have work pay for the material and those without employment put a new cover on the church—and it's done!

Lacking some, yet having the material paid for, a new convert says it must soon be paid for and he wants to put himself in with the others and see that it's paid for right away. This fellow's religion has "struck his pocketbook!" You ought to know and hear his experience!

I have sat and listened to Bible teachers here and there, and heard good ones, but the best I ever heard teaches the Men's Bible class at Kingston. Doubt my word? Ask our presiding elder, Rev. H. A. Gatlin. This class has doubled in attendance in the last twelve months.

The last Sunday before annual conference last year, our Mission Special was about half paid and it looked hopless, for we had tried to collect it and failed. Luke 11:8 was deeply impressed on my mind and heart; I prayed; the last Sunday morning before conference it was paid in full, in a few minutes without asking a person for a penny. "Prayer changes things!"

The average attendance of our Sunday school was thirty-two more the first quarterly conference this year than our last quarterly confereuce last year. The superintendent's goal by May is double what it was last May. I believe the goal will be reached. This superintendent came to us about a year ago from the Congregational Methodist Church. Interest is fine in every department.

Having been at our church twice before, having a wife and other Christian friends praying for him, a man given to drinking liquor excessively, was at our church a few weeks past, was converted, selected the song he wanted sung when the call for membership was made, and he and his wife (a Baptist) came into our church. What do you suppose the song he selected was? "Since Jesus Came Into My Heart." Very appropriate, I say.

A non-church member came by the church one day and seeing and knowing that other workmen out of employment (as he was) were working on the church, saw some needed repairs and asked to do the work free. The spirit and condition of the man impressed the pastor and the pastor told said man that God was going to give him a job for exemplifying such a spirit, and before he finished the church job he had another one—the first paying job since September!

When the work on the church was being done by these men unemployed, the ladies of the church set before them the days they were at work, such fine eats for the noon-day meal! How appetizing and how the men did enjoy it! After the work had been completed the men told the pastor when we nedded any other work done, and they were idle, let them know, for they said they had rather work for the church free under such circumstances than be loafing. Had we the ready money to pay for the paint now, we could get the church and parsonage painted free, and it done gladly. For some time I have wanted the name of our church outside of it somewhere, in large letters, that the people can see plainly. So many other things needed more, I wouldn't press it, but the Lord laid it on the heart of one of our members, with a gift for such, and now we have at the front in large black letters, in white space, that can be seen clearly a block away, "Kingston Methodist Church." I doubt there being many churches in Mississippi with the name visible as far as this name is. When in Laurel watch for "Kingston Methodist Church," the home-like and growing church of "the city beautiful."

Let me say to those members of the southern group of Newton district that ye scribe sent in a report—started it, at least—of our good meeting held at Bay Springs, Jan. 22, but somewhere it must have got on a side track and switched off, for the columns of the Advocate have not been graced with it, and I feel sure you would have seen it in said columns if it had reached its destination. Just wanted to let you know that I was interested sufficiently to send the report to the Advocate, for it was a fine meeting, especially the sermon so earnestly brought to us by Rev. H. A. Wood, pastor of Newton church.

More encouraged than ever,

J. A. WELLS.

ANY CHILD

WE can never be sure just what makes a child restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as your child has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Sometimes constipation. Or diarrhea — a condition that should always be checked without delay. Just keep Castoria handy and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't you should call a physician.

GIFT OF SMALL THINGS

How humanlike it is to have the desire to do large things, both in the business and religious world, there are lots of people in the world today, if opportunity doesn't come their way for doing big things they will not do the little things. A day of publicity!

My text suggests the gift of small things. In ordinary circumstances there is scarely any act that can have less self-denial and self-sacrifice than a small gift. And nowhere is this thought brought nearer our attention than in the gospel of Matt x:42: "And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, shall in no wise lose his reward." Our Lord brings into play a principle which dignifies and ennobles the simplest acts, giving great values to the small gifts.

To life most perfect gifts are made up to a great extent of little things. One writer says some times we become color blind (that is one gift, and a highly prized one), while no objection to the highly prized gifts, but we are considering in this article the small or the little things, and, too, we do not mean money always, or the value of such, but deeds and acts of kindness and service.

There cannot seem to me to be any smaller service than a cup of cold water, but it must be given in the name of a disciple, and there are hundreds of little things all around us crying to be done, and we can, most all of us, do those little things.

And, too, few people have an opportunity of doing great things in the service of God for the lives of others, also great things are poor, if the little things are not done. A true saying! We came not to God by the path of beautiful service, but through the gateway of toil and sacrifice, willing to bend low with the spirit of humility based on love, through which true value of action is measured by its motive. A common deed becomes uncommon when given in the name of a disciple, for goodness and love of Jesus Christ.

Then this reward! In helping others we benefit ourselves; we heal our own wounds in binding up others, in doing the little things, joy and happiness come into our own hearts; in making others useful through deeds of kindness we make ourselves more useful. A cup of cold water given in the name of a disciple, you shall not lose your reward. Heaven is within the soul. The kingdom of God is within you.

I speak of an incident which occurred many years ago, on a Sunday morning after a most wonderful sermon by a very great minister preaching on heaven. Oh! how beautiful and glorious it is to think of heaven, that beautiful city; streets paved with gold. And after the sermon a lady came to him and said, "Brother, you forgot to mention where heaven is." Said the preacher, "On yonder hilltop, stands a cottage lady; in that cottage lives a friend; she has a family of children, no bread, destitute and unsaved; by this I mean, they know not God. If you will carry to her some of the little things that will help and tell her of the great love of Jesus you will find an answer to your question."

Just where you are my brother,
Just where God bids you stand,
Though down in the deepest shadow
Instead of the sunlit land,
You may carry a brightness with you
That no gloom or darkness can mar,
For the light of a Christian spirit
Will be shining wherever you are.

A DESIRE TO HELP THE SICK

Montgomery, Ala.—"I think Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best that can be had. I have used it as a tonic for the children and for myself. I have taken several different remedies but the most reliable medicines that I know of are put out by Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y. I think Dr. Pierce not only knows more about medicine but that he also has a genuine desire to help the sick."—Mrs. Lucy Burleson, 7 Covington St. All druggists.

MERIDIAN ON THE BOOM

Did you hear it, Mr. Editor? Well, we felt the shock. It jarred good men loose from positions, took meat out of pantries, broke the bread line of the city, disturbed the optimism of the people and embarrassed the Church all of the way from the pastor's salary to Kingdom Extension, and occasionally we still hear the grumbling of it. No, it was not an earthquake. It was a bank closed. But after all it did not close anything up in it but money, and the church's greatest wealth is not in money. I guess that is the reason the Church never goes into bankruptcy.

Well, we hear a great deal of talk about hard times, and I tell you, Mr. Editor, some people are suffering for bread. I read in an old book where a whole nation was suffering because it did not rain. And the Book said it did not rain "because of the sins of the people." I wonder if that does not mean that when they had plenty they forgot where it came from and neglected the One who gave it? God is speaking in that same Book and said, "Return unto me, and I will return unto you. . . . Wherein shall we return? . . . . In tithes and offerings." Don't you think that is what we prosperous Americans need to do? Meridian has a slogan: "Buy now and hasten prosperity." But I think we need to pray for grace to help us to bear prosperity. I know this, God can turn our calamity into capital and our defeats into victory if we will give Him a chance. That is what He did for Elijah. His brook dried up and God sent him to the widow's house and from there to Carmel and afterwards he boarded the heavenly limited down by the little station at Jordan and then came back to the mountain to talk to Christ about the Cross. God is the keeper of the storehouse where we need to go for our supplies.

Well, our elder has returned from his first quarterly rounds and reports things in good shape. In spite of the depression, our people are hopeful and in many places finances have increased over last year. Our people do not believe that we ought to reduce the pastor's and elder's salaries to cut expenses, they feel like that this is more important than the janitor and telephone and Fifth Street has set the example.

Bro. W. D. Hawkins is busy, as usual, on the Kingdom Extension work. He has been going about holding institutes and organizing the work just like he always did; and you know he is working "without salary." This shows that he does not put salary above service. You know what that means. I have an idea that the reason we are able to get the Advocate for one dollar and fifty cents is because someone is willing to serve. That is the real spirit of the Church. Greatness is not found in position, it is disposition. It is not what we get, but what we give that makes us great. We are not living for compensation, but for dispensation. Our laymen have caught the spirit of the ministry. Bro. Hawkins has recently been elected assistant presiding elder of the Seashore District; I do not think that Bro. Porter was obliged to have him, but he is still without salary and any elder ought to be glad to have him at that price.

We have a new man in our district, Bro. J. B. King. He comes to take the Porterville charge, and Nelson moved to Georgetown after the sad death of Bro. B. W. Lewis. We have lost some good men. How we will miss them. Bro. Evans, Bro Lewis and Bro. Baxter. They were so dear to me. We are glad to have King with us. He has always been a success and we believe that Porterville will make a good record with his leadership. Nelson goes to your district and we highly recommend him.

Bro. Chambers and Bro. Hull have been over here to conduct the Christian Education Institute. Hull says that an ex-pert is an ex that once upon a time did spert but has quit and is now teaching others how to spert. We all agreed that Hull was not one. Bro. Chambers was at his best and the institute was a great success.

We have all agreed to do our best for the Advocate, and we are going to try to get our people to reading this fine paper, it is better than it has ever been, and we are going to show you how we appreciate the service you are rendering the Church.

All of the district send love and greetings.

SWIFTY.

REPORT OF CHAS. ASSAF FOR THE MONTHS OF NOV., DEC., JAN., 1930 and 1931

Jackson District

November 19, 1930.—One afternoon a lady came to see Mrs. Assaf and go with her to the Missionary Society meeting. While she was waiting for Mrs. Assaf, she asked me about the new preacher at the Capitol Street Church. She said that my wife was the only one who asked her to go to the Missionary Society. After we talked a while, she said that she would like to become a member of the Capitol Street Church. Later I talked with her husband and he decided to join, too. Brother J. A. Smith, P. C., received them into the Capitol Street Church. They have been in Jackson for several years and come to us from the Roman Catholic Church.

December 10, 1930.—I conducted the Business Men's Prayer Meeting service in Jackson, being asked to do so by their leader.

Vicksburg District

December 10, 1930.—I went to Vicksburg to visit some of our Syrian members and their friends. One of the men, an American, joined our church. He is a butcher and works for Mr. John Haddad, one of the finest citizens and business men in the city. I sent his membership to Brother J. L. Neill, P. C., and he is to receive him into the church.

Jackson District

December 13, 1930.—Visiting the city of Jackson, I went to a Greek cafe. After talking to one of the men, he gave me his hand and said that he would like to join the Capitol Street Church and pledged $50 for 1931. His wife joined our church last year. After the husband joined, their children came to our Sunday school. I sit with them almost every Sunday during the church service.

December 29, 1930.—I visited a man and his wife in their coffee shop. After talking with them awhile, he and his wife joined the church by letter. Brother J. A. Smith and I called on them later. Brother Smith welcomed them into the church and said that he would look after their letter for them.

January 13, 1931.—Visiting Jackson, I found several people with their memberships in other cities. Six people joined the Capitol Street, Glendale, and Grace churches. Husbands joined with their wives and mothers with their sons. Some were from other churches, Baptist, Roman Catholic, Episcopal, and Greek.

January 20, 1931.—I went to see a Greek man and his American wife in their cafe. The wife joined our church by letter, and her thirteen-year-old son joined with her.

I called on another Greek man and his wife, but found them out. While I was at the place of business, I talked with his cashier. She told me that a Methodist. I asked where she lived she was a Baptist, but her mother was and called to see her mother. I asked for her church letter, but she said she would give it to me some other day. Brother Smith and I called back a few days later and she gave it to us. She was so glad to see us and asked us to come back again, for she felt so encouraged by the assistance Brother Smith gave her.

Easter, the resurrection morn, is not a cessation but a consecration, not a goal but a gateway into larger life. The meditations on the days of remembrance and the joys experienced in new assurance of the Risen Lord and life everlasting will amount to little if His followers do not follow on to know more of "Him and the power of His resurrection and the fellowship of His sufferings."

All Southern Methodism mourns the death of one of her valiant sons, John R. Pepper, of Memphis, Tenn. Had he lived until Easter morning he would have been 81 years of age. Born in Virginia, he came to Memphis at the age of 18 years. Memphis, Mississippi, the central south, and even the uttermost parts were blessed by his long and useful life. For fifty-one years he was superintendent of the Sunday school at First Church, Memphis. An editorial in a Memphis paper states, "The loss of many valued citizens sometimes is complete because what they builded was upon the shifting sands of material success. The loss of John R. Pepper will not be total because the heritage of his labor will remain." He built upon "Christ, the Solid Rock," and now lives with his Risen Lord.

The editor and manager are pleased to announce that Rev. D. B. Raulins, D.D., pastor, Algiers, New Orleans, has become the assistant editor of the Advocate. Dr. Raulins is well qualified by experience and training to share in the responsibilities and privileges connected with editing the Advocate. He was for several years a professor at Centenary College and later was president of Mansfield College. After leaving Mansfield he was pastor at Lake Charles, La., from where he came to his present pastorate at Algiers. At such times that the editor must be absent Dr. Raulins will write the editorials and do the work in the office and at other times he will co-operate in getting out the paper. We feel assured that this means the improvement of the Advocate, and our faith in the success of the 100 minimum new subscriptions per district by May 15 has encouraged us to form this new relation.

The district conferences begin to meet this week. We trust that the session of each district conference shall prove a time of happy fellowship and great spiritual blessing. These are important conferences, and from reports reaching the office the presiding elders are planning wisely and expecting seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. It will be impossible for the editor to reach all the conferences, but representatives who will present the cause of the Advocate will be present. The New Orleans Advocate has had an honorable history, is endeavoring to "serve the present age," and the 200,000 Methodists within its territory should rally now, even sacrificially, to make its future secure. Our bishops, presiding elders, pastors and other workers are co-operating, and we can but feel that the success of the Before May 15 Effort is certain.

SHALL THE CHURCH PROMOTE RACE SUICIDE?

The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, the last week in March, released a statement that the Administrative Committee of the Council approved the practice of "Birth Control" with exception of six out of the twenty-eight members. Bishop James Cannon, Jr., who is a member of the committee, refuses to sign the approval. It is worth noting that two out of the seven members of the committee refusing to sign the majority report are representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—Bishop Cannon and Mrs. W. A. Newell.

Some of the widely circulated daily papers claim that the committee speaks for 23,000,000 church members, which cannot be true so far as the 2,600,000 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are concerned. The Federal Council, as a medium for exchange of ideas, clearing-house for information, and an agency for the promotion of the unquestioned social and spiritual aims of the churches, is much out of place when it undertakes to speak for its constituent bodies on controverted questions and practices which those bodies have never approved.

It is exceedingly unfortunate that, when the foundation of the home is being blasted, marriage minimized, and divorces rapidly increasing, the committee should have undertaken to place the influence of the churches on the side of forces that would destroy the American home. To go further than insist upon chastity and continence is unscriptural and the committee was out of its bounds to outline suggestions for birth control and indicate church approval of its practice. The Church should refuse to take any step toward race suicide, though the committee would have her go a long way in that direction. If the facts could be known, the physical wreckage, economic incompetency and spiritual jeopardy caused by the practice approved by the committee would likely equal, if not supass, the ills produced by there being too many children in homes.

The committee's proposal is a one-race accommodation. The colored races now outnumber the white race two to one and they show no decline of birthrate, while the white race is already on the decline. We have no sympathy for the muchly talked of "race superiority complex," yet we feel that the white race has a responsible mission to the world, and to have the church give its sanction to a practice that will accelerate the dwindling of its ratio and bear baneful fruit in ages to come seems incredible. There is enough room on the earth for all races and they should preserve their racial integrity and work out their mission-according to the will of God.

Methodism approving the Malthusian menace? Horribile dictu! Susanna Wesley was the youngest of the twenty-four children of her mother and the twenty-fifth child of her father, Dr. Samuel Annesley; and "no less than nineteen children" were born to her and Samuel Wesley, one of whom was John Wesley, the founder of Methodism. It is fortunate for the world that there were no committees successfully administering in the sanctities of home in the latter part of the eighteenth century, for the world needed Susanna Annesley and her son John Wesley.

WHY I READ MY CHURCH PAPER

By Clark J. Cross
Lowman Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church,
Topeka, Kansas

I read my church paper for the same reason that a stockholder of a bank reads the report of his board of directors, that a merchant reads his trade paper, that a mechanic reads his trade union journal, that a doctor reads his medical magazine: that I may know and understand the latest developments of my trade and profession—that of being a Christian.

I cannot be a real Christian and a worthwhile member of my church unless I know its purposes, its aims, its plans, its needs, and how it proposes through the co-operation of its members to join hands with God in bringing them about. My church paper, the text-book of my particular denomination, tells me how.—Church Business.

SUBORDINATE MEANS TO END

BY BISHOP COLLINS DENNY, D.D., LL.D.

To establish and provide for the growth of any great work organization, some kind of government, is required. As the work grows the organization becomes more complicated, and there seems to be a strong tendency on the part of all of us to lose sight of the fact that the organization, the government, is but the means, not at all the end, for which the government was instituted. Repeatedly each of us must do as the Prodical did, "come to himself," in order to keep in their proper place means and end. Our admiration, our enthusiasm, for the most perfect form of government may so absorb us that the end sought is obscured, for us utterly lost.

Few products of highest human thought have gained such praise, and rightly, from such a large number of the ablest men of the world, as has our Federal Constitution. Why did so many gifted men spend so many weary months trying to perfect this form of government? Did those men work for any definite object? After hammering this frame of government into the best machine they could devise, what did they propose should be done with it? Every single part of it, the whole of it, had in view, and only in view, "the formation of more perfect union, establishing justice, insuring domestic tranquility, providing for the common defence, promoting the general welfare, and securing the blessings of liberty to themselves and their posterity." Lose sight of this end, change it, lower it, and the constitution may become for modern America and for the world as useless as Caesar's chariot, or Cleopatra's barge, or as dangerous as a heavy truck running wild on a crowded highway.

Our Church government has never been, is not now, an end in itself. Some of us, the more we study it from its beginnings under Wesley, watch its development, its adaptation. here in America, especially in our own Southern branch of Methodism, believe it to be when properly, truly administered, the most perfect form of Church or State government. Indeed, at times we need to drag our thoughts away from the form, and to bring up from the depths of inattention, the end for which these well devised means exist; for truly our government in particular and in general, our offices and officers, our boards and buildings, our means for gathering money and the money gathered—all are nothing, or profit us nothing, aside from their spiritual end; they are profitless as Paul says of the gift of prophecy, of the understanding of all mysteries and all knowledge, of the bestowing of all our goods to feed the poor, of the giving our bodies to be burned, unless we have charity. The means without the end are an empty, possibly a worthless, shell.

What our fathers did, what we should try to do. by the help of God, is to bring ourselves and all the people to repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ. This is the spiritual end we should seek. For this our Church government was instituted. For this we raise money, build churches, promote missions at home and abroad. To lose sight of this, not to promote this, is to lose all, no matter what else we gain. This is the very soul of Christianity. What shall it profit us to gain the whole world of perfection of government, to fill the country with beautiful and commodious buildings, to gather an uncountable number of dollars, and to lose this, our soul?

No man can read the moving history of Methodism and fail to see that wherever it has gone men have been turned from darkness to light, from the power of Satan unto God, have received conscious forgiveness of sins, and have been divinely promised inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in Christ Jesus.

It is our desire that those days of mighty power and glory shall return, once more to witness multitudes turning to God. Nothing is surer in human thought and fact than that like causes will have like effects. The return on our part to the life, the doctrine, the teaching of our fathers, a life, doctrine and teaching clearly set forth and enjoyed in the word of God, will accomplish today exactly what in the days of our fathers it accomplished. Let us not make the mistake of supposing that we can have the true life without the true doctrine, or the true doctrine without the true life. In his day Fletcher told the Methodists that, "the best principles, when cordially embraced, will always produce the best practices."
—Christian Advocate.

REPORT, FINDINGS COMMITTEE, CIRCUIT PREACHERS' CONFERENCE

Millsaps College, Feb. 26-27, 1931

By Rev. V. C. Curtis, D.D.

A sentence in the report of the Committee of Findsings of the Circuit Preacher's Conference held at Millsaps College, February 26 and 27, 1931, which appeared in the issue of the Advocate of March 12, attracted my attention as being unusual. Here is the sentence: "Since it has been estimated by Dr. Alexander 'That the preacher's influence in the pulpit is 25 per cent of the total amount of good that he can accomplish in his charge' (the group did not agree with Dr. Alexander in his estimate) and since there are many agencies about us such as:" . . . (Then follows a list of some fifteen or more organizations to be studied with a view of determining how a preacher might cooperate with them and how much time he can legitimately contribute to these agencies).

If only one-fourth of the good that is to be accomplished is by the preacher's utterances then the logical conclusion would be that only one-fourth of his time should be devoted to his preparation to preach, and the other three-fourths should be devoted to other forms of activity which would be in line with the several agencies which are enumerated, including the Federated Clubs, Luncheon Clubs, etc. According to this estimate his ability as preacher does not even have a secondary place in his life-work. If this is accurate we do not think it is fair to insist on young preachers spending four or five years in a seminary studying theology, the expense of which frequently brings about a financial embarrassment; but we should be satisfied with a brief study of two or three books which might be put into the Conference course. And there would be a revision of the architecture of church buildings. Auditoriums where a preacher is only supposed to wield one-fourth of his influence should no longer be of first consideration. After all the other agencies and organizations have been provided for and is plenty of money to spend, an auditorium might be constructed for use in case of emergency.

We feel sure that if our preachers take this teaching seriously and follow the logical conclusions, it will not be long before it will not be doubted by any, that not even 25 per cent of the good they hope to accomplish would come from their pulpit efforts.

But we ask, are we no longer to have the element of prophecy in our preaching? Is the note of authority no longer to be heard in the pulpit? Shall the prophetic preaching be forever silenced and priestly routine take its place?

This writer has had the impression that a true preacher was called of God, and since he was called of God that call should never be relegated to a fourth place in the preacher's life. God may not call them by an audible voice, but he has a method that is more positive and certain when He deals with the inner consciousness of the individual. The Discipline of our Church has this question: "How shall we try those who profess to be moved by the Holy Ghost to preach?" This question seems to be in keeping with the experience of the Apostle Paul who said "Woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel." We remember that Paul himself heard the burning words of Stephen, the martyr, when the Holy Ghost descended upon him and he saw the Heavens open and heard his prayer, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." Paul's aroused conscience goaded him and when he was on the road to Damascus and was stricken to the earth the Lord said, "It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks." On the memorable morning when the Holy Ghost descended upon that congregation assembled in prayer Peter preached and we read that three thousand were saved. The pulpit was the throne of the preachers of righteousness in the early history of the Church. John Chrysoston and Augustine in the fourth century thundered their warnings from the pulpit and called men to repentance. After their voices were silenced the dark ages followed. But at the close of the fifteenth century Savonarola was preaching to the thousands who gathered in the Cathedral at Florence: God used him to stir the consciences of men and the organized forces of evil could hush his voice only by imprisonment and burning at the stake. In later years John Wesley appeared and preached to acres of people until hundreds were so deeply convicted of their sins that they fell upon the ground as dead. The masses hung upon the words of George Whitefield, both in England and America. Jonathan Edwards, the strict Calvinist, associated with Whitefield and preached with such power to his staid congregation in Northfield that we are told that some of the auditors actually held to the back of the pews for fear that the judgment would overtake them at once. In the course of my ministry, I have had occasion to question many people as to what led to their conversion. The majority of the answers said it was through the influence of some sermon preached at some time. Maybe they were not converted on the spot, but it led to their conversion. Probably the sermon was given by some brother who was not prominent in the ministry, and who was not specially gifted in oratory or rhetoric, but in that mysterious way, the Holy Ghost took the burning message from his lips and caused it to sink deep into their consciences, and brought them to repentance and to salvation. Shall the preacher desert his pulpit which should be his throne of power and take second or third place in some other organization?

But we are told that conditions are changed now, and the people do not listen to the preacher as they did in the days which are gone. But human nature and its attitudes have not changed. It is interesting to read the charges that John Chrysotom made against his congregation. He complained of the absence of the people from the services or the Church. He said, "No discomfort, no stress of weather will keep you from a circus, while a cloud the size of a man's hand will keep you from the services." He complained of the behavior of the congregation. "Prayer is going on and all are kneeling, but not all are praying, some are stupidly unconcerned, some are talking, some are laughing. . . . People act in the house of God as if they were in a theater. Even during the sermon some go out, some sleep, and women chatter about their children." This was in the fourth century but it sounds much like conditions of 1931.

We have organizations, religious, semi-religious, and secular, all of which are supposed to be working for the good of mankind, as never before. Yet, we find not only our own country, but the whole world in a sad plight. Atheism is rampant; and infidelity is entrenched in high places. What are supposed to be new philosophies (behaviorism, humanism, etc.) are making their appeal to the senses.

We have breadlines in our southland though we have enough surplus cotton to clothe all the people of the United States. We read of hunger and distress among the coal miners because they cannot get the necessities of life; yet, there is no scarcity of coal. We have heard the distressing details of the financial depression in the wheat regions, yet we learn they are burning wheat for fuel. Our troubles have not come upon us because God has not sent his blessings in super-abundance. But our troubles are the result of a spiritual dearth and pulling down the moral standards. People have lost faith in God and in each other. The lack of confidence has sent scores of banks to the wall. Statisticians, bankers, and other thoughtful business men tell us that normal conditions will not return until there is a spiritual awakening. The only hope that we have for this is in the power of the Gospel. Instead of discounting preaching and depreciating the work which the ministry has been called to do, we should be praying for a fresh baptism of the Holy Ghost upon every pulpit in the land. Men in high as well as low places should be called to repentance with the burning zeal of the Apostles and Martyrs of old until the guilty cry out like the heathen jailer, "What must I do to be saved?"

BISHOP CANNON'S POSITION ON BIRTH CONTROL REPORT

I give below copy of a letter sent by me to the Administrative Committee of the Federal Council on March 25th. I indicated to the Committee "that it may become necessary to give the letter to our Church press in order that my position may be clear to the Church," and I have decided to do so.

In a later communication on this matter to Mr. David Rankin Barbee on March 27th, I also said, "I should have been willing to sign all of the report on which all members of the Committee agreed although I should have sought to change two or three sentences. I think the matters discussed in the two or three sections upon which the Committee was divided should be left to individuals and their physicians to determine for themselves their rights and duties. Dogmatic declarations seem unwarranted and unnecessary."

March 25, 1931.

Dean Luther A. Weigle, Chairman, Administration Committee,
Federal Council of Churches,
New York City, N. Y.

My Dear Dean Weigle:

I am addressing you as Chairman of the Administrative Committee with the request that the following statement be presented to the Committee at its meeting on March 27th.

At the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Federal Council in Minneapolis, I think in 1926, I offered the resolution authorizing the appointment of the Committee on Marriage and the Home, and was elected chairman of that Committee. This position I held until about February 15, 1931, when, owing to sickness rendering it impossible for me to attend meetings, I resigned, and under date of February 27th Dr. Tippy wrote me (the letter reaching Los Angeles March 3rd), "We have induced Dr. Robbins to take the chairmanship. Your name is kept as a member of the Committee representing the Southern Methodist Church." Meanwhile Dr. Tippy had written asking that I wire collect authorizing signing of my name to either majority or minority report on Birth Control. I wired from Tucson, Arizona, February 28th saying as nearly as I can remember that I could not authorize signature until after thorough consideration of report which I had had no opportunity to give.

I read today on the front page of the New York Times of March 21st, evidently an authorized statement, that of the twenty-eight members of the Committee, twenty-two signed the majority report, three the minority report, and the other three, namely Bishop C. K. Gilbert, Dr. Benjamin R. Lacy, and Mrs. W. A. Newell had signed neither report. I certainly signed neither report, and wired that I could not without thorough consideration. I was until recently chairman of the Committee and am still a member, and in my quadrennial report to the General Conference included that committee as one upon which I acted as a representative of our Church. I cannot understand the failure to report my name along with that of Mrs. Newell as representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South who did not sign either report. I think in justice to myself and the Church which I represent my telegram to Dr. Tippy from Tucson on February 28th should be given to the press.

Furthermore I must say that had I been present at the meeting of the Administrative Committee on February 27th, I should have emphatically opposed the motion that "the report be approved for publication." It is true that the Committee did not adopt the report, but the effect on the general public is the same as though it had done so, and this impression is strengthened by Dr. Tippy's statement quoted in the Herald-Tribune of March 21st that "this statement by the Federal Council is believed to be the first declaration on the subject by an interdenominational body made up of representatives of many churches." I do not think that the General Conference of the Church I represent at its recent session in Dallas would have voted that it considered it wise to approve the publication of this report as representative of its views, and yet it now goes out to the world that our Church is one of the constituted bodies which has voted to approve the publication of this report.

The report itself declares "It is known that opinion in the Churches in the United States is divided, as is also the medical profession," and in view of this admitted fact, had I been present I should have insisted that the Administrative Committee before it voted to approve the report for publication, should have voted that the report be presented to the officials of the several constituted bodies who have been elected to positions of responsibility and to Boards dealing with social questions, as in my own church for example, to the Bishops, to the Board of Temperance and Social Service and to the Woman's Missionary Council which met in Memphis this month—in order to determine whether such publication would be approved or disapproved by such leaders of the constituted bodies.

My objection to the action taken by the Administrative Committee that "the report be approved for publication" is not simply technical: it is positive and substantial. There is a growing sentiment among many supporters of the Federal Council that some "statements and reports are approved for publication" on matters concerning which the Federal Council is not called upon to approve any publication, and on some matters on which it is known that sentiment among the constituted bodies is so divided that the Federal Council should frankly agree that the constituted bodies are too greatly divided to issue any statement.

I feel obliged, therefore, to state to the Administrative Committee that as a representative of our Church upon the Committee, I do not think this statement should have been "approved for publication" at this time, because the administrative Committee did not know and had made no sufficient effort to discover whether the properly constituted leaders of the constituent bodies of the Federal Council would approve such publication on a subject upon which admittedly ecclesiastical and medical opinion is so greatly divided.

As stated above, I think that my telegram to Dr. Tippy should be given to the press that it may be known that neither of the two representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, signed either of the reports. I hope such publication will be sufficient, but it may become necessary for me to give this letter to our Church press in order that my position as its representative may be clear to the Church.

Regretting the necessity for this letter, as I have always been a staunch supporter of the great aims and major activities of the Council, and with hope and prayers for its continued success,

Sincerely,

JAMES CANNON, JR.

P. S.—I respectfully request note be made in the minutes of the Committee of the reception of this letter and of the position taken therein.

THE NEED OF CHURCH EVANGELIZATION

By Henry G. Riser

The Church is the plan of God, and His purpose in planning it was to spread the Gospel of His Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, and His saving power. God had a definite work in view for the Church when He planned it, and that is the main reason that He planned it so carefully and so strong that it has stood throughout ages.

The Church's great beginning and historic noble records make our hearts rejoice for such a divine organization. As we read what the Church was, what it could have been, and what it can be yet, it makes us happy to know that it is possible for us to have a small hand in this great movement.

The greatest need of the Church today is a revival, and we cannot have a revival unless we have the spirit of evangelism. However, as I endeavor to write of the great need of church evangelism, we should remember that the Christian ministry has fulfilled itself in many ways in the course of history, and the methods of one age have not been the methods of another. I am confident that the Church has felt the need of evangelism, but I am sure in this modern age the need is felt as it has never been felt before throughout the history of the Church.

First, of the "five subheads" to be discussed under this subject for the next few weeks.

1. Evangelism in the Church is a necessity.

Evangelism in the Church is a necessity, first of all, because it was endorsed by the Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus began with His disciples in doing evangelistic work. He would go along with them and teach them how it should be done and when and where to do it. Christ always had the evangelistic spirit within Him, and always emphasized to His followers and believers to "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every living creature," this was indeed a great evangelistic spirit. And it is a spirit that is sadly neglected by many many of our churches today. So then, why is evangelism in the Church a necessity? Because the Church was founded by Jesus Christ, and its purpose is to carry out His plan and to do His work and will, and the Lord Jesus Christ laid such emphasis upon evangelism that it is absolutely a necessity in the Church in order to carry out the will of God and to carry on the work of our Lord Jesus Christ.

It is the pastor's duty to see and know that evangelism is carried on properly in the church. Because he is not simply an officer, servant or workman of God, but he is an ambassador and herald to tell men about God himself. He must bring distinctly the reality, symbol and nature of Heaven before all men before whom he preaches and exhorts.

It is the pastor's duty to train and teach, and show the way of salvation to all with whom he comes in contact with. It is his duty to keep each church member busy and at work. He should have everything so thoroughly organized that each member in the church will have a certain task or duty that will enable them to help carry on this great work of evangelization. Here is the place that many pastors fail today; they go in and take the whole thing over and try to run it themselves without giving the church member anything to do. Did Christ carry on His work in this way? NO. He trained, taught and organized His workers and followers to perfection, then He was able to do a perfect work in evangelization among the lost and dying world. And not until the pastors of today follow in the footsteps of Jesus and try to be more like Him, will the evangelism in the churches be what it should be.

In II Tim. 4:5, the Apostle Paul has exhorted us to do the work of an evangelist at all times. He has commanded us to be ever watchful and be prepared at all times and places to do evangelistic work for our Lord Jesus Christ. As Paul said, "Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine." It takes this to be true to our ministry and to make full proof of evangelistic work. Why should we not be able to do this little bit for our Lord and Saviour; He did so much for us, He did it all for us, and here we are falling short of a small task that He asks us to do, and we could easily do. As I said before that evangelism is an absolute necessity in the church if it expects to do the will of the Lord and carry out His great plan and works. God did not put words in His blessed Book just to fill up space, He had a definite object for every word in there, and we, as reedemed ones and the church as the house of God, it is our duty and an absolute necessity that we be an evangelist, and see to it that our churches have more evangelism in them for this lost world. Evangelism is a necessity in the church; therefore, let us exhort it with all our hearts.

IS GOD THE FATHER OF ALL MEN?

By Rev. John W. Ramsey

Part I

In replying to my article with the above caption both Rev. S. W. Miller and Rev. R. H. Bamburg missed the mark, having based their replies upon misinterpretations and misapplications of the Scriptures, and both evade most of my Biblical quotations in support of my contention that God is not the Father of all men. I shall not, therefore, recede from the position which I have taken on what I regard as a vital question. Furthermore, I challenge these brethren to show that in every instance where our Lord spoke of God as "your Father" he was not addressing his disciples, and I also challenge one or both of them to cite a single instance where our Lord called God the Father of any man or men other than his disciples. If either will point out one single passage which may be so interpreted, leaving no reasonable doubt, as the lawyers say, I shall surrender the question without further argument.

Both brethren seize my statement that every child born into the world is born inside the kingdom by virtue of the atonement and, while admitting the truth of the statement, endeavor, but vainly, to turn it against my argument. Brother Bamburg boldly says, "Beyond a doubt he believes in the universal Fatherhood of the human family," although I emphatically stated that I did not believe in the universal Fatherhood of God. Then, asserting his own belief, he says, "I believe in the universal Fatherhood of the whole human family." I was not aware that the question under discussion was "the Fatherhood of the human family," but thought it to be the Fatherhood of God. In fact, I did not know that such a theory as "the Fatherhood of the human family" had ever been a question in any system of theology till Brother Bamburg brought it to my attention. That I overlooked it in my extensive reading of the works of theological writers has, no doubt, been my misfortune. Referring again to the status of children as members of the kingdom, he says: "All of them so remain till they reach the years of accountability and by sin sever their connection with the Heavenly Father and become children of the devil, but this does not destroy the fact that they were once God's children." The phrase, "they were once God's children" is an explicit admission that, under the condition stated, they are not now God's children, and if such children are not God's children, then, evidently, God is not their Father. To avoid this logical deduction, he adds: "They are God's lost children"; but his conclusion is at variance with his premise—it is what logicians term a non-sequiter. Admittedly, such children "were once God's children," but how can they be God's children now, even "lost children," if, as he admits, they are now "children of the devil"? If both assumptions be true, such children have a double parentage—children of God and children of the devil. I cannot conceive of such a dual relationship. Will he tell us how it can be? It would have been more consistent if he had fearlessly endorsed the Calvinistic doctrine of our Baptist brethren, as did Brother Miller, when they deny the Methodist doctrine of apostacy: "Once a child always a child." I reject the teaching of Calvinism and deny that a child, though born inside the kingdom, is still a child, not even a "lost child," when by sin it severs its connection with God: If the child has sinned, it is no longer a child of God, but, as Brother Bamburg admits, is a child of the devil; and, since there can be no double parentage in heaven, on earth, or in hell, both adults and children are either children of God or children of the devil, despite all mental gymnastics and mushy sentimentalism. No matter how young a child may be in years, and some of them are very, very young these days, the moment it is able to discriminate between right and wrong, if it refuses or neglects to accept Jesus Christ as a personal Saviour, it becomes a sinner and, as such, if it die in that state, it will be lost in hell—and it will not be a "lost child of God," but a child of the devil. God has no "lost" children in hell—they are all the children of the devil. Bible truth must not be whitewashed, however unpleasant it may sound to sentimental ears. While saying all this, I am preaching the gospel truth as all men know who accept the Bible as the word of God.

In support of his position that a lost sinner is a "lost child" of God, Brother Bamburg cites the parable of the Prodigal Son and thereby violates the most fundamental rule of scriptural interpretation. He should know that there is but one central truth any parable is supposed to teach and that the details of the parable must not be pressed to extremes. The central truth of this particular parable being in justification of our Lord's association with publicans and sinners, beyond this no reverent Bible interpreter should dare to go. I shall have more to say of this parable when I come to discuss it in the second part of this article.

Brother Bamburg and Brother Miller refer to the Parable of Lazarus and Dives to establish the universal Fatherhood of God because, forsooth, Abraham addresses Dives as "son" and Dives calls Abraham "father." Here again both brethren violate the same scriptural rule of interpretation mentioned in the preceding paragraph. The central truth our Lord taught in this parable was the danger of riches. Other parts of the parable are employed only as vehicles to convey that one single truth. If the terms "son" and "father" have any significance at all, which I doubt, they are only expressions of racial relationship—Abraham was a Jew, and so was Dives.

It may be that I am lacking in mental capacity, but I shall have to confess my inability to see the point in the references of Brothers Bamburg and Miller, Adam and Eve, unless they intended to base the Fatherhood of God upon the act or fact of creation. If that was their intention, I shall show further on in this article that creation does not have the slightest relation to the Fatherhood of God, and neither can it be predicated of any other kind of fatherhood.

In his effort to meet my argument from our Lord's Sermon on the Mount, Brother Bamburg quotes Matt. 5:1,2: "And seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain; and when he was set, his disciples came unto him and he opened his mouth and taught them, saying," etc. Then he asks, "Whom did he teach, disciples only or the multitudes?" and proceeds to answer his own question by giving it as his opinion that he taught the multitudes, "for seeing the multitudes was the cause of him hunting a convenient place to preach to them." Unfortunately, Brother Bamburg forgets his grammar. In the first place, the phrase "the cause of him hunting" should be, "the cause of his hunting." Secondly, "them" is a personal pronoun and must agree with its antecedent "disciples." Now substitute "them" for its antecedent "disciples" and read: "His disciples came unto him and he taught the disciples, saying," etc. It was, then, his disciples, and not the multitudes, whom he taught. In like manner, when he said: "If ye, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children," etc., he was addressing his disciples, although Brother Bamburg assumes that only one of them was married and none of them had children. There is no doubt in my mind but that the little child which Jesus set in the midst of the disciples when in Peter's home was Peter's child. As for the other disciples, the Scriptures are silent concerning whether they were married or had children; but, under certain conditions, silence is the strongest adducible proof and, to say the least of it, they were potential fathers, having children in their loins. When Jesus called Peter a rock, he was very far from being a rock, but Jesus saw that he was capable of becoming rock-like; so Peter, in the mind of Jesus, was a potential rock. Likewise, Jesus had in his thought the potential fatherhood of his disciples. Thirdly, so far from the multitudes "being the cause of his hunting a convenient place to preach to them," the Expositors Bible affirms that Jesus went up into the mountain in order that he might shake off the multitude and select his audience, knowing that the careless multitude would remain below, and it is a fact that Jesus sometimes climbed a mountain side to escape the multitude, as he did when the people attempted to make him king by force and "He departed again into a mountain alone."

Brother Miller quotes Paul's declaration that God created of one blood all nations, but here again, as in the Parable of Lazarus and Dives, we have a simple statement of a racial relationship, which no one denies. Racial or tribal relations do not touch the question of the universal Fatherhood of God or the universal brotherhood of man, both of which I emphatically reject.

Both Brother Bamburg and Brother Miller argue that the fact that God created all men involves the acceptance of the universal Fatherhood of God, but I deny that it involves any such thing. Creation does not even suggest the concept of fatherhood. God created the sun, moon, and stars; therefore, according to these brethren, God is the Father of the sun, moon, and stars, which, of course, is perfectly absurd. Reductio ad absurdum, as the logicians say. The essential element of fatherhood is not creation but something far different, as I shall show in the second part of this article.

Brother Bamburg correctly quotes me as follows: "The conclusion of the whole matter is that the argument that God is not the Father of all men is irrefutable, and the doctrine of the universal Fatherhood of God is utterly false; and, further, its corallary, the universal brotherhood of man is equally false." and, then adds: "Certainly, Brother Ramsey does not mean what this statement seems to imply." In reply, I have to say that the quoted statement expresses precisely what I meant, and I intended to leave no room for implications to the contrary. Had it been possible to make my attitude on this vital question more emphatic, I would have done so.

In the second part of this article, I shall offer for the consideration of these brethren and others additional reasons for the faith that is within me, and attempt to produce what I regard as exceedingly dangerous implications involved in the erroneous doctrines of the universal Fatherhood of God and the universal brotherhood of man.

SOME THINGS PREACHED BY JOHN, "THE MESSENGER"

By Rev. John D. Ellis

According to the prophets who gave forecast of John's ministry, and according to the gospel writers who made a compendious record, his preachments were all-inclusive, and contained more pith and substance than modern sectarian thought attributes to him.

1. John was a herald who proclaimed the immediate appearing of the Christ. (John 1:26-27, Mark 1:2, Mal. 3:1.)

Septuagint: "Behold, I will send out my messenger, and he shall look out the path before my face."

John went "in front of" and immediately in advance of the Lord's face.

2. "There standeth one among you, whom ye know not." (John 1:26.)

John made the multitudes turn their heads and wonder.

3. "He it is who coming after me." (John 1:27, Matt. 3:11.)

"Opiso," to the hack, behind, after.

4. "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." (Matt. 3:2.)

Draws near, truly approaches, now present: "The gospel dispensation, in which subjects are to be gathered to God by his Son, and a society formed, first on earth and afterward with God in glory." "The demand of repentance showed it was a spiritual kingdom."

5. "Repent ye." (Matt. 3:2, Mark 1:4, 15.)

John preached compunction of conscience, pricking of heart, revolution of mind, change of judgment, and a better bias of soul.

6. He required confession of sin in baptism. (Matt. 3:6, Mark 1:5.)

"The baptism was a seal of their felt need of deliverance from sin, and of their expectation of the coming Deliverer."

7. "That he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water." (John 1:31.)

His entire ministry and baptism were subservient to Christ, and he baptized in order to magnify the cleansing power of his grace: By his ministry he served Christ, and by his baptism he served the grace of his cleansing.

8. "Prepare ye the way of the Lord." (Matt. 3:3, Isa. 4 :3.)

He preached a spiritual preparation for his immediate appearing and for the blessing which he alone would bestow.

9. "Make his paths straight." (Mark 1:3, Isa. 40:3.)

The repentance and faith which John preached would make everything straight and level for their redemption through Christ.

10. He warned men to flee from the wrath to come. (Matt. 3:7.)

The anger of God which will roll like a fiery tide.

11. He preached the fruits of repentance. (Matt. 3:8.)

Fruits answerable to amendment of life, such as humility, meekness, faith, love, mercy, righteousness and holiness—pious fruitage.

12. He preached the inadequacy of being the descendants of Abraham. (Matt. 3:9.)

His language indicates the calling of the Gentiles who were stone-dead in sin, whom God could raise up as his spiritual children.

13. "All flesh shall see the salvation of God." (Luke 3:4-6.)

Part of John's voice: His ministry was to "Israel," but his message gave hope to the Gentiles.

14. He preached impending judgments from God, who was about to enter his vineyard with axe. (Matt. 3:10.)

15. Bring forth good fruit, or be cut down. (Matt. 3:10). Amend or perish.

16. He preached charity and consideration of others as opposed to selfishness and avarice. (Luke 3.11.)

17. Honesty and justice, as opposed to fraud and extortion. (Luke 3:13).

18. A harmless, quiet life, free from violence and slander: and contentment with wages, as opposed to mutiny. (Luke 3:14.)

19. He bore witness of the Light, and that the Messiah (the Word made flesh) is the Light of the world. (John 1:6-9.)

20. That his (John's) mission was to lead all men to believe. (John 1:7.)

21. He preached the Messiah as Lord. (Matt. 3:3, Isa. 40:3.)

22. Also, his pre-existence. (John 1:15.)

23. That grace and truth came by him. (John 1:17.)

24. He preached him as the only begotten Son which is in the bosom of the Father. (John 1:8.)

25. Bore record that he is the Son of God. (John 1:34). Virgin birth.

26. That he (John) was the voice in the wilderness foretold by prophets. (John 1:23, Isa. 40:3.)

He knew his mission and the object: He could not have introduced Jesus to Israel without knowing who Jesus was: He preached him as "Lord" and "God." (Matt. 3:3, Isa. 40:3).

27. He preached him as the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. (John 1:29, 36.)

28. He preached his superior dignity and power, who would baptize with the Holy Ghost and fire. (Matt. 3:11.)

According to the preaching of John, baptism is an enduement, enrichment, purification and zeal of soul:

John used the word "baptism" in the absence of and to the exclusion of water: Jesus did the same. (Luke 12:50, Matt. 20:22-23, Mark 10: 38-39.)

29. With fan in hand he (the Messiah) will purge his floor (visible church), gather the wheat and burn up the chaff. (Matt. 3:12.)

30. John preached that the Lord would come, that his own arm would establish his authority, and administer his kingdom. (Isa. 40:11.)

31. Also, that he would have condescension and tenderness for his flock of redeemed sinners, and carry the lambs in his bosom. (Isa. 40.11.)

Isaiah foretold what John would say, and John and all the apostles of Christ preached what Isaiah said. For "the lambs" (the children) to be gathered in the Lord's arms and carried in his bosom is a great chariot of safety:

During his ministry he fulfilled the words of John and of Isaiah by gathering the little children in his arms.

The Lord graciously received children and had them among his auditory. He used the character of a little child as the type which distinguishes true disciples:

He accepted their praises and said that they were members of the kingdom of God.

32. John turned many of the children of Israel to the Lord their God. (Luke 1:16.)

33. He turned the hearts of the fathers to the children. (Luke 1:17, Mal. 4:6.)

He turned the fathers back to parental fidelity and woke them up to the duties they owed their children in religious education.

John had a message for the children and little ones who attended upon his ministry.

What Peter preached on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:38-39) had echoed all over Judea from the voice of John: "The promise is unto you and your children."

Fathers and children were turned by John in unity of faith and to parental and filial duties.

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL

Notwithstanding the fact that the General Conference took action that limited the work of a pastors' school to three books of each year of the Conference course, practically all the students in the classes of the first, second and third years, session of 1930, expressed a desire to continue with their work in the Seashore Divinity School, and the directors were encouraged to go on with the courses for the undergraduates.

Dr. J. L. Decell, Rev. J. T. Leggett and the dean, having been appointed a committee to select the books to be offered, decided upon the following course, twice published in the Advocate, but here carried for the information of those who may not have seen the former announcements:

SAFETY SIGNALS

By Rev. S. J. Davies

Religion, nowadays, beloved, is a strange and complicated affair. Far be from me to sit in the critic's chair and launch condemnatory words upon a brotherman whose views are different from mine on a matter so vital to human interests and human happiness. I simply note present and passing events that seem of interest to me, letting each draw his own conclusions. Selah.

Church and state, seemeth to me, are not unlike the two great forces at work among the galaxies of heaven—centrifugal and centripetal—drawing together and pulling apart, so keeping the universe in balance and "agoing." The Romanist and Anglican churches stand for the union of church and state. Protestant bodies, not claiming apostolic succession, for separation. Lofty claims are made by the state-ensconced church and claims based upon the succession of faith and doctrine outside of tactual imposition stoutly maintained by numbers of devout Christians in other churches. And I presume this condition will continue so long as freedom, civil and religious, obtains in these fair regions.

One morning at 9:45 a. m. Mrs. Davies and I sat at the radio and heard the Pope deliver his blessing to the world at large. No doubt it was thrilling to our Romanist friends, and interesting to vast numbers of people. It was given or bestowed in Latin. Sounded to me more like the chant of the mass than the virile tongue of Virgil, Livy or Cicero, with whose writings I have had a passing acquaintance. Distance and static made the words unintelligible, and so his "benedicte" was vox et preterea nihil so far as we were concerned. The most wonderful part of it all is that science has vindicated its lofty claims, in some sense, of being a handmaid to religion. May his blessing and mine, too, abide upon the faithful of his flock. I have baptized, married, buried and preached to many of them in the course of my ministry and they have ever treated me with courtesy and kindness as a minister. Here is good stopping ground for this division of my signal.

Benedicte omnibus

Some gifted genius should write a great poem or parable about the angel of Truth leaving his heavenly seat and seeking a resting place on earth. In some lowly vine-clad cottage nestling in a sylvan grove amid whose leafy foliage the minstrelsy of singing birds, joined with the purling melody of caressing winds, and the winding stream bearing the melody on its crystal flow to sunlit regions, etc., etc., possibly in such a place Truth might find a welcome abode. But not in the contending civic and political strife of these days of ours. The propaganda that is propagated by the enemies of truth, soberness and righteousness is a shame and reproach to any class of citizens who claim decency or respect. The most outrageous falsehoods, willful and vicious misrepresentations of social conditions, mean and unfair attacks upon honorable men holding the highest public offices in our country, are bruited abroad by a string of newspapers confessedly paid for such dirty work. If, as a leading columnist states, there "is" eight times as much drunkenness in Washington City as in the days of the open saloon, our national capital must be a staggering pandemonium. And, because a few thoughtless giddy-pated boys and girls raise sin and Satan in an occasional wild party, that is no sound reason for slandering the promising, bright lads and lassies of our fair land, who as a class are earnest, sober and clean. Quit your lying, wet man, and stand for a while in the sunshine of truth, and dry out. It will improve your vision and have a fine sanitary effect on your general constitution. As a friend of mine said to me in the halcyon days of my youth, "Don't believe anything you hear and only half you see," for, rest assured, seeing in print is not believing to yours truly. If we must have "news" at the expense of truth, the less we have of this sort the better.

JUST STUFF

By "Rusticus"

Just a circuit rider who has organized at his country churches "Naborhood Nite," when the membership and friends get together for worship, fellowship and fun, making the units small enough to easily be taken care of in the humblest home and so that most of the folk can walk, they meet once a week and it is all working fine.

Just a glance over the whole of a Christian college paper that seems to promote football, frats, and frat dances, if anything else is promoted they forgot to mention it.

Just wondering if the slogan, "Give the folks the facts and they will respond," means that some things have been "camouflaged" heretofore, and all the facts have not been given.

Just thinking that perhaps the home base had been exploited and neglected at the expense of both the home and the foreign fields.

Just hoping that everyone of us will make "Methodist Membership Mean More" during 1931, and forever, so that the man next to us and the man furthest away and all between may come to a knowledge of Jesus Christ.

Just a derelict, drifting into an oil field drugstore. He sits down at the table and places his head upon it, sobbing. A Methodist preacher goes over, lays his hand upon his shoulder, calls him FRIEND, the piece of driftwood looks up and says, "I have no friend on earth," and with the fifteen cents in my pocket, I came in here to find something with which to end it all."

Then this Methodist preacher sat down at the table and in a very quiet way taught him the way of life, and that he felt the way he did for the reason that he had turned his back upon his best friend. This preacher took him to his parsonage home, saw that he had a good bath and helped him to improve his appearance, helped him to find a job, and in about two months he had a letter from this grateful man and his wife and daughter to whom he had been reunited, telling the preacher of their joy and that he had joined the church and was living and walking daily with that friend. And the preacher thanked God and took courage.

> "Down in the human heart, crushed by the tempter,
> Feelings lie buried that grace can restore,
> Touched by a loving heart, wakened by kindness,
> Chords that were broken will vibrate once more."

Just beliving that "If I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." Let us lay aside all schemes and the strange doctrines that doth so easily beset us and let us lift up the Christ.

In the college consolidation plans for Arkansas Methodism, Hendrix-Henderson-Galloway are not to become Trinity College, but are to be known as Hendrix and Galloway. This is gratifying to neighboring Mississippians, for the names of Galloway and Hendrix are highly appreciated among them.

The Home Circle

HAVE A HEART

(Inspired by a sermon preached at West Point by Rev. W. R. Lott, on the text, "Jesus Had Compassion Upon the Multitude.")

Have a heart! There is a brother along Life's Way
Who is struggling to gain the summit,
And you will surely get your pay
If you utter a word of mercy,
Stretch forth your hand—and pray.
Have a heart! You may.

There are children in this broad road.
They are always there—to stay.
You may receive great joy, a smile, a welcome,
If you'll in their path flowers lay.
They stop and look and listen
To see if you have time to give, to spare.

O, the rich reward is given,
If you'll in their path flowers lay.
If here you'll only do your share.
Have a heart! Have a care!

There are people aged in this long path
Which leads to weal or woe.
Both head and heart are lifted,
But the step may be so slow.
They seem to seek a counttry they declare
That city which is lovely—so surpassingly fair.
Have a heart! Have a care!

They need you—do not fail them.
You surely can not dare.
There are those whose sins seem to weight them.
They can't be cast aside.

These seem to be going down instead,
Just moving with the tide.
Stop them with your kindness!
Tell them of that radiance grand
Which when reaching this summit
Spreads o'er the face of the Saviour,
For the coming of any man.

When God says, "Who so ever!"
Why do we get in His way?
If we can't help by lifting,
Then we can smile and say:
"Father, here we are—use us
Somewhere, for some one,
And may Thy will, not ours always to the end be done."

ONE WHO HEARD.

BRAVE JACK

Jack was afraid of the dark—he needn't have been, but he was—so mother always left a dim light burning when she put him to bed.

How he loved the tiny gleam flickering on the ceiling! It seemed to be saying, "You needn't be afraid at all; mother's near, you know."

One day daddy, who was a carpenter, had a nasty accident, and mother went with daddy to the hospital to have the wound in his hand stitched. When she came home she told her neighbors how brave daddy had been, and how, when the doctor had finished his work, he had said, "Well-done, old man."

Little Jack listened, and there was born in his heart the determination to be brave "like daddy." So that night, when mother touched the switch, he shook his head. "No, mother," he cried, "don't leave the light on; I'm going to sleep without one now."

"Why, Jackie," said she, in great surprise, "aren't you afraid of the dark?"

"Well, yes, mum," he replied, and then added quaintly, "I am afraid of the dark—but—but I'm going to be brave and make the dark afraid of me!"

So many of us go through life imagining that some ill awaits us "in the dark," but God is near and will protect us with a care even greater than a mother's.—Pacific Advocate.

THE RED AND YELLOW TOP

By Faith Leroy

Bobby felt so happy! Uncle Alfred had given him a shiny new dime! Now, Bobby knew exactly what he wanted to do with it. There was a beautiful red and yellow top in the toy store window, and he had wanted it ever since the first time he had seen it. Just as soon as his mother gave him permission to go to the store he hurried off. Suppose some one had already bought it?

Bobby's legs hurried as fast as they could go. He could just see that top in the show window, looking so gay and pretty in its red and yellow coloring. He turned the corner and stood before the toy store, and—

It was gone from the window! Some one had bought it!

"Is the red and yellow top already sold, Mr. Arnold?" Bobby asked the man who owned the toy shop. It was so hard far him to give up all hope.

"Yes, Bobby, I sold it this morning. I'm sorry. It's the last I had of that color," Mr. Arnold told him.

"I've some other nice ones, Bobby," the man behind the counter said, taking a box from a shelf to show the tops it held. "These are very nice."

But Babby didn't like them as well as he had the red and yellow one. He bravely kept the tears from falling as he started toward home. When he was nearly there, he saw Teddy Wilson, who lived next door to him, crying over a broken bottle of milk. It was only a pint bottle, but Bobby knew that Teddy's mother and daddy didn't have much money and wouldn't be able to send for another.

"I b-broke it," sobbed Teddy, pointing to the bits of glass and the milk spreading over the sidewalk and trickling out into the gutter.

"I'm sorry, Teddy," Bobby said, not quite able to decide whether to give him the dime for some more milk or to keep the dime for himself. That dime meant a lot to Bobby. He didn't often have that much to spend just as he pleased. But he remembered that Teddy probably never had that much to do with as he pleased.

"Now we'll not have any milk for our bread pudding!" Teddy wiped the tears away with the back of his hand.

"Bread pudding? Is that all you're going to have for supper?" asked Bobby.

"No, there'll be potatoes, too," Teddy answered.

Bobby felt in his pocket for his dime. It would be hard to part with it, but Teddy had less than he had. Suddenly Bobby decided to spend the dime for—Teddy's milk!

"Here' a dime, Teddy. Take it and get some more milk!" Bobby shoved the dime into his hand and ran up the street.

"Well, Bobby, did you get what you wanted?" Uncle Alfred asked.

"No, it was gone, and there weren't any more tops like it." Bobby climbed up on Uncle Alfred's knees. "I'm glad it was gone, Uncle Alfred, because when I came home I met Teddy, and he had dropped his bottle of milk. I gave him the dime to get another bottle."

"What made you do that?" asked Uncle Alfred, smiling.

"He wouldn't have had any milk for supper," answered Bobby. "And anyway, I'll have another dime some time, and he never does."

"I'm glad I have such a generous little nephew," declared Uncle Alfred, reaching into his pocket for something. "I went past the toy store this morning and got a present for a certain young man, if he should be good." He held out the small package for Bobby.

"Thank you," Bobby said politely, thinking to himself, "Another ball, probably, and I already have lots of them! I wanted that top."

He removed the wrapping from the package under Uncle Alfred's smiling gaze. Then suddenly he gave a wild whoop ending in a joyful "Thank you!" For there, beneath the wrapping and tissue paper Bobby had found the very red and yellow top he had been wanting so long!

A HERO

A few years ago a fire broke out in a charming little Swiss village. In a few hours the quaint farm houses were entirely destroyed.

One poor man was in greater trouble than his neighbors, even. His home and cows were gone, and so also was his son, a bright boy of six or seven years. He wept and refused to hear any wards of comfort. He spent the night wandering sorrowfully among the ruins of his home.

Just as daybreak came, however, he heard a well-known sound; and, looking up, he saw his favorite cow leading the herd, and coming directly after them was his bright-eyed boy.

"O, my son, my son!" he cried. "Are you really alive?"

"Why, yes, father. When I saw the fire I ran to get our cows away to the pasture lands."

"You are a hero, my boy!" the father exclaimed.

But the boy said: "O, no! A hero is one who does some wonderful deed. I led the cows away because they were in danger, and I knew it was the right thing to do."

"Ah!" cried the father. "He who does the right thing at the right time is a hero."—N. C. Advocate.

WASHINGTON CELEBRATION

Countries of Latin-America will be invited to join in the universal tribute which will be rendered George Washington on the 200th anniversary of his birth, February 22, 1932.

The form of participation has not been announced, but the idea now considered is that each of the American republics, through a statesman or distinguished man of letters, should contribute to a symposium of articles describing the influences exerted by Washington upon the political evolution of the respective countries.

Inasmuch as Washington was a leader in, and first executive of the Republican form of government in America, which was adopted with various modifications in all independent countries of this hemisphere, it is thought that such a symposium would be of both present interest and permanent historical value.

Latin-American diplomats will take part in any ceremonies of international character that may be arranged here. The George Washington Bicentennial Commission, authorized by an Act of Congress, is now making plans which include foreign participation. Offices have been established in London and Paris to attend to the foreign arrangements.

Members of the commission also are hopeful that territories and insular possessions under the American flag will be represented in the bicentenary. Hawaii and Alaska have already organized local committees, and Porto Rico and the Phillippine Islands have been invited to do so.

The Bicentennial Commission has been recently informed that the new suspension bridge spanning the Hudson River between Fort Washington Park, Manhattan, N. Y., and Fort Lee, N. J., described as the world's greatest suspension bridge, has been named the George Washington Memorial Bridge and will form a feature of the celebration in 1932.—Exchange.

"Mamma, I have the stomach ache," said Peggy. "That's because you haven't had any lunch yet," answered Peggy's mother. "Your stomach is empty. You would feel better if you had something in it." That afternoon the minister called and remarked that he had been suffering with a headache. "That's because it's empty," said Peggy. "You'd feel better if you had something in it."

Editorial

DR. COPELAND AT TOPISAW

Rev. Theodore Copeland, D.D., 3710 Euclid avenue, Dallas, Texas, one of our general evangelists, is to hold the Topisaw Camp meeting (near Summit, Miss.) August 7-16, 1931. This camp ground is one of the historic meeting places for Methodists in South Mississippi. For over eighty years revival fires have burned around the altars at Topisaw. The property is in excellent condition, equipped with electric lights and water-works. Adequate facilities are there for many to spend ten days in physical recuperation and spiritual uplift. Rev. M. K. Miller, pastor, and his people are making adequate plans for a great camp meeting.

Rev. L. W. Cain, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, says that Dr. Copeland held a sure enough revival at Greensburg, La., in February. He has held successful meetings at several points in Mississippi and the Topisaw people are indeed fortunate to have him in their camp meeting.

Dr. Copeland has given himself to church revivals. He has not followed the spectacular nor sensational method, but has chosen to build the church in the local communities rather than leave an outside organization to carry on after his departure. He has had the confidence and esteem of great leaders in our Methodism. Bishops Hoss and Galloway, of sainted memory, saw in him a useful agent for the greater glory of God, and many of those living today unqualifiedly endorse him and his work. We welcome Dr. Copeland again to the Advocate's territory.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

Rev. George Fox, pastor, Hodge, La., has our thanks for subscriptions and his plans for putting the Advocate in every home of his charge.

Rev. J. J. Garner, pastor, Gunnison, Miss., has our thanks for six cash subscriptions. We trust that the Advocate will be of help to him in his charge.

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, pastor, did the preaching in revival services at First Church, Grenada, Miss., which began on Palm Sunday and closed with the services on Easter.

Mrs. J. B. Williamson, an active worker in the church at Fannin, Miss., has included in her activities special work for the Advocate. We thank her and the pastor for their interest.

Rev. E. D. Phillips, a superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, has been quite ill at his daughter's in Hattiesburg. His spirit is fine, and he says that he is happy on the way.

Rev. A. W. Bailey writes: "This is our fourth year at Sallis and we are having a good year," and one of the good things is his interest in his Conference organ. We thank him for eight subscriptions.

Rev. T. E. Nicholson is happy in his work on the Philadelphia, Miss., circuit and is meeting with encouraging success. We thank him for four cash subscriptions and appreciate the promise of more.

Rev. H. A. Forestor, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene, New Orleans, was an appreciated caller at the Advocate office last week, and we regret that his visit came on a day when duties called us out of the city.

Rev. W. C. Beasley is sharing the usual financial depression that prevails in the Mississippi Delta, but has been able to favor us with six cash subscriptions. Brother Beasley is rendering faithful service at Coldwater.

Rev. G. W. Robertson, faithful pastor at Pittsboro, Miss., was successful in securing twenty subscriptions to the Advocate last year, and we appreciate his efforts toward exceeding that number for the new Conference year.

Rev. A. R. Beasley, pastor, Minter City, Miss., has our thanks for his interest in the Advocate. In a letter to the office he writes, "Our situation looks much brighter now, congregations are fine and we are hopeful for a good year."

Rev. John W. Ramsey, pastor, Vimville, Miss., in a letter to the editor writes: "I am serving a most excellent people, who are very thoughtful of their pastor and his family. The outlook for the year's work is very encouraging."

Professor H. Conrad Blackwell, Millsaps College, preached at the Main Street Methodist Church, Biloxi, Miss., on Sunday, March 29, on "The Cross of Christ." The reports are that it was a splendid message and a helpful service.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs is to deliver the baccalaureate sermon at the Louisiana Polytechnic Institute, Ruston, on Sunday, May 24. Bishop Dobbs enters the open door of service and is making his ministry count in a large way within his episcopal district.

Rev. R. S. Saucier, pastor, Brooklyn, Miss., continues in high favor with his people. He has been promoting the Kingdom Extension and is now concluding his plans for a revival in each of his churches. We thank him for six cash subscriptions to the Advocate.

Miss Rosa Lee Moore, a member of the Acona charge, North Mississippi, is doing some splendid work for the Advocate. She writes that the work is moving on fine and that the outlook for a great year is promising. We thank her for her interest in the paper.

Rev. A. T. Clanton, pastor, Ruleville, Miss., reigns in a goodly field and is leading his people in the closer fellowship with the great Head of the Church. We thank Brother Clanton for his interest in the Advocate and trust that success will come to all his labors.

Rev. C. E. McLean, pastor of Keener Memorial, Baton Rouge, La., assisted Rev. D. W. Poole in a pre-Easter revival at McDonoghville last week. We enjoyed a visit from Brothar McLean last week and were delighted to hear of the progress of the work at Keener Memorial.

Rev. C. H. Gunn installed the officers of the Epworth League at Van Cleave on Sunday evening, March 22. The League celebrated anniversary day with appropriate exercises. Brother Gunn is having unusal success in the work with the young people on his charge.

Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Rutledge, Seventh Avenue, Meridian, Miss., are making progress in their work in that important field. They are always mindful of every interest committed to their care and have not overlooked the Advocate. We thank them for subscriptions recently sent in.

The city of New Orleans has become noted as a medical center. Tulane has long held an enviable reputation and now Louisiana State University is to erect an eight-story medical building which will be one of the most modern medical and surgical educational plants in America.

Mr. R. B. Whitehurst, treasurer, Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., has our thanks for a list of sixteen subscriptions. Brother Whitehurst is a capable and faithful worker in his church and we thank him and his pastor, Dr. L. L. Cowen, for their interest in the Advocate.

Rev. W. M. Wright, a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, has been changed from the U. S. Veterans' Hospital, Outwood, Ky., to the one located at Weaverville, N. C. We are happy to state that his health is improving and thank him for his renewal to the Advocate.

Rev. J. H. Foreman, Pelahatchie, Miss., a superannuate, is enjoying unusually good health this year and is able to respond to calls for evangelistic work. Brother Foreman was a successful evangelistic pastor and will render good services to any church fortunate enough to have him in revivals.

Rev. Geo. H. Thompson, who is in his fourth year at Yazoo City, Miss., has our thanks for eighteen subscriptions. Brother Thompson is a capable and faithful pastor who looks after all the work committed to him, and we doubt not his fourth year will prove to be the best of the quadrennium.

A. S. Ainsworth, a member of Sartinsville church and a faithful steward on the Foxworth, Miss., charge, was stricken with penumonia and lived but a few days. Brother Sid was a good and true man and will be missed in his church and community. He was a brother of Rev. T. M. Ainsworth, pastor at Satartia.

Rev. W. T. Griffin is happy in his work on the Bonhommie, Miss., charge. He writes, "The congregations are fine, and the Sunday school and other departments show enthusiastic interest and are responding to the program of the church." This has been the quality of work that has characterized the ministry of W. T. Griffin.

Mr. J. C. Marler, a consecrated layman on the Harperville and Lena, Miss., charge, has our thanks for ten cash subscriptions, which brings his total to seventeen. What this active layman has done for the maintenance and circulation of his church paper could be done by others, and we trust his example will be an inspiration to others.

Rev. James L. Sells held his own pre-Easter revival services at Port Gibson, Miss., with encouraging success. Brother Sells is a builder of the Kingdom in all of its relations to the life of the community in which he serves. We thank him for his interest in the Advocate and trust that the paper will supplement to some degree his own work.

Judge J. M. Foreman, an attorney of Jackson, Miss., president of the Board of Stewards at Capitol Street, and associate lay leader of the Jackson District, is often called upon for special addresses in various Methodist churches throughout Central Mississippi. On March 29, he addressed a circuit-wide union meeting for the Terry charge at Spring Ridge church.

Bishop Arthur J. Moore is to assist Dr. W. Angie Smith in a revival beginning Sunday, April 12, and continue through April 26. Bishop Moore is a great preacher, leader of the Spiritual Life Movement inaugurated by the last General Conference, and evangelist of experience and power. Many people from the surrounding territory are expected to attend the services.

Rev. W. B. Baker, pastor of Itta Bena, Miss., writes, "All goes well with us in every way. I am having the best congregations I have had at any time during my three years' pastorate here." An evidence of the progress is shown by his sending six subscriptions to the Advocate. We congratulate him upon the growth of his work and appreciate his interest in the paper.

Rev. R. A. Cross, whose graduating thesis was written upon the history of New Orleans' Methodism, was in the city last week co-operating with a local committee of the Ministerial Association in arranging plans for the publication of that valuable thesis in book form. We appreciated a call from Brother Cross, and wish him every success in his work at Marksville, La.

It was the pleasure and privilege of the editor to preach at Carrollton Avenue on Friday evening, Mar. 27, at one of the series of pre-Easter services the pastor, Rev. H. L. Johns, recently conducted in his church. Carrollton Avenue is one of the important centers of Methodism in the city of New Orleans and is destined to render an enlarging service through the years to come.

R. M. Byrd, a city official of Gulfport, Miss., died at his home in that city on March 22. He was a member of the Second Church, which he assisted in building. He is survived by his wife and five children. Funeral services were held at the home by Rev. T. B. Holt, his pastor, who was assisted by Rev. A. M. Broadfoot and Rev. Roy Wolfe. We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

We regret to learn that Rev. A. M. Shaw has been ill, but are pleased to know he is now fully recovered. He is doing the preaching in his church at Vinton, La., in a revival which started at sunrise Easter Sunday morning to continue for two weeks. We pray that gracious results may be had in the church and community. We thank Brother Shaw for subscriptions to the Advocate.

The Commencement Sermon for Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., will be delivered by Bishop John M. Moore on Sunday, May 31. The Literary Address will be delivered by Dr. Samuel T. Senter on the morning of Monday, June 1. Dr. Senter is in his sixth year as pastor of the First Methodist Church, Atlanta, Ga. His daughter, Miss Mary Ruth Senter, is a member of the class of 1930.

Rev. B. C. Taylor, who co-operated with Presiding Elder Elmer C. Gunn in working out the plans and programs for the successful group meetings held within the Monroe District in the interest of the benevolences, has our appreciation for subscriptions sent to the Advocate and the plans which he is working for its increased circulation. His work at Mer Rouge, La., is moving forward in every way.

Mrs. J. G. Valentine, Athens, La., in renewing her subscription, wrote: "I have had the Advocate in my home for nearly fifty years and during these trying financial times I shall sacrifice to still keep my church paper, which is very essential for me." This sort of loyalty is one of the encouraging features of the times which we are in. A Christian paper is essential and should be in every Methodist home.

In renewing her subscription, Mrs. H. P. Hurlbert, Donner, La., wrote: "I have read the Advocate all my life and it seems to improve with the passing years. As a former Mississippian and the daughter of a preacher of that Conference, I am especially gratified at your being editor and pray God's rich blessings on your labors." We thank Mrs. Hurlbert and trust that the Advocate will continue to be a blessing.

Rev. and Mrs. N. J. Golding, Holly Springs, Miss., are the proud parents of a fine baby girl whom they have named Pattie Magruder. Brother Golding is having a successful pastorate and the people have shown him and his family many expressions of appreciation. Mrs. Golding is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Sullivan, Millsaps College. We wish Miss Pattie Magruder a long life of happiness and usefulness.

Mrs. Mabelle Martin, superintendent of the Nursery Department at East End, Meridian, Miss., was the recipient of many expressions of appreciation on her last birthday. She is a competent and consecrated worker with the little ones and is accomplishing untold good in that department of Christian activity. She writes, "Don't let any one try to make you believe all the good people have gone on, we still have them amoung us."

Rev. W. W. Nelson, who on account of ill-health was on the retired list for several years, but for the past several months has been pastor at Edwards, Miss., is looking after all the interests of his charge. He writes, "The Lord is blessing us as we start off in the work. We have large crowds and have never been treated kinder than we have by the people of the Edwards charge." We thank Brother Nelson for four cash subscriptions to the Advocate.

Mr. Thad F. Ellzey and Miss Mildred Alford were married at McComb by Rev. J. W. Mayfield, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Mrs. Ellzey is the daughter of Mr. G. H. Alford, prominent in the agricultural work of the South, and Mr. Ellzey is the present sheriff of Pike County and is a member of the Homesville Methodist Church on the Osyka charge. We congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Ellzey and wish for them all happiness and success.

AGAINST OLD AGE

Rev. G. H. Boyles is having a successful year on the Dublin and Mattson charge, North Mississippi Conference. In a letter to the Advocate he writes, "Our people at Dublin are enjoying their new church. The brick building is the realization of a dream of long standing. Our Sunday school and church attendance have increased about 80 per cent. We are making a fair showing in spite of conditions." We appreciate the four subscriptions Brother Boyles sent us.

Rev. H. H. Wallace, in a business letter to the office, wrote concerning his work at Moorhead as follows: "I feel optimistic about the church work here. Our interest and attendance has been good all winter, finances are pretty good, considering conditions. Every consideration has been shown us by our good people, we have not suffered neither do I believe we will." We thank Brother Wallace for six cash subscriptions and wish for him and his people every success.

Dr. L. L. Cowen, pastor of Galloway Memorial, Jackson, Miss., held special Passion week services with the following pastors doing the preaching: Dr. J. N. Faulconer, First Christian; Dr. J. A. Smith, Capitol Street; Dr. Walter B. Capers, St. Andrews Episcopal; Dr. Robert D. Bedinger, Fondren Presbyterian; Dr. Hubert M. King, Calvary Baptist. On Palm Sunday, Dr. Cowen and his people concluded their pre-Easter enlistment period by receiving 83 new members into the church.

Dr. W. W. Holmes, executive secretary of the Board of Christian Education, in commenting on the State-wide Conference held at Alexandria, Tuesday and Wednesday, April 7-8, said, "We were fortunate in securing the personnel for our program. The platform speakers were great. Every phase of our new program received special emphasis." The unification of our work in Christian Education is proving a success and the Alexandria Conference marks a new beginning for Louisiana Methodism.

Rev. R. F. Harrell, Columbia, La., writes: "We are working on the Kingdom Extension program and will conclude our study next Wednesday night and will soon have our apportionment in hand as over half of the amount is already in. Our Sunday school, missionary society, and all the other departments of the church are making good progress. We are having the largest Sunday school and attendance at the preaching services that we have had since coming here." We are not surprised at the success Brother Harrell is having and thank him for six renewals to the Advocate.

Rev. A. J. Martin, Louisiana Conference evangelist, has recently made an evangelistic visit in Terrebonne Parish, and near Dulac, he found one hundred Indian children who had no church privileges and, as he went from house to house holding religious services, large groups of them followed him and eagerly listened to his gospel message. Brother Martin has rented a dance hall at Golden Meadow, a town of 1500 population some ninety miles from New Orleans, and is to hold a revival there during the month of April. This is indeed pioneer work, and we pray that he will have gracious results.

Rev. J. B. King, pastor, Porterville, Miss., and Miss Sarah Elizabeth Loch, Magnolia, Miss., were united in marriage by Rev. Paul D. Hardin at 9 o'clock on the morning of April 2, at Magnolia. Brother King is a successful pastor and Mrs. King has been a faithful member of the church and will find the privileges of service congenial to her disposition and experience. We congratulate Brother and Sister King and wish them every happiness in life. Brother Hardin wrote: "Soon after the ceremony the happy couple took their departure for their parsonage home at Porterville attended by the earnest prayers and hearty congratulations of all our people."

Rev. W. H. Saunders, pastor of the Methodist church at Picayune, Miss., has our thanks for a list of subscribers and check to cover. In his letter to the manager, Brother Saunders says: "On Easter Sunday, we began a twelve days' meeting in which Rev. J. V. Bennett, of Booneville, Miss., is doing the preaching and Bro. O. H. Scott is leading the singing and also conducting the young peoples' services. We are expecting great results from this meeting, and are praying and working to this end. On Easter Sunday evening, I had the pleasure of preaching the annual sermon for the Knights Templar of this city. . . . We had four accessions to our church last Sunday, and our Sunday school is doing better than at any time in the history of the church. Our Epworth League is fast developing, and soon we hope to have one of the best Leagues in the district. . . . The following were recently elected delegates to the District Conference at a church conference recently held: A. L. Jones, Mrs. W. T. Thornhill, P. L. Hill, C. O. Underwood and Mrs. A. L. Jones." We are glad to learn of the fine progress being made at Picayune under the able leadership of this faithful servant, and pray that much good will come as a result of the revival now in progress.

The measure of a man is the size of his soul—not the length of his life, the number of his days, the span between the cradle and the grave. Dates of birth and of burial are soon lost and quickly forgotten. The question is not one of duration but of depth. not how long did he live, but how much.

These are the principles which guide, the convictions which govern, as the writer undertakes to pen some thoughts about his friend. It is not an accurate biography, not a history with cold, bare facts, not a eulogy, however glowing and eloquent that might truthfully be made. The words which follow seek to tell a simple story—that, and nothing more. It has no need of dates. Titles honors, writings, official positions and such like are not listed here. They belong elsewhere, for this is an unstudied story, a love story.

The lines that are being written come from the heart. They breathe the atmosphere of an older day. They go back to the long ago. They cover a decade of happy association as colleagues in the faculty of the University of Mississippi and as next-door neighbors on the old campus, followed by a quarter of a century of separation when he served the Mississippi State College for Women. Through occasional visits and interchange of letters, we kept in close touch during this longer period, and our friendship grew stronger with the passing years.

While the author of numerous excellent essays and able addresses and a gifted writer, according to competent critics, I remember best and value most the messages, always in his own handwriting, which the mails brought me from time to time. Never a joy, never a sorrow, came into my life, but that he penned a word of congratulation or of understanding sympathy. However much a master in the use of choice, chaste, vigorous English, however much at home in the field of the world's classic literature, it was the heart-throb in every sentence that he sent me which causes me today to cherish what he wrote and to keep his letters among my lasting treasures.

While a skilled teacher and a prominent educator with a fine record of worthwhile achievement, I am thinking more of the man than of his accomplishments. His pastor was right when he spoke in emphatic terms of highest praise of his love of beauty, his kindly disposition, his gentleness, his loyalty, his honesty. In the presence of these great qualities, so supreme in the make-up of this man, how that which is merely brilliant dwindles and becomes dwarfed by contrast! How the facts of the biographer and the cold figures of the statistician take a lower place and appear of lesser importance and of comparatively little worth! How the flashy, the artificial, the superficial, lose their appeal and seem to steal away from sight as superior manhood takes possession of our attention and lays claim to our homage and allegiance!

How I wish that I could do justice to the memory of this man of such generous impulses and sympathetic nature! How I covet the power to properly paint his portrait,—not physical features, but the portrait of his soul! The picture of his spirit belongs in an album of the old South. Modern jazz and everything of that sort would be utterly out of place in the company of his soul. Somehow when I think of him, heart-strings begin to vibrate and the very air becomes tremulous as southern melodies seem to sound around me—the war-songs of Dixie, "My Old Kentucky Home," "Way Down on the Swanee River," "Old Black Joe," and the like. At any rate, that's the way I feel about him. Violets and roses and other old-fashioned flowers must have bloomed near his door. And that literature of his mother tongue in which he took most delight was as free from smut as his own language was clear-cut and clean.

It is true that he possessed the tenderness of woman, but that does not mean that he was, in any sense, effeminate. There was nothing weak or unmanly about him. On the contrary, he was a strong and virile man with rugged determination and inflexible integrity of character. While a lover of peace, he could fight when occasion required and stand immovable and uncompromising when principle was at stake. Calm, well-poised, even-tempered, full of faith, he was ever a tower of strength in time of storm. Conciliatory in his methods of adjusting difficulties, yet he would never cringe or stoop to curry favor with any man or set of men.

At the sacred center of his soul was his Lord. That profoundly influenced all his life, that accounted for his lovable disposition, that shaped his being, that made him a manly man, that crowned him at last when his soul went peacefully home. We who were privileged to know him do not wonder that his favorite hymn was "Rock of Ages." It was fitting that it should be sung while they buried his body, and he listened in the land of endless day.

IDA LEE HIGGINBOTHAM FELPS quietly slipped away from this life at 11:10, Tuesday morning, March 3, 1931. She was at her home in Ogden Park, Baton Rouge, La., when the final summons came. She had been in failing health for the past three years, but her condition recently became serious, enduring with patience the pains and joyously looking for the time when her soul would return into the other world; to be with Him who gave it. She was born January 16, 1872, at Gilead, La., where she lived all her life until moving to Baton Rouge about nine years ago. In early life she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Gilead Church, where her grandfather, Johnie Higginbotham, was founder and her father, David Pipes Higginbotham, followed in his father's footsteps and was always a devout Christian, maintaining a firm belief in his Saviour until the last. She loved her church, her pastor, and her Lord. She was faithful even until death. Until the last she enjoyed reading the New Orleans Christian Advocate. On November 12, 1893, she was united in holy wedlock to Felix R. Felps. To that union were born six children. Surviving her are her husband, five children, son-in-law, four grandchildren and many relatives. She lived a godly life. May her descendants follow in her path and this be our motto. "Thy life was goodness, mercy, truth and love."

FELIX R. FELPS AND CHILDREN.

PAPER ADOPTED BY METHODIST MINISTERS' ASSOCIATION, MERIDIAN, MISS.

Dear Brethren: We believe that the Methodist ministry should be one of the closest and most sacred of brotherhoods. We believe that it should be true and that in a very real sense is true, that when one member of this brotherhood suffers that all the members suffer with him. We believe that the spirit of brotherly sympathy should be cultivated and the habit of expressing our interest and sympathy one for another in times of special sorrow or stress more generally practiced. We desire, therefore, to express in this simple, formal way our deep sympathy for our beloved brother, Rev. T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder of our district, in the great sorrow that has come to him in the death of his sister, Mrs. J. W. HINSON.

We rejoice with him in the fact of her godly life and character and sorrow with him in her going from us. We pray the blessings of our Heavenly Father upon Brother O'Neil and all the family in this time of bereavement.

Sincerely,

H. J. MOORE.

ZONE MEETING

On March 10 the first meeting of Zone 4 of the Seashore District was held in Picayune, Miss., with representatives from Columbia, Carriere, Lumberton, Picayune, and Poplarville present. Mrs. G. H. Robertson of Lumberton, zone leader, presided. Rev. W. H. Saunders of Picayune led the devotional.

The subject for study was "Stewardship," and some very impressive and helpful papers were read. Mrs. M. L. McCormick of Lumberton gave "Stewardship of Time," and Mrs. C. McDonald of Picayune read "Stewardship of Money." Mrs. Marvin Brown and Mrs. W. T. Huff favored the group with a vocal duet. Mrs. C. C. Clark, assistant district secretary, explained about "Pledges" and reminded us of the Annual Missionary Conference Early in April. Rev. W. W. Moore of Carriere gave a few well chosen words of advice and Mrs. Moore gave a report of conditions in their work. Rev. Moore opened the discussion about the Deaconesses' Home, and where it will be located. Mrs. Jones, of Picayune, invited all to be the guests of the Picayune society for lunch, after which Rev. Moore dismissed the morning session with prayer.

After a delightful lunch served in the Y. M. C. A. dining hall, the afternoon session was opened by singing "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord." Rev. J. E. Williams of Poplarville led in prayer. Mrs. C. C. Clark of Bay St. Louis gave a splendid paper on "Stewardship of Self." Mrs. Owens of Columbia gave several piano selections. Rev. M. L. McCormick of Lumberton made a very interesting talk on "Stewardship."

The next meeting will be held in Lumberton during the next quarter. After singing "Jesus Calls Us," Rev. C. C. Clark dismissed the meeting with prayer.

DODDSVILLE ZONE MEETING

Zone No. 3 of the Greenwood district convened in the Methodist church in Doddsville on February 24, at 10 a. m., with Mrs. J. H. Holloman, our district secretary, in the chair. After opening song, "More Love O Christ to Thee," Rev. J. T. Lewis of Drew conducted the morning devotional, using passages from the second chapter of Ephesians and making inspirational and interesting comments on same.

The forty delegates present on this occasion represented four societies, Blaine, Doddsville, Ruleville and Drew. All these gave interesting and noteworthy reports on work being done, showing that each society was eager and striving to acquire the standard of excellence and certificates on work in Mission and Bible study.

This program, being an officers' training course, Mrs. Holloman in her own efficient manner stressed the importance of each officer in the various societies to know and do her full duty in that place which she represented. Many of those talks were round-table discussions which better informed the officers as to the duties expected of them. Mrs. Holloman then outlined fully the plans and ideals of our Missionary Society for 1931.

Mrs. E. L. Coleman of Doddsville was unanimously elected as zone president for 1931, to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. J. E. Coleman, who resigned, and, by invitation, Blaine was chosen as place for the next meeting.

The consecration service conducted by Mrs. E. C. Stancill was a fitting closing for a delightful and profitable Missionary Day. After sentence prayers, Mrs. Stancill brought a helpful and inspirational message on a fully surrendered life.

This being an all-day program, the local society served a delightful two-course lunch at the noon hour.

MRS. S. P. STRICKLAND,
Secretary.

REPORT OF WORK DONE AT HOUMA, LA., BY MISS LILLIE HENDRICKS

My appointment to the MacDonell French Mission School was received while I was at Scarritt, on furlough. I had been six years at Brevard Institute, North Carolina, and, though the change was not a surprise, a feeling of deep disappointment came over me at the realization of severing relations with the work and the folk I had learned to love so well. Though a longing to return to Brevard remained, I was soon looking forward eagerly to starting in the new work.

September 1 found me comfortably settled in my new home with a willing heart but a woeful la k of understanding of this great work, so different from any I had experienced before. It is impossible for one to realize from hearsay, or reading, just how great this French work is. It is necessary to be in it and to share the responsibilities awhile, before the extent and depth of it can be grasped, and the limitless possibilities.

The school and Wesley House form the center of the work, and a great, densely populated, rural field stretches out in every direction. The Wesley House, in addition to being a center for social service work, is also the home center for the school and the dormitory home of the older girls. I have charge of this building and thus have the opportunity for intimate contacts with all the students during their social hour, and also with their parents and others who visit the school.

Regular classroom work occupies my morning hours, from 7:30 (chapel hour) till noon. In the afternoons, during the industrial period, I have a sewing class, a line of work I had never expected to do, but one that I enjoy greatly. Leading chapel services in turn, teaching in the Sunday school and working in the Epworth League and Woman's Missionary Society in the local church give opportunities for wirder contacts of distinctly religious work.

Whenever the opportunity comes I go with Miss Hooper to the various rural districts and have taken a keen interest in studying that department of the work. Of course, there are rest periods and days off, though the above doesn't sound like it.

I have been here only a few months but have seen and learned a great deal about the needs of this territory and the influence of the work already done, and I know that the utmost bounds are far beyond my present vision. A visit to the home of one of our pupils on Christmas day put me in touch with children of four different homes, not one of which had been visited by old Santa, but the children were cheerful, thankful for health and food, and greatly pleased with the little gifts we took them.

Another experience which was a revelation to me was a trip to the Gulf down Bayou Grand Caillou on an oyster lugger. Trapping season was at its height and the shrimping season was just beginning and it was intensely interesting to see the activities of both these great industries. We passed hundreds of huts occupied by the trappers and their families, and a great many houseboats. Conditions in most cases bespoke of extreme poverty and other needs, though some of the trappers and their families are above the average. The shrimp drying "platforms" were even more interesting. These are far down towards the Gulf and are really villages built out over the water. All the houses in a shrimping village are connected one with another and with the receiving and drying platform by a wide wooden "street" which begins on the waterfront and runs down the center of the village. About thirty families live in a village. The men bring their wives and children and leave them in these little homes built high above the water while they go back and forth to the Gulf in the shrimp boats for the "catch." Wherever we stopped along this route there were people who knew Miss Hooper and we received a cordial welcome, always. The possibilities for Christian work among these people are wonderful, but no church is yet attempting anything. Some day our own Church will realize the need and the opportunity and provide a boat and especially trained workers for these far-flung and untouched villages and trapping camps.

Though the French work is still in its elementary stage and there are some handicaps, it is really a great privilege to have a share in work of such possibilities and I can say with the Psalmist, "The lines are fallen to me in pleasant places, yea, I have a goodly heritage."

LILLIE HENDRICKS.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

The Standard Training School at Jackson was about fifty less than last year. There was a spirit of earnestness and faithfulness that was greatly appreciated by the faculty. Plans were made for the continuation of the work and the officers and committees were raised for another year. Ten schools were engaged in this effort and the leaders in these schools were present and participated. One feature of the school was an open forum meeting, which was a happy occasion and added much to the enjoyment of the school.

The Vicksburg Standard Training School closed March 27. Fifty-two credits were issued, which is more than any other session of the Vicksburg school. Rev. W. H. Giles of Tallulah, La., and fourteen others of his workers came and took credit. We appreciated this co-operation on the part of these fine folks. Four churches in all participated in this effort. This was a most happy occasion. The spirit of the school was wonderful. The worship services were very impressive. We rejoice at the progress of Vicksburg Methodism. It is fitting in passing to say that Crawford Street had more credits than the usual school issued all told.

We wish to call attention to Epworth League Anniversary Day. It is hoped that every church in the Conference will observe this day. It would be appreciated if a collection was taken and sent in. Greater than the collection is this program to impress upon the entire church the young people's work. Those churches that have used the program report an increased interest in the young people and their work. To me it seems a wonderful opportunity to render service where it is greatly needed.

Sunday School Day has been observed in one church. If you have not secured your programs take steps now to do so. Every Sunday school superintendent has been sent a sample copy and it is hoped that this would call for an order. If you misplaced your copy or did not get it and desire another, please let me know and we will be glad to furnish you one.

Thedford's BLACK-DRAUGHT for Constipation. Indigestion. Biliousness

Your Board is in great need at this time and observance of Sunday School Day with a generous offering will mean much to the work.

Mr. O. C. Hull is hard at work. He has been making surveys and teaching Cokesbury schools and holding institutes. He has had the sad experience of losing his grandchild. Pray for him that his courage holds and that his faith grows bright.

Miss Alford has a full program. She is planning a series of meetings with Miss Mary Skinner, the superintendent of the children's division of the general board. If you are in reach of one of these meetings it will repay you to attend. Miss Alford has rendered a most valuable service in teaching. These classes will mean much to the future of the church.

Pray for the work and the workers.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The Nursery Department of the East End Methodist church, of which Mrs. C. M. Martin is superintendent, was asked to contribute $40 as its share in the note that was recently due on the new church building.

In her task of raising its share, Mrs. Martin had the co-operation of teachers, mothers, babies and friends of the department, and when the money was counted at a recent meeting, the babies gave as their share $87.30, "all of which was secured through faith," says Mrs. Martin.

A friend of Mrs. Martin, from Pittsburg, Pa., sent a wire and it contained a check for $20 to be applied to the baby division.

When the Sunday school assembled and reports of the various departments were asked for, Mantha Rose Caraway, two-year-old daughter of Rev. and Mrs. P. M. Caraway, and Master Milton Lawrence, four-year-old, proudly walked down the aisle with Mrs. Martin, each one carrying a purse held high on rods, these purses being the first and second ones ever owned by the superintendent of the babies. In one was the $20 sent from Pennsylvania and the remainder of the money was in the other. Mrs. Martin takes this method of expressing her thanks to every one who assisted in making the large contribution possible.

BOOK REVIEW

A book coming from the Cokesbury Press which deserves special notice is the text for the Cokesbury course on pupil study entitled, "Our Pupils and How They Learn," written by Miss Frances McLester. Miss McLester has been with the department of training of the Church for a number of years and her book shows that she is very close to the problems that the church school teacher must face. "Our Pupils and How They Learn" gives an account of the meetings of the teachers in Bethel Church to discus the problems they are meeting as they teach their pupils from Sunday to Sunday. The conversation that runs throughout the entire book makes it most readable and the subjects discussed are vital to every conscienscious teacher. While no one book can be recommended as a panacea for all the needs of teachers in dealing with their pupils, Miss McLester's book will go far in helping the thoughtful teacher to understand the needs of the pupil, why he behaves as he does, and the best ways of helping him to grow in the Christian way of living. It should also be of help to parents in understanding their children. This book can be secured from Lamar & Whitmore and is reasonably priced at 75 cents.

A book that will be read with interest by every teacher of beginner children is the little book called "Betty Ann, Beginner," by Frances Dunlap. In this book Betty Ann, a beginner child, tells the story of her two years in the beginner department. During the first year almost everything went wrong in the department. Betty Ann wonders why God doesn't clean His house up like her mother does. She says this regarding her offering: "'Fore I started to Sunday school I told Daddy to give me some pennies to pay Miss Ethel. He said the pennies were for God. I asked him where God was and he said in Heaven. I asked him where Heaven was. But Daddy said it was time for me to go to Sunday school, so he didn't tell me then. I wonder how God gets those pennies 'way from Miss Ethel. I guess I'll ask Daddy. He knows everything." The second year of her Sunday school career, however, there is a new superintendent in the beginner department and Betty Ann likes it very much. Through her experiences during this year her attitude towards God, other people and the church is changed. While some methods used in this second year are not used by the best beginner teachers the majority of ideas that the reader will get will be good. It is on the whole a thought-provoking book to the teacher and most revealing of the beginner child's nature and needs. The price of the book is $1, and it may be secured from Lamar & Whitmore.

The school closed out at Columbus with a fine spirit, all saying that it was the best ever held there. Thirty-nine were enrolled, and thirty-eight credits were issued with a possibility of the other credit being received from the office.

The writer is conducting a standard class at Coffeeville this week. We are studying the Bible course, "The Teachings of Jesus," and there has been fine interest in the class.

It was our pleasure last Sunday to preach the commencement sermon for the Taylor high school. We were among old friends, for this was the first charge that we served as a boy preacher on trial.

North Carrollton church was the first to send in a Sunday School Day offering. Mr. W. T. Sanders is the superintendent. We are expecting many others to follow soon.

We are mailing to every pastor envelopes with which he may take the offering for Sunday School Day. He may give them to the superintendents or some one else who is interested, and have them present this cause to the different classes, departments or schools. Programs for the day have been sent out. Put on the program, take the offering, placing it in the envelope, "How Big Is Your Heart," write the name of the school, class or department and mail it at once in the addressed envelope furnished you. If you feel that you cannot put on the program will you not present these envelopes in all your schools and take the offering for this cause? The future of our work depends upon the success of the observance of this day. If every school will do something the total will be gratifying and our work will not suffer.

April 19 to 21 Miss Mary Skinner, director of the Children's division of the church, will be with us for several conferences. Look out next week for the programs of these conferences.

If you desire help in organizing and getting the Local Church Board of Christian Education to functioning, write to us and we will be glad to give all the assistance that we can. The use of this board offers the pastor a very fine opportunity to thoroughly organize and definitely direct the educational agencies of his church. We should be constantly studying the functions of the board and begin to use it. We will learn how to use it by trying.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

A very pleasant visit it was that we had with the young people of Durant last Sunday evening. They were having their anniversary program. The young people exercised great care in planning this program and in putting it on. THEY DID NOT READ THEIR PARTS. That one fact always adds a lot to the program. More than five dollars was received in the Anniversary Day offering at Durant last Sunday evening. If all the Leagues of our Conference do this well, Brother Ashmore will need an assistant in counting the money.

Rev. S. A. Brown is pastor at Durant. He has only been there since the meeting of our last Annual Conference, but he has already gained the confidence of his young peopl and the old people, too, for that matter. Brother Brown is in high favor with his people and they are responding to his leadership. It was our pleasure to spend the night in the hospitable home of Brother Brown.

Miss Vera Herbert is counsellor for the young people at Durant. She is giving to them intelligent and consecrated leadership. The young people seem to appreciate her services very much. She is planning to send a number of her young people to our assembly this summer. You remember, of course, that the time for this assembly is June 15-19.

While we were in Durant we had the pleasure of visiting the high school. This was a most pleasant visit, even though we did talk so long that we missed our train. But Brother Brown was so anxious to get rid of us that he rushed us on up to Winona before the train got there. Don't ask him how fast he drove. Mr. G. R. Bennett, a good Methodist brother, is superintendent of the school at Durant. The wife of one of our young pastors, Mrs. E. B. Ellington, is teaching in the school there. It is a funny thing how some of our preachers win the affection of real, intelligent women. It just goes to prove that we are fearfully and wonderfully made.

Brother W. O. Hunt of South Side church at Corinth writes us that he has a new League at his church and that they are growing in interest and attendance. These people have been seriously crippled by the financial depression, but the pastor and people seem to have the courage to carry on in spite of their depression. They must have caught some of the enthusiasm of their presiding elder.

We also received some good news from Mrs. S. L. Pope at Aberdeen concerning the League work there. Mrs Pope is the wife of our pastor at Aberdeen. The young people there observed Anniversary Day last Sunday evening. Mrs. Pope says that these young people are manifesting quite a bit of interest in the League work They are studying the Bible systematically and daily. This is certainly good news. Our young people need to become familiar with the great teachings of the Bible.

FROM MERIDIAN DISTRICT

Dear Brother Decell: The Southern Group meeting of the Meridian District met in Shubuta, Thursday, February 19, and we had a splendid program. Brother M. R. Jones gave us a very inspirational interpretation of Jesus' prayer in Gethsemane.

Matters of organization were attended to and Bro. C. M. Crossley is, for the second year, our chairman. Bro. H. Millard was elected vice-chairman, and H. W. F. Vaughan, secretary.

Brother Millard, in his characteristically thorough way, proved to all of us from Scripture that "The Every Member Canvass is God's Plan." He said also that a necessary thing is that the minister have the right spirit.

Brother C. W. Wesley discussed the minister—the kind of person he ought to be. He said that a minister should be physically fit, intellectually strong, and morally fearless. We cannot preach merely a "comforting gospel" and preach the gospel of Christ. A preacher must be a fearless man.

Brother T. C. Cooper brought us a stirring message at the 11 o'clock hour. His sermon centered around the theme, "Faith and Works," with the major emphasis on bearing fruit.

At noon we were served a splendid luncheon by the ladies of the Shubuta church. Everyone present appreciated their kindness very much.

The afternoon session was opened with a devotional by Brother Leroy Matheny. He showed how important it is for us to meet the expectations of "the great cloud of witnesses," (Hebrews 12:1-2).

Judge Heidleburg spoke on the attitude of the people to the preacher. He compared the attitude of the colored people to their preacher and the attitude of the white people to their preacher. He said that every preacher should be given the same honor that the colored people accord their preacher.

Our presiding elder, Bro. T. J. O'Neil, gave us a few more suggestions about the local boards of Christian Education. He announced a meeting at McGowan's Chapel on the fifth Sunday in March and it was decided that this was to be a joint meeting of the Northern and Southern Groups and the second meeting of our group. It is to be an old-fashioned "all-day" meeting with dinner somewhere around ——.

GREENWOOD DISTRICT MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

The Greenwood District Ministerial Association met in the Methodist church at Ruleville, Tuesday, March 10, with a fine attendance. Twenty-two pastors and several of their wives being present. Dr. McIlwain spoke on the subject of "The Best Books I Have Read." Other pastors mentioned books that appealed to them.

Rev. D. R. McDougal preached a very fine sermon at the 11 o'clock hour. An excellent lunch was served at the Community house for us and the Baptist brethren, who met in Ruleville the same day. The following subjects were discussed in the afternoon: "The Nashville and New Orleans Christian Advocates," "The Orphanage," "Group Insurance," and short reports from the pastors on the result of the Kingdom Extension.

The next meeting will be at Inverness on June 2.

A resolution of thanks for the excellent dinner, generous entertainment and kind hospitality was adopted.

FROM A VALIANT SOLDIER

Mr. Editor: I read your account of a trip to North Louisiana, and it recalled a letter written in November 1856, by Bishop George F. Pierce, from Galveston, Texas, in a book called "Incidents of Western Travel." I quote from Letter XIII: "As I wish to do good in these letters, I will pause in my story to drop a hint to the editorial fraternity of the Advocate family. Brother Gillespie on going from Galveston to Marshall had a series of appointments, when he preached and presented the claims of the Texas Advocate. On his return with me, he concluded every service with a brief speech, and opened his book for patronage. . . . This a wise plan. . . . I recommend it to all the brethren. . . . Show yourselves brethren. Let Mac of Nashville, with his beaming face, and strong social impulses; Mac of New Orleans, with his pithy sayings and steady fervor of spirit; Mac of St. Louis, with his deep, earnest, bustling energy; Gillespie, with his calm, condensed, inexhaustible enthusiasm; Lee of Richmond, with his quiet, courtly, reverential manner; Myers of Charleston, with his indomitable will and ready plans; one and all now and then leave the city dust for the country air; see the people, talk with them, pray in their families, preach at their meeting houses, and subscribers will multiply by the thousand. The labors of these brethren, scattered over the land, would tell upon every interest of our Zion."

Now, Doctor, I have given you the Bishop's idea. You can use this as you wish. I will soon be 91 years old. Have been a Methodist since the summer of 1856, and have read your paper since boyhood. It comes now to my daughter, Mrs. B. W. Moore, with whom I live. I was a lay delegate to this Conference when it was organized in 1870.

FROM NETTLETON, MISS.

Dear Advocate: We are handing you the following message:

Song No. 33. New Cokesbury Hymnal.

Scripture Numbers 13:17-27—J. A. Price.

Prayer—W. R. Trapp.

The Most Important Items in the General Rules—I. E. Roberts.

"The Meaning of the Lord's Supper"—S. J. McDuffey.

"The Duties of a Pastor"—F. R. Green.

Song No. 74.

"Articles of Faith"—Miss Lilleen Wiygul.

Song No. 172.

"What Can I Do for My Church"—N. Sumner.

"The Duties of a Steward"—W. L. Trapp.

Prayer—W. C. Johnson.

Benediction—W. H. Sumner.

Each speaker presented the subject which had been assigned so willingly and so enthusiastically that the pastor felt condemned for not having asked them to do such work sooner, and more of it. I suspect more of us who are pastors need to know the art of asking our laymen to do things. Our church lay leader came to my study last night and asked me to give him a book on "The Duties of a Layman," saying that he wanted to know more about his duties to his church. If any gentle reader knows of a real good book that would satisfy this need, I would thank you to tell me about it. Of course, we all know there are books and books on this subject, but what I want is a real good one.

We are enjoying your good paper Mr. Editor, and although we have not done much in securing subscriptions we have not given up.

We feel like the work on the Nettleton charge is going good. This is true in a great measure because of the good men who have preceded us on this work. Up to date the people have not learned enough about our shortcomings to prevent them from giving us their enthusiastic and loyal support. We appreciate these people and we love them and expect to do our best.

We are now signing off in good spirits. Thank you.

CORINTH DISTRICT MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

My Dear Brother Decell: Please announce that the Corinth District Ministerial Association will meet in Ecru church, on the New Albany Circuit, with Rev. K. S. L. Cook, pastor-host, on Tuesday, April 7, at 10 a. m.

Pastors are to report on progress made in Kingdom Extension Work. An offering for district parsonage is to be taken in this month.

The March meeting was informed of the action of the committee in regards to our own church paper, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and our presiding elder, Rev. J. H. Felts, urged all the pastors to enlist new subscribers during the month of March and report results at the April meeting. The quota for the district was only 100, but pastors are urged to go over the top.

Program committee, Rev. C. A. Northington, Ripley; Rev. E. M. Shaw of Iuka and Rev. K. S. L. Cook of New Albany.

Sincerely

W. T. PHILLIPS, Sec.

MINISTERS' MEETING AT HOUSTON, MISS.

The April meeting of the Aberdeen Methodist Ministers' Association will be at Houston on the 16th. That being near the center of the district, we are expecting a large attendance.

The committee urges that all members be prepared to enter into the round-table discussion.

Many compliments have been heard on the program that was presented at Houlka. One man said that it was the best meeting that we have ever had. There was move and vim and earnestness from beginning to end; and that dinner—eh!—heap much of it, well cooked and the air was redolent with welcome. It looked as if W. N. Dodds never would quit eating. But he preached hard to pay for it, as did all the rest work who had a part on the program. They studied their lesson and, therefore, had something to tell us.

If baby has COLIC

A CRY in the night. Colic! No cause for alarm if Castoria is handy. This pure vegetable preparation brings quick comfort, and can never harm. It is the sensible thing when children are ailing. Whether it's the stomach, or the little bowels; colic or constipation; or diarrhea. When tiny tongues are coated, or the breath is bad. Whenever there's need of gentle regulation. Children love the taste of Castoria, and its mildness makes it safe for frequent use.

And a more liberal dose of Castoria is always better for growing children than strong medicine meant only for adult use.

CORINTH DISTRICT PASTORS' ASSOCIATION

The Corinth District Pastors' Association met in First Church, Corinth, March 3, Rev. E. S. Lewis, pastor-host, with a good attendance.

Rev. J. H. Felts, presiding elder, emphasized the Kingdom Extension Work, and represented the New Orleans Christian Advocate to the meeting, asking that the pastors secure at least 100 new subscriptions to the paper.

A few items of business were attended to, after which a most excellent sermon was preached by our president, Rev. J. H. Holder of New Albany.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, assisted by Revs. J. H. Holder, and J. V. Bennett, administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

After the adjournment, we were invited into the dining-room of the church and a lovely luncheon was served by the ladies of the church.

After the meeting was called together by Rev. Mr. Holder for the afternoon session, the program committee presented the following paper, which was adopted.

"It is the sense of your program committee that the best possible thing we can do, as pastors, is to give our people an honest chance to express their own interest in the special needs of our church by such donations as they may make after giving to them the facts.

"We recommend that offerings be taken for the District Parsonage in every church and that the same be forwarded to the presiding elder not later than March 30.

"We also recommend that this body accept the 100 minimum subscriptions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate as a duty and privilege. Further, we pledge ourselves to make personal effort to this end, and report the result at the next monthly meeting.

We also accept as a vital part of our task the presentation of the Kingdom Extension program honestly and faithfully. All money collected to be sent in as soon as collected."

The Association voted to pay the insurance dues of Rev. J, G. Johnson, a collection being taken and money turned over to Rev. W. T. Phillips, who is to keep dues paid.

Revs. J. V. Bennett, C. A. Northington and W. C. McCay made impressive talks on some of the Doctrines of the Church, after which many of the brethren spoke briefly on the subject.

It was voted to accept the invitation of Rev. K. S. L. Cooke for the April meeting at Ecru church, New Albany circuit.

Rev. E. S. Lewis dismissed this most profitable and interesting meeting with prayer.

HARMON CHURCH COMPLETES MISSION SPECIAL

Rev. L. W. Smart, pastor of Harmon Church, Pelican charge, Shreveport District of the Louisiana Conference, held a week's Mission Study Class recently, during which time the book, "Methodism and Kingdom Extension," was read by the members and large crowds attended the series of lectures, as follows:

1. "Methodism and the Kingdom."
2. "Methodism in the History of America."
3. "Methodism Extending Her Borders."
4. "Methodism's Foundations."
5. "Methodism's Program."

Rev. Mr. Smart delivered these five lectures in his own forceful, masterful way.

This proved to be an evangelistic study as well as missionary, the way being paved for the coming revival in June.

The quota was subscribed without any hesitation.

Rev. Mr. Smart leads his people to see the great need of the Church's great program.

SOUTHERN GROUP MEETING OF NEWTON DISTRICT

It met at Louin, March 12, with the following preachers present: H. A. Gatlin, H. A. Wood, C. Y. Higginbotham, B. W. Ware, J. W. Thompson, W. L. Blackwell, and J. A. Wells.

H. E. Sellers, from Kingston Laurel, and E. E. Deen, associate district lay leader, conducted the morning devotionals. George Jones spoke to the group on the Board of Christian Education in the local church. He had his black board and gave us all information and help. We will gradually correlate all our forces under this Board and move on.

B. W. Ware preached a good sermon just before noon, using as a text James 4:8. He spoke plainly and calmly and positively. We clearly saw how a sinner could get to God for pardon and how a Christian could get to God for purity. More of this plain and pointed preaching will aid materially in clearing the track ahead.

The ladies of Louin, as is their custom, spread before us one more appetizing, hunger-satisfying dinner. It was a fine social hour as well as the feeding of the physical man.

Our District lay leader, P. L. Blackwell, conducted the afternoon devotional meeting. And then we heard sizzling, informing, fact-producing, and clear discussion on "The Stand the Church Should Take on the Temperance Question" by a layman on the Montrose charge, Prof. H. B. McCluer. He sure sounded a certain note on one of the outstanding issues of the day, the prohibition question, in connection with the Eighteenth Amendment. He was asked by the group to let his address be published in the press—secular and religious.

D. T. Burnett, of Bay Springs, spoke next on "The Relationship of the Sunday School to the Church." Dewitt is one of our consecrated and conscientious laymen, who will soon take his place among our most useful Conference laymen.

H. A. Wood next gave us one of his enthusiastic talks on "The Work of The Golden Cross." Let's take his advice during the month of May.

Our presiding elder, H. A. Gatlin, closed the meeting with announcements and urged us to do our best for the Kingdom Extension. May we do it! On with the revival!

"BEST MEDICINE I HAVE EVER USED"

Only Remedy To Ever Have Done Me Any Lasting Good

Mrs. Lula Patterson

"I am glad to make this statemet in behalf of Miller's Herb Extract, formerly called 'Herb Juice'," says Mrs. Patterson, Birmingham, Ala. "This medicine has done me more good than anything I have ever used, and I have tried everything that promised relief with no results to speak of. When I began using Herb Extract I was underweight, and lost considerably in weight and strength, felt weak, nervous and badly rundown all the time. Each day I was in misery. I carried on with my work as best I could, just didn't want to give up, but it was agonies for me while I endured it. Friends knowing of my poor state of health, advised me to try a bottle or two of Herb medicine. They told me of numerous cases where it has actually brought health and strength to people when everything else had utterly failed to do any good. I started on the Herb medicine immediately. And to my surprise, I begun to improve rapidly and my continued use of this remarkable remedy has restored my health. I am free from constipation, bowels are regular, stomach is in fine condition. I sleep fine and eat hearty three times a day, have lots of energy; this means so much to me. I am actually gratified, beyond words to express, over my improved condition of health."

You don't need any pills with this medicine. It's a real medicine within itself, and guaranteed to give results.

A medicine you can take three or four bottles of without seeing any results is not much medicine. Miller's Herb Extract (known as Herb Juice) gives overnight results. Get it at your druggist.

MENCKEN AND MISSISSIPPI

A few weeks ago the Baltimore Evening Sun carried an article from Mercury Mencken, in which he mauled the "Bible Belt" States. In speaking of Mississippi he is reported as writing, "How could a really first-rate medical man exist in a State which hasn't a single first-rate hospital? How could a musician get along without a concert hall, an orchestra, or an audience? How could a journalist of any dignity make a living without a decent newspaper?... Plenty of efforts have been made in Mississippi to set up adequate schools, but the people are too stupid to see the need of change and too poor to pay for it. Thus they seem doomed to remain in the clutches of their politicians and theologians to the end of the chapter. Swindlers innumerable devour what little they have; they are converted anew at every revival and succumb to every successive wave of Klu-Kluxry. One year they beg pitifully for bread and the next year they propose to harrass and bedevil those who give it to them."

Mississippi has been an honored member of the sisterhood of states that constitute the republic for more than a hundred years and her escutcheon is so high that the poisoned darts of Mercurial Mencken cannot reach the basement floor of her Temple of Honor. The State, in which Methodism opened the first college for women in the world—Elizabeth Female Academy—and that built the first tax-supported institution for women in America—the Industrial Institute and College—and was the first to ratify the Eighteenth Amendment, need make no apology to the would-be intelligentsia of the baser sort. Mississippi's history is replete with deeds of daring and evidences of true progress. She has been a way-shower on the high levels of life that Mencken seems unable to understand and incapable of reaching.

Medical men in Mississippi, as a rule, are graduates of the best universities in the republic and minister in hospitals adequate to house and offer healing to her sick. She has the largest consolidated school in the world and has won national recognition in school consolidation. Her teachers are not jesters with question marks, but leaders in imparting knowledge of the arts and sciences and builders of manhood and womanhood. Her halls are not crowded by jazz-mad audiences, but artists of character and ability are patronized with pleasure. Her poverty is with honor and man is worth more than money in Mississippi. Revivals have lighted the fires of hope to the wayward and distressed throughout the commonwealth, and the Bible is an open book from which her citizens receive principles of public and private morality.

BISHOP FISHER'S RETURNING TO THE PASTORATE

In announcing Dr. F. B. Fisher's appearance upon various programs some give emphasis to the fact that he was a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church in India and resigned to take a pastorate in Michigan. The emphasis is given in a manner as to suggest that he who quits the office of a bishop does a good thing. Dr. Fisher's motives should not be questioned and his statement that he felt that he could do more good in the pastorate is sufficient evidence of his sincerity. If he wished to count his ordination to have been such that he could relieve himself of its obligations and enter another field that was his right.

Some men leave the bishopric, others refuse to enter, and at once it sets them apart. Some interpret such to mean that the episcopal office is waning in usefulness. It cannot be questioned that God directs the individual's conscience, but does He not yet speak through His Church? If one may return from an episcopal field with honor, or one refuse to enter it with credit, should not one who leaves a comfortable home and salary and answers the call to arduous toil and travel be counted, at least, as heroic?

The writer was in Bishop Lambuth's home at Oakdale, California, just before he left on that last long journey that carried him on the other side of the world and ended up in the "Heavenly City." He was asked why, under the circumstances, he was not left at home and with a far look and a firm voice, he said, "I take it to be the will of God that I return to the Orient." Walter Russell Lambuth went and never returned.

Mississippi's representatives at Washington have not been smeared with oils from a Tea Pot Dome, nor have they gambled away the nation's resources. Whenever her sons or daughters, at home or abroad, have been unworthy it was because they renounced the high principles which dominate her civic life. "To no purpose is the nation great if men are small." Mississippi has had her Holmes, Davis, Lamar, Sharkey, Walthall, Barksdale, Stone, and Galloway, Grafton, Lowry, Green and "others of whom the world was not worthy," but never to this day has she produced a Mencken. May the day never come when men who prefer to die as the beast of the field, whose ideals are iron, and whose publications are sewers to draw off the filth of evil communications, will be produced in Mississippi, where the magnolia blossom lends its fragrance, the mocking bird awakens with his song, and Christ is looked upon as Lord of the social order as well as the life of the soul.

AN AFTER EASTER AMBITION

Water that lies still in a tideless lake does not generate power to illuminate the night. Turbines are turned where the crystal stream thunders through frowning chasm. Through death and the tomb resurrection glory burst upon the world. After that first Easter, Paul recorded a mighty ambition. It was "That I may know Him and the power of his resurrection and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable to his death."

To know Christ "in the power of his resurrection" is to triumph over the worst that sin can do. Those who have been ambitious to get gain and win laurels have allowed the earthly to rob them of the excellencies and make them seek tinsel more than truth. Triumph over sin is a victory to be won by counting all mere things as refuse and knowing Him who was "declared to be the son of God with power according to the spirit of holiness by the resurrection from the dead." There was a purpose in the resurrection of Christ and to know the Risen Christ is to possess overcoming power and assuring hope.

Knowledge of Him in triumphing power enables one to have "fellowship in His sufferings." Ambitious to know sufferings! When Turner would paint "A Storm at Sea," he is lashed to a ship off the coast of Holland. If man would be a saint within he must have fellowship in Christly sufferings. Not physical ailments, human privations, unpleasant misunderstandings, malignant treachery, these may be had without ambition. It is to have fellowship in the vicarious passion, and suffering for others to the point of giving life for their salvation. Such a holy ambition realized upon the part of the Church would evangelize the world.

Witness of triumph in the heart and suffering denial in daily walk gives a continuous experience of conformity to the death of Christ. It fills the hours and years with assurance and certitude of "Father into thy hands." A forgiving spirit abounds and love abides for all—even enemies.

The right kind of ambition is costly. The high reaches of the spiritual life are expensive. The gate-way up is "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord," that knowledge He possessed of God, triumph and joy. "Whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule" and lose all that would hinder a fuller knowledge of "Him who loved us and gave himself for us."

The Contribution of Louisiana and Mississippi to Pacific Coast Methodism

BY REV. W. H. NELSON, D.D.

Louisiana and Mississippi furnished the people who gave the Glide Memorial Church and Evangelistic Center, San Francisco, to our whole connection. This fact ought to be interesting to the readers of the New Orleans Christian Advocate; in the great states of Louisiana and Mississippi. Louisiana contributed as a rich heritage to California way back in 1869 in Lizzie Helen Snyder, who was born near Shreveport, La., on Oct. 4, 1852. Her father, Dr. Thornton Andrew Snyder, was a native of Virginia, while her mother, Mary Connell Snyder, was a native of Tennessee. Dr. Snyder graduated at Tulane University Medical School in New Orleans, and practiced medicine in Bossier Parish, where his promising young daughter was born. She attended a private school in Minden, La., conducted by ministers of our Church. When she was 17 years of age, that was in 1869, she came with her parents to California, settling near Sacramento, and in December, 1871, when Lizzie Helen Snyder was 19 years of age, she united in marriage with Joseph Henry Glide, a native of England.

Mr. Glide was a great business man, had thousands of sheep and cattle and of course found it necessary to buy up large sections of land for pasturage. He knew his business, and as he was diligent and careful he soon acquired a great deal of wealth. Five children were born to these good people, and in 1906 Mr. Glide died in Sacramento greatly lamented, for he was a consecrated Christian, a leader in our Church work, and one of the strong business men of the State of California.

This devoted Louisiana girl and her children inherited large tracts of land with the passing of this devoted husband and father. Some of this land became valuable residential property, one large section in particular being just across the river from the city of Sacramento. With the division of the estate Mrs. Glide found herself in possession of some land in southern California thought to be fit only for grazing cattle. However soon after this oil was discovered on the land, naturally Mrs. Glide found herself in possession of a good deal of ready money. Her life could really be a great example to people of wealth. You know so many folks wait until they die to have their property disposed of by a will, which causes a lot of litigation often, and makes nobody so rich as the lawyers; for wherever there is a will there is always a won't, and the heir that does not like the will will move heaven and earth to break it. Then you know how the state steps in with taxes on inheritances. Mrs. Glide saw to it that every child had an equal share with herself when her husband died, and then her own property was hers to do as she pleased with. In 1914 she built the Mary Elizabeth Inn, a home for working girls in San Francisco at a cost of nearly $200,000 for the building, lot and furnishings, and here for 16 years working girls have been able to maintain themselves in decency, and in a Christian home. Mrs. Glide, about ten years ago, built Wesley Hall in San Francisco, an institutional church, and worth possibly $200,000, and this was deeded to our Church to be operated through the Women's Board of the General Board of Missions, as was the Mary Elizabeth Inn. Three years ago she built Epworth Hall in Berkeley, right back of our church there, for girl students who attend the University of California, and she bought a building where there is a home for boys who are students of the University. This is called Wesley Hall. Here was another investment of $200,000, and again these buildings were deeded to the Church. She also cleared our Berkeley church of debt, giving $50,000 for that purpose.

And now she has built this wonderful church in San Francisco at a cost of $700,000. This is one of the most unique churches in Southern Methodism. In the first place it is right in the center of town, the lot cost $192,000, and is a composite building: a church, and back of it an apartment house building of six stories. Under one roof there is the Episcopal residence where Bishop Arthur J. Moore resides. This is on the sixth floor. He has a splendid, well furnished, large apartment. Across the hall from Bishop Moore is the presiding elder of the San Francisco District, Rev. W. J. Sims. Thus the district parsonage is here also. On the fifth floor we have the church parsonage, where the pastor, Rev. J. C. McPheeters, lives, and across the hall is the assistant pastor, Rev. Walter Tipton. There are also ten two-room apartments on the 5th and 6th floors. On the third and fourth floors there are 36 single rooms for single girls. On the second floor there are rooms for men, and the office of Bishop Arthur J. Moore, and the Pacific Methodist Advocate in the adjoining office, and also the office of the pastor in another part of the building on that floor. Down stairs there are stores, our Publishing House, the San Francisco Branch, has conspicuous space, and on the first floor there is an evangelistic hall where services are held every night in the week except Saturday. Of course there is splendid equipment for the Sunday School on the first floor and in the basement. The church auditorium is one of the prettiest in the country, well furnished, and capable of seating 1050 people. There are chimes which play every day worth $10,000, there is a $15,000 pipe organ, and on the lofty spire there is a beautiful revolving cross lighted with Neon. We could describe this building further but we have already done so in the Nashville Christian Advocate.

REV W. J. SIMS
Presiding Elder, San Francisco, Calif., District

Now the question may be, how did this happen? And the answer is that when Louisiana and Mississippi really put their heads together and determine to do something anything might happen, and will. A lady from Louisiana had the money, the consecration and the desire to do something for God; a man born in Mississippi had the initiative and the ability and the vision and the good business sense to plan with this good lady as to the fulfillment of the desire of her generous heart. I am being conservative when I say that the Rev. W. J. Sims, the presiding elder of the San Francisco District, is one of the greatest business men in our Church, and one of our strongest leaders. I have known him for twenty years, and I know that there has never been a man on the Pacific Coast who had more influence with men and who was able to project a great movement and see it to glorious completion than Brother Sims.

A word as to his life would be interesting to your readers. Folks all over the United States have heard of Tupelo, Mississippi, for private John Allen, who so worthily represented Mississippi in Congress, lived there. There must be something in the soil of Tupelo that produces great leaders, for that is where Brother Sims was born. His father was Reuben A. Sims, and his mother was Mary G. Hendrix. At an early age the family moved to Texas, and at the age of 19 Brother Sims joined the Church, and was licensed to preach, and was appointed junior preacher under Dr. Joseph M. Stevenson on the Mason Circuit, West Texas Conference. Early in his ministry he married the devoted and lovable woman who has been his companion and helper through life, Miss Elizabeth Black, whose father was the most prominent layman on the Mason Circuit. Most of our folks have heard of the Rev. Andrew Jackson Potter, the "fighting parson" of Texas. He was Brother Sims' presiding elder in his early years, and Brother Sims developed his powers of leadership and initiative on the frontier. He had the happy faculty of being able to build things from his first year in ministry, and the number of churches and parsonages he built stretched out in a long line. Another characteristic of this man was, no matter what the position of the church before he came he always left our church the leading church in that town.

After serving in West Texas for some years, and with the spirit of the pioneer in his veins, he joined in that glorious work of planting our Church in what is now the State of Oklahoma. It will be recalled that when the Indian Territory was thrown open for settlement folks from Kansas on the north were rushing in, and if it had not been for loyal Texans and men like Brother Sims there would be no Southern Methodist churches in Oklahoma today. I know from people in Oklahoma who appreciate the work of this man that the only word that could characterize his labors there is "monumental." His keen business insight, his rare judgment, his knowledge of the situation, soon attracted the attention of our bishops, and while a young man he was made a presiding elder, serving first the Duncan District in Oklahoma for three years, and then being appointed by Bishop Key presiding elder of the Ardmore District. They still speak of his great work in Oklahoma in evangelizing, holding meetings which are remembered to this day, and building churches. That great church at Ardmore, Broadway, was built by Brother Sims, as were the churches at Madill, Woodville, Kingston, Mansville and other places. Parsonages were built in several places, debts paid, and new lots secured. After an important pastorate at the growing city of Muskogee, Bishop Hoss made Brother Sims presiding elder on the Vinita District, and then, because Oklahoma City was so important, and it took the strongest man in the conference to handle it, he was sent to that District. Oklahoma City was growing by leaps and bounds, and other churches were pouring in money and plenty of it. They all had the jump on us in Oklahoma, and when Brother Sims went to that District Southern Methodism was reduced to a whisper, in fact it was almost our dying breath. We had one antiquated church in a flimsy tabernacle, which fell down when a heavy wind hit it one night. Brother Sims selected the site of our St. Luke's Church, and did more than a man's share to build that building; also the church at Capitol Hill, Epworth and Grace Church. Those who know something of the situation know that this was simply monumental. At the end of his third year on that District he was made Commissioner of Education for all our schools in the State of Oklahoma. One of our leading men at that time said, "You have the most constructive educational program of any Conference in Southern Methodism."

Because of the health of his family, Brother Sims was transferred to the Pacific Coast after building the magnificent church at Okmulgee, Okla., and also an eleven-room parsonage. In 1911 be was sent as pastor to the important city of Oakland, where he did what no other man has been able to do: Took our church out of an unpromising neighborhood, planted it on Telegraph Avenue, a main artery of Oakland and Berkeley, and right down town. He built the educational annex, moved the parsonage, and paved the way for the building of a great church. He was then transferred to Central Church, Phoenix, Arizona, and during his four years as pastor more than 500 people were added to the church. He was made a presiding elder in Arizona, and Bishop DuBose put him on the Tucson District. We had no membership in Tucson, could secure no place in which we could hold meetings, but Brother Sims and Bishop DuBose went into their own pockets, put up the purchase money, signed additional notes, and bought one of the finest corners in the American section of Tucson, and only three blocks from the University of Arizona. That was about nine years ago. At the end of three years a splendid new church was built, and now we have a membership there of over 900. Brother Sims did double duty as pastor and presiding elder at Tucson and, not being content with one church there, he built the Menlo Park Church in another section of town, and built churches at Miami and Claypool. He secured property for building a Bisbee, Solomanville, Clifton, Nogales, Patagonia, Safford, Casa Grande, Litchfield, Peoria, Prescott and for two churches in Phoenix—Bowles Memorial and Capitol. He not only secured lots for these but did more than one man's part in helping to build them, and was the activating spirit on the District when Central Church, Phoenix, was built, and at Scottsdale and other places. In his time he has assisted in the erection of 34 churches and fifteen parsonages. And now this new $700,000 Glide Memorial Church in San Francisco is his crowning glory, for it is only fair to say that if Mrs. Glide had not had the utmost confidence in the business ability, in the integrity, and in the good sense of this man, one of our greatest leaders, we would not have this church in San Francisco.

Mississippi ought to be proud of this great son, who is not only a wise master builder, a great leader, a forward-looking, keen business man, but a magnificent preacher. He is one of the strong preachers of our Church, and a lover of good literature was implanted in his soul by the Lord of Life. I think I know good preaching when I hear it, and I have often marveled at the poetic imagery in his sermons, as natural as life and with no attempt at poetry, but the poetry coming to the surface simply because it was as a well of water springing into life. Whole passages in his sermons read like blank verse.

It is good to have such men as this in the Church, and how much better off we would be if there were more of them. Folks like Mrs. Glide and Brother Sims deserve all the good that can come to them, and Mississippi and Louisiana may justly feel proud of them.

SAM P. JONES

By Rev. Theodore Copeland, D. D.

When David mourned for Abner, the son of Ner, and refused to eat bread because of his grief, he said to his servants, "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel? That Sam P. Jones was a great man in the ranks of God's distinguished servants, is a verdict which finds response in the hearts of the lofty and low; while men and women repeat with love and veneration the name of Sam P. Jones.

If it be true, that history is but the lengthened shadows of the world's great men, it is equally true that the shadow of this fallen hero will be projected through the coming years and will afford rest and refreshment to many weary souls, for his memory will linger like a benediction when most of his contemporaries shall have been forgotten.

Since the eighteenth century, when George Whitefield gathered immense audiences and preached with seraphic zeal, and charmed the multitudes with the vehemence and earnestness of his oratory, there has not arisen a greater evangelist or a more popular speaker than Sam Jones. Original, unique, profound, tender as a mother, brave as a plumed knight, he shines in the firmament with a lustre all his own. Apes and imitators he has had in great abundance, but like a star that dwells apart, he remains solitary and unapproachable. Sam Jones was a genius. With a marvelous intuition, he threaded every channel of the heart of man. He knew human nature. He was familiar with all the phases of thought and passion and emotion; and with a master's hand, he swept all the keys of that wonderful organ called the human heart.

His unique and unfamiliar methods frequently provoked criticism, and even bitterness; the men of the cloth were often shocked by slang expressions, and his telling anecdotes, and his undignified demeanor. But the common as well as the uncommon people heard him gladly. Multitudes who never attended any place of worship were drawn by the spell and fascination of this remarkable man, and in many instances, fools who came to mock, remained to pray. Thousands from the different walks of life were converted through his ministry, among them many of the most abandoned sinners—men and women hardened in crime, whose feet had almost slipped into perdition. Sam Jones was a master of assemblies. No other man of his generation could drag together

Memorial Mercy Home

I am grateful for this occasion which gives me an opportunity to thank our bishops and presiding elders for their full co-operation in bringing to the attention of our great Church the work that is being done by our Memorial Mercy Home, under the management of the three Annual Conferences.

The Home has been in our possession for twelve years, during which time we have rendered practical Christian help to more than eight hundred girls and their unfortunate babies. The families that have sought our Home for refuge have again and again blessed the Church for this door of hope in their dark hour of shame and grief. Many strong fathers and mothers have wept in gratitude for the helping hand given them by our Church when they did not know where to turn.

The program and policy is built upon the Gospel of mercy and forgiveness and our work is done with the hope of saving not alone social disgrace, but the soul of the girl who comes to us in distress. Emphasis is put upon personal work, with Christ the inspiration. Of course, each individual automatically presents "a case" with its own history, but the difference between the work our Church is doing and strictly social service work is that ours is because of Christ. We feel confident that 85 per cent of the girls are brought into a saved relationship with Christ.

Another important part of our policy is the great effort we make to reconcile the family to take the baby for the girl and not until every possible means has been exhausted do we accept the girl's baby to adopt it into another family. The tragedy connected with these girls going astray is not alone that they have lost their good name but that eighty-one out of ninety-five last year came out of some Christian church.

Brethren, pardon me but may I not exhort you to warn your people again and again with reference to the wave of immorality that is undermining our Christian homes. If you would ask me what do we think contributes more largely toward this condition among our young people I would reply by saying, that while we must face the fact of a rapidly changing social order, hurried on by education and modern invention, that the fundamental cause is the laxity of home authority; the lack of Godly example and a lack of proper teaching in early years of God's holy purpose for the function of the body; the failure of instilling into the child's mind the ideal of the beauty of purity and cleanliness of thought.

I am now compelled to let you know how very much we need your very best support and co-operation if this work is to carry on through this year; on account of receiving $3000 less from the general budgets of our Conference last year with an increase of $3000 in our own budget and with the first third of the year taken up with the programs of the Church, it has been an impossible task to raise sufficient funds to prevent falling behind. However, we can come to the end of our Conference year in fair shape if the brethren will simply tell their congregations about our work and take a free-will offering for us. We have the literature and will be glad to furnish the simple plan that we would like to have you use in taking this offering.

I feel certain with the 100 per cent co-operation on the part of our bishops and the presiding elders that we may count on the same from the pastors of our Conferences.

Brethren, we have done our best in order, if possible, not to have to ask you to help through your churches, but I am sure since this is almost the first time in the twelve years that we have co-operated in this work, that we have had to come to you asking for financial aid that you will heartily give us your best help at once.

Yours sincerely,

J. G. SNELLING,
Superintendent.

FROM THE PRESIDING ELDERS

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Alexandria District

The work of the Memorial Home in New Orleans has been a "Door of Hope" to storm-tossed souls. It has been a "Haven of Refuge" to misguided beings. Its appeal is to those who will go to the depths to show Mercy. Like the Master, never leave a soul to itself. Stand by and prove a Friend in Need. Give liberally to the cry of a human need and show mercy in a loving spirit.

ALBERT S. LUTZ,

FROM BISHOP DOBBS

My Dear Dr. Snelling: Your work as superintendent of the Memorial Mercy Home deserves the practical appreciation and co-operation of us all. As president of the Conference I write to invite you into all of our churches for this worthy cause which you so worthily represent.

The practical and tender manner in which science and religion are united in human service in the Home will win the admiration and the gratitude of all who see its results in the conservation of life and character, both now and for the future.

You may depend upon me to do all in my power to assist you in sustaining the burdens which we have put upon your shoulders.

Very truly yours,

HOYT M. DOBBS,
Bishop in charge of Louisiana.

FROM BISHOP DENNY

During my recent visit to New Orleans my brother, Rev. J. G. Snelling, did me the favor to take me to Memorial Mercy Home, to entertain me at luncheon, and to give me the opportunity to join the young women in a religious service. In addition, Brother Snelling and his wife took me over the home, and showed me all the inmates and all the appointments.

As I looked around on those young women, most of whom I was told came from Christian homes, my heart was deeply moved for those who had been betrayed, and who here, in the time of their great agony, found a refuge. I thanked God with a great thanksgiving because He had moved some of His followers to make possible such a refuge and to keep it available for some of those who fall into the snares of the devil.

Opportunity makes responsibility, and here is an opportunity for those who will use it to give needed service to God by helping those whom we know Jesus is waiting to help, those who serve Him when they serve one of the least of those whom He came to save. Long ago He helped those who needed Him, and He is the same Lord today.

Should there be those who can be influenced by my judgment and request, without any hesitancy I call on them to help and to help much this Home of Mercy.

COLLINS DENNY,
Bishop in charge of the Miss. Conferences.

Baton Rouge District

Having served as pastor in New Orleans for a term of years and seen the Memorial Mercy Home in operation, I can say with pleasure that the Home is under a wise and thoroughly Christian management and deserves the heartiest support of everybody.

L. W. CAIN.

Lake Charles District

The Memorial Mercy Home is doing a great and noble Christian work for a most unfortunate and otherwise helpless class, and it should appeal to the sympathy and support, not only of our Methodist people, but to all denominations, since it receives into its refuge girls of all faiths. It welcomes the fallen into this Christian haven and rehabilitates these objects of pity and sends them forth regenerated and made anew into Christian characters to begin life over again.

J. W. LEE.

Minden District

I want to express my appreciation of the splendid work being done at the Memorial Mercy Home. Surely that is a Christ-like work and deserves the support of all.

W. R. HARVELL.

Monroe District

The Memorial Mercy Home, under direction of Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Snelling, is doing a splendid work. This institution is prepared to help unfortunate people in such a way as to give them at once a new chance and a new outlook on life. Here the girls are brought face to face with a Saviour whose loving heart includes their needs. The Church in whose name this mighty work is being done cannot afford to fail in upholding the hands of those who are giving the best effort of their lives in helpfulness as workers in this Home. Let us do our part in this task looking to the saving of souls and the upbuilding of character.

ELMER C.GUNN.

New Orleans District

I have been acquainted with the work of the Memorial Mercy Home for a number of years and know it to be indeed a work of mercy and of Christian relief to those who have sinned. Rev. J. G. Snelling and wife are doing a most sacrificial work and deserve most richly the support of all Christian and philanthropic people in this great work.

W. L. DOSS, JR.

Ruston District

The Memorial Mercy Home in New Orleans is engaged in the most Christ-like ministry open to our Church. It should have the whole-hearted support not only of all Methodists, but of all Christians within its territory, for it ministers to all alike who may need its protecting arm. It is the least that any of us can do to support Dr. Snelling with our prayers and offerings.

About a year ago my wife and I decided to place the Mercy Home on the list of the institutions to which we make annual contributions. We expect to leave it there as long as we have anything to give. If it had rendered no other service than the one or two instances that have come under our personal observaiton it would be worthy of all we have invested in it.

ROBT. M. BROWN.

Shreveport District

If it is the mission of Christianity to seek the erring, bring back the wanderer, bind up broken hearts, and give light and life to those in darkness and death, then the Memorial Mercy Home is doing a most Christ-like work. It is a tragedy that such an institution is needed—but it is a blessing that it exists. When good people learn of its work, surely they will maintain it with their means. The Memorial Mercy Home represents Christianity in earnest and in action. Every Christian, every church, every friend of the unfortunate ought to be glad of the opportunity to have a part in maintaining this work of mercy.

H. T. CARLEY.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Brookhaven District

The Memorial Mercy Home, New Orleans, is an open door of hope for unfortunate girls and a way of the Church's ministering to broken lives and sorrowing homes. It is an institution fostered by the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences. Dr. and Mrs. Snelling are rendering an unselfish service and our people should support the Home with their money and prayers.

J. L. DECELL.

Hattiesburg District

I am sure that our Church is undertaking no more distinctly Christian work or needed service than that of helping our erring sisters to faith in God and orderly Christian living, and to provide proper environment and teaching for helpless and blameless children. The Master himself pioneered in this field, and we should gladly follow in His train. The Home is an agency of the Kingdom for which we should be profoundly grateful, and which all Mississippi and Louisiana Methodists should cordially support with earnest prayers and generous contributions.

W. A. HAYS.

Jackson District

Our Methodist people in Louisiana and Mississippi should have a sense of devout pride in the Christian service being rendered by our Memorial Mercy Home in the city of New Orleans. There, unfortunate girls find that their despair may be translated into hope, and their darkest night into the brightness of day. This is the type of work sacred to the heart of our Lord. Dr. Snelling, the superintendent, is doing a great work, and should have the liberal support of all our people.

J. L. LEGGETT.

Meridian District

I think no institution is doing more commendable work than that which the Home is doing: giving a chance for those who have been the victims of unscrupulous, selfish debauchees, to retrieve their good standing, and get a new lease on life. Jesus pronounced his blsesings on the unfortunate, and bade her go into life anew and sin no more, instead of joining with cold-hearted formalism to accomplish her destruction. I am sure He enthusiastically stamps the seal of his approval upon the Memorial Mercy Home. Our people should readily support it.

T. J. O'NEIL.

Newton District

We are all aware for what the Memorial Home stands, also the great and needful work that it has accomplished and is strongly emphasizing in reaching out to lift up and Christianize those who have fallen deeply in sin. Were it not possible for such institutions, many who have fallen in sin would not receive the help that comes at a time when the Christ spirit should be exemplified toward them and in their life further degradation prevented. As ministers of the Conference, let us be co-operative in this work with our worthy superintendent, Brother Snelling, who is faithfully doing a monumental work in the uplift of fallen humanity.

H. A. GATLIN.

Seashore District

I take pleasure in commending the work done by the Memorial Mercy Home. Certainly the Church should try to rescue the erring mother and save the unfortunate child.

OTTO PORTER.

Vicksburg District

This something we call sin is seen blighting the lives of many of our young men and women. The sinner of many years finds it is very difficult to break away from its power and build a character of strength and purity. But to the sinner who has been caught prematurely or unexpectedly by the tempter and led into the wrong path there is a chance of building again, if proper help and teaching is given the sinner. The Methodist Church has established a Home in New Orleans called the Memorial Mercy Home, whose mission is to take the young woman who "has missed the mark," gone into sin, and give her a chance to come again, to go and sin no more. May I exhort all our people to give that Home their hearty and liberal support.

L. E. ALFORD.

Aberdeen District

I approve that kind of service which the Memorial Mercy Home is rendering, and have supported this Home for years and expect to continue, and I wish for it much success in its work of mercy.

T. H. DORSEY.

Columbus District

An institution may be judged by its mission, its directors and its accomplishments. By this standard the Memorial Mercy Home at New Orleans is a worthy institution and richly deserves our hearty support. Its mission is one of mercy, rescue and useful employment for future life. Moreover, what the Home has accomplished during the past ten years commands the admiration and the help of all good people. In view of these considerations, therefore, we endorse the work of the Home and recommend its claims as being very urgent and altogether worthy.

W. N. DUNCAN.

Corinth District

When our Master said to the erring woman, "Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more," He opened the door of mercy for all time. The Memorial Mercy Home complies with this declaration.

JAMES H. FELTS.

Grenada District

The Memorial Mercy Home at New Orleans is a Christian lighthouse to those who are in the night of despair and should have the financial assistance of all who believe in mercy.

E. H. CUNNINGHAM.

Greenwood District

I am glad to give my hearty endorsement to the great work being done at the Memorial Mercy Home and wish to co-operate in every possible way for the success of that noble enterprise.

L. P. WASSON.

Greenville District

It gives me great pleasure to state my appreciation of the work done by the Memorial Mercy Home. The plan upon which it is run, extensive reach of its services, manifest care and love for the most desperately unfortunate, makes it one of the essential institutions of the Church, without which society would feel an impoverishing lack; with which the Church may discharge nobly a tremendous obligation.

Our people should become familiar with the most intimate facts concerning the home, and contribute liberally to its maintenance and improvement.

E. NASH BROYLES.

Sardis District

Brother and Sister Snelling hold the light that guides wavering souls to pardon and to salvation. We must support them. We will. The Church should answer gladly every call from our Memorial Mercy Home.

INTERESTING FEATURES OF SCARRITT SUMMER SCHOOL

As early as 6:30 the tones of the beautiful organ in Wightman Chapel announce the hymns of the morning quiet hour. At 9 o'clock on Mondays there is an interesting chapel service, when outstanding speakers are a part of the program. Although no regular vesper services are held at Scarritt, tea is served on the lawn on Sunday afternoon in time for one to hear the nationally-known leaders who speak at the Peabody College vesper hour.

The Friday evening organ recitals by Mr. Arthur Henkel, formerly of the Nashville Conservatory of Music, have attracted visitors to Scarritt from all parts of the city.

A vocational guidance conference is a part of the summer school. Also the presentation of two pageants by the pageantry class are occasions to which everyone looks forward.

Anyone seeing Scarritt Summer School students and faculty playing tennis or croquet would know that much real enjoyment and fine fellowship are a part of this quarter's curriculum. Saturday afternoons may find the entire Scarritt family enjoying a delightful picnic in Shelby Park or at the Hermitdge, Andrew Jackson's famous antebellum home.

Among the richest contributions to student life in Nashville are the opportunities for fine contacts with the students from other colleges, particularly George Peabody College for Teachers, Vanderbilt University, and the Southern Y. M. C. A. College.

People who come to Scarritt College find real home life awaiting them. The shaded lawns with their many green benches and the artistic social rooms, the beautiful dining hall, and the cottages used for dormitories emphaize family life. One building on the campus is a dormitory for men students.

A STUDENT NEEDS HELP

Dear Brother Decell: I am working for one of the scholarships offered by the Nashville Christian Advocate in its Subscription Campaign, which ends April 30. My brethren of the New Orleans Advocate territory can render me great assistance by making the canvass in their churches and sending through me any subscriptions to the Nashville Advocate that they can secure this month. Such co-operation will be very much appreciated and will very materially aid me in winning one of the scholarships.

If you can give this appeal publicity through the columns of the Advocate I shall be very much indebted to you.

With best wishes, I am

THE GOLDEN RULE

By D. W. Heidelberg

The Sermon on the Mount contains more wisdom than any other sermon ever preached, and the Golden Rule than any other part of this sermon. By it we are told that, "all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you do ye even so to them." Of all of the commandments this is one of the most difficult to obey, and one of the most frequently violated. The violation of it has resulted in vast fortunes being accumulated, and in the extreme poverty of great masses of the people. A failure to practice the Golden Rule, both on the part of the employer and the employee, has brought about the warfare between capital and labor attended by disastrous strikes followed by bitterness of feeling, want and suffering.

If a man would do to others as he would like for them to do to him he would never take advantage of another in a trade, nor charge for goods more than they are reasonably worth, not be unwilling to pay a reasonable price for them.

If we observed the Golden Rule, employees would be paid a reasonable price for their labor, and servants would render faithful service to their employers.

If the Golden Rule were universally observed, no crime would ever be committed, for no one would ever do an injury to another whom he loved as himself, nor would there ever be any civil litigation, for no one would have to be compelled to perform his duty toward another whom he loved as himself.

The practice of the Golden Rule is the opposite of selfishness, and no selfish man can be happy or be a true Christian.

If the Golden Rule were observed, no war would ever be fought, for the people of one nation would never go to war with the people of another whom they loved as themselves.

To the failure to observe the Golden Rule much of the unhappiness of mankind is attributable. Capital has been arrayed against labor, and labor against capitol. Strikes innumerable have been engaged in, and hatred of one class for the other has been harbored in the human breast. Violence and bloodshed have been resorted to accompanied by great loss of property. Great fortunes have been accumulated which usually is a curse father than a blessing to those who possess them. As a result of the violation of this rule, great masess of the people have been deprived of the necessities of life. Church and benevolent institutions have not been supported, and, as a result, the progress of Christianity has been greatly impeded. Wars have been waged from time immemorial, and the history of the world has been written in blood. Children have thereby been made orphans and wives widows. Innumerable tears have flowed, hearts have been made to ache and untold suffering endured. Vast fortunes have been worse than squandered; all as a result of a failure to observe the Golden Rule.

If, on the contrary, the Golden Rule were universally observed what a happy world we would have. Strikes would be a thing of the past. Employees would be content with reasonable wages and would render faithful service, and would receive reasonable compensation for their service. Poverty would well nigh disappear from the walks of life. Wars would be a thing of the past. Domestic servants would be faithful to their masters, and their masters would deal justly with their servants, and contentment and happiness would characterize their association together.

God speed the time this happy day will dawn upon us. The prize to be won is so great that we should never give up the struggle to attain it. Day by day, week by week, month by month, and year by year we should continue our efforts until we are able to make it our daily practice. We should begin with our children, and it should be instilled into them from their early infancy. It should be taught as a part of our common school education.

IS GOD THE FATHER OF ALL MEN?

By Rev. John W. Ramsey

Part II

It should be kept in mind constantly that the answer to the question of the caption of these articles is not to be determined by philosophical preconceptions of men or sentimental preferences of that which commends itself to men as a beautiful theory of God; but let it be distinctly understood that the answer is to be found in a reasonable and sensible exegesis of the words of Jesus and the teachings of the epistles. So, the whole subject resolves itself into the question, What does Jesus say, and what do the epistles teach, concerning the subject of the Fatherhood of God? These articles have no interest in or concern for the modern trend of the opinions of men toward sentimental conceptions of God and his relations to men, but are devoted to an earnest effort to ascertain the truth as it is in Jesus and the teachings of his apostles. Stripped, then, of all sentimentalism, the question is Does Jesus teach that God is the Father of all men? and do his apostles teach the same doctrine?

The Sermon On the Mount

In my original article and in the first part of this article, I have proved beyond all reasonable doubt that the Sermon on the Mount was not addressed to the multitude, but to the disciples only; therefore, in the sixteen references of Jesus in that sermon to God as Father, he is talking to his disciples. Besides these sixteen instances, there are five or six others in the three synoptics, a total of twenty-one or twenty-two. In none of them, as I have previously shown, does Jesus teach that God is the Father of all men; but, in the first place, it will be ascertained that Jesus distinctly stated that he was addressing his disciples, and spoke to them of God as "your Father." Secondly, both context and the connection afford distinct evidence that he spoke of God not as the Father of all men, but of a certain kind of men. The only remaining instance of Jesus' referring to God as Father is in John 8:42, when, in speaking to certain Jews, he said: "If God were your Father, ye would love me." Inversely, "Ye do not love me, therefore God is not your Father." Here, then, are certain Jews whose Father God is not. If this were the only instance in the Bible it would be sufficient to establish my contention that God is not the Father of all men. Who, then, was the father of these Jews? Jesus answers the question: "Ye are of your father the devil." God and the devil cannot be the father of the same class of men at the same time; otherwise, there would be a dual parentage, which, of course, is unthinkable.

Who Can Call God Father

No man can call God Father except by the Spirit. Rom. 8:15, "For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father." Gal. 4:6, "And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father." Sinners have not the Spirit of God, therefore, they cannot call him Father.

The Parable of the Prodigal Son

This parable is the locus classicus for those who teach the doctrine of the universal Fatherhood of God; but the central and only truth taught here is that Jesus came to seek and save the lost and for this purpose he was associating with publicans and sinners, for which the Pharisees criticised him. This parable was the reply of Jesus to the criticism of the Pharisees, and in justification of himself for his association with publicans and sinners. The same truth is taught in the first two of this group of three parables—the lost sheep and the lost coin. If we are to infer from the third of this group that God is the Universal Father, then we may just as legitimately infer from the second parable of the group the essential Womanhood of God and the essential coinhood of man. The central truth of those parables might have been illustrated just as easily by the story of a wife deserting her husband and later returning in penitence and being graciously received back by her husband; but we should not, therefore, conclude that husbandhood is the final idea of God, or that wifehood is the final idea of man—yet such a conclusion would be just as logical as to infer from these three parables that God is the Father of all men.

The Essential Element of Fatherhood

The essential element of fatherhood is the fact of procreation. Nothing short of this act and fact can possibly constitute fatherhood, taking the word either in its natural or spiritual sense. In his conversation with Nicodemus, Jesus said: "Except a man be born again, he cannot enter the kingdom of God." The Greek word here translated "born again," according to Thayer's Lexicon, properly means to beget. Accordingly, we read in Pet. 1:3, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope"; and in 1 Cor. 4:15, Paul says: "For in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel." Then we read in 1 John 5:1: "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God; and every one that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten of him." Here is something deeper than mere ethical likeness to God—it is the divine impartation of spiritual life; and God is the Father of those only who have spiritual life, because without procreation there can be no fatherhood. Sinners have not been begotten of God; therefore, God is not their Father.

Appellations

The resulting products of the essential element of the Fatherhood of God are called in the Bible sons, daughters, and children. 2 Cor. 6:17,18, "Wherefore come out from them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." Rom. 8:14, "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." (1). Syllogism: Sons of God are led by the Spirit of God; Sinners are not led by the Spirit of God; therefore, sinners are not the sons of God. (2). Syllogism: God is the Father of those led by his Spirit; Sinners are not led by his Spirit; therefore, God is not the Father of Sinners. Rom. 8-16: "The Spirit of God beareth witness with our sprit, that we are the children of God." Phil. 2:15, "That ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation." 1 John 3:1, "Behold, what manner of love the Father has bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." Paul expressly declares that sinners are not the children of God, and if not children, God is not their Father. Rom. 9:8, "They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God. Also in 1 John 3:10, "In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil."

The Lord's Prayer

One day, when Jesus himself was praying, one of his disciples, according to Luke, said: "Lord, teach us how to pray, and he said unto them (Luke 11:1,2), 'When ye pray, say Our Father, etc.'" Beyond all doubt, according to Luke, Jesus was teaching only his disciples to pray. The question of the presence of the multitudes is not involved on this particular occasion. The Lord's Prayer is also a part of the Sermon on the Mount, which is another proof that that discourse was given only to his disciples, and not the multitudes. As has been proved, God is not the Father of sinners; therefore, sinners have no right to pray the Lord's Prayer, and say, "Our Father." The only prayer a sinner has the right to pray is the prayer of the publican: "God be merciful to me a sinner."

Implications

Several exceedingly dangerous and hurtful implications may be drawn from the doctrine of the universal Fatherhood of God, as follows:

1. It renders the sacrificial death of Jesus needless. Jesus died that sinners might become the children of God; but if God is already their Father by creation or otherwise, Jesus died a needless death on the cross.

2. It destroys all incentive to missionary work. If God is the Father of all men, and all men are his children, as they must be if he is their Father, then, close the doors to the mission fields, keep your missionary money in your pocket, and recall all missionaries. Indeed, the vocation of the preacher is gone, because "God is in his heaven and all's right with the world!"

3. To the depraved and vicious it gives a feeling of security and license. It relieves them of the most salutary constituent of the normal moral nature, the sense of the fear of God. Hearing this doctrine universally proclaimed as if it were the theological axiom underlying all truth, bad men, impenitent men, say, "If this be true, if God is the Father of all men, then we are as well off as others," and so they continue in sin.

4. To the righteous, the doctrine has a tendency to cheapen the highest thing. They would be tempted to say: '"If God is the Father of all men, then we are no better off than others. After all our struggles, sacrifices and sufferings, we are no more to God and he is no more to us than those who live in ease and know nothing of sacrifice. So, then, let us eat, drink, and be merry; for, tomorrow we die."

Conclusion

If I have not established my contention that God is not the Father of all men, I submit that nothing can be established by the Bible; and I challenge those who hold the doctrine of the universal Father of God to point out one single passage of Scripture wherein God calls himself the Father of sinners and indicates that they are his children.

I conclude with the emphatic statement of my original article: The conclusion of the whole matter is that the argument that God is not the Father of all men is irrefutable, and the doctrine of the universal Fatherhood of God is utterly false, and, its corallary, the universal brotherhood of man is equally untrue.. So taught Jesus and his apostles, and so reads my Bible.

WILLIAM CONNELL

An Appreciation

By Rev. Wm. W. Woollard

William Connell, the son of William C. and Evelyn Posey Connell, was born at Bayou Fordoche, Pointe Coupee, La., December 15, 1851. He was the fourth of six children, Hugh, John P., Elizabeth, William, Jefferson and Pattie. Only two of the family survive, John P., of Corpus Christi, Texas, and Jefferson of Clarksdale, Miss. He was of Huguenot and Irish extraction, and the family carry many interesting traditions of heroic and devoted service to both church and state. After the Revolutionary War, in which William's great-grandfather had an honorable part, the family settled in Virginia, later dividing, some going to South Carolina. In 1802 they moved to Mississippi, making their home in Wilkinson County. In 1865, immediately following the civil war, they moved to Louisiana, where they lived until the family was broken up by the marriage of the children. There still stands the home of the family in Wilkinson County, a beautiful old place.

When seventeen years of age, William made his first large venture in life, going to Texas, where he lived for five years, trying the life of a lone Texas farmer. It did not suit him, so he returned to his Louisiana home. On August 19, 1880, he was married to Miss Margaret Bisland, of Houma, La., who lived only two years after the marriage. She left a beautiful babe, William, Jr., who lived to be a fine, splendid young man, the pride of his father, dying at the age of twenty-one.

Brother Connell came to Mississippi, locating in Bolivar County in 1883. Shortly thereafter he went into business with Dr. J. C. Brooks, a man of sterling integrity. Later, when the Valley railroad was built, he moved, one of the first inhabitants, to Shelby, where he lived the remainder of his days.

He was married, the second time, to Miss Lula Poitevent, of Shelby, November 5, 1890. Two children were born to them, Margarite and Thomas Jacob. The former living to be five years old, the latter two.

He joined the Methodist church in Shelby in 1893, though before then he had lived a clean examplary life. Shortly after joining the church, in a revival meeting held by Rev. W. M. McIntosh, Brother Connell had a remarkable experience of God's redeeming mercy, and from then on to the hour of his translation his life was a powerful witness to the saving grace of Jesus Christ. As a leader and one of the officers of his church, he served it most faithfully until he fell on sleep. He lived to the ripe old age of nearly eighty years, bearing with singular fidelity every interest and obligation imposed upon him, when, surrounded by his surviving family and a large host of loving friends, he passed quietly to the great majority from his beautiful home here on earth to his mansion in the skies, in the early morning of March 7, 1931. His remains were buried beneath a glorious canopy of flowers in the cemetery at Grenada, Miss., the following day.

These brief chronicles give the salient events of his notable life, but there remains to make some attempt to portray and appraise his remarkable character and personality. Few men ever lived more worthily than did he. All men loved him. He was kind and gentle. He was sincere. He was one of those rare characters, all too rare, in whom there was so little to forgive! There was in him so much, so very much, to admire! Physically not a large man; in all other respects, in his rock-ribbed integrity; in his fearless, modest courage; in his fidelity; in his beautiful idealism; in his broad mental sympathies and intellectual grasp; in his fine Christian faith he was a man of magnificent proportions. Yes, we all loved him. Old and young, black and white, good and bad, rich and poor, all knew that William Connell "had the elements so mixed in him that Nature might stand up and say to all the word, This was a man" without reproach. Now that he is gone, after his nearly eighty years of splendid living, with his bright, shining face, "as it had been the face of an angel," we shall miss him, and Shelby will be the poorer for his having gone.

Such individuals as he would constitute an ideal citizenship for a great nation, for "of such is the kingdom of heaven." A man of somewhat intensive interests, having business relations with many people of all classes, his well known probity, his sense of justice and his absolute fairness precluded any serious misunderstandings. He always gave more rather than less of what was due another. Called to be the executor of estates, his final settlements were never questioned by individual or court. Never seeking public office, he was yet occasionally appointed to serve on important commissions, which he did with fidelity and at a minimum of cost to the State. He moved along straight lines, never taking short cuts or devious ways to success. No man ever sought to inveigle him into questionable transactions. Quiet, modest, unassuming, without the cheap tinsel of gaudy pretense or the clanging cymbal of boisterous aassertiveness, he was a strong, stalwart, manly man.

He was courteous, a gentleman of cultured mind and heart. Never rude or thoughtless or tactless, he intuitively did always that which was gracious. The kindness and gentleness of his nature, with its inherent nobility, was warrant for the universal conviction that William Connell was a gentleman, to the manner born. He was wary of his intimacies, but liberal of his friendships. Enemies he had none, for his moderation disarmed all enmity. Trusting others, he rarely suffered because of his trustfulness, as people shunned to be found unworthy of his trust. All coveted his high regard. It was coin current in the realm of character. Many young men thought, and still think, of him as an ideal man; and his quiet, sincere life was an inspiration to high living, which will abide. He was a lover of the beautiful, and kept his home adorned with rare flowers and tasteful, never garish, furnishings. His family life was idylic in its simplicity and devotion. He never ceased to be a lover.

But what shall I say of his Christian character? He was not demonstrative or moved by superficial emotions. His life was as "a tide too deep for sound and foam." Yet no man held more firmly to the great basic Christian experiences. He felt them daily in his devotions and ministries. He thought much of God, and was happy in his meditations. His was a conversion, many years ago, which meant full surrender of his life to Jesus Christ. Growing out of this he lived a life of joy and peace. His deepest satisfaction was in having "a conscience void of offense toward God and toward man." A diligent reader of his Bible and other good literature, he knew the great Christian doctrines and the history of the Christian Church. He had a distinct prayer life, and his home remained to the last a Temple of God, and he its ministering priest. Known to all was his devotion to the Methodist Church, and its far-flung interests and activities. It gave him pleasure to make his liberal contributions to its benevolences. Until the last few months, when his failing health forbade, he rarely missed its stated services. Of his time and thought he gave freely. With his means he was always generous; sometimes, when need arose, he was lavish in his giving. For many years he was treasurer of the church funds, and rarely, if ever, did his church fail to meet every cent of its obligations. His unswerving loyalty was an inspiration to the entire membership. Yet it was in the consecration of his mind and heart and will to Jesus Christ that is to be found his great contribution to the Kingdom of God. When and where shall we see his like again? Upon whom will his mantle fall?

REVIVAL SERVICES IN CAPITOL STREET METHODIST CHURCH

The evangelistic campaign in Capitol Street Methodist Church conducted by Rev. H. F. Tolle, of First Methodist Church, Tampa, Fla., closed Sunday night, March 29.

Dr. Tolle reached Jackson, Wednesday, March 18, with an automobile load of orange blossoms which were given to all who attended the opening service of the meeting that night. Great crowds waited on his ministry throughout the twelve days of the meeting. Brother Tolle has a rare gift in preaching the old-time gospel with simplicity and persuasion. He wins the heart of his hearers and leads them convincingly into the presence of Jesus Christ.

Scripture reading was emphasized during the meeting; reports taken nightly show that 5250 chapters were read by those attending the services. Five boys and girls read the entire New Testament during the last seven days of the meeting and received bibles in appreciation of their achievement.

The entire membership of the church was encouraged and strengthened by the constructive ministry of Brother Tolle and Mrs. Tolle, his good wife, who assisted in services for young people and children. Thirty persons joined the church during the meeting on profession of faith. The general effects of the meeting are altogether wholesome and the cause of Christ has been greatly advanced by the splendid service of Brother Tolle.

J. A. SMITH, Pastor.

It is rumored that Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, former congresswoman and recently defeated for the Senate in Illinois, is to be married to Albert Simms, former congressman from New Mexico. On a visit in New Mexico, Mrs. McCormick refused to either confirm or deny the rumor. We expect to see the announcement of the wedding soon.

Editorial

SOUTHERN METHODISM IN CALIFORNIA

Occasionally some one says that our work in the Far West should be surrendered, or exchanged for other territory. We do not aagree. In this week's issue we are carrying an illuminating article from Dr. W. H. Nelson on our work in San Francisco. Mrs. Glide and Rev. W. J. Sims deserve the appreciation of the entire connection for their devotion to the Church and for the erection of Southern Methodism's Temple of Worship hard by the Golden Gate. This editor succeeded Brother Sims at St. Paul's, Fresno, California, and knows him to be a Christian minister of ability and great worth to our Church on the Coast. We have as capable and loyal people in the Far West as we have in any section of the Church. We rejoice in the success of the work out there and pray it may abound more and more.

BISHOP DENNY AT SHUBUTA SUNDAY

Rev. C. W. Wesley, pastor, Shubuta, Miss., announces that Bishop Collins Denny will dedicate the Andrew Chapel church on the Shubuta charge next Sunday, April 19, at 11 a. m. It will be a great occasion for the people of that section. Bishop Denny is one of the foremost preachers in America and his visit will prove an inspiration to any community. We appreciate the pastor's invitation to be present but duty calls elsewhere.

CHAPLAIN E. C. GUNN PROMOTED

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, presiding elder of the Monroe District, for a number of years chaplain of the 31st Division of the Louisiana National Guard, has recently been promoted to Lieutenant Colonel. Brother Gunn began his military career as chaplain during the world war. He trained at Camp Zachary Taylor and went over seas in 1918 and saw duty in France for nearly a year. Returning to the United States in July, 1919, he was discharged with honor at Camp Dix, New Jersey, and for nearly three years had no military affiliation. In 1923 he was appointed chaplain of the 156th Infantry, Louisiana National Guard with rank of Captain. One month later he was transferred to the chaplaincy of the 108th Cavalry. After one year in this connection he was made chaplain of the 31st Division with the rank of Major. After seven years of efficient service as Major in the 31st Division, without suggestion on his part he was recommended for promotion and was appointed to a Lieutenant Colonelcy. He is one of the few chaplains in Army service with so high a rank. He continues as chaplain of the 31st Division.

Brother Gunn has served his country well, and continues to preach the gospel and hold up Christ at encampments and in military councils. These labors do not interfere with his devotion to his duty as a minister in the Church of God. His success in the pastorate and as a presiding elder on one of the important districts in the connection mark him as a leader of versatile gifts and complete consecration. We congratulate the Governor and the Church upon his appointment.

REV. E. C. GUNN, LIEUT. COL.

Rev. P. H. Grice, the Pauline pastor of Madison, Miss., is aggressive in all the work of the church. We thank him for five subscriptions to the Advocate.

We hope that we may have a large increased circulation of the Advocate in the city of New Orleans. We thank Mrs. John D. Rumph of Rayne Memorial Church for her efforts in behalf of the Advocate.

Miss Mary Lowther, Florence, Miss., has favored us with another subscription list to the Advocate. She and her pastor, Rev. M. L. White, have our thanks for their interest in the Advocate.

Miss Virgie Fore, a member of Jefferson Street, Natchez, Miss., has our thanks for six subscriptions. Miss Fore was a useful member at Central Church, Meridian, during the editor's pastorate there.

Rev. A. Y. Brown, Golden Cross director for the North Mississippi Conference and pastor at Shannon, Miss., has our thanks for six cash subscriptions. Brother Brown has a habit of succeeding in all the work on his charge.

The Whitworth College Glee Club, Brookhaven, Miss., under the direction of Miss Catherine Jane Jordan, voice instructor, presented "The First Easter," a cantata, at Lampton Auditorium Easter Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Rev. H. E. Carter serves at Blue Mountain, Miss., but he knows where the sunshine is as well as Blue Mountain. We thank him for subscriptions recently sent in and are sure that his labors through the year will be crowned with accustomed success.

Rev. and Mrs. Rolfe Hunt, Jackson, Miss., visited in the home of their son, Rev. B. M. Hunt, at McComb, the last week in March. Dr. Hunt filled the pulpit at Centenary on the fifth Sunday in March. Large congregations heard him with profit.

The manager and editor appreciated an invitation to attend the Alexandria District Conference at Lecompte, La., April 14-15. Presiding Elder Lutz arranged an attractive invitation card for his announcements. Bishop Dobbs dedicated the Lecompte church on Wednesday morning.

Mr. J. S. McDonald, church lay leader for Drake's Chapel, on the Fannin, Miss., circuit, has our thanks for four cash subscriptions. Brother McDonald is the son of Rev. C. McDonald, who was one of the leaders of the Mississippi Conference in his day.

Judge J. H. Cook, a prominent attorney of Clarksdale, Miss., formerly United States district attorney, was killed in an automobile accident near Canton, on Saturday, March 28. He was buried at Clarksdale on Monday following with the services being conducted by his pastor, Rev. V. C. Curtis.

Rev. W. W. Perry received a class of fifteen members into the church at Rochelle, La., and two members at Selma. His work is making splendid progress at all points and we have been favored with another list of subscribers from Brother Perry, for which we thank him and his good people.

Louisiana and Mississippi Methodists will be happy to know that Bishop Warren A. Candler, after a serious illness, is now improving and they will continue to pray that he may be fully restored to his strength. One of the great leaders of Christendom he is, and can ill be spared even, for a short while, from his activities.

The Southern Baptist Convention convenes at Birmingham, Ala., on May 13. It is estimated that 5000 will be in attendance upon the three-day session, and that this is the world's largest Baptist assembly. It would be interesting to know the comparative costs of the Southern Baptist Convention meeting annually for four years and our quadrennial General Conferences.

We like the manner in which Rev. K. S. L. Cooke, pastor of New Albany circuit, refers to the Advocate in sending in a list of subscriptions. He wrote, "Please extend the following subscriptions to OUR paper for another year." The New Orleans Christian Advocate is a fellowship and its largest success will come from the spirit of cooperation.

Dr. V. C. Curtis, pastor of First Methodist Church, Clarksdale, Miss., and chairman of the Board of Christian Literature in his Conference, represented the Advocate at the Columbus, Aberdeen and Sardis District Conferences. We thank Dr. Curtis for a splendid list of cash subscriptions, and appreciate his work in behalf of the Advocate at the district conferences.

Rev. A. M. Martin, who is doing splendid work in the French Mission Field, in a letter to the office, writes: "Our work as French missionary extends about fifty miles along Bayou Lafourche. We have three small churches, three Sunday schools, and two Woman's Missionary Societies. We praise God for the many open doors for the gospel among our French fellow citizens."

Rev. W. A. Hays, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, writes as follows: "The Hattiesburg District Conference will be held at Broad Street, Tuesday and Wednesday, April 21-22. The opening sermon will be preached Monday evening. The brethren will be glad to know that Bishop Denny will be with us. We hope the editor of the Advocate will honor us with his presence."

Rev. Bruner M. Hunt, pastor of Centenary Church, McComb, did the preaching in a pre-Easter revival. He was assisted by Rev. M. K. Miller, Summit, Miss., who directed the music. The revival resulted in much good to the church and the city. There were forty-two accessions to the church. Brother Hunt assisted Dr. C. W. Crisler in special services at First Church, Brookhaven, during the week before Easter.

Rev. and Mrs. F. B. Ormond have been in great suspense over the critical illness of their daughter, Mrs. J. T. Anderson, who has been in Rushs' Infirmary, Meridian, Miss. for several weeks. We are glad to report that Mrs. Anderson is much improved. Brother Ormond states that his work is moving along encouragingly well on the Ellisville charge, and that they are looking forward to revival services under the leadership of Rev. J. L. Neill.

Bishop Arthur J. Moore is in a revival meeting at First Church, Shreveport. The pastor, Dr. W. Angie Smith, and his people had prepared for the services and evidences of a great revival are seen and felt by the large congregations who are attending. Bishop Moore is a great gospel preacher and we pray that hundreds will be blessed in the meeting. Dr. Smith cordially invites the brethren of the Conference to attend the services, which will continue through April 26.

Rev. H. A. Wood, the agressive pastor at Newton, Miss., is having a successful year. No interest lags in his hands and he is a pastor-evangelist who holds successful revivals in addition to his pastoral labors. We thank Brother Wood for a check for $25.50 to cover 17 subscriptions. Four having been previously sent makes his charge a total of 21. His method of securing the subscriptions was "to go after them." The personal method is successful.

Rev. Porter M. Caraway, the enterprising pastor at East End, Meridian, Miss., did the preching in a pre-Easter revival in his church, being assisted by Frank E. Dement, music director, and Lee Taylor Stokes as pianist. The revival resulted in much good and twenty-five members were received into the church on Easter Sunday morning. Brother Caraway is meeting with much success in his work in Meridian, and his people are co-operating loyally. We thank him for sending us eleven cash subscriptions.

Rev. S. B. Watkins, the genial and successful pastor at Silver City, Miss., is having a good year. We thank him for six subscriptions to the Advocate. Among the subscriptions was a renewal for Mrs. M. J. Hollingsworth, of whom he writes, "She has enjoyed reading the Advocate since she was a small girl in her father's home. She is in her ninetieth year and has enjoyed reading the Advocate since its first issues." We pray that the Advocate may be a blessing to Mrs. Hollingsworth and a help in the work at Silver City.

Grace Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., was the scene of a surprise staged by the members of the congregation for their pastor, the Rev. C. A. Schultz, after a Holy Week worship program had been completed. Following a message given by the Rev. Mr. Schultz on "Watch By the Cross," it was announced a social period would be held. A covered table in the rear of the building contained the surprise; it was completely laden with groceries. The pastor was asked to remove the covering and met his happy surprise.

The Galloway Memorial Methodist Church of Jackson, Miss., of which Dr. L. L. Cowen is the pastor, received on Palm Sunday and Easter a total of 110 new members, which makes a total of 189 new members that have been received into this great church since Conference, giving it at present a net membership of 2,417. This church will pay its Kingdom Extension quota of $487.50 in full, in addition to maintaining its "Missionary Special" of $1,650 for the full support of Dr. James Thoroughman, their medical missionary to Changchow, China, and making a special gift of some $250 to the Methodist Orphanage. All this is over and above all regular benevolent assessments.

The Bulletin of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, Chattanooga, Tenn., Mr. Cranston Williams, secretary-manager, recently said: "Dr. R. H. Bennett, president of Lander College, Greenwood, S. C., is meeting with much success and many favorable comments from publishers in syndicating his new humorous column, 'Twitterings of Timothy Twig.' He has been handling agreements direct with publishers, but it is expected that a syndicate will take over distribution soon. A leading citizen writes Dr. Bennett, 'Just a word to express my appreciation for those splendid articles you are giving us in the Sunday papers. The recent one on Zebras I thought pastor, received on Palm Sunday and Easter a total of 110 new members, which makes a total was very timely and appropriate. I find them all full of good plain truth that the common fellow can get a hold on." A prominent editor writes, "I have had in mind for several weeks writing you words of congratulation upon the 'Twitterings of Timothy Twig.' You will have a national or an international reputation if you keep up the standard that I have noted in the last two or three. I always read them with interest."

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

John Will Ormond, a member of the Central Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., died Thursday, April 9. He was a scion of one of the oldest and most useful families in East Mississippi. He is survived by four sisters: Mrs. H. W. Van Hook, Mrs. E. S. Douty, Mrs. Allen Goodman, Mrs. H. B. Renfrow (with whom he made his home) and one brother, J. B. Ormond. Rev. B. L. Sutherland, his pastor, conducted the last services. We extend sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones.

Miss Aneita Cole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Cole of Como, Miss., was married to Rev. E. F. Tucker, Tuesday morning, April 7, at 11 o'clock, in the parlor of the parsonage at Como, Rev. W. W. Hartsfield, the pastor of the Methodist Church performing the ceremony. The young couple will make their home in the parsonage at Mt. Pleasant where Bro. Tucker is pastor. Both of these young people were graduates of the State University at Oxford, the groom being received into the North Mississippi Conference on trial at the last session of the Conference held at Starkville.

Rev. J. W. York, pastor at Carrollton, Miss., is finding that his people are responding in a heroic way to the program of the church. In a letter to the office he writes, "The paper is improving. If we could remember that the rank and file of our people are not philosophers, it would help us in reaching them, for from the average class of people is where we are getting our support for every worthy cause in life." We thank Brother York for five subscriptions and wish him and his people increasing success.

and hold such immense crowds of people for solid weeks, and command their individual attention to the end. Mayors, governors, congressmen, millionaires, milkmen, and hodcarriers, were by his words alternately convulsed with laughter and suffused with tears. His stern denunciations terrified the wicked and almost drove them to despair; his pathetic speech and impassioned eloquence subdued every heart; his tender sympathy brought tears to eyes unused to weeping. He was an outstanding illustration of the profound remark that all success in this world is a crime and must be expiated. The voices of detraction and obloquy followed this man wherever he went. Wicked men impugned his motives and aspersed his character. His enemies asserted that he preached for gold and not for love of souls. His whole public life contradicts such an indictment. Like the good Bishop in Victor Hugo's masterpiece, when Sam Jones' purse was full, he went among the poor. Nothing afforded him greater pleasure than an opportunity to relieve the temporal wants of the destitute and the unfortunate; and his timely aid has often caused the widow's heart to sing for joy. A braver soul than our lamented brother never walked this earth. He feared God, but was not intimidated by men. He denounced sin in the strongest terms, whether he spoke to respectable, self-conceited sinners or to the dregs of society and did not fear the face of any man.

In all his ministrations he was prompted by an ardent, passionate love for lost men. His sympathy knew no bounds. The forlorn and abandoned drunkard never sank so low in dissipation and crime that he did not find in Sam Jones a helper and friend. The gambler, the thief, the bum, the social outcast, flocked to hear him preach a gospel which flings the inspiration of hope to every sinner in the world. His scathing denunciations frequently enraged corrupt men in official circles, and fashionable, worldly minded women were indignant, as their sensitive, cultivated ears tinged under his sarcastic speech: but under all his harsh words and his thundering anathemas, men saw a great, loving, sympathetic heart which was yearning for their recovery from sin and its awful consequences. For over a quarter of a century the name of Sam Jones has been a household word; he moved like a colossal figure across the continent, preaching and lecturing to vast multitudes of listening, admiring men and women, and kindling a new hope in many a heart. He rests from his labors and his work will follow him.

When we shall stand at last in the light of the judgment throne, we shall see a numerous company brought to God through the instrumentality of this great preacher, who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the lamb.

JAMES HIGGINBOTHAM

Again the death angel visited our home and took from us our father, aged 67 years.

Funeral services were held at the Fanney home conducted by Rev. Ellis Smith, of Bastrop, his pastor, assisted by Rev. B. C. Taylor, of Mer Rouge. The remains were laid to rest in the Christ Church Cemetery, December 8, 1930.

Lonely the home, and sad the hour
Since our dear dad has gone;
But a brighter home than ours
In Heaven is now his own.

'Tis hard to break the tender chord,
When love has bound our heart;
'Tis hard, so hard to speak the word:
Dad, we must part.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is still;
A place made vacant in our home
That never can be filled.

His brokenhearted daughter,
HELEN.

Rev. WILLIAM JOHN O'BRYANT, 91 years old, superannuated minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. A. Johnson, 1229 31st Avenue, Sunday, noon at 12:10 o'clock, and was buried the following afternoon, at 3 o'clock, with services held at the home in order to permit the invalid wife, Mrs. Nancy Jane Haynes O'Bryant, to be present, and with interment in Evergreen Cemetery. The deceased, who was born November 14, 1838, at Florence, Ala., and who married Miss Nancy Jane Haynes at Courtland, Panola County, Miss., November 24, 1867, celebrating with her their 62nd wedding anniversary last year, was a prominent member of the North Mississippi Methodist Conference for many years. He joined that Conference in 1873, at Grenada, and through almost 50 years of active ministry, held pastorates in the greater number of the towns of North Mississippi, where he was known for his outstanding spiritual qualities and example of a beautiful life. Twelve years ago he transferred to the Mississippi Conference when he moved to Gulfport, and the last pastorate he held was at Pass Christian. He was a member of the First Methodist Church, Gulfport, and his beneficent presence was an inspiration to those who attended this church. He was constant in his attendance until a brief time ago, when failing health made it impossible for him to go. "Brother O'Bryant," as he was known to many on the coast, participated in the various religious services here and his prayers were a feature at the services in his own church, many coming to a realization of the fine values of life through his influence. Some three weeks ago, following a fall at the steps of his home, he went to bed, not to rise again, but his condition had not seemed critical and his passing was peaceful.

The deceased was a Confederate veteran, having served during the War Between the States in the 35th Alabama regiment.

Surviving Rev. O'Bryant, besides his wife, are two daughters, two sons, twenty-three grandchildren and eighteen great grandchildren. Relatives in Gulfport are: Mrs. J. A. Johnson, with whom Rev. and Mrs. O'Bryant have made their home for 35 years. Five Methodist ministers participated in the funeral services, Rev. W. J. Ferguson of Laurel, Rev. M. L. Burton of Gulfport, Rev. Otto Porter, presiding elder of the Seashore district, Rev. H. L. Daniels of Long Beach, and Rev. Claude Jones of Biloxi. The tribute paid the memory of the deceased attested the service he rendered to the church and humanity during his almost 50 years of pastoral work.—Gulfport Herald.

MEETING OF GALLOWAY MEMORIAL COMMISSION

The Galloway Memorial Commission met March 27 in Jackson, Miss. The members present were: M. L. Burton, J. G. McGowan, W. H. Watkins, Joseph A. Smith and D. M. Key.

On account of the discouraging economic conditions which obtain throughout the country, the commission decided to delay its plans for procuring funds with which to create a fitting memorial to Bishop Charles Betts Galloway. Another meeting of the commission will be held in May looking toward more mature plans for carrying out the will of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences relative to creating this memorial. It will probably be several months before the campaign for funds is launched.

Charles Betts Galloway, bishop of the Methodist Church, South, and pioneer in the political and social development in the State of Mississippi, is one of the State's most illustrious and best loved sons. He was great in mind, great in moral character, great in personal magnetism and courtly manner, great as an orator and preacher of righteousness, great as a civic and social reformer and great as a statesman and prophet of a new order. He has thousands of friends and admirers throughout the State who deeply appreciate his great contribution to the welfare and progress of Mississippi.

Woman's Missionary Society

All Communications for this Department should be addressed to Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, Fayette, Miss.

A missionary lesson of inspirational value was impressed upon the members of First Methodist Missionary Society by means of an interesting playlet entitled "Voice Inspires a Sermon," presented Tuesday afternoon.

The cast included Mrs. Olen Dowdie, Mrs. Kennon, a lady of leisure; Mrs. George Dowdle, Mrs. Brendla, a friend; Mrs. A. Butera, Mrs. Carlysle, a saleslady; Mrs. R. E. Savage, Mrs. Cardwell, Missionary Voice agent; Mrs. Englebert, Mrs. Feaster, a saleslady; Mrs. Swanzy, Celeste, the maid. Setting, Mrs. Kennon's living room.

The playlet was well rendered and conveyed very adroitly the power of will and application.

The occasion was the regular missionary program meeting of the society, the theme for the "Missionary Aim and Message for the New Day." The theme was discussed by Mesdames Battle Bell, E. B. Broome and S. L. Hollingsworth.

Rev. J. W. Ward led the devotional, using the story of the Prodigal Son to make plain the Fatherhood of God.

Mrs. H. A. Cox, the president, presided. Special musical feature was a vocal solo by Miss Becky Crawford, with Miss Stratton as accompanist, both talented students from M. S. C. W.

The playlet brought the afternoon to a close.

REPORT OF WORK DONE IN THE AUXILIARY AT LULA, MISS.

The Methodist Woman's Missionary Society has just completed the most successful quarter's work in the history of its organization. With thirty-five members dedicated to the advancement of His Kingdom, much has been accomplished for His glory. This first quarter has been filled with good things—the sick, the stranger, the needy have been looked after in His name. The finances have been an honor to him, the spiritual interest has deepened as shown by the number taking Bible and Mission study books. The splendid way in which the membership has stood back of the president and her staff has shown the spirit of co-operation and fellowship.

The excellent guiding, uplifting influence of our president, Mrs. H. T. Gaines, has crowned this quarter with success. Who can tell the value of such splendid meetings as we have had this year? How many weak hands and faint hearts have been strengthened to carry on the work of the Master?

MRS. GEO. W. MORGAN,
Publicity Superintendent.

FAYETTE MISSIONARY SOCIETY GIVES PAGEANT

On Sunday night, February 22, the Woman's Missionary Society of the Fayette Methodist Church sponsored a pageant based on the third chapter of the Mission study book, "Methodism and Kingdom Extension." Flags of other nations with the conquest flag raised high formed the decoration.

The first half of the program was given over to the production of character pictures as found in the book, who appeared as the reader gave a sketch of their missionary work. The latter part of program was based on the third chapter representing the different nations making an appeal to Southern Methodism in America to hear the cry of those who need the

Announcing A New Revival Songbook!
Spiritual Life Songs

An Introduction

In this collection of "Spiritual Life Songs" our Publishing House furnishes one hundred and forty-two of the best hymns of the Church. Through them the majestic voice of the Christian centuries is heard. They preserve the distinctly evangelical note of our Methodism. They express our devout and fervent spirit of worship, as well as our insistence upon a vital Christian experience and a life of Christian-like service. Here are hymns for the penitent, the backslider, and the victorious believer.

The General Conference Commission on Spiritual Life believes the worshipful use of these hymns will help to hasten the spiritual awakening for which we devoutly pray and earnestly labor.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

The series of Standard Training Schools for this year have been the best in their spirit and attitude of any series of schools we have ever held. The money was easier to raise and the folks who attended were more earnest in their work.

In the case of the Vicksburg school there was a marked increase in the attendance. This was made possible by the co-operation of the Tallulah, La., Methodist church. Brother Giles and his people were faithful in their attendance and added much to the life of the school by their participation. Twelve of them received credit.

Many of the workers who had the responsibility for carrying on the work participated in this series of schools. Several of these had never taken courses before. This made all of us feel happy about the future.

We are anxious for every Sunday school in the Conference to have a part in the celebration of Sunday School Day. We trust that there will be no school that does not give some kind of a program emphasizing Christian education to the people. Your Board stands in need of your aid in this matter and we can only appeal to those who know and love the work.

If there are two or three young women in the bounds of the Conference that would enjoy special training in camp life I have the opportunity of recommending them so that they can get half their expenses paid. Any who are interested may write to me immediately.

I wish to call attention again to the necessity of letting us know your plans about the Cokesbury work for the summer. Please do not delay this too long.

Pray for the work and workers.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Dear Young People: Our time the past few weeks has been so full of interesting experiences. We are sorry that we cannot report them all to you. The Easter observances among our young people throughout the Conference were varied and well attended. Many report Sunrise services, others special cantatas, pageants, worship programs, etc. Several Union meetings were held. I had the pleasure of attending the Ever-ready Union at Ruston District, where several other conference officers and guests from neighboring districts chose to visit. The attendance from chapters in the union was good. Enthusiasm for the summer assemblies is already running high throughout every gathering of our young people.

The Christian Education Conference held in Alexandria was well attended. We were so delighted with the presence of our young people's secretary from Nashville, Dr. Walter Towner. His presentation of our new program in the young people's division was eagerly received. A large delegation attended this division of the conference. Miss Sadie Mae Wilson, of the department of missions at Nashville, also spoke to this group. Elsewhere in the Advocate will appear a report of the conference in full.

Splendid reports are still coming in on the observance of Anniversary Day. Mrs. R. F. Douglas of Gilliam wrote such an interesting letter, giving in detail the program they presented and enclosing a picture of the Leaguers attired in the vestments they made especially for the occasion. Reverend Mr. Wier of Winnfield boosted the pageant presented by his Leaguers.

While in Monroe last week I secured a list of Anniversary offerings sent in to date. For your information I am giving you the churches that had remitted by April 6. Possibly your treasurer has failed to send yours in, or you are waiting until a later date to observe the day. Only forty-eight churches are in the list and we expect many more to report to us. Because of lack of space I am not listing the amount of the offering. With the exception of a few, most of them decreased over that of last year, but there is a wider observance and that is gratifying.

Offerings have come from Jones, McDonoghville, Gordon Avenue, St. Marks (N. O.), Plain Dealing, Springhill, La. Avenue (N.O.), Minden, Standard, Rayne (N. O.), Bossier City, Cotton Valley, Zwolle, Lake Charles, Sibley, Lafayette, Jonesboro, Many, Bastrop, First Church Monroe, Colfax, Montgomery, West Monroe, Mangum Shreveport, Mooringsport, Glenmora, Keithville, Delhi, Carrollton Avenue (N. O.), Ferriday, DeRidder, Haynesville, Gilliam, Collinston, Lake Providence, Greenwood, Algiers, Gueydan, Tallulah, White's Chapel, Pineville, Hammond, Downsville, Houma, Mansfield and Amite.

I am tempted to list all churches that have not given us any information at all concerning their plans for Anniversary Day, but, of course, I won't do that. We want you to present the day to your congregation and recognize the great work the youth of our church is promoting. A late date is certainly better than none at all. With our crowded programs it is sometimes difficult to use the time set by the Conference, but that should not cause us to omit the observance altogether.

In a few days your League president, pastor, or Sunday school superintendent will receive the large wall poster advertising the assemblies. Please see that this poster is given an important place in your church. Detailed information concerning the programs will be given through the Christian Education Bulletin and programs will be mailed to each church at a later date. Won't you consider, now, the importance of sending your best young people's leadership to each assembly? It is very necessary to the success of your own church school. We are planning a beneficial program of training, but it will not be successful unless your young people are there to receive it. Make every sacrifice to have them there. You will profit by it.

Sincerely your co-worker,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD,
Young People's Secretary.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

During the month of May we want to give a lot of our thought to Missions. This should be pay-up month with us. During this month we should finish paying out on our pledge for missions. No more important subject will be brought before your league than the subject of missions, so we hope you will consider the matter seriously. This is one of the great challenges that is coming to the church today. It is one of the greatest opportunities that has ever been given to the church. The doors of opportunity in the mission fields are wide open to us and the people are crying for our help. Will the church measure up to this challenging opportunity? What will your own local church do about it?

We would suggest that you have at least one good missionary program in your league during the month of May. Try to make it the outstanding program of the month. Ask those who are on the program to prepare their parts well and have all of your young people present when you give this program. Then ask every Leaguer to do his part in helping to raise your pledge for missions in full.

You might write the Publishing House and ask them to send you some tracts on the subject of missions. They will be glad to furnish you with these tracts and you can distribute them to your Leaguers. This information ought to help you in creating more interest in missions among your young people. We certainly do not want the interest in missions to perish for lack of knowledge concerning this great cause.

The time for our assembly will soon be here. The time will be June 15-19. We believe this is going to be the best assembly we have ever had. It should be because of the splendid assemblies which we have had in the past. You will want to atend this assembly. We would like to have every League and Sunday school represented and also the young people's missionary societies.

One good arguing point for our assembly is the fact that those who come one time want to come again. The young people have such a good time they want to come back again. It is a real opportunity for a young person to go to the assembly and meet other young people from all over the North Mississippi Conference. This is a great fellowship and it means a lot to our young people.

The faculty we have at the assembly is another point in our favor. Great care is exercised in selecting the faculty. The members of this faculty understand young people and they are in sympathy with them. The members of the faculty are also well prepared to teach the courses assigned them.

You can't afford to miss the assembly this year. Begin now to make your plans to be with us. Be sure and see that your church is represented.

Yours sincerely,

WM. L. ROBINSON.

SAUTHEASTERN GROUP, HATTIESBURG DISTRICT

The Southeastern group meeting of the Hattiesburg District, Mississippi Conference, held its first session in Richton, Miss., on March 26, 1931. The meeting was called to order by Rev. W. A. Terry, the president of the group. H. C. Castle of Lucedale led the devotions. "All Hail the Power" and "Jesus Calls Us" was sung. W. T. Griffin of Bonhomie led in prayer. H. C. Castle read the first Psalm and commented on portions of it. "There is a Fountain" was sung.

The following members of the group answered the roll call: W. T. Griffin of Bonhomie, A. J. Beasley of Eucutta, L. L. Roberts of Court Street, Hattiesburg, J. W. Loudenslager of Lucedale, Andrew J. Boyles of New Augusta, R. A. Allums of Petal, J. D. Ellis of Purvis, W. A. Terry of Richton, and the following members of the group were absent because of sickness: F. B. Ormond of Ellisville, and T. H. King of Heidelberg. The following clergymen were visitors: W. A. Hays, presiding elder of the district; R. H. Clegg, of Broad Street Church, Hattiesburg, and J. C. Ellis of New Augusta. There were also a large number of laymen present at the program, and enjoyed the day.

R. A. Allums of Petal brought a message to the group on "The Pastor As His Own Evangelist," reading from Ezekiel and Timothy as a starting point. His comments were helpful.

At the 11 o'clock hour L. L. Roberts of Court Street, Hattiesburg, preached a stirring sermon on "Soul Winning," reading the first chapter of St. John and other passages on the subject.

At the noon hour a very delicious luncheon was served to all present in the church by the Methodist ladies of Richton.

Before the afternoon exercises, H. C. Castle and W. A. Hays were called away on account of sickness.

The devotions in the afternoon was conducted by A. J. Beasley of Eucutta. The following songs were sung: "More About Jesus" and "Whiter Than Snow." The Rev. Mr. Beasley then led in prayer, read some verses from the Gospels and commented on the subject of "Being Alone With Jesus." "Take Time To Be Holy" was then sung and J. C. Ellis of New Augusta led in a special prayer for the sick of the group.

R. H. Clegg of Broad Street, Hattiesburg, brought a message to the group on "How To Bring Men to God." W. A. Terry of Richton then followed with a short message on the same subject.

A special collection was then taken by the president of the group for the expenses of the work of the group, and $1.15 was received and turned over to the secretary and treasurer of the group.

The group voted to go to Boyles' Chapel on the Eucutta charge June 25, 1931, for the second meeting of the year.

Then J. D. Ellis of Purvis discussed in a helpful way, "Kingdom Extension and Its Importance."

L. L. Roberts of Court Street, Hattiesburg, led in a round-table discussion, in which the work of Kingdom Extension and the New Orleans Advocate causes were stressed, hearing reports from the charges in the group.

Mrs. Shannon of Richton on being asked spoke a few words on Missions and the relation of the work of the Womans' Missionary Soicety with that of the church proper.

Resolutions of appreciation for the intertainment on the part of the people of Richton were adopted, and J. W. Loudenslager of Leakesville dismissed with prayer.

ANDREW J. BOYLES, Sec.

FROM WISNER, LA.

Dear Dr. Decell: Just a few words for our Advocate readers concerning the Wisner charge. I was appointed to Wisner in February, to succeed Bro. O. L. Tucker. Our stay in Wisner, so far, has been a pleasant one indeed. We have been royally received. The people have been very cordial. Last Wednesday evening, we were invited to appear at the Sunday school building, at 6:30. A wonderful banquet had been prepared. This was a delightful occasion.

Our pre-Easter revival services are heing well attended. Interest is high. The service for Easter Sunday was a union service in the Methodist church. The Baptist pastor delivered the message.

The attendance to regular services is increasing. The response toward our Mission Special has been good, but not as great as we would like.

Fraternally,

C. B. WHITE, P. C.

USED TO SUFFER
EACH MONTH

"I used to have severe headaches each month," writes Mrs. Henry Heape, of 248 Lincoln St., Savannah, Ga. "I suffered a great deal. The pain in my head seemed to run down the back of my neck. I felt like I was drawing back. I would get very nauseated and have chills. I would have to go to bed. My mother and my mother-in-law both had taken Cardui, and I knew it was good. I bought a bottle, and after I began taking it I felt stronger. I kept on taking Cardui, for I found that by doing so I could avoid the headaches. I have taken about eight bottles of Cardui."

SUPREME COURT DECISION

Decision of the Supreme Court of the United States reversing the decision of Judge Clark on the validity of the Eighteenth Amendment occasioned no surprise in temperance circles, says Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism.

"The Supreme Court pronouncement," Dr. Cherrington continued, "is strictly in line with all previous pronouncements by that tribunal. From the first the Supreme Court has held to the validity of the amendment and of laws enacted in pursuance of the amendment. There has never been a grain of comfort for the foes of prohibition in any Supreme Court decision.

"The principle of national constitutional prohibition is firmly implanted in our government. There is no loophole, no legal evasion, no juggling of the meaning of the amendment, which was designed to prohibit the beverage alcohol traffic.

"If those who oppose prohibition and who assert that they believe it is wrong in principle or impossible of enforcement wish to get rid of it, the way is clear. That way is the repeal of the amendment by the submission and ratification of a contra amendment. If they can muster sufficient strength in Congress to submit a repealer, and then persuade the requisite number of States to ratify that repealer, they would succeed in abolishing constitutional prohibition.

"Seeing the apparent hopelessness of such a course, they have hoped against hope that at this late day they might find a vulnerable point of legal attack heretofore unsuspected by the courts that have passed upon the regularity and validity of the amendment and the national laws supporting it.

"This decision, of course, will not stop the wets in their efforts to get rid of prohibition or to make it of no effect, through court decisions, adverse legislation, the destruction of enforcement efforts and every other possible means. It may be that, after years of unsuccessful efforts on their part, they may accept prohibition as a fact."

• Strongest

"Gerald suffered with his stomach and bowels until he was listless and weak," says Mrs. B. E. Geren, 822 West Main St., Oklahoma City, Okla.

"Now he's the strongest boy I know. I gave him California Fig Syrup because Mother used it. It increased his appetite, regulated his bowels, helped his digestion."

● Nothing could be more convincing than the way thousands of mothers are praising California Fig Syrup to show how it acts to build-up and strengthen headachy, bilious, half-sick, constipated children.

Your doctor will approve the use of this pure vegetable product as often as impure breath, coated tongue, listlessness or feverishness warn of constipation — or to keep bowels open in colds or children's diseases.

COATED TONGUE, BAD TASTE

"I suffered from heartburn and indigestion. My tongue would get coated, and I would have a bad taste in my mouth. I had gas pains, and if I belched it would be right bitter. My mother told me to try Black-Draught, which I did. After I had taken a few doses, I felt much better. The gas pains would stop, my mouth would feel clean, and my food would taste much better. I know that Black-Draught helped me."—Hubert Bailey, Gainesboro, Georgia.

Gospel; presented by the Young Women's circle. The program proved to be very helpful and inspiring. One special feature of the program was a reading, "Will You Go or Stay?" by Mary Elizabeth Hammett.

The Glee Club of the Fayette High School gave several songs, which added to the program.

There was a splendid attendance from all the churches in Fayette and the surrounding communities.

MRS. SIDNEY DARSEY,

W. M. S., NEW AUGUSTA, MISS.

The weekly meeting of the W. M. S. was held in the new Sunday School Annex, L. D. Bible class room, Tuesday afternoon, January 27, with a large crowd present. A very interesting missionary program had been arranged by the leader, Mrs. Andrew J. Boyles, who conducted the devotional and took the scripture lesson from the third chapter of Lamentations.

Opening song, "Jesus Calls Us." A selection was then read from the Missionary Voice, telling of the work of John Wesley Gilbert in Africa together with that of Bishop Lambuth, read by Miss Lizzie Dearman.

The oustanding feature of the program was a playlet, "Rejuvenating the Missionary Society," taken from the Missionary Voice. It was given by the members of the auxiliary, and was very entertaining as well as inspirational.

Mesdames C. A. Bonner, W. D. VanDevnor, George Dennis, Sr., Clyde Porter, W. L. Gallaspy, Wall Ellis and young son were visitors. Mrs. Bonner and Mrs. Ellis were added to the roll of membership.

The auxiliary voted to carry the same program as given and meet with the colored women of the town to help organize their society. This was done on Wednesday of the following week.

An enthusiastic crowd met at the colored Methodist church in the afternoon. They had advetised the meeting well, and many came from a long distance, bringing their song books with them. The meeting was opened with their familiar joyous singing. Mrs. Boyles then took charge of the program as outlined above, for the benefit of the colored friends.

Mrs. A. J. Ikerd, our president, then had Mrs. J. F. Ruffin to take the work in hand of helping them to organize their society. After explaining the plans and purpose of our work, she called for nomination of officers. They responded with willingness and enthusiasm, setting forth that they thought they should, if necessary, sacrifice to pay their ten cents a month and have their meetings twice a month.

They expressed their hearty appreciation of our assistance given them and promised to let us hear good reports from the work of their society.

DE RIDDER ZONE MEETING

Zone No. 5 of DeRidder district, held a meeting in DeRidder, Tuesday, March 10, Mrs. Joe Pailor of DeRidder presiding. The meeting was a splendid success, with the exception of the disappointment and sadness caused by the death of Mrs. Irvin (in Shreveport last Sunday night), who was to have given a talk on missions at this time. A prayer of sympathy for the family and friends was offered by Mrs. Sims. After the opening song, Mrs. W. R. Middleton spoke words of welcome and Mrs. Pearson responded.

The subject of the devotional was, "Loyalty Through Faith," and was given by Mrs. C. E. Roberts; prayer by Bro. J. F. Waltman. "Living for Jesus," by DeRidder choir.

The following subjects were discussed: "What I Would Expect As A Member of the Woman's Missionary Society," by Rev. H. E. Pfost of DeRidder.

"Why Woman's Missionary Society an Organization of the Church," by Rev. J. F. Waltman.

Echoes from the district meeting by Mrs. Malzacher.

Zwolle having 7 of her 10 members present received the banner for attendance, though they were closely contested by Pine Grove with 3 of her 6, and Merryville with 17 out of 21. All societies gave interesting reports. The next meeting will be held at Pine Grove. After singing "Blest Be the Tie," and prayer the meeting closed. Lunch was served at City Hall. Again DeRidder showed her wonderful hospitality and by her cordial manner drew one of the largest crowds since zone meetings have been organized.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY HELPS RURAL CHURCH

The New Hope W. M. S. is one year old, but we can see and feel the good that is being done throughout our society. Our membership is small—numbering only seven. We are on the St. Francisville charge in the Baton Rouge District. We meet every month, holding our business, devotional and social in the same afternoon in some of our members' homes. In these meetings we are learning the needs of our fellowmen more fully. We have all the superintendents and their committees at work, for truly we have a field ripe unto harvest.

We have organized the juniors into the Boys' and Girls' World Club; our primaries into a World Children's Circle; but have not completed the Young People's organization. We send delegates to our zone meetings and are expecting to be represented at our annual meeting in Baton Rouge.

REVIVAL AT FOREST, MISS.

Dear Dr. Decell: We have just closed one of the most satisfactory revivals in the church at Forest that I have attended. The services began on Wednesday night, March 18, and closed Sunday night, March 29. During the first week we had services only at night, but the last week at 8 in the morning as well.

Rev. J. H. Jolly, pastor of our Labranch Street church, McComb, did the preaching throughout the meeting to the great delight and spiritual benefit of all who came. Earnest, consecrated, and spiritually thoughtful, Brother Jolly brought us just the help we needed in these days of unrest and depression. The services at the early morning hour were unusually helpful and approached in spiritual intensity the services that some of us remember in former years.

Captain Leonard Van Egmond of Vicksburg led the song services in his usual delightful fashion and helped us in every way. Perhaps the most unusual feature of the meeting was a prayer meeting for men, conducted each afternoon in the business houses by Captain Van Egmond and attended at each service by an increasingly large number of business men. The captain's work with the children was very effective and his leadership of congregational singing was no less so. All of his solos were good, but two especially were outstanding: "The Ninety and Nine" and "The Great Judgment Morning."

Attendance at the services surpassed any former attendance at the Forest church, according to older members. At the morning hours, between seventy-five and a hundred school children attended the first half of the service and an equal number of adults were present for the entire service. We were very greatly helped by the presence and co-operation of the local pastors of the Presbyterian, Baptist, and Lutheran churches, Brothers Batte, Howard, and Hening, also our neighboring pastors, Brothers Raley, Snelgrove, and Baggett, while Brothers I. H. Sells, H. J. Oakley, and W. M. Sullivan worshipped with us at one service each.

Sincerely,

J. B. CAIN.

This Woman In 4 Weeks Lost 17 Pounds of Fat

Here's a letter written October 21, 1929, by Mrs. Fred Barringer of Lewistown, Montana, that ought to be read by every overweight woman in America.

"Gentlemen: I started taking Kruschen every morning as directed as I was very much overweight and wanted to reduce. I had tried going on a diet but would get so hungry that my diet would not last long, so I decided to give 'Kruschen Salts' a fair trial. The day I started to take them I weighed 256 lbs, and at present, which has just been four weeks, I weigh 239 lbs. And I must say, I feel better in every way, besides looking much better.

"May all large people, both men and women, who want to reduce in an easy way, give Kruschen Salts a fair trial. I am sure it will convince anyone."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts four weeks costs but 85c at your druggist's or any drug store in America. Take one half teaspoon in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning. To help reduce swiftly cut out pastry and fatty meats and go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar.

The Kruschen way is the safe way to reduce—Try one bottle and if not joyfully satisfied—money back.

WOMEN SHOULD LEARN USES OF MAGNESIA

To women who suffer from nausea, or so-called "morning sickness," this simple measure is proving a blessing. Most nurses know it and it is advised by leading specialists.

Prepare a small quantity of finely cracked ice—about a wineglassful. Pour over it a teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Sip slowly until the mixture is gone or you are entirely relieved. It is seldom necessary to repeat the dose to end sick stomach or any inclination to vomit.

Its anti-acid properties enable Phillips Milk of Magnesia to give immediate relief in heartburn, sour stomach, gas. Its mild, but effective laxative action assures regular bowel movement. Used as a mouthwash it helps prevent acid erosion and tooth decay during expectancy.

With every bottle of Phillips Milk of Magnesia, come full directions for its many uses. All drug stores have the 25c and 50c sizes. Demand the genuine, endorsed by doctors for over 50 years.

"BEST MEDICINE I HAVE EVER USED"

Only Remedy To Ever Have Done Me Any Lasting Good

Mrs. Lula Patterson

"I am glad to make this statemet in behalf of Miller's Herb Extract, formerly called 'Herb Juice'," says Mrs. Patterson, Birmingham, Ala. "This medicine has done me more good than anything I have ever used, and I have tried everything that promised relief with no results to speak of. When I began using Herb Extract I was underweight, and lost considerably in weight and strength, felt weak, nervous and badly rundown all the time. Each day I was in misery. I carried on with my work as best I could, just didn't want to give up, but it was agonies for me while I endured it. Friends knowing of my poor state of health, advised me to try a bottle or two of Herb medicine. They told me of numerous cases where it has actually brought health and strength to people when everything else had utterly failed to do any good. I started on the Herb medicine immediately. And to my surprise, I begun to improve rapidly and my continued use of this remarkable remedy has restored my health. I am free from constipation, bowels are regular, stomach is in fine condition. I sleep fine and eat hearty three times a day, have lots of energy; this means so much to me. I am actually gratified, beyond words to express, over my improved condition of health."

You don't need any pills with this medicine. It's a real medicine within itself, and guaranteed to give results.

A medicine you can take three or four bottles of without seeing any results is not much medicine. Miller's Herb Extract (known as Herb Juice) gives overnight results. Get it at your druggist.

The American Research Foundation reports that there are 232,000 church buildings in the United States worth $3,800,000,000. Property worth almost four billion is a very small item in the value of the Church. Only when the radiant glory of God is manifest in redeeming power in the remote rural chapel or magnificent city cathedral is the Church worth the cost of its building.

Dr. Robert F. Mehl, superintendent of the metallurgical division of the Naval Research Laboratory, has perfected means by which flaws in ten-inch steel may be detected. The ships of the Navy must now stand the test of the fierce Gamma ray: "The Lord searcheth all hearts and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts," said David; and Paul said, "The Spirit searcheth all things." It is the testing of the heart that counts. "Is thy heart right with God?"

Nationwide sympathy is extended to Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth and her six-year-old daughter, Paulina, in the death of Congressman Longworth. Speaker Longworth held the esteem of both parties in Congress and his death is mourned by people of all walks of life. During his burial services two airplanes were driven near enough to drop floral offerings from above. "Beauty shall be rained down out of the heavens" and James says, "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights."

Dr. E. P. Alldredge, Southern Baptist statistician, will report to the Convention which convenes in Birmingham, Ala., next month that in 1930 the Southern Baptists had a net gain in membership of 79,841, and that total contributions decreased approximately $2,000,000, which, he says, is "a catastrophe that never before took place in the history of Southern Baptist work." To the credit of their denomination the Southern Baptists have placed more emphasis upon personal expression than they have technical impression. If the practise of excluding other Christians from the Lord's Supper is not as popular today as of yore, evidently the promise that if one is immersed in water and once exercises faith in Christ he can never forfeit salvation regardless of conduct afterwards, continues to have its approval. We do not question but that Methodism's emphasis upon the inadequacy of any mere form of water baptism and the insufficiency of a once-profession-of-Christ and her advocacy of a personal and present experience of Christ expressing itself in continuous ethical and spiritual conduct makes a superior contribution to enrichment of faith and social progress.

THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIRTH OF BISHOP LINUS PARKER

The date imprinted on this issue of the Advocate is April 23. This is the one hundred and second anniversary of the birth of Bishop Linus Parker, who was born in Vienna, Oneida County, New York, April 23, 1829.

Born into a Christian home he was converted early in life. Of that happy experience he wrote, "God revealed Himself to my poor heart in my eleventh year. My faith has never been shaken in the truth and reality of the gospel since that clear and wonderful demonstration." He never united with the Church until after he came to New Orleans. He came to this city at the age of sixteen and immediately enrolled in the Sunday school and was a regular attendant upon the preaching services. In 1846 he united with the Poydras Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

For a time he was a bookkeeper in a mercantile store, but enlisted and went as a soldier to the Mexican war. Returning from the war he continued his work in the store and studied law in the offices of Durant & Horner. Soon, however, under a sermon preached by the celebrated William Winans at a session of the Annual Conference in Poydras Street, his call to preach was "fastened most strongly upon him." In March, 1849, he preached his first sermon in Algiers at Good Hope Chapel, and finished out the year as pastor. Thus began the fruitful ministry of an illustrious servant of Christ and His Church, who served as pastor, presiding elder, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate for twelve years, and bishop for three years. As his ministry began and was largely spent in New Orleans so it ended. On March 2, 1885, Bishop Parker preached his last sermon in the Louisiana Avenue Church and on the following Thursday "he ceased at once to work and live." "By the works he wrought, by the homes he brightened, the doubting he strengthened, the dying he comforted, Linus Parker wrote his name in letters of living light in the annals of New Orleans Methodism." It is fitting that we count the day of his birth a significant anniversary and as the paper he wrought so well for bears the date, we pause to give thanks for his life and labors.

DUTY AND BENEFITS OF GREAT BELIEVING

Unbelief is a damaging sin. Probably there is no more hurtful fallacy than that one has a right to believe anything he pleases, or to reject everything he wishes. Man is built for belief, he possesses the powers of faith and obedience and has no more right to reject the "Son of Righteousness" than he has to pluck out his eyes and deny the sun of the morning. Unbelief is the basis of society's moral dissolution.

For some years now we have had much discussion as to whether "creative experience" held prior authority over "factual belief." Without endeavoring to develop fine discriminations, or undertaking to discuss definitive differences, we make bold to assert that Christian experience is the conscious knowledge of Truth accepted. Children, or the untutored, may be unable to define terms or rationalize on religion, but they do not experiene saving faith by being uncertain of the person and power of Christ. They utilize the organs of belief in realizing Christian experience as they exercise physical organs in living. When they become able to reflect upon the facts of belief they no more find their Christian experience to contradict Christian belief than when they come to understand physiology they find their lungs to be iron or their hearts brass.

Those who waive aside all authority save that of "experience" must accord the cause of experience somewhat of authority. One doesn't by chance happen upon Christian experience and then find it optional as to whether he accepts the primary cause of experience. The fact of Christ and the truths of Revelation are the source of Christian experience and remain true whether man believes or experiences them or not. It is man's duty to "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ" and when he does, his experience confirms the Truth, but doesn't create Truth. If the truth of Christ and Revelation be questioned it is but required to "come and see" and to "taste and know that the Lord is good."

The benefits of believing the Great Truths of Salvation are written in letters of gold in the history of the race, and the world famishes for these ennobling benefits. The benefits of Christian belief cannot so easily be given to the world as by arbitrament of arms or forces of fiery fagot such beneficial uplift comes by the harder but higher method of persistent love and persuasive life. It is not a crescent but a Cross that will redeem the world. Belief and experience are joined together by God and should not be put

Why I Am a Protestant

BY REV. C. C. SELECMAN, D. D., PRESIDENT S. M. U.

(In a Forum of Religion held in Dallas, Texas, March 18, Dr. Selecman answered Clarence Darrow, who professes to he an agnostic. To read this aritcle is to be strengthened in the Faith.—Editor.)

It is my ambitious purpose to so candidly and convincingly set forth my reasons for being a Protestant that even those sincere friends who question the propriety and value of this Forum may not be altogether disappointed with its results, that believers may be confirmed in their faith, and that my honest doubters who sincerely desire the truth may be encouraged to persevere in this holy quest until, like Thomas, they can joyously exclaim, "My Lord and my God." That exclamation was the cautious verdict of a suspicious and honest sceptic.

Christianity thrives in the open sunlight. Like its divine founder, it ever stands reaching out a nail-pierced hand, saying: "Reach higher thy finger and behold my hands—and be not faithless, but believing." "Come and see," is the bold challenge of the disciple. There is no fear or shrinking from investigation. The universe is fire-proof. You can strike a match in it anywhere.

It will be my earnest endeavor to combine a positive argument with charity and tolerance. In fact, Protestantism is a religion of tolerance. Commenting on the faith of a Gentile, Jesus said, "Many shall come from the east and west and sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the Kingdom of Heaven." One can be positive without being a bigot. One can be charitable and tolerant without being shallow and evasive and colorless. One does not have to subscribe to a washed-out Christianity or a tentative creed in order to be tolerant.

From the outset, let us be mindful that religion which is the life of God in the soul of man, rests not upon cold logic and pure reason alone. It is founded upon experience and love. Obedience is the organ of Spiritual knowledge. One may feel God's presence and do His will 'till the Absolute Imperative within him rises up and speaks as with a living voice. Jesus was misunderstood, misrepresented and crucified. Yet He triumphed by sacrificial love. Across the centuries he has been misunderstood and misrepresented by friends and foes. Yet He conquers by love shed abroad in human hearts by the Holy Ghost. Experience is the crowning evidence.

The situation here tonight as I see it is this: Here are three religions, or rather, three interpretations, of religion, of duty, diety and destiny. There is much in common between Protestant and Catholic whether Greek or Roman. Our differences lie not so much in essentials of faith as in other matters such as prayer to the Virgin Mary, the Authority of the Church and the Pope, traditions, images and an ecclesiastical overlordship.

Protestants have a rich common heritage with the Jews. In many of our churches, every Sunday, a passage is read in public worship from the stately literature of the Old Testament history, prophecy or the Psalms.

We can not go far with the agnostic because he is not going anywhere. He is on a train that came from nowhere and is bound for nowhere. And there are no signal lights and no conductor. Usually I am told it has a good dining car and a well-stocked refrigerator. Its schedule is "Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die." The passengers are all dressed up and nowhere to go.

Protestant as Distinguished from Roman Catholic

To begin with, I was born a Protestant, and I do not pass lightly over that fact. When I came to the inquiring restless period of life and looked a little into church history, I was convinced that for the first two centuries the Christian Church was neither Roman Catholic, Greek Catholic nor Protestant, as we use those terms tonight. That apostolic church was made up simply of congregations, of believers where the word of God was preached and the sacraments administered. That was a very simple organization. They ate their bread with gladness and singleness of heart. Such was their love for each other that they even held their property for the common good. This highly organized ecclesiasticism we have today with ponderous systems of doctrine, complex organizations, orders and ranks, processions and pilgrimages, is a surprising outgrowth of simple Apostolic Christianity, whose founder was a teacher of love, who wore a seamless robe and spoke in such simple terms that the common people heard him gladly. As I read the history, the church in Rome of the second and third centuries, living in the atmosphere of political power and authority, and in close contact with paganism, incorporated into itself certain foreign and non-Christian elements. The pope became an ecclesiastical Augustus Caesar. Cardinals and Archbishops held lesser authority. Ambitious men grasped for both temporal and spiritual power, and forgot Jesus' example of humility and service. They sat on thrones, held great sway over obsequious followers, became impatient of any opposition or non-conformity and built dungeons and lighted fagots for any who hesitated to bow to Rome. In addition to this, the Church at Rome carried over and incorporated many pagan customs and institutions such as virgin orders and the celibate priesthood. Not by the wildest stretch of the imagination can we fancy a highly civilized man who had hitherto known nothing of either the New Testament or the Catholic Church, examining the gospels and epistles and evolving therefrom any hint of the pomp and authority of the Papacy and the priesthood. The Reformation had to come, for men were beginning to say in Europe what they are saying in some parts of Central and South America today: "If this is Christ's plan for His Church; if the Papacy represents Jesus; if Catholicism as it is known to us in history is all Christianity has to offer—then lovers of liberty, light and love must look elsewhere." Nearly a century before the Reformation, Savanarola saw this and said, "In the primitive church the chalices were of wood and the prelates of gold; in these days the chalices are gold and the prelates wood."

Much of the irreligion in the world today is due to the fact that we have added so much excess baggage to the simple program of Jesus. To change the figure, the barnacles are slowing up the progress of the ship. My Protestantism suggests a simplicity of faith and life in which personal values are exalted and institutional values are held as secondary. I am not pleading the perfection or infallibility of Protestantism. It should be forever dissatisfied with itself and forever striving to exalt and realize the living Christ. Why was Martin Luther a reformer? Because the Church of the Sixteenth Century had lost the spirit of Christ, and was dominated by a priesthood that claimed temporal as well as spiritual authority, that put an office and an institution between man and God—that took the Bible from the laity and sold indulgences and collected money for praying for the dead and announced a scheme of purgatorial suffering that made it easy to appeal to sorrowing and aged parishioners. If Protestants knew more of the history of the reformation, they would be more firm in their position. Many are woefully ignorant of their history. A student is said to have answered thus concerning Martin Luther. Question: "Did Martin Luther die a natural death?" Answer: "No, Professor, he was excommunicated by a bull."

Protestantism emphasizes an open Bible for the laity, the priesthood of believers, direct access to God by confession and prayer, salvation by faith, freedom in worship. No protestant edict restrains me from worshiping in any church or cathedral. In Cologne, Milan and Florence I have meditated and prayed at Catholic altars, not helped much by the Priest who intoned Latin phrases, nor by candles or images; but I felt a mystical fellowship with believers who spoke the dear name of Jesus. In Rome I have mused and marvelled and worshiped, but I did not kiss the toe of St. Peter nor the thumb of the Pope. Last Easter I slipped unnoticed into an early mass of the Catholic Church in a Texas city. In a little town in Italy we took communion in a Church of England service; in Greenville, Texas, we communed with the Christian Church and in Massachusetts with the Baptists, in company with a Congregational minister. At Lausanne I was quite ready to commune with all Christ's followers assembled there, including Greek Catholics, in the World Conference on Faith and Order. One can be more truly Catholic by being a Protestant.

If time permitted, I would like to show you that in those lands where Protestantism predominates, as England, Sweden, Holland and the United States, there is a marked difference from those lands where either Roman Catholicism or Greek Catholicism predominates, such as Mexico, Spain, Poland, Austria, Russia. If a tree is known by its fruits, you have the tests ready at hand.

With the Jew, a Protestant can walk hand in hand through the Old Testament, which came to us through the great race that has showed such a capacity for God; such a genius for religion. As a college boy I lost a debate when I took the position that the Jews have influenced civilization more than Anglo Saxons, but I have always believed in my cause. The Jews' great announcement was, "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one God." From the jargon of the polytheism with all its attendant superstitions and immoralities, came the clear voice of the Jewish prophets, "God is one God;" "The Great I AM." Later they added, "He is a holy God. His throne is founded on justice, and he is a merciful God. Like a father, he pitieth his children. His highest demand is to do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with thy God." Great souls pass with stately tread across the pages of the Old Testament. Abraham, God's friend; Moses, the lawgiver; Isaiah, the prophet; Daniel the Statesman. Under the spell of the divine presence these men grappled with the elementary problems of human life and destiny, and expressed themselves in the language of their day in a literature that refuses to die through cynics sneer and sceptics question.

It has been urged that they did not know science. They did not speak of science. They spoke of God. If they had spoken in scientific terms they would have been out of date long ago. Corpernicus, Galileo, Darwin, Einstein come and go, but this Bible which is a book of religion and not a book of science, holds its place. Say what you will of the literary from Gen. 1, the world has not yet heard a word that transcends that bold assertion, "In the beginning God created—"

To assert that the universe is more vast than those Hebrew seers surmised, is to argue for a greater God. Dr. Millikan, the most eminent scientist in the United States today, says, "Science has laid the foundation for a new and a stupendous advance in man's conception of God." This house in which you sit required a builder. If it were ten million times as big and ten million times as old, it would be unable to build or explain itself.

The sceptic says he can not picture God and hence can not believe. Well, pictures are quite useful in a kindergarten, but they are not necessary to a mature mind. It is a mark of mental and spiritual immaturity to have to see a picture to grasp an idea. In a book on Adolescence, by a noted doctor, it is stated that as a child grows up it must make three adjustments. First, to society, second, to the family and third to the infinite. "It is useless," says the learned author, for one to consider himself an adult, while he is still pretending to himself that he does not know whether there is a God. He is far from maturity." This may explain what the Psalmist meant when he said, "The fool hath said in his heart, 'There is no god'."

One may stumble through the Old Testament objecting to the serpent in the garden, Lot's wife, Balaam's ass, Noah's ark and Jonah and the whale, and miss the whole message of creation and the decalogue, and the sublime philosophy of life imbedded in its imperishable literature. Why should anyone be surprised that an ass should speak? If that is an ancient miracle, the modern miracle would be for an ass to keep still! We should hesitate to set limits to the power of God when we behold the miracles wrought by man. Yesterday I sat in my home and heard a phonograph record over the radio. Both are miracles of man. That great American philosopher, Bowne, calls scepticism the philosophy of prejudice and confusion. The agnostic challenges all who have found the Bible a book of inspiration, comfort and power; who have heard the voice of God, felt His presence, and seen His glory filling the universe; who have found rest and peace in Christ as Savior and Friend. He says to one and all, "I have not found light and life and love in the Bible. I have had no vision of God, no sense of His presence. I know nothing of that love that passeth knowledge of Christ in the heart, the hope of glory. His yoke has not rested my restless spirit. He has not come in to sup with me. Therefore, you are all deceived or mistaken." It is as if an astromer on Mt. Wilson should say, to a man near him, "I see a blazing star yonder in the azure depths of space," and the sceptic turning his unaided vision to the heavens, should scoff and say, "I see nothing. You are mistaken." There is a realm where unaided intellect can not work; where human devices break down.

You can not measure Shakespeare's genius with a yard stick, nor carry one of Beethoven's Symphonies in a lard can, nor weigh Einstein's theory on the stock-yard scales. You have never seen gravitation, nor ether, nor electricity, nor an electron. But we live in this realm by faith. An English cynic traveling in Syrian desert with a Moslem guide, noticed that he spread his prayer rug morning, noon and night and knelt in prayer. "To whom are you praying?" he inquired. "To Allah," was the answer. "Have you ever seen God?" inquired the sceptic. "No," was the answer. "Have you heard Him?" "No." "Have you touched Him?" "No." "Have you smelled him?" "No." And they journeyed on. One morning when they were breaking camp the Englishman saw tracks in the desert sand and exclaimed, "A camel passed this way in the night." "Did you see him?" in quired the guide. "No." "Did you hear him?" "No, but there are the camel's tracks." "Ah," said the guide, "you see tracks in the sand and announce a camel has been here, but you can not see the footprints of Allah in the heavens above and the earth about you." If only we have eyes to see, ears to hear, every bush is ablaze with God; every mountain is smoking with his presence; every breeze is laden with angel choruses, and every star leads to Bethlehem.

Spencer said, "We are ever in the presence of an infinite and eternal energy from which all things proceed." Edison says an infinite intelligence pervades the universe. Emerson discourses on the over soul. The Bible clothes these vague conceptions in more definite and adequate language and reveals an infinite good and wise deity whose purpose is manifest in the marvelous law and order and beauty of the universe. It is as easy to conceive that Milton's "Paradise Lost" or Shakespeare's "Hamlet" came without the brain and pen of the author as to conceive a world of law and order and beauty without an adequate first cause.

This faith not only satisfies the human intellect and the human heart, but it becomes the foundation for great philanthropies and enduring civilizations. Believers and not doubters have builded colleges, hospitals, orphanages and homes for the aged. The Carpenter's Son has lifted many a shelter above the unfortunate. Behold what a change of climate has swept across the world since he breathed his benefaction upon his followers!

A friend who was recovering from an operation at Mayo's descrbies his emotions when hearing one morning the chimes in one of the clinic buildings. They were playing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." Upon hearing this story, I mused upon the fact conquering kingdom of spiritual things. Science is crowning Him. Philosophy is crowning Him. International relationships are crowning Him. "And He shall reign forever and ever."

New Testament—Historical Evidence

The eminent scholars of our day accept the historical trustworthiness of the New Testament and place the four gospels in the first century. They are the simple record of the events in the life of Jesus. After making allowance for any inaccuracies and glosses, one is constrained to believe that the person whose life is presented is as much a historic person as Caesar or Alexander. We know more about Him than about them. No ancient history is better than this. If this is not history, we have no knoweldge of the past. If this record be rejected, we are left to account for the New Testament as the product of a few obscure men who invented the one perfect life and told it with such manifest simplicity and naturalness as to elicit faith and change the history of succeeding centuries.

Experience

More important than all this is the witness of experience. After the crucifixion all the disciples were doubters. Some one has said, "They doubted that we might not doubt." To one group after another, Jesus came. Lastly to Saul of Tarsus, he appeared to overcome his doubts, conquer his will and change the current of his life. Saul became Paul, the missionary, who suffered bruises, lashes, imprisonment, ship wreck an finally death for Jesus. He said, "For me to live is Christ, to die is gain." And, "I know whom I have believed, for he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." That same thing has gone on from that day to this. It happened yesterday in some of our cities and villages. It will happen tomorrow—yea, when you and I are gone and forgotten, Jesus will walk the streets of our cities, and stand by the sea calling men to a better life.

There are people in this hall tonight to whom Jesus is more real than any other person in the universe.

Tonight you have heard Mr. Darrow, a man of national reputation, great platform ability and rather charming personality treat lightly, almost flippantly, after the fashion of an Ames and Andy performance, the great truths of religion. He has gone through the Bible from Genesis to Jesus and has missed the whole barn door. He has dealt with the snake, the rib, the ark, Balaam's ass, a herd of swine, and such non-essential matters and has missed the creation glory, the doctrine of one God, the decalogue, the ancient prophet's plea for justice, the 23rd Psalm, the sermon on the mount, the golden rule, John's Gospel of love, Paul's message of a conquered grave, and the doctrine of human brotherhood that pervades the Book like a bracing atmosphere. He has laughed at this book but presented no substitute. He has made a joke of this Bible which has become the foundation of morality, the mudsill of civilizations, the fountain head of philanthropies, the guide to youth and the comfort and hope of the aged, and offered you in its stead an empty negation or a jocular interrogation point.

He would ask you to discard George W. Truett, Carl C. Gregory, Bishop Lynch, Bishop Moore, and Rabbi Lefkowitz, as dealers in dreams or idle tales. What does he offer? Some sarcastic comment on snakes, bedbugs and Balaam's ass! Take Dallas for example; what has doubt builded here? I can not tell. I know what Faith has builded. Three hospitals, Baptist, Methodist, Catholic; two orphanages, a great school of medicine, a school for young women, a crippled children's hospital, two homes of rescue for unfortunate girls, and a university of which this city, I hope, is in a measure proud. Will you rob us of a constructive force like religion and give us nothing in its stead? Will you take from the young their moral guide, rob the strong of the inspiration of their daily toil, quench the hope in the heart of those whose feet approach the river of death and offer an empty negation in its stead? Such a doctrine is a comfort to radicals and reds who deny all authority and hate law. It would make of our city, or any city, a rendezvous for outlaws where bootleggers sit as kings with gunmen for hired lieutenants and a red flag for a symbol.—Texas Advocate.

WHEAT AND CHAFF

By Rev. W. A. Hays

A delightful and saintly son of the soil remarked concerning a brother whom he recently heard preach: "He certainly is a powerful preacher. He has a tremendous voice." But if noise is power, the beating of drums, the blaring of horns and the jangling of bells tell of vast volumes of energy gone to waste. There are speakers who give the impression that the bars were left down and the calves, a thought, escaped with a great bellowing. Far more effective is the speech of one whose pent-up thought and emotions seem to leak as from a reservoir of fullness and richness. The plus mark is the sign of personal power. The reserves need to be developed and conserved. The world is not fed from show windows, but from hidden granaries and warehouses. The wise take oil in their vessels with their lamps.

LET IT GO

If you're worrying over what
You thought you'd surely do,
And feeling all upset and glum
Because your plans fell through;
Then why not give the slip to woe?
Forget it—let it go.

If you envision storms ahead
And rocky roads and steep,
And dreams of dangers on the heights
And fear the dreamed-of deep;
Pray, what's the use to worry so?
Forget it—let it go.

Don't struggle with the ghost-like past,
Nor future tribute pay;
Just love and work as best you can
Within the present day;
Refuse a place for ill to grow;
Forget it—let it go.

Don't judge by ev'ry ache and pain
Your dissolution's near;
The undertaker's chiefest aids
Are thoughts of gloom and fear;
If how to cheat the grave you'd know;
Forget it—let it go.

Have faith in God and do His will,
And live for others' good;
Let love abound for Christ the Lord,
And for the brotherhood;
If aught appears to check its flow,
Forget it—let it go.

An ecclesiastical oddity—(I won't say absurdity)—A Methodist preacher prating about Lent.

A marked contrast—The little the average church gathering really knows about the "World Court," and other international political problems, in comparison with the cock-sure speeches and resolutions of said gatherings.

A suggestion: That the interracial brethren who are organizing the ladies into groups opposed to lynching make an effort to organize the colored sisters into anti-rape and anti-murder societies, and thus work at the problem from both ends of the line. Some of the rank and file of the church believe the better method is to work at the heart of the problem, seeking to cleanse the fountain of life and conduct by living and proclaiming the gospel of Jesus Christ, which is God's power unto salvation, and which inspires wholesome respect for and obedience to all law. But living an earnest, consecrated, self-forgetful Christian life, or being a worthy minister of the message of salvation, is not as spectacular as reforming, crusading, or propagandising. And, truth to tell, is sometimes not as immediately remunerative; and dabblers will dabble.

Man goes through life heart foremost, and it is easy to go where the heart pioneers. He gladly follows the lead of his strongest affection. This is true if he be philosopher or fool. The entire life scheme is organized about the affections. The human problem is ever the problem of the human heart. "Out of the heart are the issues of life." With its multiple superficial problems, which are only symptomatic, the world needs nothing as much as it needs the gospel of redemption and salvation by the power of the Holy Spirit, as the only cure for its radical malady. Not the plastering schemes of petty piddlers, but the Great Physician who is able to make the life every whit whole, is the need of the hour. The Kingdom is coming to the degree that individuals are crowning Christ within as Lord of lords and King of kings. The world's great need at home and abroad calls loudly for genuine evangelism. "Art thou a master in Israel, and knowest not these things?" "Verily, I say unto you, except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

He had just returned from church after hearing Dr. Gushman preach on "The psychological Inclusions and pragmatic value of the evangel," when his eight years old hopeful plied him with the question: "Daddy, what's a word?" He immediately answered: "A word, my son, is an inflated baloon, signifying the absence of thought."

HUMBLE DUTIES

It may not be for me to do
The things the world calls great;
To preach as bishops ought to preach,
Or steer the ship of state,
Or fly the ocean like Lindbergh,
In gamble wild with fate.

But I can do the little things
That occupy my days,
And greatness put in kindly deeds
In many minor ways,
And prove the truth in joyful heart
That humblest service pays.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH

The Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has just closed its sixty-first session. The Conference convened in the new church at Lecompte at 9:30 o'clock, Tuesday morning, April 14, and came to a close at noon Wednesday, April 15.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, D.D., presiding elder, presided throughout the Conference and did it with great ease and efficiency. D. B. Boddie was elected secretary and D. F. Anders as assistant. The attendance was unusually good. All the pastors were present and a goodly number of laymen from all over the district. The spirit of the Conference was good from the beginning to the close. Every one seemed to enjoy every minute of their stay in Lecompte, but who wouldn't with such an interesting session and the way the good pastor and his wife and the people of Lecompte entertained us? Nothing was left off that could be thought of to make everybody have a good time!

Rev. R. M. Brown, presiding elder of the Ruston District and a former pastor of the church at Lecompte, preached Tuesday night, and did it with ease and power. Truly, he is a good preacher. Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, our own bishop, preached at the 11 o'clock hour on Wednesday and dedicated the new church building. This was a great service and the house was packed. People came from far and near. The bishop preached in his usual good way and brought a great message on the Scripture text, "This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven."—Genesis 28:17. The congregation at Lecompte have done themselves a great credit in the erection of this most excellent and beautiful church and of being ready to present it to God without debt within one year of its completion.

The Conference licensed to preach Hugh Buchannan McCann of Pineville, who is now serving as pastor of the Holloway work. Rev. Henry Arherry Rickey, son of Rev. and Mrs. H. W. Rickey of Abbeville, La., was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

The Conference elected the following delegates to the Annual Conference, which meets this fall in Monroe: T. W. Holloman, Alexandria; J. F. Schell, Washington; F. P. Butler, Opelousas; Mrs. O. E. Graut, Boyce; Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, Natchitoches; W. H. Jones, Lecompte; C. B. Rogers, Evergreen; Mrs. D. B. Boddie, Pineville; Alternates, Mrs. A. S. Lutz, Alexandria; Leon Campbell, Barbeck; Mrs. L. C. Wilson, Boyce; Mrs. J. F. McGowen, Boyce; Mrs. W. I. Townsen, Boyce; Mrs. W. A. Poimheouf, Elizabeth; Mrs. T. E. Brown, Oakdale; Mrs. Alice Ryder, Pineville.

J. F. Schell, Washington, was elected district lay leader with E. B. Rogers, Pineville, and Leon Campbell, Barbeck, associates.

The Conference unanimously accepted the invitation from the Opelousas congregation to meet with them for the 1932 session.

D. B. BODDIE, Secretary.

CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE, MAY 4-5

NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The District Conference of the Newton District met at, and was royally entertained by, the Methodist church at Forest, Miss., on April 14 and 15, J. B. Cain being the pastor-host.

This conference has been characterized by some as being one of the most wholesome and spiritual they have ever attended. Certainly the spirit of the conference was excellent, and there was an attitude of spiritual expectancy that did not altogether go unrewarded.

There were twenty-eight ministerial members of the conference present, including every pastor in the district, besides probably a score or more visiting ministers. There were at least eighty lay members of the conference present, besides numerous visitors, both local and from a distance.

Bishop Collins Denny and Presiding Elder H. A. Gatlin presided over the conference with grace and ease, and the business was conducted rapidly and smoothly.

The conference was opened with a devotional service led by Brother Gatlin, which centered around the great passage of Scripture, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." The other opening devotional services were led by W. L. Blackwell, J. W. Thompson and R. E. Raley.

Bishop Denny stirred the depths of many souls by his three great sermons from the texts: "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men"; "They have taken away my Lord, and I know not where to find him;" and "The son of man has come to seek and to save that which was lost."

Bishop Warren A. Candler, senior bishop and president of the Mississippi Conference for the last quadrennium, who is ill at the Wesley Memorial Hospital in Atlanta, was remembered both in the closing prayer offered by W. J. Ferguson and by instructions given the secretary to convey a message of love and sympathy to him on behalf of the conference.

A resolution, presented by P. L. Blackwell, was adopted, pledging loyal support to the Eighteenth Amendment, both in the pulpit and out of the pulpit. Stirring speeches were made for the cause of Prohibition by Dr. J. M. Sullivan, W. J. Ferguson, and Fred. T. Barnett.

Many and various were the claims of our great Church that were presented to the conference. B. L. Sutherland, Conference Director of Superannuate Endowment, presented that claim; J. C. Chambers and O. C. Hull, Conference Executive Secretary and Extension Secretary, respectively, presented the work of the Board of Christian Education; Dr. D. M. Key and Dr. G. F. Winfield, president and associate president of the Millsaps-Whitworth College System, spoke of the great work of our colleges both scholastically and religiously; J. E. Gray, a member of the Conference Publishing Committee, plead for an increased subscription list to the New Orleans Advocate, that this great organ of our Church may be placed in more and more homes; W. D. Hawkins, Conference Missionary Secretary, urged full payment of the Kingdom Extension Offering and of all benevolences in general; likewise did Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference lay leader, and P. L. Blackwell, District lay leader; Fred. T. Barnett, Associate Secretary of the General Hospital Board, forcefully presented the ministry of healing and the work of the Golden Cross, which work was further emphasized by W. M. Williams, chaplain at the State Sanatorium, and by H. E. Raley, Conference Director of the Golden Cross; J. G. Snelling, superintendent of the Memorial Mercy Home in New Orleans, and J. L. Sutton, superintendent of the Child Home Finding Society in Jackson, presented the work of their institutions; J. W. Sells, manager of the Seashore Methodist Assembly outlined the first summer program of that organization, and Miss Jack Wall, district secretary of the Epworth League, spoke concerning the work of the Epworth Leagues.

The conference unanimously expressed, by rising vote, appreciation to Brother Gatlin, in this the concluding year of his quadrennium on the Newton District, for the faithful and excellent work that he has done by unceasing toil, labor, and consecration. Brother Gatlin responded to this vote of appreciation with gracious words.

The conference passed the characters of S. J. Tubby, Jacob Dansby and W. O. Mapp, local elders. The conference passed the characters and renewed the licenses of the following local preachers not in elder's orders: R. H. Stevens, A. A. Kelley, Albert Collins, J. H. Miller, W. B. Graham, S. J. Mayo, Morelle Wells, E. M. Lane, J. H. Phillips, Jack Flowers, W. O. Harvey, and M. M. Caver.

Co-operation was pledged by the conference, either by direct word or implication, to the following great causes of our Church: Epworth League Anniversary Day, Epworth League Summer Assembly at Whitworth, June 8-12; Sunday School Day; Church College Day, fifth Sunday in May; Golden Cross Enrollment, May 10-17; Memorial Mercy Home, second Sunday in May; Superannuate Endowment Fund; completion of Kingdom Extension Offering and of all benevolences; and an extensive campaign in behalf of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, to be completed not later than May 15.

The District Licensing Committee was elected as follows: H. A. Wood, A. J. Davis, J. L. Carter and Geo. H. Jones, and the following district officers were confirmed: R. J. Knoblock, Golden Cross director; P. L. Blackwell, district lay leader; G. W. Mars and E. E. Deen, associate lay leaders.

Delegates to the Annual Conference were elected as follows: W. A. Davenport, W. A. Ellis, G. W. Mars, R. C. Pugh, O. C. Hull, P. L. Blackwell, J. L. Summers, W. H. Jones, J. W. Abney, P. C. Alexander, Mrs. J. L. Carter, R. J. Knoblock, Mrs. H. A. Wood, Mrs. W. J. Ferguson and Miss Grace Gibson. Alternate delegates were elected as follows: W. S. Corley, W. H. Mars, S. M. Jones, and E. F. Lane.

The Conference adjourned, having voted to accept the invitation given to it by the Bay Springs church to meet in Bay Springs next year.

NOTES FROM RUSTON DISTRICT

Greetings to the Advocate family from the Ruston District. As a district we have nineteen pastoral charges, one orphanage, of which Rev. R. W. Vaughan is superintendent, a presiding elder, and a bishop. The bishop does not live in our district, but can reach it within an hour from his home in case of emergency.

* * * *

Our presiding elder, Rev. R. M. Brown, and Judge Walker, have been doing a great work in the district by holding institutes. Institutes have been held at Indian Village, Clayborn, Athens and Downsville. Subscriptions or pledges were taken and the interest and response of the people were very gratifying. Other institutes will be held at Alabama on the Bernice charge on the fifth Sunday with dinner on the ground. Brother Moreland is advertising the meeting and expects a great crowd. The same kind of meeting is being planned for Bird's chapel on the third Sunday in April and at Oak Grove on the Gibsland Charge, April 25th.

* * * *

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs will preach at the Ruston District Conference during the morning session on May first. Rev. A. W. Townsend, one of our young preachers of the district, will also preach during the conference. The conference will be held at Jonesboro.

* * * *

Rev. John S. Henley, our pastor at Jonesboro, reports that they have finished the book, "Methodism and Kingdom Extension," and is putting on the every-member canvass.

* * * *

Rev. Cleanth Brooks, of Haynesville, Rev. R. H. Staples, of Marion and Downsville, and Rev. J. L. Cady, of Choudrant, are making fine records on the benevolent cause, according to the elders' report.

* * * *

A week of revival services was held recently at Marion. A. W. Townsend, of Farmerville, did most of the preaching. The writer visited the meeting one night and preached on "The More Excellent Way." The music furnished by Rev. Townsend and the people of Marion was especially enjoyed by the congregation. Mrs. Hysell sang a solo; "I Have Found That His Yoke Is So Easy," which was received with joy.

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. H. Wilson, who have been faithful members of our church at Bienville, have moved to Plain Dealing, La. They have been a great blessing to the church there and to the Ruston District.

* * * *

Rev. Bud Robinson has been preaching in this section. He preached at the Gibsland church on March 31, to a splendid crowd who had gathered from North, South and West of here. There were more than thirty hands raised for prayer. "Uncle Buddie" is one of the most remarkable preachers of this century. He has traveled over a million miles by rail and many thousands by automobile and has seen scores of sinners converted, backsliders reclaimed and believers sanctified. He does not believe that the days of revivals are past.

THE HOME-STRETCH AT CENTENARY COLLEGE

Centenary College is nearing the mid-term examinations, the last before the finals and the closing of the 1930-31 year.

From the standpoint of enrollment and of earnest work and things accomplished, the 1930-31 year will go down in the history of the old college as one of its most successful years. The total enrollment for the year is 981—658 being in the long session, and 270 for the Summer School. The increase over 1929-30 is 44, and that too in the year of the greatest depression of our country.

The present week is a Red Letter one. Bishop Arthur J. Moore has been preaching every morning at 11 o'clock to the faculty and student body. The bishop's addresses are the best for the last ten years. Great interest is shown upon the part of the students and faculty. More than seventy-five responded to the appeal of the bishop at the Thursday morning service.

Sir Herbert Brown Ames, for seven years financial director of the League of Nations, and for many years member of the House of Parliament of Canada, spoke to the departments of history, government and economics at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, and addressed the students and faculty Wednesday night. The encouraging feature about it was that at least half of the student body crowded into the chapel to hear the discussion of a topic affecting world affairs. They showed profound interest in a theme that one would not ordinarily expect college students to be sufficiently interested in to give up outside attractions for.

During the same hour Wednesday evening the North Louisiana Chemical Society held its meeting in one of the large class rooms. Chemical students are eligible for membership in this society. Interest and grasp of the subjects under discussion upon the part of the students was the topic of most complimentary remarks by scientists and specialists in attendance upon this group meeting.

The week closes with a gathering in of high school students from Louisiana, Texas, and Arkansas for the annual oratorical debating, and musical contests and track and field events. A large delegation of these young people will be on the campus Friday and Saturday.

The program for the commencement exercises has been practically completed. Dr. J. N. R. Score, pastor of the St. Paul's Methodist Church, Houston, Texas, will deliver the commencement sermon Sunday morning, May 31. The alumni and senior luncheon will be held Monday, June 1, at the Washington-Youree Hotel. The annual musical concert will be Monday night, and the senior play, Tuesday night, June 2. Wednesday, June 3, will be the day for the graduating exercises. Mr. A. L. Downs, of Chicago, Ill., president of the great Illinois Central Railway System, will deliver the graduating address at 10 o'clock. The annual meeting of the board of trustees will be held at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, June 2, at the college.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE NEWS NOTES

At a recent meeting of the building commission for the gymnasium plans for the erection of the new building were entered upon. The commission chose a site for the building, selected H. N. Austin as architect, and appointed a sub-committee to develop the plans carefully. It is expected that the contract will be let in June or July. The building is made possible by donations and bequest of the late Webster M. Buie.

On April 11, Millsaps College was notified by Katharine Rogers Adams, chairman of the committee on membership, that the college had been placed on the fully approved list of the American Association of University Women.

Rev. H. Conrad Blackwell, associate professor of religious education in Millsaps College, delivered the commencement sermon before the graduating class of the Madden Vocational High School on Sunday evening, April 5. The service was held in the Methodist church at Madden and Rev. H. E. Raley, the pastor, was present and took part in the service.

Millsaps College was represented at the Columbus, Aberdeen, and Sardis District Conferences in the North Mississippi Conference by Rev. H. Conrad Blackwell, associate professor of religious education. Mr. Blackwell spoke at Columbus, April 7, at Calhoun City, April 8, and at Senatobia on April 9.

REPORT OF THE FINDINGS COMMITTEE, CIRCUIT PREACHERS' CONFERENCE, MILLSAPS COLLEGE, FEBRUARY 26-27, 1931.

By Rev. Murray Cox
Pastor Wesley Memorial Charge, Biloxi, Miss.

An answer to comment made by Rev. V. C. Curtis on the report of the Findings Committee of the Circuit Preachers' Conference held at Millsaps College, February 26-27. Dr. Curtis's article appeared in the Advocate of April 9. The statement in the report to which Dr. Curtis took exception, i. e., "The preacher's influence in the pulpit is 25 per cent of the total good he can accomplish in his charge," was not the estimate of Dr. Alexander and should not have been credited to him in the original report. Dr. Alexander quoted from another source and named that source, but the name has slipped my memory. He quoted this statement merely to emphasize the fact that not all of the good a preacher accomplishes is accomplished through his ministrations from the pulpit. I feel sure that Dr. Curtis would agree with that premise. There was nothing said in the Conference or in the report of the Findings Committee to minimize the importance of the pulpit. We are all painfully conscious of the need of greater effectiveness there. But the truth still remains that no pastor can be successful in the best sense through the pulpit alone. The evangelist may accomplish great good through the pulpit alone, but unless that good is followed up by the ministrations of the pastor outside of the pulpit it is more than likely to be lost.

The pastor may be thought of as having two spheres of influence: one in the pulpit where the hammer of his personality, thought and "eloquence" drives home the nail of truth to help construct the edifice of Christian character; the other sphere of influence is his personal contact with his people during the week. This contact during the week may be likened to the handle of the hammer, and without which the hammer would be poorly effective.

If you do not like the figure of a "hammer" and of "building character," then take the figure of an ax. The sermon is the ax with its cutting edge of truth shaping lives, but again it would be a poor instrument without a handle; and I maintain that the handle is provided by the daily contact with the people to whom the preacher ministers from the pulpit.

As to the exact per cent of influence wielded by the preacher in each of these spheres, that is not the important point. In fact, that varies with each individual preacher. Some preachers may wield a greater influence from the pulpit than elsewhere, but some preachers who have been regarded as emiently successful, have undoubtedly wielded a great part of their influence outside of the pulpit. Jesus did not confine all of his ministry to the pulpit. If I have read the record correctly he won a number of his apostles by personal contacts outside of the pulpit. Saint Paul was not in the pulpit when he won the Philippian jailor and his family. John Wesley did not limit his labors to the pulpit, but as is well known, he engaged in many forms of social service work in addition to his pulpit ministry. And I am made to wonder if the great preachers of the fourth century, like John Chrysostom and Augustine had followed up their pulpit successes by training their converts in the practice of the principles of the Christian religion whether or not there would have been the dark ages. The fact that the dark ages followed so closely in the wake of these great preachers is evidence that it is not enough to bring to people the knowledge of the truth; we must train them to put that knowledge into practice.

The preacher can help in the application of the knowledge of the truth to everyday life by not lending his influence to that pernicious distinction between sacred and secular life. If the preacher draws himself up in his shell and assumes a holier-than-thou attitude, he is helping to widen the chasm between the knowledge of the truth and the practice of the truth. If he leads his people in the daily practice of those principles which he has enunciated from the pulpit on Sunday, is he not more likely to bind together in a unified whole, knowledge and practice in the lives of his people?

I remember as a young lad on the farm that my mother sent me to the garden one day to hoe some vegetables. I hoed the grass out of the drill only and when mother came to inspect the work she made me go over it again and hoe the grass out of the middles too. There may have been a better way to have gotten the grass out of the middles than by the use of a hoe, but the lesson I had to learn was that the middle was not just merely a convenient place to walk. Since the plants drew moisture and plant food from the middles, the middles needed cultivation as well as the drills. May we not learn a lesson from this? We as preachers have cultivated the drill by our ministry from the pulpit on Sunday, but have neglected the middle or period of time between Sundays, while all the time our people are drawing most of their sustenance from that middle period. It needs cultivation, too.

Now, the question for the preacher to settle for himself, after taking into consideration the circumstances under which he labors and his own personal aptitudes, is how shall he cultivate that middle period of time. The people have their lives rooted in those institutions that already exist. The preacher cannot destroy these and start new ones in their place even if this were desirable. What attitude shall he take toward these institutions? There are three courses open to him. He may assume the role of iconoclast; that is easy. It takes very little wisdom to destroy. He may assume the role of a neutral; and that seems to be what most of us have done. The preacher may constructively co-operate with those institutions of which his people are a part. How best to do that will take wisdom and experience to tell.

Let us look for a moment at some of the conclusions reached by Dr. Curtis. It seems to me that he has been rather hasty in some of his deductions. He infers that if the preacher's influence is not all to be wielded from the pulpit that, therefore, there is no need for preparation for his life work. My inference is to the contrary that preparation, thorough and abundant, is all the more needed. He infers that a call of God to minister to the people is a call to preach alone. I have not so interpreted my call. I may be wrong in my interpretation, but at present I am convinced I am not. He infers that we have discounted preaching and depreciated the work the minister is called to do. I maintain that such is not the case. We have tried to emphasize a neglected truth.

Far be it from me, a little circuit preacher, to take to task one who has the standing of Dr. Curtis. If anything I have said in this article seems to be impertinent, it was not so intended. But as one who was present at the Conference and as one of the two who signed the report of the Findings Committee I felt it incumbent upon me to make these remarks of explanation and defense of our position. I feel that at heart we are agreed. We must win men to loyalty to Jesus Christ. But in order to do that, we may, like Paul, have to become all things to all men.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE EVANGELIST?

By Rev. S. M. Butts

I ask this question in the first place because I feel that the Evangelist should have a place in the Methodist Church. The Church was organized as the result of the labours of evangelists, and every awakening our Church has had there have been evangelists directly responsible for it, or directly connected with it. Therefore I believe that the Evangelist is a very important cog in the great Methodist machinery.

I am asking this question in the second place because the Evangelist is not being given the place in the Church that he once had, or, as I see it, that he should have.

Then in the last place I am asking this question because I am a duely appointed Evangelist, and therefore vitally concerned in its answer.

It is true that many irregular evangelists have gone through the country, and by their "claptrap" methods, sensationalism, and mercenary ends have prejudiced the minds of the people against the Evangelist. I will also admit that some of our regular evangelists have been "high-pressured" men, and have sometimes left churches in worse shape than they found them; but will the genuine, God-called, Spirit-filled Evangelist have to suffer for their sins and possibly be forced to either in part or in whole give up his evangelistic labours? Are there not also pastors who have been charged time and again with indiscreet actions and immoral conduct? One can even hear these reports, whether false or true—I know not, whispered around among the members of the Conferences. But who would take the stand that there are not still many good pastors? I have in mind several charges in each of which the preacher in charge is having to "sweat blood" because of the type of work and the character of conduct of his predessor. But who is recommending, either by actions or words, that the Pastor is no longer needed.

There are those today of the evangelistic type who have found a compromise in the "Pastor-Evangelist." This office is a late edition, and a brand new model. The new Testament speaks of both pastors and evangelists, but there wasn't a "Pastor-Evangelist" in the whole crowd. Brethren, I don't like a compromise. There are many successful evangelistic pastors today who can hold a successful revival, just as there are successful evangelists who have been, and may be again, successful pastor; but there are also many sweet spirited, successful pastors who never have held, and perhaps never will hold, a successful revival. They are good fellows and their work of cultivating the flock is done splendidly, but they haven't the gifts of the Evangelist. The opposite of this is true with many evangelists: they can hold a genuine, Holy Ghost revival, but as pastors their flocks would suffer. "Some pastors, some evangelists."

The word "Evangelist" is strictly a New Testament term. The word "Pastor" is used five times in the Old Testament and only once in the New; but the word "Evangelist" is used only in the New. (I guess the word "Pastor-Evangelist" is the way some have of connecting the Old Testament with the New). The word "Evangelist" is used three times in the New Testament. Thus the Evangelist is a product of the Dispensation of Grace. Jesus was an Evangelist, and He was unpopular; so much so that He finally paid with His life. The Apostles were Evangelists, and they were unpopular. Francis of Assissi, John Huss, Martin Luther, John Bunyon, John and Charles Wesley, George Whitefield, Charles G. Finney, etc., were all evangelists, and all were unpopular. Even our most modern successful evangelists were generally unpopular. George R. Stewart, Sam P. Jones, D. L. Moody, etc., paid the price for their success with unpopularity.

Now, in conclusion, may we ask the question, "Why were these great men of God unpopular?" The answer is not far to seek. In each instance it was because of the great spiritual dearth. The Evangelist has always been most unwelcomed when he was needed most. I trust that some one who reads this may be able to read the signs of the times.

The last words of William Tindale were, "Oh God, open the King of England's eyes." My prayer is "Oh God, open the eyes of us ministers."

The Home Circle

THE BEAUTIES OF NATURE

The birds and the bees and the flowers so grand
Are all precious gifts from Nature's own hand.
We enjoy the bee's hum, and the little bird's song
And can stroll among the flowers all the day long.

The grass on the hills and in the valley so green
Is another of nature's gifts and is a beautiful scene.
The trees of the forest so stalwart and tall
Are homes of the birds and admired by us all.

The clear rippling water for all things of earth
Keep everything happy and filled with mirth.
But the most wonderful above all is the unseen hand
That ever leads and guides to that beautiful
land.

'Twas He who gave nature's wonders so grand,
And some day we'll join Him on that far away
strand;
There all things are love, joy, and peace, we are told
As we read the sweetest story, just as true as of old.

BE HAPPY

If your heart is sad and gloomy,
Hide it deep—seem bright and gay;
You owe it to yourself and others
To scatter gladness along the way.

If sorrow and trouble overtake you,
Don't let discouragement win the race.
Naught can conquer a glad, happy spirit;
Just hold up your head and wear a bright face.

Do not wave a flag that is dark and dreary;
Carry a banner that is cheery and bright.
Don't weep and tell the world you are weary;
Just smile and sing and all will be right.

Seem to be glad if your heart is aching;
Don't peddle gloom and despondency.
Be cheerful and scatter the sunbeams;
Just try to be happy and you surely will be.

THE WIND AND THE SUN

One morning the Wind said to the Sun: "I am stronger than you are." The Sun said: "I know I am stronger than you are." As they were quarrelling over the question, a traveler came in sight. So they agreed to decide the matter by seeing which first could make him take off his coat. Then the Wind began blowing, blowing as fiercely as he could. He nearly tore off the traveler's coat, but the man buttoned his coat more closely about him, and the Wind had to give up, beaten.

Then the Sun, clearing away the clouds, shot his hottest beams down on the traveler's back, and the man soon threw off his coat. Then the Sun said: "Wind, you make more noise, but, you see, I am stronger."—Pacific Advocate.

JUST A POTATO

"Grandfather, if you do not feel able to give money to the missionary board, will you give a potatoe?"

"A potato?" ejaculated Mr. Hale, looking up from his paper.

"Yes, sir; and land enough to plant it in, and what it produces in four years."

"O yes!" replied the unsuspecting grandparent, settling his glasses on his calculating nose in such a way that showed he was glad to escape on such cheap terms from the lad's persecution.

Harry planted the potato, and it rewarded him the first year by producing nine; these, the following season became a peck; the next seven and a half, and when the fourth harvest came, lo! the potato had increased to seventy bushels. And, when they were sold, the amount realized was put with a glad heart into the treasury of the Lord.—Friend for Boys and Girls.

ON EQUAL FOOTING

By Rebecca Dunlap

"I need a yard and a half for my apron, and about a yard more." The young woman at the counter had a most attractive face, and as she finished, a little girl came up and looked at the pretty cloth with shining eyes. She smiled up at the clerk. "That's for mine, too," she said, with satisfaction.

"Oh, so you're going to have an apron. Well, what are you going to do, wash dolly's clothes?" The child nodded, and they went out.

And when the mother's apron was made, with its rickrack border, an identical apron, with a rickrack border, was made for the little girl.

"Anne!" The little girl came running. "I've finished our aprons!"

Anne proudly viewed herself in hers, standing on a chair so as to see better.

Later, when her mother wanted an errand done, happy little legs flew to do it; do so many things; "Mine want to play all day, and then their play gives me extra cleaning to do," a neighbor said.

"Well, Anne would get lonely playing by herself, and, being an only child, she would naturally have to do this a great deal as I can't spare the time to play with her, you see. But we are together nearly all the time, and if you will listen and watch I'll show you how Anne plays."

First there were the dishes. Anne dried them while her mother washed them, and they chatted or sang together as they worked. It was not really work to either of them. A little stool was provided for Anne to climb on to reach the shelves—and it would always be a day of celebration when she could reach a higher shelf.

She had her little broom, and they raced to see who would finish first with satisfying results.

"I take indoors, and she takes outside," explained the mother as Anne disappeared with her broom. "She has the porch, the steps and the front walk. Then she cuts flowers while I empty the vases and fill them. That keeps her out, and busy, too.

"Here is our corner for sewing." There stood two pretty work-boxes, side by side. Anne's—just as if she were truly grown up. It gave her pride to own something that was as important as her mother's—a work-box that didn't have to be put away. "And when I make my child clothes, she makes her child some." Anne's child was a beautiful doll that slept in a little bed beside Anne's own.

"Don't you hate to have the toys cluttered around, though?"

"Anne's things aren't cluttered. She keeps them in order and is just as nice about cleaning up as anybody could be. She loves her doll, so why shouldn't she have her where she lives?"

And after Anne had stood on the other side of the pretty grown-up bed to help make them up, her mother reciprocated by standing on the other side of the doll's bed to help make that up.

"Anne is a darling. I know, of course, that she should have more companionship with children. They can do things for her that I cannot do. For all-round development one must associate with one's peers. I want her to know more children as we live here longer. But," and the mother shook her head, "she couldn't have much more fun than now. We're friends, best friends, and we work together, and then we take a day off now and then and play together—just romp and picnic, and go out in the woods and discover treasures. In fact, instead of making her old, I believe our companionship just keeps me young."

GENERAL WASHINGTON AND THIRTY BIG BOYS

By Frances Margaret Fox

There was great excitement in old Newport away back in March of 1781, for General George Washington was coming to town. The people of Newport wished to show the country's hero that they appreciated the honor of his visit.

A great procession was planned for the evening of the holiday. But many of the men and boys who wished with all their hearts to march in the procession were too poor to buy their own torches. There were thirty big-little boys who supposed that they would either have to stay in their houses or tag along in the dark at the tail end of the great parade because their families could not afford to buy torches for them.

Now, it happened that the town council of Newport also wished to have these boys take part in the celebration, so a quantity of candles were bought by the council to be carried by all men and boys who, because of the Revolution, were too poor to buy torches. Better yet, the thirty boys thus provided by the council with candles were invited to lead the procession.

At the time the Count de Rochambeau, who had come overseas with the French fleet, had his headquarters in Newport's best hotel, the Vernon House. Here General Washington was to be entertained.

The longed-for day came at last when the commander-in-chief of the American Army visited Newport. The French admiral's barge was sent to bring the general across the harbor to the Newport dock. The French fleet fired salutes, the bells rang, and crowds at the dock cheered and cheered when Washington arrived.

And that evening, at the head of a long torchlight procession, the general was shown the town, and every one was given a chance to see the hero.

Thirty boys, each carrying a candle at the top of a stick, led the procession. Directly behind them came General Washington, followed by Rochambeau and his escort, and many others.

On through the town went the line of thirty bright candles held by proud boys who kept perfect step to the beating of drums, as they marched through street after street of their town, and returned at last to the Vernon House.

Then came the happy surprise. For General Washington, standing on the steps of the Vernon House, made a delightful speech in which he thanked his candle-bearers. The thirty boys were so thrilled by this honor that they felt as if they were dreaming.

But there was one little fellow who was disappointed. He had wished to march in the procession with the big boys, but was too small to hold a candle high enough. When the general made his speech to the candle-bearers, this small brother wished to see the great one of whom he had heard so much. So, just as the general ceased speaking, his father lifted him in his arms. And when the little fellow saw the general, he was so disappointed that he cried out:

"Why, father, Washington is nothing but a man!"

They tell us that General George Washington smiled and answered the small brother in these word: "Yes, my lad, and nothing but a man!"

Thus ended a never-to-be-forgotten day for thirty boys and one little brother of old Newport.—Zion's Herald.

This home is operated on the order of the Good Will Industries in the United States. Although this work has been opened but a very short time, already a dozen or more people have enrolled.

asunder. Great believing and holy living will give the Church grace to "set at naught the power of the enemy and put to flight the army of the aliens" and enthrone Christ in the life of the world. The time is here when the supreme need is for such an increase of faith as will bring an enrichment of experience in Christ and an enlargement of our sharing Him with others.

A CORRECTION IN REPORT OF FINDINGS COMMITTEE OF CIRCUIT PREACHERS' CONFERENCE

In the Advocate of March 12, 1931, on page 4 was published the report of the Findings Committee of the Circuit Preachers' Conference held at Millsaps College, February 26-27.

In paragraph (a) there appeared: "Since it has been estimated by Dr. Alexander 'that the preachers' influence in the pulpit is 25 per cent of the total amount of good that he is permitted to accomplish in his particular charge' (the group did not agree with Dr. Alexander in this estimate)."

Rev. J. C. Chambers, executive secretary of the Mississippi Conference Board of Christian Education, under which auspices the conference was held, writes that the above was not a direct statement of Dr. Alexander's, but it was a quotation from Dr. Anderson of Missouri University. Therefore, the report should have read: "Since it has been estimated by Dr. Anderson 'that the preachers' influence in the pulpit is 25 per cent of the total amount of good that he is permitted to accomplish in his particular charge (the group did not agree with Dr. Anderson in this estimate)."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

Rev. W. L. Blackwell, faithful pastor of Rosehill, Miss., is going forward with his work in all its departments. We thank him for his interest in the Advocate and trust that the year may prove successful in every way.

Rev. L. M. Sharp, the successful pastor of Flora, Miss., writes that everything is going along nicely in his work. We thank him for five subscriptions to the Advocate and for the promise of continued effort on its behalf.

Rev. S. S. Bogan, who was taken to the hospital after Conference at Alexandria, has gained his strength and is hard at work on his charge at Glenmora, La. We thank Brother Bogan and Mr. J. T. Calhoun for five subscriptions.

We record with sorrow the death of Mrs. P. P. Knowles, which occurred at Ruston, La., on February 26. She had been a reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate for over forty years. We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

Rev. Briscoe Carter, the versatile pastor at Coushatta, La., has our thanks for five subscriptions and one renewal. Dr. Carter has the habit of doing his work well, and we trust that the Advocate will supplement his efforts in his charge.

Rev. R. L. Clayton, pastor at St. Francisville, La., favored us with a visit at the office on Tuesday, April 14. He reports his work is in splendid condition, and an Epworth League recently organized and the Sunday school to be growing rapidly.

Miss Ina Thompson and her brother, Jessie W. Thompson, presented the Jackson County Hospital, Pascagoula, Miss., with Bibles for every room. These were presented as a memorial to their mother, Mrs. W. R. Thompson, who recently passed to her reward.

Rev. J. B. Grambling was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office on Friday, April 10. Brother Gramhling is director of a tour of the Holy Land for the Advocate's territory, and is developing a number of prospects for the first sailing which will be from New York on July 2.

After five weeks of enforced waiting, Rev. H. T Carley was able to meet his engagements Sunday, April 19. He had suffered with influenza, and "took the road" too early and paid dearly for his eagerness to "be" punctual, do everything exactly at the time."

We regret to learn that Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook has been confined to his home with sickness for some time, but are happy to know that he is now able to be up and about his work. We trust that he will have no further indisposition and that gracious revivals will be had at each of his churches.

We acknowledge with appreciation the invitation from Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Doss, Jr., and the district parsonage committee of the New Orleans District to a Silver Tea which was given at the district parsonage from two to five o'clock on Wednesday, April 15. We regret we were unable to be present at the happy and wholesome social event.

The Federal Soldiers' Home for Mississippi has been located at Biloxi within four blocks of the Seashore Methodist Assembly property. If Methodists of the Central South will be patient and co-operate, there will come a time when they will be proud of the valuable services the Assembly renders to the cause of Christ and to the upbuilding of the Church.

Professor H. H. Ellis, superintendent of the public schools at Amory, Miss., has been elected superintendent of the Masonic Children's Home, Meridian, Miss. He is a capable and influential man in Mississippi educational circles and will render splendid service in the new field to which he has been chosen. He is a Methodist layman of consecration and ability.

Rev. C. A. Northington, the alert pastor at Ripley, Miss., has recently closed a most successful revival meeting with Rev. J. V Bennett of Booneville doing the preaching. We thank Brother Northington for sixteen subscriptions to the Advocate. One of the fine ways to conserve the results of a good revival is to place the Advocate in the homes of the people

Rev. H. W. May, Zachary, La., a superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, we are thankful to say, is enjoying good health and is able to render such services as he is privileged to do. It is encouraging to have those heroes of the church who wait in enforced retirement to render their aid in carrying on the loved employ that they did so much for in their days of strength.

The church at West Point, Miss., has had an honorable history dated from 1866, and its pulpit has been occupied by some of the leading ministers of the North Mississippi Conference, among whom were Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan, Dr. J. T. Murrah and his son, W. B. Murrah, afterwards bishop. Reverend W. R. Lott is now the pastor and his fourth year is proving to be one of success in every way.

Rev. L. P. Jumper, Mantachie charge, North Mississippi Conference, is also a climber. He is moving forward with his work and he has found time to secure eleven cash subscriptions to the Advocate. If our stronger financial stations would do proportionately as well as circuits, there would be no trouble in carrying on the work of Christian Literature within the three Conferences.

Robert J. Baylis, a faithful member of the First Methodist Church, Columbia, Miss., passed to his reward on Thursday, April 9. He was a prominent citizen of Marion County and a loyal member of his church. The funeral services were held from the church at Columbia by his pastor, the Rev. V. G. Clifford, who was assisted by Rev. W. W. Graves. We extend sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Mrs. Lucille Hunter, Boyce, La., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, wrote: "We have had the advocate in our home more than fifty years. I feel like we could not do without it. We enjoy it very much." It is a testimony to the worth of a Christian paper to have had it enjoyed for this long, and hope that the Advocate may be a visitor in Mrs. Hunter's home for many years more.

Mrs. W. S. Dorsey, Harrisonburg, La., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, wrote, "I am also remitting for a subscription to go to my brother, Mr. I. L. Baker, Sr., Jena, La. The paper is so good I want him to read it, and I know he will enjoy it, for I get so much out of it every week." We appreciate the thoughtfulness of Mrs. Dorsey and pray that the Advocate will be a blessing to her and her brother.

After a successful term as president of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference, Mrs. L. W. Alford is to be succeeded by Mrs. T. B. Cottrell. Mrs. Cottrell is well qualified for the duties of the office to which she has been elected, and we doubt not that the woman's work in the conference will go forward under her leadership. The 1932 session of the conference will be held at the Glendale church in Jackson.

The many friends of Dr. G. C. Ballard, a retired army medical officer, will regret to learn that he suffered an accident which made it necessary for him to be carried to a hospital where he will remain for several days for treatment. While his injuries were not serious, they were painful, and yet his usual jovial spirit has not been reduced. We trust that he may have a speedy recovery and soon will be fully himself again.

Hon. F. A. Howell, a Confederate veteran and distinguished citizen of Mississippi, has reached the ripe age of 91 years. He resides with his daughter at Durant, Miss., and rejoices in the respect and affection of a wide circle of friends. He united with the Methodist church early in life and has been a reader of the New Orleans Advocate nearly three-quarters of a century. This Christian hero has light at evening tide and we pray that he may abide in strength many years.

Over two hundred men and women attended a social fellowship meeting of the adult division of the Galloway Memorial church on Friday night, April 10. Mrs. W. H. Watkins, superintendent of the division, was assisted by Mr. D. W. Bufkin of the men's department and a delightful evening was spent at the church. The adult division of the Galloway Memorial Church is having large success, which is attributable to the leadership of the superintendent, Mrs. W. H. Watkins.

"Mister" Shipman, pastor at Inverness, Miss., continues his pastoral labors in the spirit of youthful joy and looks with optimism upon the future. He writes, "Things are looking better in this part of the Delta, everybody is preparing to make an honest effort to make a crop. Everything is going well with the people and this pastor. Folks are going to church better and prospects are good for a quarterly conference next Sunday afternoon. We always have good preaching when L. P. Wasson is on the boards." We thank Brother Shipman for subscriptions to the Advocate.

The action of the voters of Vermont on the first day of April in electing a dry as United States Senator to succeed to the seat of the late Frank L. Greene, was a more severe blow to the wets than has been indicated in the secular press. After the widespread and reiterated propaganda of the wets in which they claim the country to be overwhelmingly anti-prohibition, an eastern State, bounded on one side by New York, on another by wet Canada, elected an out-and-out dry against a campaigning wet candidate by a vote that was practically two to one.

Mr. A. F. Godat, Astoria, L. I., in renewing his subscription, wrote: "If subscriptions to and reading 'Advocates' makes one a good Methodist, I should be one for I take three, The New Orleans, Nashville, and the New York. I have personally known all the editors of the Advocate since Bishop Galloway, except the present editor, and I expect to make his acquaintance the next time I am in New Orleans." The many friends of Brother Godat in the Crescent City will be glad to see him, and the editor will count it a personal privilege of meeting him when he visits New Orleans again.

Miss Clara Chalmers, sister of the manager of the Advocate, Mr. C. M. Chalmers, is enjoying her work as one of the missionaries at Matanzas, Cuba, and in writing of their Easter program she said that she and one other dyed six hundred eggs and gave the children their first Easter egg hunt. There were eighty-five children to enjoy the hunt. It cannot be estimated the amount of good that is accomplished by our faithful missionaries working with the little children around the world. We congratulate Miss Chalmers upon the success of her work and pray that a kindly Providence will watch over her.

Mrs. Molly Williams Grant, Baton Rouge, La., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, wrote: "The Advocate has been coming into my home for more than fifty years, and it went into the home of my sainted father, Rev. F. M. Williams for years before I was married. I look forward to it each Thursday as I would to a visit from a dear friend, and I wish for it greater and greater success as the years go by." Being a daughter of a sainted Methodist preacher, we are not surprised that Mrs. Grant formed an attachment for the Advocate early in life. We pray that its weekly visits to her home may continue for many years.

Rev. Del Longgrear, the capable pastor at Hazlehurst, Miss., in writing of the recent revival meeting held there by Dr. W. M. McIntosh, said: "Dr. McIntosh preached fine sermons, drew great crowds who manifested deep interest and a great uplift came to the church and town. Twenty-nine were received into the church, sixteen of whom were by profession of faith. Our Sunday school is at the highest pinnacle in its history. A Hi-Y League was organized with twenty-two members and the Woman's Missionary Society continues to do a great work. The outlook is brighter than ever before." A gracious revival will prove a blessing in every way to any church. Our need over all the country is for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit in refreshing revivals.

The many friends of Evangelist James M. Smith scattered over Mississippi and Louisiana will note with delight his splendid victories in soul-winning during recent months. It is reported that he held three great revivals during the first three months of the new year, in which there were 1586 people added to the Church on profession of faith as a direct result of his labors in three cities. He recently closed a campaign in Concordia, Kansas, in which there were 794 adults received into the four co-operating churches on the last Sunday of the campaign; and 128 were received on the next Sunday following. Brother Smith is now at Jamestown, Kansas, in a Union Tabernacle Revival with nine churches united in the effort. He is a native and a product of Mississippi Methodism, and was one time a member of the Mississippi Conference. He will visit relatives in Mississippi following his Jamestown campaign for a few days. He has made his home in Dallas, Texas, during the last six years.

PROTECTION
AGAINST OLD AGE

Vice-President Curtis recently laid the cornerstone of the new Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church which holds an intimate and historic relationship to the national life. This church, located for three-quarters of a century in the center of Washington, was the ecclesiastical home of Presidents Grant and McKinley, Vice-President Fairbanks, Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase, and numerous senators and congressmen. Since Vice-President Curtis came to his high office he has been a faithful attendant upon its services and his pastor reports that he has not missed a single Sunday when in Washington. Always appreciative of what the Church has meant to him and to the country, the Vice-President, in placing the cornerstone on this occasion, delivered a fitting address in which he emphasized the meaning and service of the Christian Church. This occasion was historic in several respects. The square and trowel used by the Vice-President were those used by President George Washington when he laid the cornerstone of the National Capitol. This was the first time that they had been used together in over a century.

URGENT CALL FROM MISSISSIPPI METHODIST ORPHAN'S HOME

Dear Mr. Editor: Please let me say through the Advocate to every Methodist pastor and layman in Mississippi, that we must have by the first of May $3000. We need several thousand more, but some way we must raise the amount specified, or suffer very great embarrassment, if not loss.

First, will those who have made pledges send me said amounts at once?. Second, has not this great institution some friends who have means that will come to our relief at this time? Friends, our situation is very serious. Think and pray earnestly, then send me a contribution, just as large as you can afford.

Yours for the Home,

W. M. SULLIVAN,
Commissioner.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION CONFERENCE

This need not be read by those who do not wish to know what happened at the Christian Education Conference which met at First Church, Alexandria, La., April 7 and 8.

The conference was opened by Dr. W. W. Holmes, Executive Secretary of the Conference Board of Christian Eduncation, who divided time with Dr. F. L. Wells, President of the Board, in in presiding over the public meetings of the conference.

Dr. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, delivered the address of welcome, to which Rev. C. D. Atkinson, former superintendent of Sunday school work in the Louisiana Conference, responded on behalf of the delegates.

After the presentation of the superintendents of the various divisions of the conference work Dr. Clovis G. Chappell, pastor of First Church, Houston, Texas, delivered the Bible message.

Representatives from the office at Nashville were Rev. Walter Towner of the Young People's Division, Miss Jimmie Milton of the Children's Division, and Miss Sadie Mai Wilson, returned missionary.

The divisional group meetings addressed themselves, in their two sessions, to a study of the recent legislation of the General Conference as it applies to their divisions.

Delegates made up of presiding elders, pastors and laymen participated in the discussions of the different groups, all seeking to enter effectively upon the larger responsibilities and opportunities of the church in its program of Christian Education.

A meeting of the Conference Board of Education was held on the afternoon of Tuesday, at which matters pertaining to the carrying forward of the enlarged plans were considered.

Of interest to the entire conference were the addresses of Dr. W. Angie Smith, pastor of First Church, Shreveport, on "The Unified Program;" Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, President of Centenary College, "Christian Education and the Christian College;" and the message of Miss Sadie Mai Wilson of the Nashville office.

Worthy of special note was the exceptional music furnished by Dr. Francis Wheeler and his quartet of young ladies from Centenary College.

And what delegate can ever forget the inimitable Bible sermon-addresses of Dr. Chappell? How freighted with divine-human interest and appeal. With a style both pleasing and compelling, the speaker, as a master artist, drew upon his ample resources and made the hearers see as well as hear the mighty matters of which he spoke. Through the magic of his messages Onesimus, the run-a-way slave, came back from his worthlessness through the gates of grace to the good life; Enoch, the comrade of God, neighbored with us; and the Bible became the most up-to-date and interesting of all literature.

Subdued by the revelation of the immensity of the work to be done, but inspired by fellowship with those whose hearts God has touched, delegates turned back to their tasks with a new courage in their faith.

MRS. SARAH CARPENTER, wife of the late James F. H. Carpenter, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Okley, Friday, Apr. 3, 1931. Sister Carpenter joined the Methodist church in early childhood. She loved her church and was a faithful and devout member. Seven children were born in the home of Brother and Sister Carpenter; six grew to maturity. Three daughters, Mrs. Abner Tucker, Mrs. Mary Okley and Mrs. G. R. Linning. The sons are Dr. Madison, Edgar and Boon; all grew into a very fine type of citizenship and do credit to the faithfulness of the good, true widowed mother, who was untiring in her love and devotion to her children. She was the daughter of John Bartlett, and granddaughter of Rev. Joseph M. Wells, a Methodist preacher. The funeral services took place at Osborne Creek Baptist Church, in charge of Rev. M. L. Ward, assisted by Revs. J. V. Bennett, J. T. Gullett and the writer. The tokens of the love and friendship was expressed in a rare and beautiful floral offering and the attendance of the many kindred and friends. Rev. J. D. Thompson, pastor of the Baptist church, made the closing prayer and benediction. Sister Carpenter's body rests in Osborne Creek Cemetery, awaiting the resurrection morning.

FROM LUMBERTON, MISS.

All of Lumberton, Miss., has been greatly benefited by the pre-Easter services held by Rev. M. L. McCormick, pastor of the Methodist church.

Each night at 7:15 Brother McCormick led the Junior choir in a song service. At 7:30 the Senior choir took charge and added much to the services with special songs.

On Saturday afternoon a service was held for the children. The music was furnished by the Junior choir with a special song by Miss Ruth Sanders.

Easter Sunday morning was decision day for the Sunday school. Seven accepted the invitation to church membership and were received into the church Sunday night.

JUBILEE INN, SHREVEPORT, LA.

Jubilee Inn, the home for girls away from home, constitutes the major undertaking of the Shreveport Mission Board. Established through the combined efforts of the Methodist auxiliaries of Shreveport and Bossier, it furnishes for young girls in business or attending business school an attractive, wholesome place of residence at minimum cost. It has been a good year, despite the hard times, touching with its Christian influence a large number of girls. Jubilee Inn is not an institution, but a home, in the real sense of the word, for the head resident, Miss Mary Nichols, is a trained worker, and devotes her entire time to the welfare and happiness of her household. The girls keep in touch with the Y. W. C. A., and form one of its liveliest clubs. Mothers of Louisiana and neighboring States will find at the Inn a warm welcome and an attractive boarding home for their daughters coming to Shreveport to work. The good times committee planning parties and outings with the girls keeps everybody happy. By gifts received and questions asked it shows interest has been manifest all over the State in the newest of Council homes.

BECAUSE HE KNOWS

Through rocky gorge, up root-cleft
steep
The shepherd oft-times leads his sheep.
No wish has he to swell their woes—
He goes on because he knows
That just upon the other side
The springing fields are stretching wide.
But to his flock, the pastures green,
The bloom, the streams, are all unseen.

By Rough, bleak paths, through windswept waves,
O'er moorlands lone, past hallowed graves
God sometimes leads, because He knows
Beyond these weary ways there grows
A greener, richer pastureland
Provided by His gracious hand.
Our holden eyes see not afar
The fruitage rare, so blind we are!

SABBATH KEEPING—A PARAMOUNT NEED OF AMERICAN BUSINESS

Noah W. Cooper, Nashville, Tenn.

(Excerpts from speech made March 6, 1931, on Wall Street, New York City, in front of Washington's statue at U. S. Sub-Treasury by Noah W. Cooper, chairman of Tenn. Methodist Sabbath Crusade Committee, closing a tour through ten States.)

George Washington here, on April 30, 1789, kissed the open Bible as he was inaugurated our first president. Here on the stone is cut a picture of Washington on his knees, praying at Valley Forge. Washington was a God-fearing man, who read five chapters in the Bible every day, prayed regularly and kept the Sabbath strictly.

He and our forefathers built America in godliness, with the motto, "In God We Trust." Trusting in God, they kept His Sabbath and saw to it that all lawmaking, money-making stopped on Sunday, the Christian Sabbath.

From this godly habit came our present custom and law securing a Sabbath rest to our President, Congress, courts, offcials, schools, soldiers, sailors, postal clerks and all governmental employees.

Yet greed for gain has abolished Sabbath keeping in our great interstate commerce, so that now our great railroads, newspapers, boat, bus and aviation lines, and allied business run every day and Sunday, too, as if there were no God, no Sabbath, no judgment. And these money-mad businesses are infecting all our people, even churchmen, with the ruinous habit of Sabbath breaking. No greater peril now menaces our churches, homes and commerce. These great banks of New York and America close on the Sabbath. We appeal to them to help us persuade all business to stop on Sunday and to keep the Sabbath holy.

Sabbath breaking is war against God; is partnership with Satan; and is plunging America toward perdition.

Our gangsters, bank-breakers, murderers, bootleggers, criminals are being bred and fed by our Sabbath breaking commerce.

No Christian or Jew should invest his time or money in, nor patronize any business that keeps no Sabbath.

America is losing billions of money and inviting God's fury by her Sabbath breaking. God commands and we Methodists plead for a Sabbath day for all. Each must help the other keep the Sabbath, from President to plowman, including engineers, conductors, printers, editors, newsboys, clerks, and all workers. If we don't turn from this great national sin, we will go to speedy ruin like ancient Israel and coutinentaal Europe.

NEWS IN BRIEF

An encouraging letter was received from Gilliam, La., where the regular membership is only 10, reaching 20 on social meetings; however, their desire is to make each church woman a Missionary woman (which should be the goal of every auxiliary).

This auxiliary meets regularly each week and has a mission and Bible Study Class. Each fifth Monday is a social meeting, when every Methodist woman is invited to attend (fine fellowship).

These faithful women have the budget system, which is the ideal plan. We wish to commend them for their splendid plans and optimistic outlook

Crawford Street Auxiliary, Vicksburg, Miss., reports interesting meetings, which evidence splendid leadership in auxiliary and circle. The Circle plan has greatly increased the membership and finances of the auxiliary.

Quite a bit of enthusiasm and interest are shown and a very successful year is anticipated. All meetings are held in the homes, except the business meetings, which are at the church. At this meeting the program as outlined in Year Book is presented.

Many letters of encouragement have come from large and small auxiliaries stating that their goal is “Every woman in the church a member of the Missionary Society,” and that women have pledged themselves to give sacrificially, and many places have increased their pledge; just the spirit that all should have, because the need is greater and we are a sisterhood whose Father gave the best He had. If our Father had lacked the spirit of Missions we would lack a Saviour.

Your editor was delightfully privileged to spend a day with the women of the Louisiana Conference when they were in session in the historic city of Baton Rouge. In making this delightful trip we were in company with Rev. and Mrs. Geo. P. McKeown, of Woodville.

We were cordially greeted and received many courtesies by our sister society. It was a rare treat to look in on this well organized Conference, with most capable leaders and cooperative delegates.

Reports as heard indicate that each branch of the work is making progress. Although there was a deficit in finances, there was not a note of discouragement sounded.

The report of the constructive work done at Houma was brought very vividly to mind as four little girls in well chosen words told what the school has meant and done for them. “Seeing is believing.”

Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, Council guest, added much inspiration to the meeting, especially during the quiet hour each day at noon.

The report of the Puplicity superintendent was pleasing as well as instructive, with a forward look to greater subscriptions to the Voice. This report was followed by the playlet, “Publicity Pays.”

VAUGHAN W. M. S. BANNER SOCIETY

We have just closed one of the most successful and fruitful years in the history of the Vaughan Woman's Missionary Society. In summing up our reports we find that we are not only on the honor roll, but that we are 100 per cent. Our financial obligations were paid in full. Something over $150 was spent out of the local treasury on the parsonage and the painting of Vaughan Church. We added five new members to our roll and organized one new society at Union, which is doing splendid work. We also helped to organize three Negro societies. We held our meetings every Monday and had good attendance at each one. The Social Service Committees have been active, sending flowers, trays, etc., to shut-ins, visiting the sick and giving groceries and other necessities to needy families and various other work along these lines.

We observed five days for Week of Prayer. We have taken our Mission and Bible Studies, using “Trailing the Conquistodors,” according to council requirements, and we are hoping to receive a certificate from Council for this study. We have added a Missionary Library and have had some splendid books donated.

Our young people's and children's departments have had a splendid year's work and are planning greater things for, next year.

We have started the year 1931 with renewed energy and have raised our pledge over last year.

The Methodist Missionary Society of Tallulah entertained Zone 2 of the Monroe district on Tuesday when eighty-five representatives from Delhi, Rayville, Pioneer, Epps, Oak Grove, Lake Providence, Wesley Chapel and Tallulah met for an all-day session. Mrs. C. R. Abney, of Pioneer, zone leader, presided, and Mrs. J. R. Linton acted as secretary. Rev. W. H. Giles led the devotional.

The subject for the day was “Universal Peace,” Mrs. Abney giving a splendid address on this topic at the morning session. Mrs. Rousseaux, of Lake Providence, spoke on the necessity of a scholarship. In the afternoon Mrs. James conducted the devotional and Mrs. J. C. Calhoun, Mrs. Ferguson and Mrs. Johnson, of Rayville, gave able and inspiring discussions of different phases of the peace program.

Miss Alma Goza rendered a piano solo.

Luncheon was served by members of the Tallulah Society at noon, in the social hall of the church.

GRENADA ZONE MEETING

The zone meeting of the Grenada District Methodist Missionary Society met March 30 at Duck Hill. There were forty Grenada members present, and a good attendance from Duck Hill and Holcomb.

Mrs. L. C. Welker of Grenada presided, and Mrs. S. S. Carruthers of Duck Hill led the devotional. Reports from the three auxiliaries were presented. The reports showed renewed spirit for the first quarter of the new year. Grenada has made up more than one-fourth of her pledge.

Mrs. W. B. Waterman, president of Grenada Auxiliary, brought some inspiring thoughts from the conference. After hearing of the wonderful work of the North Mississippi Missionary Conference one is proud to play even a small part in the promotion of mission work.

Mrs. A. W. Stokes, the district secretary, presented an appeal to the ladies for their support in the use of Octagon soap products. Mrs. Stokes gave a report from the Council, which was beneficial.

The meeting was closed with a prayer by Mrs. J. R. Countiss of Grenada.

Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir, our pastor, planned for a week of pre-Easter services. He spoke on Monday evening, but became so hoarse from the effects of a severe cold that he was unable to continue.

Rev. L. W. Cain, P. E., spoke on Tuesday evening to an appreciative audience. Rev. B. W. Waltman of Baker finished the week's services, speaking Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings. His messages were greatly enjoyed, laying as they did the foundation for Bro. Hoffpauir's resurrection services on Easter Sunday.

EAST END, MERIDIAN

One of the most successful revival services, known as the pre-Easter service, closed at East End Methodist Church Sunday with 38 additions being made to the church membership and the baptizing of eight infants. The Rev. P. M. Caraway, pastor of the church, was very much pleased with the result of the services in which he was assisted by Frank E. Dement, leader in the song service, and Lee Taylor Stokes, as accompanist. The services were largely attended.

It was a beautiful scene when these infants, children and adults were being received into the church. The nursery superintendent, the Sunday school teacher, the fathers and mothers stood about the altar, with those who were coming into the fold. It was said by many, in position to know, that it was the greatest day in the history of East End church. Four hundred and twenty-two in Sunday school on Easter Sunday.

After 40
Bowel trouble is Most Dangerous

Constipation may easily become chronic after forty. Continued constipation at that time of life may bring attacks of piles—and a host of other disorders.

Watch your bowels at any age. Guard them with particular care after forty. When they need help, remember a doctor should know what is best for them.

“Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin” is a doctor's prescription for the bowels. Tested by 47 years' practice, it has been found thoroughly effective in relieving constipation and its ills for men, women and children of all ages. It has proven perfectly safe even for babies. Made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients, it cannot gripe; will not sicken you or weaken you; can be used without harm as often as your breath is bad, your tongue is coated; whenever a headachy, bilious, gassy condition warns of constipation.

Next time just take a spoonful of this family doctor's laxative. See how good it tastes; how gently and thoroughly it acts. Then you will know why it has become the world's most popular laxative. Big bottles—all drugstores.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

It is with great pride that I think of the beautiful garden at Whitworth College, which is the enterprise of Mrs. G. F. Winfield and Miss Walker. Dr. Winfield says that Mrs. Winfield puts all of her salary into this project and that Miss Walker puts all the profit of the pencils, tablets, etc., that are sold to the girls into the garden.

For the first year's efforts it is beyond expectations and in the course of time it will be one of the outstanding show places of this entire section and you will not have visited Brookhaven until you have seen the garden. To me this is a most commendable project and one that will bear fruit in the lives of these young women who attend the college in all their after years.

Another mark of improvement that has meant much to me is the Seashore Assembly Grounds. For the first time in years these grounds are in good order, with the brush and weeds cleared away and shrubbery planted and flowers. Driveways are improved and the roads fixed so they can be of real service to those who visit the grounds. Even back beyond the school buildings the undergrowth has been cleared away, making the entire property to the railroad nicer and prettier. This is sure to make friends for the Assembly of all coast property owners and it will also inspire confidence of those who visit the grounds and add to the enjoyment of all who pass that way, even if they only pass.

To me these two great efforts will add much to the growth of the church and the lives of the people who come in contact with these beauty spots.

It was our pleasure to visit the Brookhaven District Conference and the Vicksburg District Conference. The program of the Conference Board was well received. The reports were good. The attendance was good. If this is a foretoken of the series of district meetings, surely our church is in much better condition than we had thought. More people are attending the services of the church than ever before. At one of our charges a place that used to be a station and had some of our strongest men serve it I was told they were having three times as many persons in their services than ever before in the forty years in spite of the fact that they are now the head of a circuit. From all over these two districts we are hearing that good congregations are the order of the day.

April 19 is Sunday School Day. Your board must have $2500 from the observance of this day if we are to serve our Conference as we should. If every church will observe this day we will obtain our goal and the work will be enabled to go on.

Epworth League Anniversary Day is past. If you have not been able to hold the day please do so. The young people need your aid and the inspiration that will come to them and you from this observance. Young people are worth all our efforts. This is one they will thoroughly appreciate. It will give the church an opportunity to know their work. The program will be found in the March number of the Epworth Era.

In the April number of the Epworth Era and the Workers' Council you will find three suggested organizations for the Young People's Division of the church. These can be helpful and furnish guidance to local churches in their efforts to have young people's division organizations.

Pray for the work and the workers.

The school this week at Inverness is very well attended by the people from Inverness, Isola, Belzoni, Indianola and Moorhead. The spirit of the school is fine. It is a high personal privilege for the writer to be the guest in the parsonage of the Rev. "Mister" Shipman. To be associated with him is indeed a benediction.

We find a widespread interest among the brethren in Sunday School Day. Several have already observed the day. Let every one plan for this important day and observe it in good spirits.

Are you in a place of leadership among your people? If so, are you doing all you can to improve your leadership? As leaders we face very grave competition today. On the screen, on the air in radio programs, in the literature and in a specialized industrial order we see and hear the finest talent that money can buy. Naturally, though often inconspicuously, this affects the attitude of those whom we are seeking to lead. We must do all in our power to be at our best as a leader. Our church is seeking to give leadership training to our leaders and workers. This is done through study courses offered by the General Board of Christian Education given by correspondence, supervised study, in classes and standard schools. There are courses for all workers suitable to the place that you hold in your church. We will be very glad to assist you in getting lined up to take courses of study that will help you to be a better leader or worker.

One of the outstanding features of the Standard Training School at Grenada will be a course taught by Rev. B. L. Schubel, of Nashville. This course will deal with teaching in training schools and classes. Bro. Schubel has charge of accrediting all instructors, both Standard and Cokesbury, in schools and classes. If you are already an accredited instructor or wish to become one you should make your plans to be in this class.

We are ready and anxious to help you with any problems that you may have in your work. Write to us. If you would like to have a conference or an institute at any time call on us and we will be glad to arrange one with you.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Dear Young People: Spending last Sunday in Opelousas was certainly a treat. The little city was a veritable flower garden. With almost every known flower of our State in bloom the flower that I found most beautiful and massive in growth was the large azalia. But the flowers were not the chief interest I found while there. The young people of our own Methodist church were certainly delightful to be with. I found a talented, attractive group of young people who were one hundred per cent enthusiastic in their program, a live Sunday school group, and two fine Hi-Leagues. I was interested in learning that they give last summer's Assembly at Mansfield credit for their willingness to serve any where at any time. And I give a large amount of the credit to their pastor, Rev. D. F. Anders, who is right with them in everything they do.

In the afternoon the Triangle Union, made up of Leagues from Eunice, Melville and Opelousas, met. A fine delegation came over from Eunice. We were sorry that Melville was absent. At the evening hour I had the pleasure of speaking to an interested audience.

Alexandria District started off the District Conferences with a fine record. The Lecompte folks just know how to entertain. Of course, I enjoyed being with Agatha Brewer. During the time that the conference was not the subject of conversation we were making plans for the assemblies.

And that reminds me that you have just received the wall poster mailed you, advertising the assemblies. What did you do with it? I hope you were the thoughtful person who did what the last line on the poster asked you to do. "Please do not destroy. Place in your church."

The programs have been given to the printer and in a few weeks you will have them, too. We just get real thrilled when we see so much enthusiasm among our young people concerning the attendance. Some already have their money put aside, and that's the main thing, isn't it? Just think of six days with folks like Julia Reid, Mr. James V. Reid, Reverend J. B. Grambling, Rev. J. H. Bowdon, Dr. W. W. Holmes, Dr. W. W. Drake, Miss Lucy Foreman of Nashville, and many others. Think of "Stunt Night," around the camp fire, vesper, sing-songs under the lights, tennis, kodaking, and all that other fun. And most of all the wonderful fellowship with friends from every section of the State. Just think!

This is the first letter I've written you in two months without mentioning Anniversary Day. I just must remind you that some of your offerings haven't been turned in yet. Let us not be lax in closing out our Conference year.

If we can help you in any way we are ready to serve you.

Sincerely,
Your Young People's Secretary.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

It is always gratifying to hear of our young people lining up with the church. Three of the young people at Shelby joined the church a few weeks ago. They came to their pastor, Bro. W. W. Woollard, and asked him to take them into the church at the League hour. That is one of the many beauties of our Methodism, we can receive people into the church at any time and any place. The young people at Shelby are very active in the League work.

On Easter Sunday morning at 6 o'clock the young people at Shannon came together for a devotional service. Sixty young people were present at this service and it was at 6 o'clock. Can you beat that? Rev. A. Y. Brown is pastor at Shannon. Brother Brown recently held his own meeting at Shannon and he says the young people were a great help to him in the meeting. They had their own prayer meetings during the meeting.

Our young people are thinking about this new program of work. Last Sunday evening, at Greenwood, a very interesting debate was held. The Leaguers from Itta Bena were debating against the Leaguers of Greenwood on the subject, "Resolved, that the Sunday school and the Epworth League should be combined." Greenwood was defending the affirmative side and won the decision in the debate. About fifty young people were present and the fellowship throughout the service was fine. Miss Rosa Lee Price is district secretary of the Greenwood district, and she says that her young people are already making their plans to attend the Assembly in June. Greenwood district is always well represented at the Assembly. We are going to hear from them again this year.

Brother F. H. McGee, Miss Martha Lauderdale and a number of others are actively engaged in the League work at Hernando. They have a well organized League there and it is doing splendid work. They have 17 members in the Book-a-Month club, 16 in the quiet hour covenant, 17 in the Fellow Workers' covenant and 33 in the Stewardship covenant. They also have their quota of Epworth Eras. Eight of their members are serving as officers and teachers in the Sunday school. So you see the League and the Sunday school are working together harmoniously at Hernaudo. This is certainly a fine report from Hernando. This League pledged $15 to the Mission Special.

We hope you will remember that we are giving special emphasis to Missions during the month of May. Put on a missionary program and give every leaguer an opportunity to pledge something for Missions. Let us do our very best for this worthy cause this time. We want to take our place in the front rank this year instead of bringing up the rear.

For the information of those in the Sardis district we will announce that Bro. Tate Scott of Batesville is the district secretary. Now for the information of those who know his father, Rev. M. E. Scott, we will say that you should not hold that against the boy. He is going to make a good district secretary in spite of that.

Yours sincerely

SUNDAY SCHOOL AT ST. FRANCISVILLE, LA.

At St. Francisville we have one of the most interesting Sunday school situations I have ever come in contact with. Our superintendent is Mr. R. E. Watson. He is himself a member of the Baptist Church and is the son of a Baptist preacher in the active pastorate. Since Mr. Watson has been superintendent, which has only been since shortly befor the sessions of our last Annual Conference our Sunday school has grown from an average attendance of from about forty to one hundred, the largest in its history.

On Easter Sunday we had the largest collection for our Louisiana Methodist Orphanage in the history of the charge.

The Sunday school recently purchased for the use of the pastor and the church a duplicating machine upon which we have been issuing a church bulletin. This bulletin is mailed to the membership of the church before Sunday.

On Easter Sunday night the choir of our Methodist church united with that of Grace Episcopal Church in St. Francisville in a great song service, which was given under the direction of Mrs. Clayton and Miss Bell Barrow.

"METHODIST MATTERS" FROM FIRST CHURCH, WATER VALLEY, MISS.

Dear Advocate: Last Sunday night we closed our pre-Easter revival at First Methodist Church, Water Valley, Miss. It was a success in every way. The crowds were large throughout the services. Last Sunday morning, notwithstanding the fact that there were services in every other church in town, we had to use the balcony to accommodate the crowd.

We had with us for this meeting Rev. Archie P. Stepheus of Kosciusko, Miss. Brother Stephens did the singing for all the services and besides held a service each afternoon for the children and young people. On Saturday mornings, at 10, he held a service for the general public. The pastor tried to preach at nights and in the Sunday services. Brother G. C. Schwartz preached at night at North Main Street Church. As a result of the pre-Easter effort, forty-one were converted and joined our churches, two going to the Baptist, nine to Brother Schwartz's church, and thirty to our church, aside from some who joined by letter.

Now, listen brethren, Archie Stephens has something that we ought to be using all over Mississippi and Louisiana all the year round. He is a past master at singing, drawing, and preaching the Gospel of Jesus. Arrange with him for next year if you cannot get him this year.

Fraternally yours,
J. D. WROTEN.

FROM GUEYDAN, LA.

Dear Brother Decell: There has been considerable discussion of hard times. I dare say no one will deny the fact that hard times have made some impression on all of us in depressing us and in discouraging us. But I believe hard times exist more largely in a state of mind than in any fundamental weakness of our economic structure. To support this theory I offer a report of the recent achievements of Gueydan Methodism. Our people here have painted, papered, and repaired the church and parsonage, and put a new roof on the parsonage. They have also provided for some new furniture for the parsonage, in which they were joined by our people at Kaplan, who gave a splendid linen shower and money. These improvements have cost in excess of $800, and the bills have been paid in cash raised under the pressure of hard times. New Cokesbury hymnals and a nice pulpit Bible had previously been provided. To add to the force of the blow which Gueydan Methodims has inflicted on hard times were a liberal offering on Easter for the Orphanage, a good response to the Kingdom Extension appeal, and an advance in the assessment for the support of the ministry. These achievements in the face of difficulties reflect credit on the faithful workers who gave their energy, time, and money, and on the friends of the church in the membership of the other churches who joined hands as Christians to accomplish this work.

But there has been cause for the preacher to rejoice in the progress that indicates the presence and prayers of those who labor under the leadership of the Holy Spirit. At Kaplan there has been a gratifying spirit of interest in the regular program of the church and in the ministry of the Word. At Gueydan Easter Sunday was a joyful occasion which bore the fruit of the labors of one of our Sunday school teachers, who presented twelve boys and girls from her class for membership in the church on profession of faith.

Surely the Lord has manifested in our midst the presence and power of the Holy Spirit and it is a happy preacher who reports these reasons for holding a contempt for hard times.

With every good wish for the Advocate, its readers, and a general report of victorious efforts, I am,

Fraternally yours,
J. B. SHEARER.

GOOD REVIVAL AT DREW

Dear Advocate: Spiritually speaking, Drew Methodism is on the upgrade. We make no boast as to finances. However, our failure in matters financial is not due to lack of interest in the great forward work of the church, nor yet is it due to lack of spiritual life in the church. Ask any man in any community of this great delta what is the matter as to lack of finances in our churches at this time and he will tell you.

Our Sunday school is flourishing, so is our Woman's Missionary Society and our Epworth Leagues.

On Easter Sunday we closed one of the most successful revivals it has ever been my pleasure to witness. I did the preaching myself, with the exception of one sermon preached on the Home by H. P. Lewis of Rosedale. In this revival I had the solid support of all the officials of our church, as well as other Christian people of the community. God heard and answered our prayers and gave us a gracious outpouring of His Holy Spirit. Seventeen were added on profession of faith in Christ and eight were received by certificate.

No man anywhere ever had a more loyal and congenial bunch of Christians to work with than are the Methodists in Drew. By God's grace and with their co-operation I am happy in my work.

J. TILLERY LEWIS, P. C.

CRIME AND PROHIBITION

American wets, prone to blame prison riots on prohibition, advise us to "look at England" where there is neither prohibition nor prison unrest.

But an English prison expert who has been here for several weeks, visiting seventy American prisons, does not find that prohibition has anything to do with our prison riots. Dr. Alexander Patterson, Commissioner of Prisons for England and Wales, says American prison unrest is due to these three things: Long sentences, overcrowding, and uncertainty of parole. Prohibition is not among his reasons.

As for overcrowding, it has already been demonstrated that a third of the State penitentiaries hold fewer inmates than they can accommodate; other penitentiaries are overcrowded through an increase in forgery, burglary, fraud, and similar crimes. Prohibition offenses cut but a small figure.

The English expert says there is no basis of comparison between crime here and abroad. In foreign countries, he says, a crime is not counted till it comes to trial; here it is reported to swell the crime rate as soon as an arrest is made or a complaint made to the police.

FROM HOULKA, MISS.

Dear Editor: The Laymen's League of the Houlka charge had a most unusual meeting at Wesley Chapel Church March 29, 1931, this being the day selected for an all day service for the charge.

A splendid representative congregation assembled at 11 o'clock with Bro. Burdett Craig, charge lay leader, presiding. The following program was given and was very much enjoyed:

Solo, by Mrs. C. P. Dodds, "The Garden of Prayer."

At 11 o'clock a. m., Rev. W. M. Sullivan, field commissioner of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss., delivered a most impressing message on the work and needs of our Home, at the conclusion of which an offering of $76 was given. Brother Sullivan expressed his appreciation of the offering and the work of the charge for the home.

At the noon hour a really wonderful lunch was served in old-fashioned Southern style and enjoyed by all. The fellowship of kindred hearts is like to that above.

At 1 o'clock p. m. we continued the program of the day, with congregational singing, and a splendid number by the Van Vleet quartet was given, they singing, "It is Well With My Soul," at the conclusion of which Mr. James G. Houston, lay leader of the North Mississippi Conference of New Albany, brought a splendid message on the "Stewardship of Life," which was followed by a duet, beautifully rendered by Mrs. Craig and Miss Flora McKnight. Then we came to the cream of the entire program when that loyal soldier of the cross, Bro. D. H. Hall of New Albany, Miss., brought a very helpful message on Christianity and the finances of the church of today. I am sure that each of us received a blessing from these messages, and were inspired to do a better work for the Lord and His Church. In conclusion a solo was rendered by Miss Nancy Ruth Dodds of Grenada College. We were also happy to have Rev. W. N. Dodds, from Pontotoc, Miss., who pronounced the benediction, bringing to a close a wonderful day for the charge.

Happy Again

"Nothing seemed to please Betty Jean," says Mrs. James W. Nolen, 113 Ceanter St., Dallas, Texas. "She was feverish and fretful. Her appetite was poor; she seemed bilious.

"A child specialist recommended California Fig Syrup and it certainly made my little girl happy, well again in a hurry. We have used it over three years for all her upsets."

Mothers by thousands praise this pure vegetable product. Children love it. Doctors recommend it for feverish, headachy, bilious, constipated babies and children; to open the bowels in colds or children's diseases.

Appetite is increased by its use; the breath is sweetened; coated tongue is cleared; digestion and assimilation are assisted; weak stomach and bowels are strengthened.

For your protection the genuine always bears the name California.

THE SCHOOL-DULL CHILD OFTEN LIFE-BRIGHT ADULT

A child may be school-dull and life-bright, says E. W. Butterfield, State commissioner of education for Connecticut in an attack in the April Journal of the National Education Association upon the extreme emphasis which some schools place upon the intelligence quotient as a determining factor in educational and vocational guidance.

"Children have at least four dimensions," says Commissioner Butterfield, "linguistic longitude, manual latitude, physical altitude, and that glorious fourth dimension known as 'stick-to-it-ive-ness.' Schools of the formal type which use one measure only, linguistic longitude, failed to note full ability or to predict ultimate success.

"The Jonathan Edwards and the Anne Bradsteets of today, with intelligence quotients above 125, from homes in which well stocked library shelves adorn the drawing rooms, and in which polysyllabic English has had a breakfast table use for many generations, may make good grades on mental examinations, and fail flatly in the tests of real life."

Dr. Butterfield illustrates his point from his own experience with students who indicated great promise in the intelligence quotients of their school-days and who failed to live up to that promise in after life. His article is replete with illustrations of students who showed mediocre ability at their school tasks and who achieved renown in their life occupations.

"There is no general intelligence and the term general intelligence tests is a misnomer, just as there is no general patriotism nor a general love. Like finite verbs, intelligence, patriotism, love must each take an object. Every individual is good for something and the function of the school is to discover these abilities and attitudes and make the most of them to the end of service to mankind and happiness for the individual.

"Life itself is the great examination. All who succeed in its severe tests are life-bright although they may have been called dull in school." N. E. A. Journal.

MOTHERS ARE LEARNING USES OF MAGNESIA

From the beginning of expectancy until baby is weaned. That's the time Phillips Milk of Magnesia performs the greatest service for many women.

It relieves the expectant mother's nausea, heartburn, "morning sickness," inclination to vomit; helps her digestion. Its mild but effective laxative action assures regular bowel movement.

Philips Milk of Magnesia is better than lime water for neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding. A teaspoonful of it does the work of a half pint of lime water. It is a mild laxative; harmless, almost tasteless.

All drug stores have Phillips Milk of Magnesia in generous 25c and 50c bottles. Always insist on the genuine, endorsed by physicians for 50 years.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of the Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875.

THE GREENVILLE DISTRICT MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

Our Association was reorganized in February in a meeting at Merigold. Rev. Melville Johnson was chosen president, and H. P. Lewis made secretary. W. W. Jones and his people helped to make the day worth while at Merigold with the hearty welcome extended us, the interest they took in all the proceedings of the day and the bountiful dinner they served at the church.

Our March meeting was held at Friars Point with E. E. McKeithen and his people. It was a good, profitable day. The main discussion was on "Pastoral Visiting," and the hour spent thus was profitable to all of us.

On Tuesday, April 7, we met at Pace, where H. R. McKee and his congregation at Pace had all things in readiness for a good day. It was indeed a good day. The weather was ideal; the largest number of preachers we have yet had at a meeting were present. The preaching by Rev. Mr. McKeithen was good for the soul. The dinner provided by the good women of Pace was a feast. And the hour spent in discussion of the revival brought a comment from one of the preachers—one of the best read men in the district—that he had received more help out of the discussion than out of any book he had read on the subject.

Our next meeting will, weather permitting, be at Moon Lake. Our plans are to try part of the day fishing for the finny tribe, and then discuss methods of being better fishers of men.

It would do you good, Brother Decell, to spend one of these days with us. How about meeting us at Moon Lake, June 2, the day set for our next meeting?

VERY NERVOUS AND DEPRESSED

"A few years ago, I was in a very nervous condition," writes Mrs. P. L. Reynolds, 327 W. Main St., Spartanburg, S. C. "I was terribly depressed. I felt every day just like something awful was going to happen. I did not sleep well at night. I had awful crying spells and did not know what in the world I was crying about. My mother told me to try Cardui. After my first bottle, I was better. I took several bottles and it did me a world of good. I quit having the nervous, blue feeling, and was soon all right. I have taken it since, just as a tonic."

HONOLULU LETTERS

Dearest Mother and Dad: Letters from you both have been received recently. I do love to get letters from home.

The Islands have not felt business depression as you people have in the States. The firms out here are making money coming and going. The tourists help them out on all sides. There is a new store to be opened before long—a Kress. It is the first in the Island. The people kept them out as long as possible. You see, these merchants make such large profits that they fight the chain stores with all their strength. Kress worked a fast trick on them to get the property, otherwise he would not have gotten in.

I got some good news the other day—a letter from the Hawaiian Pineapple Company, telling me to report for work on June 15. We get out of school on the 12th, and that will make it just right.

I see a lot of rich people out here; and if I were to live out here the rest of my life I would probably die and leave a good amount of money for my people, for there are good opportunities for a man out here in the business world.

Let me tell you about the entertainment I have had the past few days: Thursday night I attended the Round Table Club annual dinner, where all the wives met with us. I didn't have any partner, but I enjoyed my dinner and the rest of the program. Friday night I attended a reception given for Bishop and Mrs. Baker and the members of the Methodist Conference at the Susanna Wesley Home. This was very interesting. I got to meet the bishop, who was the speaker at the dinner the night before. Saturday I attended a Chinese funeral through curiosity, and that night I attended a Japanese wedding in the Budhist temple, and after the wedding I attended the reception that was given in the Young Men's Budhist Association Building. Sunday I taught a class of young boys in Sunday school and then ushered in church. There was a large crowd at church as the preachers of the Conference were here and the bishop preached. In the afternoon I rested on the beach. I slept most of the afternoon. There is no place like the sand beach for rest and sleep. The beach was crowded with tourists who were trying to get a tan, but were afraid that they would blister. Among the recent tourists were Marle Dresler, a famous movie star, and several other notables, such as the editors of the New York Times and the Atlanta Journal.

Six of us from the Institute attended the Chinese funeral. It was the funeral of an old fellow who once had been the personal servant of one of the governors out here. He was well fixed financially and was well known among the orientals. The funeral was announced in the paper, so we decided that it would be a good one to see. It was indeed a good funeral so far as a spectator could tell. We caught the parade as they were leaving the house. There were two motorcycle cops that led the procession. After the cops was a car full of men with drums, cymbals and a horn to make noise with. After this was the hearse and then a band in which were white people as well as orientals. After the band was a long string of hired mourners who certainly should have been paid well because they surely looked grieved. Most of them were accompanied by another person to hold them up and help them walk. Behind these were empty cars to pick the mourners up after they had walked about twelve blocks. The last car was full of people with horn and cymbals making a lot of racket to ward off the evil spirits. I do believe, if I were an evil spirit I would certainly keep away from the racket they make. After we left the house we drove up the street about ten blocks and stopped to see the procession again, and to see them throw out the paper with holes in it for the evil spirits to jump through. I got some of the paper and then we proceeded to go to the graveyard. When we got there we saw a fire burning, and upon inquiry we found that they were burning the man's clothes so as to burn any evil spirits that might remain in the clothes.

When the procession got to the grave, those in the first car started to making noise to ward off the evil spirits while the body was being brought to the grave. At the grave the mourners had pads on the ground where they got down on their hands and knees and surely made a racket mourning. There was practically no service, for all that happened was one of the fellows got at the head of the grave and chanted something in Chinese and threw some rice on the casket. It was then lowered in the grave and a large crockery jar, containing food, I suppose, was put in with it. The grave was filled up, and while this was being done another fire was built and all kinds of things were put on it, such as prayers and spirit money. This spirit money is nothing but paper with tin foil pasted on it. I got some of it. Then there was a paper trunk that is know as a spirit trunk that had all kinds of spirit money in it, and this was thrown on the fire. There was some food put down in front of the grave also before the casket was put in the ground. This was for the spirits to eat to keep them from getting angry. After the grave was filled the flowers were put on the grave and the food was dumped on the ground. When the people were leaving an old skinny Hawaiian woman came and picked this food up. They say that she comes after every funeral and gets this food.

I have written you a long letter and hope you enjoy it.

SATYAGRAHA

By REV. D. B. RAULINS, Assistant Editor.

A ninety-six pound man armed with a loin cloth and a spinning-wheel does not impress the Western mind as a very promising candidate for a place in the ranks of Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon and Washington as a leader of men. He does not fit into the picture of "arms and a man" celebrated by Virgil in his memorable epic. Virgil puts "arms" first and the "man" later, and all down through history we have been disposed to keep the two quite close together, following rather faithfully the order of Virgil.

Apparently we shall be compelled to find a new classification for Mahatma Gandhi. The multitudes who follow him are not "martialed hosts." There is no "roll of stirring drum." With them there is no rhythmic tramp of legions, no "bristling bayonets," no thunder of cannon, no rivers of blood. Say what we may for either the wisdom or the folly of the man and his method we must observe that this frail little Indian is at one and the same time making the most unique and the most colossal experiment of all history. It involves the social, political, economic, educational and religious life of 300,000,000 people—and the rest of the world. With one puny hand he is trying to fit this 300,000,000 for self-government, and with the other he is trying to prevail upon the greatest empire of our time to permit the experiment. When we attempt, therefore, to classify or explain him we can find only one character of all history by whom we may measure him, and that is Jesus of Nazareth. His spirit, method, and objective are more nearly like those of the Nazarene than of any other.

Trying to avoid claiming for this little Hindu any more than he claims for himself, still we must account for him in some way. Before leaving him with our denial of his Christianity let us try to feel out somewhat the vast matter with which he is involved. Our definition of Christianity that shuts him out seems to meet with his approval. He does not call himself Christian. However, we should not lean too heavily upon our formal definition. We must remember that there is a big half of Christianity that may not be comfortably housed in our formal accounting. That is the practical and ethical half. In rating Gandhi we shall be compelled to take note of this phase of the matter. Measured by this standard he sweeps past many of us and easily qualifies for consideration.

What is the explanation of Gandhi? His own Indian word must answer. It is "satyagraha." Put into words more euphonious to our American ears, it is "soul-force" or "truth-force." In other words, if we are to classify Gandhi or satisfactorily account for him, we are forced out of the realm of the physical and material at once and into that of the spiritual. In this the Mahatma may be more ancient and more modern than we think.

Some months ago this account of a conversation between Roger W. Babson, the statistician, and Chas. P. Steinmetz, the scientist, was printed in the Nashville Christian Advocate:

"Charles P. Steinmetz, who was unanimously recognized by the General Electric Company and other great similar organizations as the world's foremost electrical engineer, was once visiting my home.

"While talking over with him prospective future inventions in connection with radio, aeronautics, power transmission, etc., I asked him, 'What line of research will see the greatest development during the next fifty years?' After careful thought he replied: 'Mr. Babson, I think the greatest discovery will be made along spiritual lines. Here is a force (black face mine) which history clearly teaches has been the greatest power in the development of men and history. Yet, we have been merely playing with it and have never seriously studied it as we have the physical forces. Some day people will learn that material things do not bring happiness and are of little use in making men and women creative and powerful. Then the scientists of the world will turn their laboratories over to the study of God and prayer and the spiritual forces which as yet have hardly been scratched. When this day comes the world will see more advancement in one generation than it has seen in the past four.'"

From this statement of the great engineer it would appear that Gandhi has already erected his laboratory and has begun experiments.

Hear this statement of one who knows the Mahatma:

"To discover the secret of Gandhi, we must 'behold the man.' In no leader of the race has the power of the spirit ever come to such singleness of expression as in this Indian. Nothing else avails to explain the matchless character of his influence. His person is stripped as naked of grace as his body of clothes. His physical presence is completely insignificant. His intellectual capacity, as compared with Tolstoy's, is meagre. Unlike Jesus, he commands no magic of words. Unlike Mohammed, he has no consuming passion of temperament and will. Among religious leaders, he comes nearer to St. Francis, perhaps, than any other; but even here he lacks that lovely esthetic sensibility, that native instinct of poetry and song, which blossoms with such immortal fragrance in the Assisian's 'Little Flowers.' A frail, puny, utterly unimportant-looking man is the Mahatma. But in this trivial lantern of the flesh, there burns a 'light that never was on land or sea.' His deep and lustrous eyes, his lovely smile, his utter charity of mind, his gentleness and peace and unfailing compassion—these reveal at once the inner glory. The poverty of Gandhi's personality in every other respect serves but to isolate and thus make plain his essential quality of life. Other men can be explained by gifts of birth, or education, or personality, or intellect, or speech. Gandhi knows none of these things. Clothed upon with the frailest garment of fleshly incarnation ever known, the Mahatma walks among us as pure spirit."

At this point we come upon a matter that is central and essential to our Christianity. We are familiar with physical force. Every day we see many applications of it. Vast armies and vast machines are the eloquent symbols of it. It is the force of the things, the force of the material universe. It is the force of the storm, the earthquake and the fire of Elijah. But this force was designed to be controlled and operated by that of the force represented by "the still small voice." And it is this latter force with which Gandhi has to do. It is strangely like the suggestion of the prophet: "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." Has Gandhi made the discovery that Dr. Steinmetz anticipates for this fifty years?

A press dispatch:

"Karachi, India, March 26.—Mounting a platform in the middle of the great open-air stadium where the Congress party is meeting, Mahatma Gandhi today held tens of thousands of Indians spellbound for an hour while he reiterated his creed of non-violence."

And yet Gandhi is not a Christian. He disowns the title, making it unnecessary for us to exclude him with our definitions. Howbeit, he does acknowledge his debt to the Sermon on the Mount and other teachings of Jesus. He is not a Christian, and yet he says, "To me God is Truth and Love; God is ethics and morality; God is fearlessness; God is the source of Light and Life, and yet he is above and beyond all these. God is conscience. . . . . In his boundless love he permits the atheist to live. He is the searcher of hearts. He transcends speech and reason. He knows us and our hearts better than we do ourselves." Not a Christian, and yet he names these as his favorite Christian hymns: "Lead Kindly Light," "When I Survey the

"THE FIELDS OF PEACE"

BY WILLIAM C. ALLEN

An Egyptian poet, 3500 B. C., wrote:

Mine eyes have gazed on the Fields of Peace,
Whose harvest is bursting with plenty;
The Fields of Peace have been given to me as my city.

There are fields that promise the harvest of war to-day; let us survey the Fields that promise the harvest of Peace.

In Great Britain over 200,000 signatures have been obtained supporting the International Declaration of World Disarmament. Nearly fifty countries under the auspices of the Women's International League are co-operating. These declarations, representing a world-wide movement, are to be presented to the World Disarmament Conference next year.

The United States section of the Women's International League is now endeavoring to secure 1,000,000 signatures to a Disarmament Petition. This petition is being circulated in 26 countries. The British section already has secured 250,000 signatures. The League of Women Voters, and other women organizations, are everywhere tremendously alive as to the peace question. They remember the millions of innocent women and children who were brutally destroyed in the great war!

Many mass meetings on behalf of peace have been held the past few months in Great Britain, Switzerland, France, Holland, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, Hungary. At a great gathering in Queen's Hall, London, Arthur Henderson, Foreign Secretary, said: "If the people want disarmament they can have it. If they will exert their will they can compel results." The observations of the writer of this article when in Europe last year confirm this statement. While the people of Europe, suffering from "preparedness" and war, as the people of the United States have not suffered, are craving the assurance of peace, what is the situation in our own country? Where are our mass meetings?

As Christians everywhere are learning of the moral break-downs associated with war and its aftermath, they are becoming shocked at the pictures presented to them. As details become known to our church life the resolve to abolish war is intensified.

The church is stirring herself all over the world. Thus the last Annual Assembly of the Disciples of Christ, with 7000 delegates from 35 countries, held in Washington, D. C., unanimously passed a resolution declaring that "war as a method of settling International disputes is incompatible with the teaching and example of Jesus Christ. Many other church groups are expressing the same conviction. Such expressions represent an enlarging vision of the nature of the Kingdom of God on earth.

One of the most pugnacious countries I have ever visited is beautiful and brave little New Zealand. The English New World, to which at times I am indebted for much information, tells of how the New Zealand churches have entered the great international movement on behalf of peace. The "Church's United Peace Manifesto," drawn up by representatives from all the larger branches of the Christian Churches in New Zealand, has, typically of other church pronouncements, declared:

"Being assured that war as a means of settling disputes between nations is utterly opposed to the mind of Christ, believe that the time has come for the churches . . . to take a definite stand against war . . .we regard the war system and the gospel of Christ as diametrically and irreconcilably opposed . . . we shall appeal to the churches . . . to be unceasing in their advocacy of disarmament and the endeavor to quicken in the mind of the community a sense of the momentous urgency of this matter."

It has been authoritatively stated that the Methodists and Friends (Quakers) maintain secretariats devoted to the extension of the New Testament propaganda of peace. Why should not our church brethren everywhere maintain secretarial work on behalf of this fundamental? We more and more clearly understand that frequently army life, battleships, international fears, the very spirit of war tend to pull down the glorious spiritual edifice that the Church Universal is so laboriously endeavoring to build up.

At the close of the "war for democracy," with the altering of boundaries, Protestants in some countries were transferred to the control of other countries which have state religions. Sufferings have frequently been sustained by these minorities. Cultural minorities are also said to be suffering much. The League of Nations, in whose activities the United States has participated through the medium of over 20 commissions and committees, is devoting much attention to these vexing problems.

International anxiety caused by naval competition between France and Italy has been alleviated by at least a temporary agreement between those powers. The economic situation in Italy is assigned as a compelling reason—sometimes it is well to be poor. Unhappy economic factors are leading to the stabilizing of friendly International relations in not a few instances abroad. It costs too much to fight!

After years of evading the truth, brilliant newspaper correspondents, financial authorities, preachers, a few politicians and some statesmen are admitting that the Great War was the underlying cause of the economic stress of the world today. Inflation of values, speculations, insane legislation, greedy and commerce-diminishing laws, immoralities, crime, are now admitted to be the inevitable results of an orgy of four years of destruction of men, women and children, of the material accumulations of years, of moral and spiritual values and normal human relationships. These admissions, so long delayed, should preclude the thought of another holocaust. But if we are going to avoid another catastrophe our youth must be instructed as to the false glamour, the modern futility of war. Are we teaching them?

While some perfectly well-meaning people, who never had an opportunity of seeing a battlefield, are urging extensive "preparedness," and ignoring the dangerous rivalry that "preparedness" invites, some of our eminent generals—who know what war is—speak in no uncertain terms. It, for instance, is an encouragement to every thoughtful citizen who desires to conserve the moral and material resources of America, to hear that participant in many battles, Major-General John F. O'Ryan, in an anti-war address exclaim, "Let us wage peace!"

Many distinguished people abroad, knowing the tortures of human conflict, are glad to be called "pacifists." Their number is increasing. Among them is the great scientist of Europe, Dr. Einstein, who, when recently in this country, affirmed, that if only 2 per cent of the people refused to fight, governments would be compelled to find some sane method wherewith to settle international disputes.

Only a few examples of the rapid progress of the peace movement can be introduced into one short article. Listen to an interview with Canon Donaldson, of Westminster Abbey, last year. That eminent church leader has stated: "There was a moment in 1914 when an ominous hush fell upon the world. Mankind was listening for the voice of the Church (Universal). The moment passed—the Church failed! It was within the power of a united Church in 1914 to have prevented the Great War happening. More important yet, it is within the power of the Church today definitely to prevent another war. . . . The Christian must, because he is a Christian, refuse to kill. To the government his reply must be, 'I shall not shoot, not even if you shoot me because I refuse!' Yes, martyrdom, if necessary, in the last resort. Nor, in my profound belief, would the martyrs be lacking!"

With a world-protest against war from plain citizens and clergy, do not let us deceive ourselves. I ask the readers of these lines everywhere to bountifully sow the jubilant seeds of peace. They will yield a plentious harvest. We must be industrious in the fruitful fields of peace!

ENGLAND AT THE RISE OF WESLEYANISM

By Rev. Jno. F. Foster, D.D.

To fully and properly understand the religious condition of England at the rise of the Wesleyan movement would call for a long and much more complete presentation than the time and space granted me will permit; yet we may touch upon it.

Catholicism under Wolsey and Merry Hal was not a spiritual power, but the tool of the politician and the king.

Protestantism, as introduced by Henry VIII, "The Defender of the Faith," was spiritually no better, being born in the sinful, lustful heart of the king as a means of satisfaction to his conscience and the conscience of his nation, by way of defense of his action in the divorcing of Catherine of Aragon.

Thus begun, what could we expect, for a stream flows no higher than its head, and with Blue-bearded Henry as the head of the Church, appointing ecclesiastics to office, and laymen as well, without regard to their character, what then of the little man in office?

Cranmer, on whom as no man, the Church turns and its orders rest, was appointed by the king to office as Archbishop of Canterbury, though a married man, his ordination being in every way irregular and transferred to the Church of England when the reformation began.

The authority which put a man in office was not the election of the Church, his fitness or his ordination, but the will of the king. With such the rule, where would the spirit of the Church spiritually lead?

The Church of England had no system of discipline for its clergy; a clergyman might commit any species of immorality, short of a felony, without losing his clerical character:

"Public opinion had its code of morals, but the member of the Church had no standard to test his action."

The truth, however, was working, for varied translations of the Bible were made, and Cranmer, Ridley and Latimer and others were true men and pious ministers.

During the reign of Edward VI thirty-five editions of the New Testament and fourteen of the complete Bible were printed. Mary, however, turned tables, and Popery came in, and the priest, to hold office, merely changed church allegiance.

When Elizabeth came to the throne, of the nine thousand and four hundred clergymen only one hundred and seventy-two, when Protestantism came back, left their sees and preferments rather than change their religion from the extreme of the Popery of Mary to the Protestantism of Elizabeth. The Church retained so much of the usage and customs of Rome that many of the best of the Protestants left it. Then came the rapid growth of Protestantism and its protest, reformation and honest rebellion against the reign of James I, which reign gave us the authorized edition of the Bible, the Book of Sports for the promotion of sport for Sunday amusement, giving full freedom for the dancing of men and women, archery for men, leaping and vaulting May games, Whitsun-ales, Morris dances, May poles and other sports to follow the Sunday service, and the king gave commandment to the bishops to see that the people practiced all these on Sunday.

The line of demarkation between the State Church and Puritanism now became more marked, and Archbishop Laud encouraged King Charles I in his Papist proclivities. War followed, Charles and Laud lost their heads, and Cromwell became the head of the government. The Puritans deposed all they could, for one cause and another, and not always for religious motives, and then, when in office, practiced the same things they had condemned when seeking office.

However, with the reaction, a moral code came into effect, rigid indeed, anaconian in severity. Public amusements, May poles, dancing, every form of diversion was prohibited, and a fiddler was put in stocks. The people saw that they had exchanged an hereditary monarchy for an absolute government, and the way was prepared for the Restoration, and with Charles II and his unusual wickedness, the character and extent of which we cannot discuss, the floodgates of licentiousness and vice were opened, and the court became a brothel, which example corrupted public morals to such an extent that it required a century to redeem it.

James II followed Charles II, and his reign as a Catholic and his pig-headed obstinacy caused his dethronement. William and Mary then ascended the throne, and an act protecting the rights of the English people was passed. Many of the best leaders of the Church, largely the spiritual element, would not take the oath of allegiance to William and Mary, and were expelled from the Church, much to the loss of the Church.

Among these were the Archbishop of Canterbury, four bishops and fourteen hundred clergymen.

Anne and George I followed, the Church remaining much the same, and George II came to the throne. All of these events brought about the condition we find at the rise of Methodism.

A few words more, and we close.

Bishop Burnett, in speaking of the men, who became priests of the Church, says: "The easiest part of knowledge is that to which they are the greatest strangers—I mean the plainest part of the Scriptures, which they say their tutors in the university never mentioned the reading of to them—so that they can give no account, or at least a very imperfect one, of the contents even of the Gospels. Those who read have few books and never seem to have read the Scriptures. Many cannot give a tolerable account even of the Catechism itself, how short and plain soever."

He again says: "Politics and party eat out among us not only study and learning, but that which is the only thing that is more valuable—a true sense of religion."

Bishop Butler, in the advertisement to his "Analogy," says: "It is come, I know not how, to be taken for granted by many persons that Christianity is not so much a subject of inquiry, but that it is now at length discovered to be fictitious, and accordingly they treat it as if it were an agreed point among all people of discernment, and nothing remained but to set it up as an object of mirth and ridicule."

Archbishop Secker says: "It hath already brought in such dissoluteness and contempt of principle in the higher part of the world and such profligateness, intemperance and fearlessness of committing crimes in the lower, as must, if this torrent of impiety stop not, become absolutely fatal."

Dr. Isaac Watts refers to religion as "the dying religion of the world."

Isaac Taylor says of the Anglican Church, "That it had an ecclesiastical system under which the people of England had lapsed into heathenism or a state hardly to be distinguished from it."

Wesley says: "It was just at this time, when we wanted little of filling of the measure of our iniquities, that two or three clergymen of the Church of England began vehemently to call sinners to repentance."

One usage which also may have aided in the retrograde was that of appointing the third son to the Church, whether fitted or not. Green, in his English History, says that had it not been for Wesleyanism, England would have been visited with a Reign of Terror and Blood similar to that which visited France under the guillotine and revolution.

AN OPEN LETTER TO MR. CLAYTON RAND, EDITOR GULFCOAST GUIDE

Dear Sir: In your issue of February 13, in your editorial column, you challenge the bootleggers, the cranks, and the blind to show through your columns the error of your arguments that prohibition is a failure. As one of the cranks I accept your challenge. You say that Canada saw the error of her way and went wet. But you did not give any of the facts resulting. I quote from an editorial in the Christian Herald: "The Ontario Liquor Board reports liquor sales of $1,000,000 a week. The Alberta Board says that the second year of government control they sold 4,000,000 gallons of intoxicants; the Quebec Commissions say that they disposed of 1,000,000 gallons of beer more than last year. Seven provincial liquor control boards for a Canadian territory with 10,000,000 people report a booze sale of $160,000,000, or $16 per capita. The Montreal Star says that drunkenness among women has increased 53 per cent. The Saskatchewan liquor boards says that arrests for drunkenness increased 125 per cent the first 8 months of government control, and they add the statement that as much liquor is sold by bootleggers as by the government stores. While the British Columbia statement is that bootleggers increased 111 per cent the first year of government control." Has Canada helped matters any? Do we want such conditions here?

You say that Finland recognized the failure of her experiment, although not really dry, having 3 per cent beer. Is it not a fact that a recent press dispatch said that in a recent vote in the Finish Assembly to increase the alcoholic content of their beer from one and six-tenths to three per cent, that the motion failed by a vote of 99 against to 88 for? You say that it is being recognized everywhere that prohibition is a moral failure. Who recognizes that? The Churches of the United States have stood squarely for Prohibition and its enforcement, with but few exceptions. The General Conference of the Southern Methodist Church, in its last session at Dallas, Texas, gave a very strong pronouncement in favor of the Eighteenth Amendment and Prohibition. This church alone has 7000 ministers and more than 2,500,000 members. The International Men's Congress held in Cincinnati, Ohio, December 11 and 12, 1930, and representing 20,000,000 people, stood squarely against the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and for the enforcement of the Volstead law. The President of the United States does not so recognize it. Moral conditions all over the world have been worse since the World War and Prohibition has not been to blame for it. Look at these statistics from Great Britain, entitled, "Home Office Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1928," presented to Parliament, obtainable from His Majesty's Stationery, Kingsbury, London, W. C."

This report lists certain crimes and their increase, since just preceding the World War as follows: housebreaking, 72 per cent increase; shopbreaking, 129 per cent increase, frauds by agents, 177 per cent increase; obtaining money by false pretences, 134 per cent increase; other frauds, 195 per cent increase. The British police attribute these increases to the motor age exclusively. The report declares: "It cannot be doubted that crimes against property have increased most in country districts, outside the great cities. And that, therefore, the increase in this class of crime is due to the incoming of the motor age." So it is clear that Prohibition is not to blame for the increase of crime in Great Britain. And if the police there are right in assuming that the motor age is responsible for it, how much more could it be true of the United States?

Let me now quote from a letter written by Mr. Joy Elmer Morgan, February 2, 1931. He is editor of the National Education Association Journal and writes as follows: "There is not the slightest foundation for saying that conditions are worse in the high schools and colleges since the adoption of the 18th amendment. All the facts I have ever seen show just the opposite. High school enrollment has increased from two million to five million since 1920. Many young people have been brought into high schools who never could have had a chance with the saloon competing for their fathers' dollars. Undoubtedly many of the additional three million come from homes of the poorer classes. The ones who drink represent an insignificant minority. I have talked with hundreds of school men who almost invariably tell me that the newspaper reports of drinking among high school students are either exaggerated or without foundation. The school men with whom I have talked recently tell me that conditions are steadily improving.

"Next to the establishment of the Christian church and the founding of the common school the coming of the Eighteenth Amendment has done more for the welfare of childhood and youth than any advance in the history of civilization."

Mr. Editor, we are agreed on one thing—we want Temperance. And I am contending that the best way to get it is to stand for and help enforce the law we now have. The above facts speak strongly in favor of it. I could cite many more but time and space forbid just now.

With highest personal regards, I am sincerely,

JAMES L. SELLS.

CHILD HEALTH DAY

A Proclamation by the President of the United States of America

Whereas, the Congress by joint resolution has authorized and requested the President of the United States of America to proclaim annually that May Day is Child Health Day; and,

THE HISTORY OF CENTENARY COLLEGE WILL BE ON THE MARKET JUNE 1.

Some of the happiest years of my life were spent as a student of Centenary College at Jackson, Louisiana. I went there in 1900 with only $11.50 in my pocket to get an education. I have had many big moments in life since then; I have written books, been elected to General Conference, been what they call an "honor guest" at several banquets, had loving and kind-hearted friends bill me for a lecture as "Author, editor, lecturer;" I have played with my four children and took them from the arm of the nurse and danced with them about the room when they first arrived, giving them as royal a welcome as I knew how. So you see, life has been good to me. But those student days in old Centenary, when all the world was young; as far as I was concerned, were days of gladness and 'noctes ambrosiana.' What I am trying to say is that they were, in the language of our adolescent boys and girls, "keen." How to be happy though busted—I could write a book on that—and yet no matter how poor a fellow was he was never busted at Centenary College. He may have had to sell eggs to buy a necktie, but as long as he was half way trying to do the right thing he had lots of friends in those professors and among the students.

How well do I recall that faculty back there in 1900. There was Dr. I. W. Cooper, President, and Professors Griffin, and Evans, and Campbell, and Crisler, and J. M. Sullivan, and W. H. Carter, a mathematical genius, affectionately called "Bull," for he was built on generous lines, physically and every other way. And then some of those boys who were there: I. W. Cooper, Jr., and Ellis Cooper, and Jethro Vaught, and Walter Cline, busted then, but a millionaire now, and Henry Harper, my room-mate, and W. L. Doss, and Jeff Holliday, and John Sutton, and W. D. Kleinschmidt, and others now serving the Church in pastorate. And I recall my first presiding elder, Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker, and Professor Upton, who came in 1901, and Dr. Henry Beach Carre, and Professor Harrell, and Professor J. M. Roberts, and his namesake. I recall room 24 in the west wing, where I burned the midnight oil, figuratively and literally, for we used kerosene in those days; and I remember the "mess hall" where I waited on the table to make a living, and helped others absorb one; and I remember a debate we Franklins had with the Unions. And I recall my dear friend, the Rev. Harry W. May, and his fine family, and the Methodist Church at Jackson.

You will recall that Ponce de Leon, becoming sick in south Louisiana, went north and found the fountain of youth at Jackson, drinking of the waters of that little creek, which he called "Rio Feliciana" or River of Felicity. He said this was the fountain of youth, and I am inclined to agree with him, for I have found the fountain of youth in the same place within the last year, for during this time I have been reconstructing the past from precious documents: the minutes of Trustee meetings of the College of Louisiana and Centenary College, 1825-1906, and the minutes of every faculty meeting from 1828 to 1906; and besides that I have been just ramping through original documents, catalogues, letters, etc., and I have been as happy as a horse in sweet clover. And I want to tell you that the thing has been worth while. I have been digging up forgotten things, and I am trying to save them for Centenary and the Church and the cause of education in general by putting them in a book. There are pictures of B. M. Drake, descended from Sir Francis Drake, and a tall man if there ever was one; pictures of William Winans, W. H. N. Magruder, David O. Shattuck, the first President of Centenary at Jackson, Professor George H. Wiley, A. R. Holcombe, Presidents Andrews, Rush, A. G. Miller, Hunnicutt, C. C. Miller, Cooper, Carre, C. W. Carter; sketches of these men who deserve to live, and will live because of this book on Centenary. Because of the richness of the original sources we hope to give you a colorful history of Centenary which will be detailed enough—yet not too much—and kinetic. Coincident with the history of the college we will paint in a background of the times, sketches of almost forgotten things, and yet intimately related to the story of Centenary because they powerfully reflected the South. We are trying to make a book which will not only be valuable as history for our Church, but we want to give a comprehensive view of education, and more intimately the history of education in Louisiana as that influenced the history of Centenary.

No history of Centenary College would be complete without detailing the heroism of the Board of Trustees, and when we think of the Board we think of that powerful giant, now ascended, Bishop John C. Keener; and we think of Captain J. N. Pharr, and J. H. Keller, and others.

We shall, of course, give the history of the college at Shreveport, and pay deserved tribute to Dr. Felix R. Hill, Dr. Robert H. Wynn, and President George S. Sexton.

The Title of the book will be, "A Burning Torch and a Flaming Fire: the Story of Centenary College," and we will try to have that torch shed as much light as possible from the time the first spark leapt into life until it was in full flame.

There will be a limited first edition, and if you want your name in the pot to get in on this valued first edition you had better take your pen in hand right now and drop a line to Dr. George S. Sexton, President of Centenary College, Shreveport, Louisiana, and tell him that you want to get on the honor roll. The book will contain over 80,000 words, have six full-page illustrations, pictures of the center building and the east and west wings, at Jackson, and a picture or two of Shreveport, and others. The price will be $.........., and if you were ever a student at old Jackson and you don't get anything out of the text, the picture of the old buildings will be worth the price of admission. As far as the text is concerned, I think that if ever you start reading it you will find out that it marches, and if you don't want to lose sleep staying up that night you are advised to begin reading it the first thing after breakfast, for you will finish it before you put it down. If I wasn't too modest I could say a good deal more. Prove that you are one of the illuminati by writing Dr. Sexton, and telling him that this order for the book enrolls you in the Order of Those Who Know a Good Thing When They See It.

THE BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Brookhaven District Conference met in Crystal Springs on the evening of April 6 and continued until the afternoon of April 8. The conference was royally entertained by the pastor-host, Rev. J. E. Gray, with the assistance of his efficient committees.

The opening sermon was preached by Rev. M. K. Miller, after which the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by Dr. J. L. Decell, presiding elder, assisted by Rev. J. G. Galloway and Rev. C. C. Griffing, two of our honored superannuates living at Crystal Springs.

The executive session of the conference was called to order Tuesday morning by Dr. Decell. He, reading Acts 17:1-9, made very impressive and appropriate remarks upon this Scripture, after which the conference was duly organized by electing W. B. Alsworth as secretary and B. M. Hunt assistant secretary.

Every pastor of the district was present as well as many of the district officers and an unusually large number of the lay delegates. It was also noted that several of the charges at some time during the conference had everyone of their members seated.

The preaching done throughout the conference was of an unusually high type and spiritual fervor.

All the various interests of the church were represented by those selected to represent them.

Among the many enjoyable and appreciated hours of the conference was the presence of the chorus girls of the Millsaps Glee Club, who very beautifully rendered several numbers.

Our conference had many visitors in attendance and at one time four of the seven presiding elders of our Conference were present. Dr. J. G. Snelling, representing the Memorial Home of New Orleans, and Mr. Fred T. Barnett, representing the General Hospital Board, were the visitors from outside the bounds of our Conference.

The conference extended a rising vote of thanks and appreciation to Dr. Decell, the chairman, for the efficient, business-like and brotherly way in which he conducted the entire session of the conference.

The following were elected to serve as district officers and delegates to the next session of the Annual Conference: District lay leader, Curtis Youngblood; associate lay leaders, A. H. Jones and Prof. E. F. Puckett; director of Golden Cross, Floyd R. Williams; ad interim and licensing committee, C. W. Crisler, G. F. Winfield, W. B. Alsworth and V. R. Landrum; delegates to the Annual Conference, Curtis Youngblood, J. M. Ewing, W. W. Godbold, Mrs. J. L. Decell, P. K. Grice, W. T. Denman, James W. Hart, H. H. Goza, J. Ben Smith, S. E. Denman, J. S. Decell, J. P. Carruth and R. J. Fairchild.

Wesson was selected as the place to hold the next session of the district conference.

W. B. ALSWORTH, Secretary.

THE SARDIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The sixty-first annual session of the Sardis District Conference convened in the Methodist church at Senatobia, April 9, at 10 a. m., with Rev. J. M. Bradley, presiding elder, in the chair. After the roll call of delegates and the completion of the organization of the conference the following brethren, representing varied interest of the church, were introduced to the conference: Dr. B. F. Lewis, of the Orphans' Home at Jackson; Dr. H. Conrad Blackwell, Millsaps College; Rev. A. T. McIlwain, representing the cause of the superannuates; Rev. W. L. Robinson, representing the Young People's Work of the Conference; Dr. J. G. Snelling, representing the cause of the Memorial Mercy Home in New Orleans; Dr. John R. Countiss of Grenada College; Dr. W. C. Curtis, representing the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and Rev. E. G. Mohler, Home and Foreign Missionary Secretary, Grenada.

The following were visitors: Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, Grenada; Rev. E. H. Cunningham, presiding elder of the Grenada district; Rev. A. C. McCorkle of Winona, Miss.; Rev. W. W. Woollard, Shelby, Miss.; Rev. R. S. Lawson, Memphis; Rev. N. G. Golden, Holly Springs, Miss.

The preaching of the occasion was of the high order, being done by Dr. J. G. Snelling, of New Orleans; Rev. A. C. McCorkle, Winona, and Bishop Denny, who brought a most helpful message the last day from the prophecies of Micah. It was said on the floor of the conference by one of the visiting brethren, that the spiritual atmosphere of this conference was the most wholesome of any of the conferences he had visited.

The following were elected as delegates to the Annual Conference: Herbert Holmes, Dr. R. A. Meek, Dr. L. Minor, J. E. Birmingham, F. F. Veazey, A. D. Elder, Mrs. R. M. Short, Grady Johnson, Mrs. Dan Comfort and John W. Kyle.

John W. Kyle was elected lay leader of the district, with Dr. L. L. Minor and Warren Stewart as associate lay leaders.

The presiding elder, Rev. J. M. Bradley, despite the fact he was suffering from a severe cold, at times having fever of 102 degrees, dispatched the business of the Conference with the ease and dignity of a bishop. He made it clear from the outset that he wanted the brethren to feel at perfect ease and free on all occasions of the conference.

Brother Luter and his faithful wife, with noble assistance from the Woman's Missionary Society, and the faithful laymen of the Senatobia Church, did themselves honor in the cordial manner in which they so splendidly entertained the conference. We shall ever be indebted to them for such fine hospitality.

W. C. BEASLEY, Secretary.

SOME THINGS PREACHED BY JOHN, "THE MESSENGER"

By Rev. John D. Ellis

(Concluded)

34. John turned the disobedient to the wisdom of the just. (Luke 1:17.)

35. He made ready a people prepared for the Lord. (Luke 1:17.)

36. He preached that Jesus Christ was the Bridegroom, and that he was the friend of the Bridegroom. (John 3:29.)

John rejoiced greatly when the Bridegroom began his ministry. It was his mission to point to the Bridegroom, and direct believers, who constitute the bride, to the Bridegroom.

He was a burning and shining light, to lead the people to Christ.

John's very zeal and quality of soul was a baptism which others could have through the Spirit, and which afterward came upon many.

John preached baptism in that sense: quality of soul: enduement. People today who are "burning and shining lights," are essentially and Scripturally baptized.

The water which John used symbolized purity and consecration and the enrichments of the Spirit.

John knew that his disciples would not amount to anything unless they became disciples of Christ, who came from heaven as the Son of God, the Saviour of the world: No dependence but on Christ.

John was willing to decrease that Christ might increase.

37. John preached that all flesh is grass and the goodliness is as the flower of the field. (Isa. 40:6.)

Part of his message was: "The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, but the word of our God shall stand forever." (Isa. 40:8.)

John's ministry was in the Summer when luxuriance met the eye, and when the face of nature was adorned with a carpet of flowers, and herbage: But he preached that the beauty would soon be gone, that the grass would wither and the flowers fade. He compared the fate of men to the rapid transformation of nature. Part of his message was the brevity of human life, and he gave emphasis to all the doctrines of eschatology: There was a hurry-up call to John's voice in the wilderness; and he emphasized the fact that "now the axe is laid unto the root of the trees."

John preached the gospel of Christ as the divine remedy for the evils of life, and for the darkness and corruption of death.

By "the word of our God" (Isa. 40:8), we are to understand the gospel of Christ, which is unalterable and permanent, and which John actually preached.

38. "And many other things exhorting, he announced glad tidings to the people." (Luke 3:18, literal). "Euaggelizo," to announce good news, to preach the gospel:

John preached the gospel to the people as truly as Peter, and Paul ever preached it:

The word used by Luke is the Greek word which means "to evangelize," "to preach the gospel."

John preached the gospel while teaching the people their many duties, and while delivering many exhortations.

He did not preach some things which the apostles afterward preached, but he did preach faith in Christ as the Son of God, the Saviour of the world:

He preached that grace and truth came by him: In introducing the Messiah to the people, of necessity he had to know much about him and his mission, and what he did know and preach, was a big part of the gospel.

He directed the minds of his disciples to the Messiah, who was already in their midst, whom they would soon see, and know as the Saviour of the world.

John gave intimation of things which were afterward revealed, and more fully developed.

39. Paul said of him: "John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus." (Acts 19:4).

It was wise for John, the forerunner, not to baptize his disciples as full-fledged Christians; It was better for that to be done by Christ, and his apostles, after their faith in Christ was sure, and confirmed. But he did baptize them upon the basis of their repentance, and return to God, and as Anticipatory Christians.

In baptizing on the basis of their repentance, and return to Lord, their God, he said that they should believe on Christ.

Many of them did believe on Christ, and were afterward re-baptized in his name, which was a confirmation of their faith; and of their expectation of receiving the Holy Spirit.

John's disciples were anticipatory: Under the ministry of Christ, and his apostles, they became full-fledged Christians, even with the graces, and gifts of the Spirit.

John lifted the minds of the people to Christ, and preached him for six months.

"The whole baptism and preaching of John pointed to Christ," and he "gave way to Christ altogether."

40. John was a "Baptistes" (a baptizer), but that was the least part of him:

He was John the Messenger, Deputy, Forerunner, Ambassador, Evangelist, Announcer, Witnesser, Harbinger, Exhorter, Preacher, Reformer, Teacher, Preparer, Purifier, Ablutionist, and Consecrator.

41. He gave notice of another baptism: "I have indeed baptized you with water; but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost. (Mark 1:8). "John bare record, saying, I saw the spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode on him.

"And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.

"And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God."

A close study of the record shows that John was indeed "great," and that there was comprehensive sweep about his message.

John was greater by far than some modern sectarianism, which needs to study, and accept what John actually preached. He taught nothing to make a Methodist ashamed of himself, except the Methodist who denies the Virgin birth of Christ. Repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ (Acts 20:21), still devolve upon Jew and Gentile, and are not contrary to what John preached.

To turn the hearts of the fathers with the children, is not contrary to what John preached.

"The promise is unto you, and to your children," is not contrary to what John preached.

"I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh," is not contrary to what John preached.

But to preach a limited atonement, is contrary to what John preached.

To exclude "the lambs," is contrary to what John preached.

THE MONROE DISTRICT AND KINGDOM BUILDING

"Beyond the Alps lies Italy" was a thrilling challenge for a battalion of soldiers, but for the preachers of the Monroe Doctrine the Alps takes the form of apportionments and the call is sent down the line: "Beyond the apportionments lies a perfect district record." To this end, every church and pastor has pledged wholehearted cooperation and tireless effort.

To stimulate interest in this concerted effort to pay the district out in full, a series of Kingdom Building Conferences were planned with the general theme: "Building the Kingdom Through the Benevolences." The churches of the district were divided into four groups and centralized at the following points: Bastrop, Monroe, Delhi, and Winnsboro. Each pastor was made responsible for his group, especially the official board. Guest speakers for these group meetings included Dr. George S. Sexton, president of Centenary College; Dr. W. Angie Smith, First Methodist Church, Shreveport; Dr. John C. Glenn, First Church, Pine Bluff, and Dr. J. L. Decell, editor, New Orleans Christian Advocate. Each of these brethren were given the same subject: "The Romance of the Benevolent Dollar," but the messages were as different as the types of men that delivered them. Dr. Sexton, in his own unique way, emphasized the rewards of placing money in educational institutions and missionary enterprises. He warmed the hearts of his hearers with thrilling stories of boys who have gone through Centenary College and out to take their places of responsibility and all because someone was willing to put some money in them.

With the statement: "And each heard in his own language" as a basis, Dr. Smith carried the benevolent dollar to all races wherever our work has gone, and showed that each man and woman has been able to hear the gospel of Christ because back of it all is a great body of Christians giving and praying for the extension of God's dominion.

Dr. Glenn spoke of the spiritual mission of the Church and declared that a new moral and religious dynamic could save any situation regardless of depressions and reverses. His belief in this statement is given added emphasis when attention is called to the fact that with one single exception, the district he supervised last year in Southern Arkansas paid everything in full.

Localizing his message somewhat, and speaking of the practical methods of kingdom extension, Dr. Decell challenged his hearers to the task before them, which calls for confidence, faith, and prayer.

A speech is known by its results! Already more money has been paid on the benevolences by far than was contributed up to this date last year. It is the hope of the presiding elder, Rev. E. C. Gunn, and the committee on benevolences, that half of the apportionment for the Monroe District will be reached by District Conference. The added emphasis which has been given this cause during the first week in March has already manifested itself in a practical way and we confidently expect a final result commensurate with the ability of the people of this area.

A BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF THE 20TH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. T. B. Cottrell

The more than 200 delegates who attended the Woman's Conference held in Gulfport, April 7-10, were shown every courtesy by the hostess auxiliaries and their co-laborers. The minutest detail was painstakingly outlined and every moment of our stay was one of great joy and profit.

Arriving at the church at 2 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, a Workers' Conference was entered into, led by Mrs. L. W. Alford, president. In her opening remarks she led us to see that the greatest need is spiritual power in our individual lives; that Jesus is not only our pattern and example but he is Lord of our lives. Mrs. Alford said, "We are entering a new quadrennium. What are we planning?" Is a retreat unthinkable? It should be. She then asked what forward steps could be taken during 1931, and the following were suggested: "The Cultivation of a Deeper Spiritual life," "An infilling of God's Spirit that we may draw all women into the W. M. S.", "We want the women, but we want the children, too," "Encourage Mission and Bible Study," "We need a sacrificial giving," "A cultivation of Young Women's Circles," "The opportunity of women to participate in civic, state, national and international and economic situations," "Christianizing every area of our hearts and lives," "Continue Zone meetings," "Continue the Voice campaign." We must advance, we cannot retreat, said Mrs. Alford.

The official welcome to the delegates at the opening meeting was made by Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, pastor of the First Methodist Church, and Mrs. E. T. Riemann, president of the Woman's Missionary Society, who gave the welcome from the auxiliaries in an original rhyme. The choir of the host church furnished two musical numbers. All members of the local reception committee wore large badges made of cotton cloth printed in blue, thus carrying out the popular movement of using cotton for every possible occasion. Following the night meeting a reception was tendered the visitors in the ladies' parlors at the church.

The principal speaker at the opening session was Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, education and promotion secretary of the Woman's Missionary Council of Nashville, one of the southwide workers of Methodist mission activities—an honor guest of the present meeting. Using for her topic, "Why I Support the Mission Program of Today," Mrs. Lipscomb traced the growth of Mission work for the past twenty years, from the general conference at New Orleans, when a gift of $50,000 seemed fine for mission work and pointing out that during 1930 the 200,000 women of the conferences had raised over $1,500,000 for mission work in the home and foreign fields. She struck a note of optimism in relation to the gains made by mission work not only in the great number of converts on the foreign field, but in the development of mission fields to carry on their work independently. She told of the great influence of the southwide mission council which was held in New Orleans last month; of the Jerusalem conference in which representatives from all parts of the world were present, and of the council meeting in Memphis two weeks ago, each representing the world power and intensification of missionary endeavor in every land.

A verbal repetition in unison of statements: "I believe in the 18th amendment," and "I uphold the 18th amendment," led by Mrs. L. W. Alford of McComb, conference president, and participated in by the audience which composed the night session Wednesday night placed the endorsement of the conference on the address on Law Enforcement made by Mrs. A. F. Watkins of Jackson, national lecturer for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Mississippi and named by the Methodist board to direct temperance work in the conference. Mrs. Watkins was the principal speaker at the Wednesday evening session, discussing law enforcement and law observance in relation to the question of Prohibition. Charcaterizing the present crisis as a call of loyalty to their country, Mrs. Watkins urged the women to uphold the cause which she declared was "God's cause." She questioned the women regarding their personal influence against the use of intoxicating liquors, and urged that they teach law enforcement in the home. "We must create a sentiment for prohibition we must show an optimistic enthusiasm, and we must pray and work for law enforcement," she said. She warned against the making of "home brew" in the home. Concerning the ballot which the women hold, she urged that women vote not for political reasons but for the candidate who stands for personal sobriety.

On Wednesday, at 9 o'clock, the session opened with devotionals followed by the holy communion administered by Rev. Otto Porter, presiding elder of the Seashore District, assisted by city and visiting pastors. A memorial service was held and as the vice-president called the names the corresponding secretary placed a white rose on the table.

After organization, Mrs. L. W. Alford of McComb, president, delivered her message, which was most comprehensive and illuminating. A brief resume of the six years' work includes ten outstanding events as follows:

"Our work for 1930," said Mrs. Alford, "has been most satisfactory and gratifying when you consider the economic depression which has been prevalent throughout the world and especially the Southland. Mississippi has probably suffered more than any Southern State."

For the first time within the six years of her leadership, we have a deficit on Council Pledge, but the Conference made a total offering of more than $32,000, by systematic and sacrificial gifts in most instances. Our treasurer reported many such givings as the loyal trusting woman who sent her the last dollar in her possession. May she and others be amply rewarded by Him who said, "Seek first the kingdom of God and all these things shall be added unto you. The pledge made to Council for the Mississippi Conference is $31,000 for 1931. Mrs. Alford said, "let us go forward in faith attempting the seeming impossible, believing it is better to fail attempting great things than to reach a goal of easy attainment. A distinctive achievement is that a group of Mississippi Conference women have joined with the women of the other Southern States in the organization of an association for the prevention of lynching, through the leadership of Mrs. J. Morgan Stevens, superintendent of the Bureau of Christian Social Relations. We have had three volunteers for Life Service; and three Whitworth Scholarships are being provided—two by the Conference and one by an individual. The recipients are Maribel Swetman, Mary Everett, and Maggie Leguiffe. There are two Scarritt scholarships: Miss Selby began training in December, 1930, and Miss Lucy Carlton will graduate in June. Miss Nina V. Davis, who has completed her work in Scarritt, continues her work in the General Hospital of Philadelphia preparatory to her work as Medical Nurse Missionary. General Conference legislation on children's and young people's work was outlined by Mrs. Alford; also the young women's circles. (This may be had in leaflet form from headquarters for the asking.) A year ago an enlarged program of study and activity was adopted by Council, the goal being, "To Christianize all human relations, to acquire more perfectly the way of the "Abundant Life." The following commissions were formed; Industrial Relations, Unoccupied Areas, and Rural Development; and the following committees; Christion Citizenship and Law Observance, International Relations and World Peace, Research and Study of the Status of Women, Co-operation with Civic and Welfare Agencies, Inter-racial Relations, Financial Policy, Spiritual Life and Message. The last three and Rural Development are functioning in our Conference. It was very gratifying to note that Belgium Missionary Societies report an increase of 50 per cent in members and 100 per cent in finances. Brazilian women have been sending 1-10 of all money collected to Council treasurer for work in Africa, and the women in Africa, who are poor and illiterate, have simple Mission and Bible Study, small dues, but help care for the orphans brought to the station and help in relief work at the hospital at Tunda, where Dr. and Mrs. Lewis serve. After thirteen years in China the Missionary Society there has increased in number thirteenfold, in membership seventeenfold, in offering tenfold. Practically 100 per cent of the churches have missionary societies and 75 per cent of the women church members are members of the missionary society. The missionary society of Cuba sends 25 per cent of all funds to Council treasurer. In Czechoslovakia, the 463 members in the 25 societies raised $1026 for missions and local needs. In all fields progress is being made, and the helpful, missionary spirit inspires each. Mrs. J. W. Downs reported 184 more field missionaries and said if we are to make our contribution to the world, we must touch human life and live with people.

The vice-president gave an encouraging report on her organizations of Spiritual Fellowship groups, stating as her goal one fellowship group in each auxiliary. She had assisted in raising scholarship funds for Whitworth College and hoped one would be permanent.

The corresponding secretary presented the district secretaries in a most unique way, stating that they had written history and would present their work in book form; each of the seven pages represented the oustanding accomplishments of the secretaries.

Fifty-three auxiliaries attained the Standard of Excellence. The Conference Pledge as taken by districts is $15,063; the goal is a life member in each auxiliary. The four Wesley Houses were represented by the workers who told interestingly of the activities of each, and we were greatly privileged to visit the Wesley House at Biloxi and the Moore Community Center which gave us an insight into the most splendid work being done by these efficient workers. Seeing is believing—believing more strongly in Wesley House work and pledging ourselves to enlarged giving to the underprivileged.

The Spiritual Life Messages each day were given by Rev. M. L. Burton, who had as his theme "The Mind of Christ." The mind of Christ gives us a willingness to obedience to duty, to service, to build a kingdom of righteousness, to honor the Father. Missionary work can not be done unless we have the mind of Christ.

The election of officers was as follows:

President, Mrs. T. B. Cottrell.

Vice-president, Mrs. Gordon Patton.

Corresponding secretary, Miss Ella Wayne Ormond.

Recording secretary, Mrs. J. A. Smith.

Treasurer, Mrs. J. T. Sharp.

Secretary Young Women's Circles, Mrs. C. C. Clark.

Superintendent Children's Work, Mrs. C. L. Freiler.

Superintendent Mission and Bible Study, Mrs. J. L. Carter.

Superintendent Christian Social Relations, Mrs. J. Morgan Stevens.

Superintendent Literature and Publicity, Mrs. J. Frank Decell.

Superintendent Supplies, Mrs. G. P. McKeown.

An outstanding social feature was a most delightful drive to Bay St. Louis. Arriving at the Hotel Western, we were greeted by the officers of the four hostess auxiliaries—Bay St. Louis, Logtown, Pass Christian and Long Beach, and a delectable plate lunch was served. On Tuesday afternoon the auxiliaries of Biloxi were our gracious hosts—serving a most attractive lunch. Two illuminating pageants were given by the Gulfport auxiliaries. An outstanding courtesy shown was the visit to the Japanese garden, which will be describe later.

So gracious were our hostesses, so inspiring the program, so ideal the weather that all were loud in their praises of one of the very best conferences ever held.

The Home Circle

MAY FLOWERS

Hark! at the call of the sweet, fresh May morning.
  Hear them come trooping on gay dancing feet!
    Over the meadow green,
    Down through the woodland sheen,
  Up from the village and thronged city street.

Sunbonnet babies with little snub noses,
  Rollicking youngsters with merry blue eyes,
    Small Cinderellas gay,
    Sweet as the breath of May,
  Dreaming of fairies in godmother guise!

Hark to their chattering! Tiny Maid Marian,
  Helen and Marjorie, Bobby and Ted;
    List to their laughter sweet,
    Just see their flying feet,
  Richard and Emmy and turbulent Ned!

Here they come gleeing, slim lads and lasses,
  Shy adolescents awakening to truth,
    Seeking life's miracle,
    Knowledge empirical,
  Springtime—the Maytime when youth calls to youth.

Set up the Maypoles, with streamers aflying,
  Riot of color for each eager hand;
    Great Nation's greatest wealth,
    Children in radiant health,
  Fairest of flowers that bloom in our land!

Never mind training them just to be citizens,
  Never mind urging, too fast, wisdom's way;
    Give them the room to grow,
    Give them the joy to know
  Laughter and lilting song; give them their
      May!

WINIFRED HATHAWAY.

THE PEDDLER AND THE MOUSE

Very many years ago a poor peddler was going through the Bohemian forest toward Reichenau. He was tired, and sat down to eat a crust of bread, the only thing he had with him to satisfy his hunger. While he was eating he saw a mouse creep out from under his feet, and at last it sat down opposite to him looking as if it expected something from him. He good naturedly threw it a few crumbs, much as he wanted all the bread himself.

When the mouse had eaten it, he gave it some more, till all the bread was gone, so that it had quite a good meal. Then the peddler got up to get a drink of water from a spring close by. When he came back, behold! a gold piece lay upon the ground, and the mouse was just coming with a second piece, which it laid down and ran away to fetch another. The peddler went after the mouse and saw how it went into a hole and fetched the money out from thence; so he took his stick, opened the ground, and found there a great treasure of gold pieces. He took it out and looked after the mouse, but it was gone.

Then, with great joy, he carried the gold to Reichenau, distributed half to the poor, and built a church with the balance.

This strange legend is engraven upon a stone tablet, which may be seen any day in the Trinity Church at Reichenau in Bohemia.—From Chatterbox of sixty years ago.—Presbyterian of the South.

"THE ROAD OF THE LOVING HEART"

By Alexander Crow

A centurion, a captain in the Roman army, had a favorite servant. This servant was very sick. He heard that Jesus was in town and he knew that he had healed many sick people. He didn't go to Jesus himself, but asked some of the leaders amongst the Jews to go to him, and they went gladly. When they came to Jesus to ask him to heal the centurion's servant, they said, "He is worthy for whom you should do this, for he loveth our nation and hath built us a synagogue."

This centurion was not a Jew but a Roman, who lived amongst the Jews. And he tried to understand these people of another race and he did many things for them. Amongst other things he built them a church; and although they mostly hated Romans, they learned to love him. So when he asked them to go and plead with Jesus to heal his servant, they went gladly, and urged Jesus to come.

Long years later there lived another man, amongst people of a different race, who tried to understand them, and did kind things for them.

You know about Robert Louis Stevenson, who wrote so many stories and poems for boys and girls. Stevenson was a sick man, and couldn't live in his own country—Scotland. It was too cold there, so he went to live in Samoa, an island in the Pacific Ocean, where it is always warm.

There he became very friendly with the natives. He talked to them, and tried to understand their ways and their ideas about things. He did kind things for them, and soon they became very friendly with him.

There were a number of chiefs in prison. Their white rulers had treated them harshly, and had not tried to understand them; they had broken the law through ignorance.

Stevenson visited the chiefs in prison and talked to them and heard their story. Then he went to the white officials, and showed them that these chiefs were not really wicked but only ignorant, and at last he got them set free. You can understand how the natives would love him for that. They wanted to do something for him, some really big thing to show their gratitude.

Now, Stevenson's house was built away up on the side of a mountain, and there was no proper road to it, only a rough forest track. So they asked him to allow them to make a road to his house. They came, a great army of men, and soon had a beautiful road made, winding up the mountain side from the town to his house, and when it was finished they called it "The Road of the Loving Heart."

How he sweetened life for people in Samoa by his kindness! The natives hated the white people before he came, and the white people hated the natives. It always sweetens life to do kind things. One who takes the way of the centurion of Capernaum, and of Stevenson of Samoa, will be making "Roads of the Loving Heart." It was the road along which Jesus came to us, a road which leads straight from God to us—"The Road of the Loving Heart," for "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—Gum Leaves.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLES

These needles were never intended to sew with, I am sure, for it would take an unusually large giant to handle them; and then, they have no eyes for the thread. They are called needles on account of their shape, and named in honor of Cleopatra, the Egyptian queen, by whose order they were removed from their original home to Alexandria, Egypt.

These two famous columns or obelisks, each about 70 feet high and weighing about 200 tons, were hewn out of rose red granite, about 1500 years before the birth of Christ. They were set up in honor of Ra, the Sun god, in the city of Hieropolis, the Bible name of which is the city of On, the birthplace of Moses, and the place where Joseph got his wife. She was the daughter of the priest of On.

By the order of Cleopatra, but probably after her death, and just before the beginning of the Christian Era, they were removed to Alexandria, where they remained until the nineteenth century, when one was presented to the British government and now stands in London, England. In 1881 the other one was presented to the United States and placed in Central Park, New York City, where it still stands.

But the atmosphere of New York did not seem to agree with it, for immediately it began to corrode and crumble and spoil the inscriptions with which it is covered. Less than twenty years in the climate of New York did it more harm than more than 3000 years on the banks of the Nile. What could be done about it, was the question that concerned the people who were interested in its preservation.

When the atmosphere is bad three things are usually possible, and I want you all to remember them, for it may be valuable to you some time. First, the atmosphere, or air, may be purified. We do this in houses by ventilation, and in that case it is the best thing to do. But purifying the atmosphere of a whole city like New York would be a big undertaking; and far too costly to merely protect a stone. So that had to be abandoned.

Secondly, it is sometimes possible to get out of the bad atmosphere and go where it is pure. Cleopatra's Needle might have been taken to a more favorable atmosphere; but even that would be difficult and expensive, and it is possible no such place could have been found without taking it back to the land from which it came. And of course the people wanted to keep it, since it was a present to us.

One chance still remained, and that was to overcome the effects of the atmosphere, if possible. The scientists became interested in the matter, and some one discovered a sort of lacquer or chemical compound with which the surface was covered and securely protected. If you will go to Central Park, New York, today you will find it still standing there, successfully resisting the ravages of a climate naturally injurious to it, because it has been rendered immune.

But there is another kind of atmosphere in which people have to live, and it is far more important than that. It is called a moral atmosphere, because it affects our moral lives in very much the same ways that the physical atmosphere affects our physical lives. This moral atmosphere consists of the influences that surround us. If it not pure it acts upon us very much like the atmosphere of New York did upon Cleopatra's Needle; it destroys the image of God which we are supposed to bear.

And the remedies are also very much the same. First, we may be able, and often are able to purify the moral atmosphere in which we have to live. That is what the Church and the Sunday school and the Christian home are all trying to do.

But there are times when the best thing, and the only safe thing to do is to get out of the moral atmosphere that is bad; bad company, for instance. But there will also be times when you can neither purify nor escape from a bad moral atmosphere. And for our complete safety God has provided a remedy in His Son. The application of the atoning blood of Christ, by faith and repentance will not only restore the image of God which sin has obscured, but make us safe in any moral atmosphere where duty may take us.—Baltimore Southern Methodist.

PROFESSOR FROG, MASTER OF PSALMODY

By Grace Lindsay

In a birch tree beside a pool a choir of birds were singing their morning concert. "Pray, what makes you sing so off-key?" queried the old bull frog. "There is not a bit of harmony in your music."

"We are different birds and sing different notes," chirped a Pee-Wee and a Thrush in unison. "Won't you teach us to stay together, Professor Frog?" begged the Pee-Wee with a wink at his neighbor.

Next morning Professor Frog appeared with his little green hymn-book to give them their first lesson. Applying his tuning-fork to his ear, he burst forth in the midst of the carols of the birds with "Croak, croak, croak."

"I wonder what conservatory he attended," laughed Mrs. Cat Bird behind her fan to Miss Dove. "He had better study voice a little longer before he attempts to teach birds to sing."

SATYAGRAHA

Wondrous Cross," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Rock of Ages." No Christian, and yet he is actively opposed to and for the prohibition of all alcoholic drinks. No Christian, and yet is set for the liberation and enfranchisement of womankind, saying, "I passionately desire the utmost freedom for our women. I detest child marriages. I shudder to see a child-widow, and shiver with rage when a husband, just widowed, with brutal indifference contracts another marriage. I deplore the criminal indifference of parents who keep their daughters utterly ignorant and illiterate, and bring them up only for the purpose of marrying them off to some young man of means." No Christian, and yet, when pressed by Christian friends to tell them what he thinks of Jesus he replies, "If, then, I had to face only the Sermon on the Mount and my own interpretation of it, I should not hesitate to say, 'Oh, yes, I am a Christian.' But I know that at the present moment if I should say any such thing I would lay myself open to the gravest misinterpretation."

Surely, Gandhi is not far from the Kingdom.

Why is he not a Christian? For one thing he has the painful memory of the unchristian methods and practices of those who call themselves Christian. E. Stanley Jones asked Gandhi what we should do for Christianity in India. This is his reply: "I would suggest four things: First, that you Christians should begin to live more like Christ; second, that you practice your religion without adulterating it; third, that you make love your working force; and fourth, that you study the non-Christian faiths more sympathetically in order to have a more sympathetic approach to the people." Dr. Jones says, "I resolved to put these four points into practice."

Not a Christian, and yet one says, "It is not too much to say that the feeling left by our first meeting is that of having come into contact with a man nearer to the Christ-like ideal than any other living person."

What has this soul-force done for Gandhi?

It has made him humble. Says he, "All these mentors of mine seem to forget that I am but a seeker after Truth. I claim to be making a ceaseless effort to find it, but I admit that I have not yet found it. To find Truth completely is to realize one's self and one's destiny. I am painfully conscious of my imperfections, and therein lies all the strength I possess; because it is a rare thing for a man to know his own limitations."

Soul-force has made him tolerant. "I say to the 75 per cent of Hindus receiving instruction in this college that your lives always will be incomplete unless you reverently study the teaching of Jesus. I have come to the conclusion in my own experience that those who, no matter to what faith they belong, reverently study the teaching of other faiths, broaden instead of narrowing their own hearts, ... A liberal education should include, as I have put it, a reverent study of all other faiths." Then, soul-force has made him reverent also.

Soul-force has made him religious. "No work done by man, however great, will really prosper unless it has a distinct religious backing. But what is religion? I for one would answer: 'Not the religion you will get after reading all of the scriptures of the world. Religion is not really what is grasped by the brain, but a heart grasp.'"

Soul-Force has removed from his heart the spirit of hate and revenge, and has armed him with the implements of love and good will. He refuses to resort to violence for the accomplishment of his purpose.

Soul-Force has made him the most unique and influential figure of our time.

How does he acquire this Soul-Force? Is it a gift of his genius? Is it his by some peculiar and unheard-of method? No, that does not seem to be the answer. He has arrived by the road of fasting, meditation, self-denial and prayer. A rather lonely and unfrequented road, to be sure. Seems, though, that Jesus came that road. While we of the Western world are clamoring for luxuries, self-indulgence, self-expression, this little Hindu takes the simple and quiet path of self-discipline. Is it any wonder that he sings, "In the Cross of Christ I Glory"? Does this not account for the enthronement of love? "It has been Mahatma Gandhi's supreme faith that there is a nobler element in man which may be won over by love."

May we not, then, as Christians, while Gandhi walks the tight wire spanning a vast and deep gulf, bearing in one hand his own people and in the other the empire of Great Britain, pray that our God will help him place them safe on the shores of a new day? May we not join him in that for which he seeks? "For there is a spiritual city which he has been building up out of an imperishable fabric. Its foundations are deeply and truly laid in tthe Kingdom of God. No oppression of the poor has gone to create it. Love and devotion and service to the needy are its decorations. No military pomp reigns within its borders, but only the peaceful harmony of human souls. Race and color distinctions have no place in it. Not a clash of religious controversy mars its harmony. Its empire is the heart."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

Rev. A. L. Brewster, pastor of "Winona Circuit, has our thanks for six subscriptions recently sent in. We are glad to know that his work is moving forward along all lines.

The very attractive year-book of Second Methodist church, New Orleans, has just reached this office. Rev. Ira Flowers is the energetic and aggressive pastor of this church.

Rev. J. H. Foreman and Mr. S. R. Williams are found among those who send in subscriptions to the New Orleans Advocate. Rev. J. H. Foreman is a superannuate of Pelahatchie.

Hon. and Mrs. R. E. Bennett of Meadville, Miss., were out-of-town guests at the Duren-Hardesty wedding. Judge Bennett, an uncle of the groom, is a prominent layman of the Brookhaven district.

Dr. Elmer C. Gunn, the enterprising presiding elder of the Monroe district of the Louisiana Conference, was an appreciated caller early last week. The Advocate is receiving due consideration at the hands of Dr. Gunn.

In addition to the other duties of his pastorate, Rev. Jas. L. Sell, pastor of the Port Gibson church, prevails upon his people to see the value of a church paper and sends a list of subscribers to the Conference organ.

Mrs. Mims Boswell of the Kosciusko (Miss.) charge takes time to send in a good list of subscriptions and thus keeps the editorial department of Christian Education functioning for that community.

Rev. T. B. Thrower, the capable pastor at Ackerman, Miss., has our thanks for four cash subscriptions recently sent in. He states that he has not completed their campaign and we feel assured that there will be more to follow.

The bulletin of First Methodist Church, Greenwood, Miss., of which church Rev. A. T. McIlwain is pastor, announces a simultaneous evangelistic campaign. The Advocate force joins in the prayers for the success of the campaign.

Rev. Casper W. Avery is in his fourth year on the Macon (Miss.) circuit and writes, "This is the best year we have had. The people are the finest in the world and I enjoy serving them very much." We trust that Brother Avery will have no trouble in completing his Advocate campaign.

Rev. L. P. Moreland, pastor of Bernice, La., is burning no idle time in his work. He is busy about the Master's business and we thank him for including the interest of the Advocate in his plans.

Rev. J. H. Morrow, pastor of our church at Gloster, Miss., was a pleasant and appreciated caller at the Advocate office while in the city recently. Brother Morrow reports encouragingly of the work under his care.

Rev. J. W. Raper, a superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference, requests that his Advocate be routed to Paris, Miss. This we gladly do and promise if he should take a notion to go to Paris, France, it would reach him there. What would a superannuate do without his Advocate?

Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor of Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, while in the office recently, reported continued progress in the work of that excellent congregation of people. He mentioned especially the work of his Men's Bible Class.

The answer of Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor of the church at Winnfield, La., to the appeal of the Advocate is a nice letter enclosing nine subscriptions and renewals. Just such work as this is what makes the Advocate a permanent and prominent blessing of our Conferences.

The Advocate acknowledges receipt of the April 12 Bulletin of the Canton (Miss.) Methodist Church. Among the announcements was one saying that the Lewis Brothers Quartet is conducting a revival meeting at Richton, Miss. Rev. Osmond S. Lewis is the pastor.

Bringing a word of cheer with regard to his work, Rev. Robt. W. Vaughan, superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage at Ruston, La., called at the office recently. Brother Vaughan was en route to the New Orleans District Conference at Morgan City.

By the way, let no Methodist pastor or layman be "taken in" by a certain Cody Publishing Company representing itself as agent of the Advocate. The Advocate has no agents other than the pastors and Christian literature committees elected by the quarterly conferences. Turn your subscriptions in to no other.

Rev. G. C. Gregory of Sunflower, Miss., writes that his section has been hard hit by the financial depression, but reminds us that he is serving a fine people. Then he proves his statement by including a good list of names to whom he asks that the Advocate be sent and encloses the check that supplements his orders.

Rev. A. J. Davis of Decatur, Miss., for recreation, goes out and gets up a good list of subscribers and sends them in with the cash that keeps the wheels going round. We thank him and dare him to repeat the performance. Why should it be thought incredible that a pastor should, ever and anon, turn in a list of subscribers? It is not.

Rev. Del Longgrear, pastor of Hazlehurst, Miss., is announced to preach the Commencement sermon at the Copiah-Lincoln Junior College, Wesson, Miss., on May 10. Rev. Frank Casey, a local preacher, who is a senior this year has been succeeded as president of the Hi-Y of the college by Alton Pitts.

Rev. C. W. Wesley, pastor of the Shubuta (Miss.) charge, reports that Bishop Denny recently dedicated the Andrew Chapel, a church on the charge. Among those present was Rev. T. J. O'Neill, presiding elder of the Meridian District. J. A. Carmichael, superintendnet of the Sunday school, declared that it was the greatest day in the history of the community.

The program of the Annual Meeting of the Editorial Council of the Religious Press, meeting at the Hotel Washington, Washington, D. C., April 28-29, carries the names of the following editors of our church papers: Dr. E. H. Rawlins, Missionary Voice; Dr. J. M. Rowland, Richmond Christian Advocate, and Dr. A. W. Plyler, North Carolina Christian Advocate.

It looks good to see the name of Rev. Watt H. Royal signed to a letter. He is over in Emory University continuing his ministerial education and he does not neglect to read the Advocate. He says, "I hope to be back on the firing line some time in the near future." We are sure that this additional training will be of great help to him when he returns to the "front."

Brother E. E. Sykes, Grand Master of the F. and A. M., Grand Lodge of Louisiana, has appointed Brother C. M. Chalmers a District Deputy Grand Master. He is a faithful member of the Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, and editor of the Trestle Board, a monthly bulletin of the George Washington Lodge, No. 65, F. and A. M., New Orleans.

Ponchatoula, La., grows something besides strawberries. A layman up there by the name of J. R. Abels writes a letter in which a check is found. The letter instructs us to send the Conference organ to a list of names enclosed, among them two preachers, his pastor, Rev. J. Henry Bowdon, and Rev. A. J. Coburn. Thanks to a layman who sees to it that his pastor reads the Church paper.

Rev. E. C. Driskell is not lounging around in his work at Lambert, Miss., but is actively promoting the interest of the church and we appreproving the property on the physical. He writes, "All goes well with us. We are having excellent services and the people have been good to us." No more fortunate circumstances than to have a joyour pastor and a happy people working together for the glory of God.

Dr. Wm. H. LaPrade writes that he continues to enjoy the paper. Dr. LaPrade, whose home is in Gainesville, Ga., rendered highly efficient service as a member of the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences, and we feel like that he is one of our own who is but living in another section at this time. We pray that his strength may abide and that heavenly blessings may attend him always.

Rev. S. F. Harkey of Brandon, Miss., gives a note that encourages those who are looking for great things from our Christian Education work, saying that he has just concluded two Standard Training classes in the unit on Worship. We shall not be surprised to learn that his churches are both religious and educationally minded. His training work with his people is bound to prove a valuable supplement to his pulpit ministry. Was not Jesus the Teacher come from God?

A letter from our pastor at Montrose, Miss., Rev. Geo. H. Jones, contains this word from Bishop Candler in reply to message from the Newton District Conference: "I thank you and the brethren for your kind message concerning my sickness. I am very glad to say that I am steadily improving, and I hope to be out before long. I have returned from the hospital and am far more comfortable." Bishop Candler's many friends of this section will keep up their prayers for speedy and complete recovery.

Mrs. Geo. S. Brown of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, reports that her uncle, Dr. Beverly Carradine, passed away in Chicago on April 23. He was buried in Vicksburg, Miss., on last Sunday. Dr. Carradine was for four years pastor of Rayne Memorial and four years pastor of the old Carondelet Street Church, now First Methodist Church. Dr. Carradine will be remembered as very active in religious and civic affairs, being instrumental in closing the lottery. It is hoped that a fuller account of his life may appear later.

Capitol Street Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss. expressed its Easter joy in two unusually inspiring services. At the morning service twenty babies were baptized; eighty-five members were received into the church on profession of faith, and fifteen by transfer of certificate, making a total of one hundred. The choir rendered a beautiful Easter cantata by Stainer. At the evening service the Knights Templar of Jackson were the guests of honor and the Easter sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. Joseph A. Smith.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

Rev. Charles Assaf assisted Rev. H. F. Tolle and the pastor, Rev. Joseph A. Smith, in the revival held in Capitol Street Church, March 18-29. Brother Smith, in writing concerning the work of Brother Assaf, says: "Brother Assaf was unusually successful in his labors as a personal worker and home visitation evangelist. Eighty-five persons joined the church on Easter Sunday, not less than fifteen of whom were won through the direct efforts of this gifted and spirit-filled Christian worker. I highly recommend him to the brethren of the Mississippi Conference and of other Conferences for service either as evangelist or personal worker. He is the most skilled and successful soul-winner I have worked with in years."

Bro. A. R. Beasley, our enterprising pastor on the Minter City circuit, North Mississippi Conference, brought cheer to the editor and manager of the Advocate as the following, taken from a letter addressed to this office, will indicate: "You will find a list of eleven new and one renewal subscriptions. . . . I am glad to send you this list. It was an easy task. Only one person refused to take the paper and his alibi was economy. We begin our meeting next Sunday at Glendora and the following week at Minter City. We have a great people to serve. Everything is favorable for a good year, and we are very happy in our work." We are grateful to Brother Beasley for his interest in the Advocate and pray that the Heavenly Father will continue to bless him and the work which he loves so well.

A wedding of interest both to Louisiana and Mississippi Methodists was celebrated in New Orleans recently, the contracting parties being William Larkin Duren, Jr., and Miss Mary Hardesty. Mr. Duren is a son of Dr. W. L. Duren, now of Georgia, but formerly of the Mississippi Conference and at one time pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans. Miss Hardesty is a daughter of Dr. Irving Hardesty of the faculty of Tulane University. Young Mr. Duren is a graduate of Tulane University, having done graduate work in the University of Chicago. Miss Hardesty, a graduate of Newcomb, holds the Ph. D. degree from Chicago University. After the summer in Detroit the young couple return to New Orleans, where Mr. Duren will be connected with the faculty of Tulane. Dr. Duren, father of the groom, officiated at the ceremony, which took place in the old Newcomb College chapel.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

The Board of Missions of the Louisiana Conference will furnish you with envelopes to be used in taking your Conference Benevolent Offering. On this envelope is printed the causes to which these benevolent offerings are directed. I found them very valuable when accompanied by a letter sent out to my people last year, and secured about $150, that would not otherwise have been secured. If you will write to me indicating that you will use them, I will have them printed at the Advocate office, and you can order them from Brother Chalmers there. But it will be necessary to have a sufficient number of promises to use them to make it worth while for the Board to provide for having them printed.

H. N. BROWN,
Missionary Secty., Louisiana Conference.

NOTICE OF GRENADA DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Grenada District Conference will convene in the Methodist church in Lexington, Wednesday evening, May 6, and continue through the 7th and until noon the 8th.

The opening sermon will be by Dr. J. L. Decell, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Pastors in the district will preach at other services. Names of delegates should be sent to Rev. J. E. Stephens and also to me, if this has not been done.

The District Conference sustains a very vital relation to each charge within its bounds as well as to the Church as a whole. It is desirable, therefore, that necessary time be taken for prayerful deliberation, reviewing and planning the work in each charge for Christian fellowship, and to afford opportunity to all those representing special interests of our church. This without undue haste or sacrifice of time.

Notify Brother Stephens when and how you expect to arrive in Lexington. Please pray that the conference may be a blessing to the good people who so kindly entertain it, and to all who may chance to attend.

Hon. H. H. Boswell, district lay leader, assisted by associate, charge and Conference lay leaders and other laymen will present a program during the conference.

E. H. CUNNINGHAM, P. E.

On March 29, 1931, at Lecompte, the noble and brave soul of MR. AB. ROUGEAU departed this life for the home of eternal rest. He was born near Elmer, in Rapides Parish, January 1, 1855. In early manhood he moved with his parents, Colis Rougeou and Mary Ann Paul, to Lamourie, where he spent the remaining years of his life. In 1876, he was married to Miss Josephine Wise, who died in 1909, and to this union four children were born. Mrs. J. C. Foster, Mrs. Dee Warner survive him. In 1911, he was married to Miss Emily Baham, daughter of Mr. R. Baham, and to this union one daughter was born, who, with his wife, survives him. He made room in his home for four orphan children, three of whom are still living to honor his name. The funeral was conducted by his pastor, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, assisted by Rev. Burnside, interment taking place in the Butler cemetery, in the presence of a large number of friends. To the heartbroken wife and children we extend our deepest sympathy in this great loss. To the brothers, Ben and Frank, and sisters, Mesdames Moore, Dunn and Pruitt, we also extend sympathy.

C. D. ATKINSON.

MRS. S. M. McDUFFIE

While friends and loved ones watched by her bedside, MRS. SAM McDUFFIE passed quietly away at her home, Sunnyside, near Oak Ridge, La., on March 21, 1931. In her going, our Methodist church has lost a most faitful member and our Missionary Society a charter member whose sympathy, prayers, and service have been an inspiration always.

In her there was nothing more sublime than her positiveness of character, and she was always certain of her relationship with the Master. There was no doubt in her mind of Him, who is the way, the truth, and the life. With a strong sense of responsibility as a Christian, she sought to share her blessings with all who came within the sphere of her influence, as is the case with most women of high, useful type. Her life was so spent in the performance of her duties that the home she made for her husband and children, gave to the world her best and most enduring monument.

Whereas, we deem it a privilege to express our deepest appreciation of her life in our midst; therefore be it resolved, first,

That we bow in humble submission to His will; second,

That, as friends, we will sadly miss her fellowship and co-operation in our work for the Master; third,

That wo express our love and sympathy to her loved ones. May the memory of such a wife, mother and grandmother inspire them to a greater service for the Master; fourth,

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one kept in the records of the Missionary Society, and one sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

"The sweet life she lived among us,
The good influence she bore,
Are beacon lights to guide us homeward,
When we'll meet to part no more."

N. Y. Woman Lost 14 Pounds of Fat

One 85 Cent Bottle of Kruschen Salts Did It

"I am starting on my second bottle of Kruschen Salts and am real pleased with results. I take it for reducing and so far have lost 14 pounds and I think it is doing wonders for me. I do not feel so tired evenings when I get home from work."

A generous bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts 4 weeks costs but 85 cents at your druggist's or any drugstore in America—take one-half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning for breakfast—cut out pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—that will help Kruschen take off your fat.

Before the bottle is empty surplus fat is leaving you—indolence changes to activity—you'll feel younger—eyes will be brighter—steps grow spry. Millions know this—you ought to know it. Kruschen Salts is the ideal treatment for constipation, indigestion, headaches, nervousness and acidity.

Take Kruschen every morning—it's the little daily dose that does it—if not joyfully satisfied after the first bottle—money back.

FIRST CHURCH, CORINTH

Easter was an unusually fine day with us at this old church. Had large attendance at Sunday school and the largest congregation at the morning preaching service we have had this year. We had twenty-one additions to the church, and twelve of them came in on profession of faith. I think it is a good sign when people seek church membership at times when there are no social services going on.

Bishop Denny was with us last Sunday and at Southside at night. Had a great crowd to hear him and he preached a wonderful sermon, both morning and night. He has a marvelous amount of information and does not seem to tire. He is on the go all the time.

Conditions are improving up this way, though some people are not able to see over the hill yet. Crop conditions are encouraging and church matters are more promising. We are near the end of the second quarter and there is still much to be done.

E. S. LEWIS, P. C.

FROM BROTHER GLADNEY

To My Friends in Mississippi: Recently, a prominent layman in discussing the work of the Church asked me, "Do you find that the theories you have been giving the past several years are practical since you have come back to the pastorate?" My reply was, "The theories are being put into practice and they are all I ever claimed for them, they work with a man behind them." About the first thing I did was to use the hymns in the Standard Hymnal in the Sunday school as well as in the other services. Was this move popular? No, but it is the best thing to do. It is growing more popular as these great hymns are used. We put the emphasis upon worship from the beginning, the people like this very much. I have distributed a large number of portions of the Scriptures, hundreds of tracts and booklet on different phases of religious education, have loaned a number of books on teaching religion and other books, have made an effort to circulate the Advocate (have had limited success in this). We have observed the cultivation period ordered by the Board of Missions, had classes and public programs and did a lot of praying with it all. The offering so far has been small, but we will not close this privilege until the last day before Conference. I have tried to get the people to make their offerings of all kinds an act of worship. I have asked them to take the matter to God and ask His help in deciding the amount and his help in getting the amount. It takes time to make this work as it should. I have had great joy in visiting the poor, the aged, the neglected. A Community Survey has been made, instruction on Evangelism has been given, the missionary program has been given with success, Sunday School Day, Educational Day, and every kind of day has been duly considered and something has happened on all these days. We have magnified the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. This is getting a fine response on the part of an increasing number of church members. I'll say that I am carrying out the full program of what the Church designates Christian Education, and we are securing results constantly and we have barely begun this work. Last Sunday I received eight members, two by certificate, six on profession of faith, one of these a Chinese boy. (We are praying that God may call him to preach). As a part of the Sunday School Day service we baptized six infants. I have said to the people that we are to take care of the Conference Claims before we meet our local obligations; that is, seek first the kingdom of God. Not me first and the Kingdom second, or maybe not at all. This Conference could and would meet all obligations if we who are called to be leaders had faith in God so we could lead. We hold very tenaciously, I might say viciously, to a correct creed, but are pagan in practice. The Kingdom of God first, is Christian in practice; me first, is nothing less than pagan. When we thus live our prayers for a baptism of the Spirit are an abomination unto the Lord. I accept the challenge, the pastor holds the key to the kingdom, therefore I say, let us have faith in God and our people will be constrained to pay one hundred cents in the dollar for the extension of the Kingdom.

Cordially and sincerely,
R. H. B. GLADNEY.

NEWS IN BRIEF IN MISSIONARY ACTIVITIES

A meeting of Zone 3, Baton Rouge District, was held in Franklinton, March 11, with Mrs. M. W. Ott, presiding. There was a splendid attendance, and an unusual amount of interest manifested.

After song and prayer, the devotional was given by Mrs. J. M. Love, in the form of a memorial service for our much beloved Council president, Mrs. F. F. Stephens, concluding with the poem, "Great Heart Is Dead."

"Officers' Training Day" was the principal feature of the program, and chairmen of each division retired with their committee and outlined their work for the year.

Reports were heard from the Gibson superintendent, Mrs. G. W. Stafford, and assistants. A report of the Young Women's Circles was made by Mrs. V. H. McKenzie, and special prayer by Rev. W. C. Scott. The auxiliaries represented at this meeting were: Bogalusa, Fisher, Angie, and Franklinton. After the business session a social hour was enjoyed in the basement of the church. The next meeting will be held in Angie in June.

Mrs. J. Ingram Law reports a most enjoyable meeting for Zone 2 and 6, which was held at Keener Memorial Church, Baton Rouge, La., March 11, with 12 auxiliaries represented and 9 visitors. The program was outlined for "Officers' Training Day"—the aim being: 1. To instruct each officer regarding the importance of the program of work and the best methods for conducting her office. 2. To arouse in the hearts of each officer a determination to make the year's work a worthy, successful one. 3. To secure the definite personal consecration of each officer to this work as a service to her Lord and His Kingdom. Mrs. Chaney, district secretary, brought a fine, helpful message and made a plea for Houma Scholarship Fund. The Bible message was brought by Mrs. J. D. Doyle. A discussion of "Problems" was entered into, which proved helpful. A delicious luncheon was served and social hour enjoyed.

One of the most interesting meetings of Zone 2 of the Minden District, met in Heflin, March 20, 1931. After the devotionals, Mrs. Woodard, chairman, asked that we try to get on Honor Roll this year and made a plea for a volunteer for Gibson work. Women of tho Minden auxiliary presented a playlet, "Is This Yours?" showing what little interest some women of the church take in the Missionary Society. Standard of Excellence was discussed by Mrs. Smith of Haughton; "To Friends Who Love the Lord," by Mrs. Berry of Minden; Bible Lesson by Mrs. Council—using as her subject, "Happiness." Appreciation for the splendid work and co-operation of Brother McCullen and his wife was voiced by several. After a few remarks, Brother McCullen closed the morning session with prayer. After a splendid repast and social hour, the meeting opened with song and prayer and an offering which goes to Miss Ora Hooper, rural worker. Special prayer was offered for the beloved pastor of Minden, Brother Wynn, who is ill in Baltimore, also for Mrs. Obe. Lowe, a faithful worker whose son was seriously burned. A very interesting dialogue was given, entitled "Bandbox and Mitebox," which measured the size of our giving—to our shame.

A discussion of "The Modern Picture Show" was deferred till literature distributed could be studied and discussed more intelligently. This was an especially happy meeting as it was with the newly organized society of Heflin with 18 members who stood and were introduced to zone members. Next meeting will be held at Haughton.

The Woman's Missionary Society, Zone 4, of the Hattiesburg District, met at New Hebron, March 29, at 2 o'clock, with representatives from Sumrall, Bassfield, Carson, Prentiss, Silver Creek and visiting pastors, who added much to the program. After the regular opening exercises, officers for the new year were elected as follows: President, Mrs. A. S. Oliver; vice-president, Mrs. Worthy; secretary, Mrs. D. E. Vickers; treasurer, Mrs. Chas. Laird; press and publicity chairman, Mrs. G. C. Terrell. The following program was given: "The Missionary Passion in the Church," Mrs. L. W. Alford, who discussed this in a forceful and helpful way. "Our Newest Home Mission Field," Mrs. Alton Brinson; "The Importance of Children's Work and How to Carry on the Work," Mrs. Worthy; "Methodist Kingdom Extension," Rev. A. S. Oliver. Prentiss was named as next meeting place, with Sumrall to arrange the program. Closing prayer was voiced by Rev. D. E. Vickers. The hostess society served delicious salad, cake and coffee.

We welcome this splendid report from North Mississippi Conference, Zone No. 2, embracing the auxiliaries of Lyon, Friars Point, and Clarksdale, the program featuring the Council Message, presented by Mrs. Ernest Moore, Conference president, and the Conference Report, given by Mrs. Hillary Talbert.

Promptly at 3 o'clock, March 30, the meeting was called to order by the Zone chairman, Mrs. E. E. Moore. After song and prayer the devotional was given by Mrs. E. E. McKeithen, taken from the 14th chapter of Matthew, emphasizing the power we each possess in the love and friendship of the tender, compassionate Saviour. "How much more peaceful and happy our lives would become if we would permit Him to share the burdens which weigh so heavily upon us, and when we feel that we are too poor to give, that we might realize the uncounted wealth which is Christ Jesus, ours to give to the world," were some of the thoughts presented by Mrs. McKeithen. Mrs. Hillary Talbert brought interesting messages from annual conference and presented certificates to Clarksdale, Lyon, and Clarksdale Juniors for excellency in Mission Study. Lyon also received special mention in publicity. Friars Point and Clarksdale made the Honor Roll and Clarksdale a Christian Social Relations certificate.

Mrs. Moore, conference president, prefaced her remarks with a tribute to the appealing beauty of the Memorial service to the late Mrs. F. F. Stephen, president of the Council, whose recent death had left a feeling of sadness and love in the hearts of the women of Southern Methodism.

Mrs. Moore said, "The dominant theme of Council, growing constantly more persistent, is the greater cultivation of the spiritual side of the individual Christian life. Spiritual forces are the only real forces. She urged that all members give ten minutes a day to communion with God, a relaxed and receptive mind and heart into which the Holy Spirit might come. Our minds being so full of material things, we deprive ourselves of this vital force." She urged all officers to obtain Council Bulletins for study as they embody many features new and unfamiliar.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Rosedale, La., at the last business meeting had 18 present of a membership of 19. This attendance is worthy of emulation. May the record continue. Reports from all officers show that they are alert to their duties. Through the superintendent of supplies, clothing to the amount of $14 has been sent to St. Marks Hall, and the superintendent of Christian social relations reported 53 visits to sick and strangers, 11 meals to unemployed, $10.80 and clothing and shoes to needy.

The "Standard of Excellence" may be found in Conference Minutes, or may be had from Literature Headquarters, Nashville, Tenn., in leaflet form (free). May we at the beginning of the year make a study of requirements and strive to reach the Honor Roll. Remember the membership campaign is still on, the Voice campaign also, and our goal is "A new LIFE member in each auxiliary." May we give of our best to the Master.

A joint meeting of Zones 1, 2 and 3 was held March 12 at Park Avenue Methodist Church, Shreveport, La. A large crowd from each Zone attended, Zone 1 winning the banner, having almost 100 per cent present.

The meeting was called to order at 10 a. m. by Mrs. Hudson of Zone 2 presiding. Hymn 224, "Faith is the Victory," was sung, followed by prayer led by Brother Johns of Greenwood.

Mrs. Brownlee gave the devotional Acts 1: "Witnessing for Christ." Hymn 232, "More Like the Master," was the next hymn, which was followed by sentence prayers.

Mrs. Floyd Welch delighted all by singing "The Golden Bells."

During the business session, Mrs. Wren gave a talk of the plans for the year. Group meetings of the officers were then held until noon, when a delightful lunch was served.

Zone 3 will have their next meeting in Mansfield sometime in June.

There being no further business for the day, the meeting adjourned each one thanking God for the great fellowship and friendship, made possible by such meeting.

MRS. JOE HARRIS,
Sec. Zone 3, Mansfield, La.

SLUGGISH FEELING

"I have used Thedford's Black-Draught off and on for twenty-five years," writes Mr. Dave Stewart, of 1912 E. 2nd St., Austin Texas.

"They used it in my father's home for many years and it was our general family medicine.

"My health was good, and that is about all I ever took. I used it for constipation and billous sick headaches. It is a fine medicine to take when a man gets up in the morning feeling dull and sluggish. After a course of it I feel fine. It rids the system of poison which comes from constipation."

Doctor's 3 RULES
Big Help to Bowels

What a joy to have the bowels move like clockwork, every day! It's easy, if you mind these simple rules of a famous old doctor:

1. Drink a big tumblerful of water before breakfast, and several times a day.
2. Get plenty of outdoor exercise without unduly fatiguing yourself.
3. Try for a bowel movement at exactly the same hour every day.

Everyone's bowels need help at times, but the thing to use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You'll get a thorough cleaning out, and it won't leave your insides weak and watery. This family doctor's prescription is just fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other helpful ingredients that couldn't hurt a child. But how it wakes up those lazy bowels! How good you feel with your system rid of all that poisonous waste matter.

Clean up that coated tongue, sweeten that bad breath, and get rid of those bilious headaches. A little Syrup Pepsin will soon free the bowels from all that waste matter that makes the whole system sluggish. You'll eat better, sleep better and feel better.

You'll like the way Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin tastes. The way it works will delight you. Big bottles—all drugstores.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

From the reports to the District Conferences up to today, April 18, the war is ahead of this time last year. More additions to the church on professions of faith. More active Epworth Leagues. The other organizations of the church more vigorous. Pastors' salaries on an average are up with last year and in two districts they are ahead. Conference claims and Kingdom Extension offerings are trailing. We must not lose courage beause of this, but accept it as a challenge to press the battle. The readiness with which the districts met their quotas for new subscriptions to the Advocate was very inspiring. We trust that nothing will prevent consummation of this desired end.

Attention

The April number of "The Sunday School Magazine" has an article on page 248, "A Program of Christian Education for Young People," by Dr. John Q. Schisler. Every young person in the church and every worker interested in young people and their religious welfare ought to read this article carefully.

On page 2 of the Workers' Council of April and page 477 in the April number of the Epworth Era appears the outline of the "Organization of the Young People's Division in the Local Church." This article too should be read by all the young people and every church worker.

These two articles will furnish guidance where it is most needed and will aid in the solutions of some of the problems facing the local churches at this time.

In the April number of the Sunday School Magazine appears an article on page 235, "A Unified Teaching Program in the Local Church," by Dr. John W. Shackford. This article will be exceedingly helpful to every church worker and especially helpful to the teaching staff of the churches.

We rejoice at the increased number of Sunday schools that are sending in their fourth Sunday's offerings. The largest number responded last month than any one month this year. Let this noble work proceed until every school, no matter how large or small, responds with an offering for Missions each month. This is our goal.

The workers in the field are hard at work. Give them your prayers that they may be led of the Spirit in all things.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

In the conferences held this week at West Point, Amory, Tupelo and Corinth more than 200 workers were in attendance representing 27 churches. Miss Mary Skinner was most inspiring and helpful in her addresses and conferences.

HOW TO SAVE MONEY. In all schools where the closely graded literature is used you have an opportunity for saving your school a considerable sum of money by preserving that part of the literature that is used from year to year. For instance, the Beginner, Primary and Junior teachers manual for each quarter and the wall pictures for these three departments for each quarter. These are the same from year to year. Have some one to gather them up at the end of each quarter and store them in a safe place. This will save the school a considerable sum of money in the run of a few years's time.

A LEADING CLASS. One of the leading classes of the Grenada school will be that of Dr. W. M. Alexander. He is the head of the department of schools and colleges of the General Board. The course that he will teach is "The Church Serving the Community." The Conference Board of Missions is co-operating in this course and will have many of the pastors present to take this course. Dr. Alexander is recognized as one of the outstanding teachers and leaders of our Church. His coming to our Conference will be welcomed heartily by all, especially those who heard him speak during his visit to our Conference for the Kingdom Extension Institutes.

THE UNIFIED PROGRAM. Everywhere we go we find a very keen interest in the unified program of Christian Education in the local church. But some are waiting for someone else to tell them what to do; to give them a program already drawn up and made out in detail. We have no such program to offer. The Church has simply made it possible for every local church to work out a unified program. This must be done in the light of the needs and possibilities of every local church. The General Board and the Conference Board stand ready to offer suggestions as to how this may be done, but every church must organize and project its own program. The first step is the selecting and organizing of the Local Church Board of Christian Education. The pastor should call together a few of his leaders, Sunday school superintendent, president of the missionary society and possibly two or three others and make a study of the functions of this board and just what it can do in the local church and who should be on the board. It is through the proper functioning of the local church board that the unified program will be put on in the local church.

Epworth League

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Dear Young People: While in attendance at the Monroe District Conference at Tallulah last week I learned some interesting things concerning our young people of that district. Rev. C. B. White reported organizing a new Epworth League at Crowville. The Winnsboro Epworth League is again working, with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Givens very capably assisting them. I met Miss Winnie Klein, who is president of the Senior League at Delhi. Delhi now has two fine Leagues. A number of the pastors reported renewed interest among their young people. Monroe District Leaguers are to hold their annual all-day rally at Little Creek church on May 3. Epworth Leaguers from every part of the district will gather on this beautiful spot and with a program of worship, inspiration and business enjoy a profitable day.

Sunday morning Miss Anna Pharr Turner of Shreveport and I attended church in Mooringsport, enjoyed the delightful hospitality of Rev. Mr. Roberts' home, and in the afternoon attended the North Caddo Union meeting at Vivian. They had a large attendance of young people from Gillian, Ida, Hosston, Mooringsport and Vivian.

Fine news comes from the J. O. Y. Union of Minden District, meeting at Sprinhill, and the Hoyt M. Dobbs Union of Baton Rouge District in session at St. Francisville on the same Sunday. This newest and promising union is making plans, with the rest of Baton Rouge District, for its retreat to be held at Bluff Creek on May 2-3. A large delegation of young people is expected to attend.

The Lake Charlse District Leaguers are having their district rally at Lake Arthur on April 26. The Hi-Leaguers of the Shreveport City Union are planning an interesting rally. Every union in the Conference is expected to hold a pep rally some time during the next few weeks, in interest of the summer assemblies.

An interesting letter has just been received from Julia Reid of Matanzas, Cuba. She is anxiously awaiting the time to be with us in our assemblies. Mr. James V. Reid of Fort Worth, our much admired musician and song leader, is also looking forward to those weeks of real fellowship.

The New Orleans District Conference, in session at Morgan City, was delightfully entertained with Rev. D. E. Dulaney as pastor host.

The New Orleans city unions have elected their new officers for the coming year. Mr. Alfred Hanson of Epworth church is the new president of the senior union, and Miss Dalton Crichlow of Carrollton is the new Hi-Union president. We congratulate these new officers and wish them a year of real prosperous service.

I spent a night at St. Marks' Hall on my return trip. We sympathize with Miss Nettie Stroup in the loss of her brother. This is the third death in her family since last fall.

This letter has been written on the train so we hope the editor is able to transcribe it successfully.

ELIZABETH LANGFORD.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

We have just received the bulletin sent out by the Board of Christian Education of the North Mississippi Conference. This bulletin gives the report of the fourth Sunday missionary offering for the month of February. Here are some of the facts that we gathered from that report and some thoughts which suggested themselves to us as we looked at this report.

Eighty-four charges reported something to this cause during February, sending in a total of $339.36. That would make the average for each charge about four dollars. There are 169 charges in this Conference. So you see just half of our charges reported something to this cause in February. Are we going to be satisfied with 50 per cent efficiency? If every charge had sent in an average offering, instead of getting $340 we would have received $680. What a vast difference that would make in carrying out the program of Christian Education here in our Conference and in our foreign missionary enterprise. Then think of the educational training which these other eighty-five charges are missing by their failure to put on a missionary program once a month. They are really the losers. By putting on a missionary program each month we help to develop a missionary spirit among our people and that is a spirit that certainly needs a lot of cultivation among our people.

We ought to remember that we are all in this task together. We will succeed or fail together. It is the North Mississippi Conference undertaking this task. It seems to me that we should not be satisfied with fifty per cent efficiency. No business firm would operate very long on such a basis as that. They would fail. This is a great business that we are in and we should put the best we have in it. Let us all give this worthy cause our most loyal support and not be satisfied until every charge in our Conference is sending in an offering regularly.

The month of May is almost here. Get your pencil and make a mark around this month on your calendar. Then get your pocketbook and make an offering for Missions. We want to go over the top with our Mission Special during this month. We must go over the top. Let us see how many leagues in our Conference will pay their mission pledge in full. The time for the Assembly will soon be here and you will certainly want to have your pledge paid by that time.

Yours sincerely,

WM. L. ROBINSON.

DR. S. A. STEEL DISAPPROVES CLERICAL RIGHTS FOR WOMEN

"If I read correctly the proceedings of the late meeting of the Methodist women in Memphis, they petitioned the General Conference to ordain women to the ministry like men, give the sisters "full rights." I am in favor of women and as for that, everybody having their full "rights," but I seriously doubt the "right" of women to be ordained as ministers of the gospel. The main, and for me, the sufficient ground for my doubt is the fact that there is no case in the New Testament of ordained women preachers.

"There was ample recognition of the ministry of women, and provision made for it in laity work; and some of Paul's most efficient helpers were women like Phoebe and Pricilla; but there is no instance of their being put in charge of churches and ordained to administer the sacraments. Philip, the evangelist, had four daughters, all old maids, 'which did prophesy;' just what that meant I don't know. No woman was chosen for an apostle, though there were several among our Lord's disciples who were eligible, and it is easy to see that Mary Magdalene might have been a flaming apostle. After the fall of Judas the disciples met to supply his place, and Peter said: 'Wherefore of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a witness with us of his resurrection.' The election was by the church, which numbered 120 members. If some of these Methodist women had been there they would have said: 'You have nominated two men: but we women are entitled to equal rights. I nominate Sister Mary Magdalene.' Wouldn't that have created a stir in the assembly! But no such thought entered their minds. If Paul could have bobbed up in that Memphis meeting when that resolution was offered. I would like to have been there! These modern women would not have been scared of him, and he would not have been afraid of them either; and the fur and the feathers would have filled the air!

"I know that the most famous 'pulpit orator' we have now, perhaps, is a woman. But both the Pope and Mrs. Aime McPherson are in a false attitude toward the church as originally organized by our Lord. There is no scriptural authority for either of them. I do not object to women speaking in public, and think Paul's prohibition of their speaking in the church was prudential regulation, a matter of expediency in view of the customs of his time, and not applicable to this age; what I oppose is the formal ordaining of women to the ministry. An intelligent lady writes me that if the women are to be ordained as ministers, she will quit the Methodist Church. Well, I'm going through on the old Methodist ship, even if they have petticoat pilots; but if they unite with the Northern Methodists, then I'll have to say, goodbye."—Commercial Appeal.

PRE-EASTER SERVICES AT BROAD ST., HATTIESBURG.

The pastor, Rev. R. H. Clegg, and people of this church had a week of unusual worship, fellowship and inspiration preceding Easter. Announcement of the series of services appeared weekly in the church bulletin for several weeks and the regular attendants were thoroughly saturated with the idea, and looked forward with pleasure to them as a time of spiritual feasting. They might have been more missionary and so talked with members who come less frequently that they would have felt constrained to come also.

The morning congregation consisted mostly of women, some men were there each time, however. The hour for morning service was from 8:45 to 9:45. In the evenings there were larger numbers of men and women, but a high percentage of the congregation was boys and girls of the public schools and college students as well as the working young people of the church. The most of them regular attendants of the evening services.

The material for the sermons, or lessons, was taken from the record of Passion week, taking for each day's study the doings and teachings of Jesus on the corresponding day of the week. Beginning with the triumphal entry into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday we were shown the disappointment of his friends, but followed on and tried to learn the lessons He would have us get from: The cursing of the fig tree, the cleansing of the temple, the declaration of His authority and the Great Commandment, and the parable of the wicked husbandman. Wednesday we recounted the kindnesses and devotion of his friends, the plotting of the enemies, and also the signs of His second coming. Thursday, His last day of physical freedom, and in the evening the institution of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. At the conclusion of this lesson most of the congregation rededicated themselves to the services of the Master and, as nearly as the actual hour of that First Supper could be determined, partook of the sacrament. The trial, crucifixion, death, and burial were again brought before us on Friday and on Sunday, Easter, the Resurrection.

Several public testimonies brought out the fact that the people had come not only for worship but to learn, and they were rewarded in both. Few made public their approval, and happiness as a result of the week's activities, but in private circles it seemed to be general.

On Easter Sunday twelve children, a result largely from the Decision-Day program in the Sunday school, and six persons with letters from churches elsewhere were received into the church.

MRS. W. H. WEATHERSBY.

OUR HOME

C. G. SMITH

The Methodst Orphanage is one of the best equipped and best managed institutions of its kind in the country. All orphanages are facing serious financial conditions. The depression hits them doubly hard. Their usual source of income is cut down, while the demands for relief are increased.

Our orphanage has a debt of about $725 per child. The interest on unsecured loans is over $2700 annually, besides interest on bonds. The interest alone is a heavy load to carry.

These figures may look bad, but they sound worse than they really are. The Home as a business institution is perfectly solvent. Of this debt, $100,000 is in bonds, representing actual improvements. The plant is worth $400,000. The balance of the debt is about $47,000, and Palm Olive-Peet has promised to liquidate that if the Methodists come across with enough Octagon coupons.

Another bright spot in the report of the Home. They placed 65 children in foster homes last year. This is in line with the modern social conception that a home is better for a child than an institution! Even a poor home is better for a child than a good orphanage. There is something about a home, a father and a mother, that fits into a child's needs so much better than a brick building, a row of beds and a matron.

God so ordained the family as the greatest training and child nurture institution on earth. We tried to improve on God's work when we built the orphanages. We had a pretty theory to care for and relieve the many distressed orphaned children. Many of these institutions become show windows for good works.

When we give to the orphanage we are giving to immediate relief, and relief of children. They must be taken care of. There is no question about it. Perhaps in the future we will abolish orphanages, and use the better way of family training. We will find out that it is bad to regiment children, that they do not have proper attitudes, nor make personality adjustments. when they have grown up in an institution.

Perhaps so. That is the problem leaders will have to work out in the future, and make adjustments accordingly. In the meantime, two hundred children in our home at Jackson are depending on the Methodists of Mississippi to feed and clothe them. Their need is immediate. There is no better way to serve the Master.

HIGH POINTS OF ZONE MEETINGS.

Edwards, Miss.

The first zone meeting of the year was held at Edwards, February 19, 1931, with Mrs. Loyd Gaddis as chairman, and Mrs. J. Bush, secretary. After the devotionals and business were entered into, the program as outlined was presented. "Service" being the theme was interestingly given by Mrs. Wood, who suggested that we must use our time, talents, and means to help promote the kingdom of God. Revs. W. W. Nelson and Bro. Colmery led in devotionals. Six cards in the form of a questonaire were given to each auxiliary to be read aloud for meditation and prayer. Delegates from Learned, Edwards, Bolton, Raymond, Clinton and Reeves Chapel each gave a report of the year's work and plans for the new year. Bolton was selected as next place of meeting.

Winnsboro, La.

Zone No. 3 met in Winnsboro, March 10, 1931, with Miss Bettie Chapman presiding, presenting the subject of the program, "Who Is Our Neighbor?"

The devotional was given by three members of Gilbert auxiliary. The story of "World Friendship" was interestingly given by a member of Winnsboro Auxiliary.

Mrs. Hatch, district secretary, explained how some of the shortage in last year's funds occurred and stressed the importance of every member doing all in her power to avoid a shortage this year.

Special music interspersed the program throughout. Prayer was voiced for Mrs. Morris, wife of the pastor of Mangham, who is ill in a hospital in Memphis

Kilmichael, Miss.

The first zone meeting of the year was held at Kilmichael on Thursday, March 12. Mrs. Taylor Everett, zone chairman, called the meeting to order and conducted the devotionals. The theme of the well prepared program was, "Others Finding God Through You," introduced by Mrs. Everett.

"Looking Into the New Year" was discussed by Mrs. Vaiden, and "How can I make my office as President and Vice-President a vital part of the Missionary Society?"

Mrs. Stuchy gave a report of last year's work of the Vaiden Junior Society, after which the Juniors of Kilmichael gave the little playlet, "World's Club." (So glad the children had a part on this program).

There were representatives from four auxiliaries: Kilmichael 24, Vaiden 4, Columbiana 4 and Vaiden Juniors. Vaiden was selected as the next meeting place.

ZONE MEETING

Zone No. 2, Lake Charles District, held its first meeting of the year at Gueydan, February 29.

We had a good attendance and a well prepared program, which was very interesting. Four of the five Missionary societies of the Zone were represented. Each president gave a good report of their work. The reports showed a greater interest was being taken in every form of church work.

Mrs. Pullium, our zone leader, recuperating from an operation, was not able to attend. In her absence Miss Hooper, rural worker, presided.

The morning was very interestingly given by Mrs. Rickey. A lovely solo by Miss Fern Hebert and a playlet, "The Missionary Clinic," was given by the Gueydan ladies.

The noon hour was enjoyed by all, for more than one reason. A bountiful luncheon was given in the Sunday school room, and a "get acquainted" hour was soon gone.

The afternoon devotional was given by Miss Hooper in her own interesting and helpful way. A talk by Mrs. T. J. Doss was enjoyed by all. In her splendid talk we were shown our duty towards the young people of our community. Mrs. Williams very beautifully gave us a musical reading.

Discussions on Prohibition followed. Collection amounted to $6.38.

Indian Bayou asked for the zone meeting. The invitation was gladly accepted.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D. D.

Many years ago, when I was Epworth League secretary, I received a letter from a preacher in North Alabama inviting me to visit his charge and help him start a League. I accepted the invitation and went to help him "corrall his young Methodists," as he expressed it. I found a young man of medium size, his hair as black as the raven's wing, his eyes keen as the eagle's; but he was down in the mouth, running on a flat tire, so depressed that he was actually thinking of turning in his itinerant car and leaving the highway and take to the woods. As we strolled along the avenue of cedars that led from the railroad station to his modest parsonage he told me his story. He felt that he had not had a fair deal. When in that mood we are always apt to exaggerate our wrongs, and maybe he read into his circumstances some imaginary unfairness; but his story impressed me that things might have been done differently in his case without wrecking the universe. We talked it all over. He just needed a sympathetic word to steady him. I had been through the same zone of unrest myself, and felt a sincere sympathy for the young crusader. I expect he did a good deal of praying that night, and I know I did for him. When I bade him goodbye, I advised him to "stick", and he stuck.

He went straight to the front; and after serving some of our chief churches as pastor, heard the call to wider fields, located, and became one of our most active and successful evangelists. His pen is as brilliant as his tongue is eloquent. Theodore Copeland, D.D., has rambled in his evangelistic work from the Atlantic to the Pacific, sowing the seed of the kingdom and preaching a gospel of love that wins men from sin to righteousness. He lives in Dallas, Texas, and when he dies they'll hide his casket with flowers. Let me pin this violet of appreciation on him while he lives. He never would let me hear him preach, and once in St. Louis, when I purposely went in late to hear him, as I entered he stopped short and said, "I see Dr. Steel has just come in; come here Dr. and take the service." But better judges than I testify to his power as a great preacher. May the Lord abundantly bless him. He is still sticking.

CONCLUSIONS AND OBJECTIVES OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EFFICIENCY INSTITUTE

Expectations in regard to the new financial plan have been only partially achieved. It is urged that attention to the entire budget begin as soon after the annual conference as practicable.

The joint meeting of district stewards and the district and charge lay leaders as provided in the Discipline seems wise, and at this meeting time should be given for careful consideration of the program of work and plans made for the use of literature and lay speakers in promoting early and systematic payments on the general benevolences.

There is need for the cultivation of laymen as "minute men" and the frequent use of these for four-minute talks before the local congregation, as well as for occasional district-wide lay speaking. The preparation of a special piece of literature for the assistance of lay speakers seems advisable.

There is need for the reorganization of the Adult Men's Bible Class more centrally around the program of the Church, and a co-ordinating of the activities of the Brotherhood with the men's Bible class as far as possible.

Special care should be taken to make the programs of missionary institutes and district conferences of engaging interest, and a diligent effort exerted to secure the attendance of lay members, particularly lay leaders and stewards. The approaching district conferences are requested to plan for the use of lay leaders and other laymen with a view to bringing the collections of this year to one hundred per cent.

It is recommended that the time set for holding a missionary institute be conserved for the sole consideration of the specific program.

The value of Layman's Day is recognized and the official suggestive program appreciated, therefore, it is urged that under the direction of pastor and lay leaders the day be observed with an effective program.

Hearty endorsement is given to the Methodist Layman as the official organ of lay activities and our only official stewardship paper, and it is recommended that every lay leader and steward make it an essential part of his reading. An active effort should be made in every charge to circulate the paper, which is not in conflict with other periodicals.

There is need of great emphasis on the development of the spiritual life of the men of the Church, and it is recommended that greater effort be made to organize classes in Christian stewardship of life.

In view of the challenging situations that the Church faces today there is need for deep concern on the part of preachers and laymen.

It seems advisable to select some quiet place and suitable Sunday for holding an annual spiritual efficiency institute to be participated in by presiding elders, conference boards of lay activities, and chairmen of other conference boards.

The time and place for the next meeting was referred to a committee.

"CHECK AND DOUBLE CHECK."

By Rev. James H. Felts, D. D.

Andy, of the firm of Amos and Andy, is the best advertised successful failure known. He constantly "hurts at one place and grunts at another." Effect is very real to Andy—cause is impenetrable fog. When he checks and double checks he is right where he started. "SHORE."

We talk about depression, unusual economic conditions, supply and demand, stock failures, drouth and the like, and point out remedies until one gets dizzy. All the while the actual truth, well known to most of us, may be found in the simple statements of a young business man: "We have been on a long joy ride. Now we must walk back home." Sure we must walk. And the walking will be slow.

When a man is walking last year's clothes look better. A less distended stomach becomes more comfortable. Strutting and swaggering and high-hatting the universe becomes ludicrous. When a man's blood test registers ninety per cent pot likker he is not likely to get too big for his britches. He quits posing. He discovers the sweetness of earned bread. His family looks better to him. He is more likely to recognize his debts. He is less likely to be found among measly make-believes and thin-blooded commuters.

When we laugh at Andy we are laughing at ourselves. All the while we have been willing to dwell in the land and be fed. It is so easy to forget the difficult and remember the easy. Why not accept God's plan without reservations? "Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed." Here is a mixture of faith and common sense so blended as to bring results, work a cure. And we had just as well come to it whole-heartedly. It is our only permanent remedy. When you ignore Old Man Common-sense other travelers will find a wreck on the road of life. My, but such wrecks are plentiful these days. It would be difficult to find in all history a larger fool crop than we have produced "since the war."

Listen in a few minutes. He tries to look wise, and speak in deep stage-like tones, carrying the dignity of a newly-elected member of the Mississippi legislature, about economic conditions, bank failures, graft and the like, until one thinks of poor old Samson shaking himself without knowing that his power was gone because Delilah had been too much for him. Say, brother, there is a fiddler to pay at every dance.

I have observed that you can't determine the amount of gas in the tank by the speed of the car. No more can you determine the amount of God-likeness in a man by the gilbness of his tongue. Nor is it easy to know the extent of a man's consecration and self-denial by what he says at a special meeting of the leaders of the church. There is a great gulf found between talking and doing.

I make bold to say that Dr. Common-sense would prescribe properly for the average man without looking at his tongue, feeling his pulse, thumping his abdomen, calling in a stethoscopist, lifting his eye-lids, taking his temperature, or carrying him through an expensive clinic. He is about the wisest old physician in all the world. He is not a college graduate. He has never received an honorary degree. His name seldom appears on the front page of a great daily. Not often is he elected to office. He spins few theories. He lives simply, walks uprightly, deals honorably, talks modestly, loves God and his fellow-man. He is the wisdom that comes from experience and observation. He would probably tell us to fly a little lower and roost a little higher. He would surely tell us to "owe no man anything, but to love him." A sound faith coupled with sane living will go a long way towards curing our ills. While you are laughing at Andy don't forget some of the philosophy of Amos.

Corinth, Miss.

HAVE YOU ORGANIZED YOUR LOCAL CHURCH BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION?

The General Board of Christian Education has been at work on the new program of legislation for a period of eight months. Many articles have been given to the church press and many leaflets have been prepared for general distribution. We feel that the time has come for the introduction of this program into every local church throughout our connection. Already the Unified Program is in operation in many of our congregations. You will permit me to call your attention to Section IV, Paragrapha 458, 459 and 460 of the Discipline. Paragraph 459 provides that "There shall be in every local church a Board of Christian Education composed of the pastor, the superintendent of the Sunday school, and from one to five members who shall be nominated by the pastor and elected by the quarterly conference; provided that the following officers, where there are such, shall also be members of the Board: The Director of Religious Education, the President of the Young People's Division, the Superintendent of the Adult Division, and the Presidents of the Woman's Missionary Society and of the Brotherhood." Frequent meetings of the local board should be held in order that the whole program of Christian Education as it applies to the local church may be studied and put into operation. This plan contemplates a program for the Children's Division, the Young People's Division and the Adult Division of the local church. It is of much broader significance than the former Sunday school program. Literature explaining the plan of organization and the program for the local church can be secured by writing the Department of the Local Church, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

MENCHKEN AND MISSISSIPPI

The Editor Receives Deserved Reprehension

In the issue of April 16, we published an editorial on "Menchken and Mississippi," and while at one of the district conferences the next week, a person of spiritual insight and unquestioned interest in the Church, said some complimentary things about the Advocate and in substance added: "I was shocked by your editorial on Menchken, I didn't think you were capable of saying so many hard things; and you manifested no spiritual concern whatever." The voice was of kindness and not rebuke, but reflection was started again upon the true mission of the Advocate.

By the voice from within we admit that in replying to Mr. Menchken's statements about Mississippi we were moved more by patriotic devotion to a state, than we were by loyalty to the highest principles of the Kingdom of Christ. The quill was dipped more in vitriol than in virtue. "If ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others?"

While we cannot approve a railleur's role, we do recede from that type of editorial, thank the party for the criticism and make due apology to all concerned for the "hard things said"; and "the manifest lack of spiritual concern."

AN APPROPRIATE AND USEFUL MEMORIAL TO BISHOP GALLOWAY

"Our church loses annually not a few young preachers because the sustentation funds of its theological seminaries are so small when compared with the very large sustentation funds of Northern institutions.

"I could name not less than a dozen brilliant young men who have been lost to our ministry this way—some of them have been lost to the ministry of any church, abandoning entirely the ministerial office.

"A wise and generous man has taken knowledge of this loss and seeks to establish a fund at the School of Theology of Emory University, creating a sustentation fund to be known as the 'Charles B. Galloway Sustentation Fund.' He is not a man of wealth, but he is a man of wisdom and devotion to the Church.

"He starts this fund with a cash contribution of $2000, and I am publishing this fact that other men may be induced to make contributions for the increase of the fund.

"I do not believe money could be better invested than in this way. Our Church cannot prosper without a qualified ministry, and our seminaries are necessary to give to our young men the advantages required to impart to them the highest qualifications for the ministerial office.

"The strong men in many of our churches are not slow to call for the men for their pastors whom they regard as the strongest preachers in the Annual Conference in which their churches are located. This disposition to choose and pick is not to be condemned harshly; but the men who thus call for the best of preachers ought to be quick to invest funds for the theological education of the young ministers of our Church.

"That the fund is called in honor of Bishop Charles B. Galloway is altogether appropriate; for he saw and lamented before his death the lack of such funds to give the best advantages to our young men who were looking to the ministry. Very often he talked to me on the subject with the deepest emotion.

"If any one feels moved to make a contribution to the increase of this important fund named in honor of Bishop Galloway, I am authorized by the authorities of Emory University to receive such contributions, and I hope there may be many such gifts very soon.

"Very truly,

"W. A. CANDLER."

Both Bishops have given themselves unsparingly to their tasks and wherever they have gone the people have heard them gladly, the Church has been strengthened and the Kingdom built up. The Advocate joins with thousands of others in a hearty welcome.

A CONTRAST IN MOTHERS

In the twenty-seventh chapter of Genesis and the fifteenth chapter of Matthew there are interesting studies in motherhood. Rebeckah and the Syrophonecian woman are mothers in contrast.

The Bible reveals human nature at its worst as well as at its best. It doesn't make smooth sentences to write of a sinful mother. Rebeckah developed cruel favoritism in Jacob's behalf. There is no excuse for Esau's valuing his birthright so cheaply, but we have wondered if he did not lose heart because of the way matters were going at home. Regardless of Esau's weakness, Rebeckah pursued the wrong course in effecting Jacob's supremacy. Deceit and fraud can never promote the higher interests of life. Jacob's ultimate success was in spite of his mother's example and not because of her schemes. For mothers to use their privileges so as to impress wrong ideals upon their children and set before them sinful examples is one of the great tragedies of the ages.

The Syrophonecian mother reflects those noble qualities of motherhood. How self-effacing and solicitous she was for her young daughter. She had heard of Jesus and it makes all the difference in two worlds for a mother to hear in her heart of Jesus, who "took little children up in his arms and blessed them." The touch of Christ upon the child is the gateway to a better tomorrow and the true mother is ready to subordinate worldly ambitions to spiritual ends. Far better are the "crumbs" with the touch of Christ upon the child than opulence with social and spiritual tragedy in after life.

The most beautiful and influential life in the world is that of the true mother. Her self-effacing sacrifice, her constant toil, and her undying love form a beauty on which can rest no blight. Woman is possessed of unquestioned ability and has wrought well in numerous vocations, but her largest and most lasting contributions to the world's best life have been in the sacred realm of Christian motherhood. Jochebed, Monica, Susanna Wesley, Janet Woodrow Wilson, and legions of other mothers, are blessed forevermore and will not suffer in comparison with the mightiest achievements of Queens who have ruled the empires of history.

The ancient decree that the "children shall be destroyed" is unrepealed and it has been widened to include the youth. Forces are aloose in the world that would empale childhood and bankrupt the morals of youth. If the path of history is turned higher toward broader levels of purity and honor, peace and justice, it will largely be done through the influence of Christian mothers. Napoleon said, "Let France have good mothers and she will have good sons." And Abraham Lincoln said, "All I am or hope to be I owe to my angel mother." The hearts of old and young are filled with gratitude for a Christian mother.

Whose Girl Was She?

BY REV. M. E. LAZENBY, D.D.

Mothers and Fathers, Have You a Girl or Boy to Spare? Have You a Child to Offer On the Altar of Worldliness?

WOULD YOU CONSIDER this a strange request, if in answer to the ring of the telephone you were to hear the voice of the city undertaker say: "Can you give us your time this afternoon from two until six o'clock?" I did not ask what he wanted. I knew without asking. I had been visiting the young girl at the City hospital. I knew she had never regained consciousness sufficient to give any clue to her name and address. I knew she had passed away unnamed and unclaimed and that the remains were held at the city undertaker's, and that many mothers and fathers would come to look on the silent face to see if she were their girl. I had served many times before in this capacity between the hours of two and six.

I RECEIVED SEVEN MOTHERS and two fathers; took them to the quiet, lonely room, turned back the sheet from the face of the young girl who had been left by parents to choose her own way. The mothers would scream, cry, wring their hands. One cried: "Oh, I pray she is my girl, then I will know where she is!" She was not her girl, but she was somebody's girl. The fathers came in quietly, with bent heads; not a word until they had looked long at the silent face. "No, she is not our girl," they said. Not all were city mothers—some were from the country. Many telegrams, long distance 'phone messages came—asking if we could or would describe the features of the little girl who had been left to choose her own way.

The Stairway to Hell

The above story is related by Rev. Charles J. Waehlte in "Watch and Pray." We are told that in our great cities such cases as the one mentioned above are not uncommon. It is said that the number of girls who "disappear" each year runs into the thousands. There is some terrible reason for this hellish condition. What is it? Why do our boys and girls go away from home into sin and disgrace and death?" The dark and deathly journey is not frequently made in one blind step. Usually it is step by step. Some of the steps that lead from God are here noted.

The Amusement Step

The world is pleasure mad. The amount of money spent annually upon amusements runs into the billions. The figures are stupendous, staggering. Where this amusement of the most harmless kind its very quantity would make it ruinous in its effects. But alas, only a small per cent of it is harmless. Much of it is vicious in design and execution. If this testimony of its patrons be true the theatre was never more corrupt than today. The dance, reeking with its black-bottom and barn-yard suggestiveness, was never more befouling nor more common than now. Sabbath amusements, doubly wrong, are more rampant and less reproved than at any period known to the writer. The maelstrom of worldliness, powerful in its whirl and swirl, is drawing multitudes of young people into it, almost without their knowledge. Parents who sit idly by countenancing these things, if, indeed, they do not foster them, will not be guiltless when, in hell, their children gnash their teeth upon them.

The Literature Step

Another step on the stairway to hell is the bad literature step. What are your boys and girls reading? A Birmingham pastor called at the home of one of his official members. He had occasion to go into the private room of this official's son, a lad in his teens. To his amazement he found a number of sex magazines, film magazines, so-called true story magazines, in this room of the foulest type. Worse than that he found the father of this lad utterly unconcerned. But this salacious literature, vile as it is, is not nearly so bad as much that comes out each day in some daily newspapers. Here it is served daily, around the family hearth, with the knowledge of the parents. Novelettes, working with the maggots of passion-stirring suggestiveness, are dished out day by day. Stories and features, themselves featured by subtle worldliness and materialism, become the daily menu of our youth. Will our parents and teachers and preachers longer remain silent while Godless dailies coin money at the expense of priceless boys and girls?

The Atheistic Step

In God's name we plead with parents not to ignore the existence of this step of unbelief. Do not close your eyes to it, nor heed the siren voices of some soft-tongued one, saying: "All is well." We confidently believe that modernism, liberalism, rationalism, or whatever you wish to call it,—it is the legitimate child of evolution—is largely responsible for the wave of worldliness and sin and crime that engulfs the world today. Teach the youth that they are the offspring of animals and they will live and act and die like animals. Teach them that they are the handiwork of God and they will seek to honor God in their lives. As long as theories are taught in our schools that deny, discount or question God's Word, sin and crime will increase. Fathers and mothers owe it to their power to seek to do all in their power to see that our schools are rid of such teachings that will bring ruin upon State and Church. In this effort every Christian parent should have a part.

A LITTLE SERMON TO MOTHERS ON MOTHER'S DAY

By Leila Atwood Faust, in New York Christian Advocate

Text: "As many as received Him, to them gave He power."—John 1. 12.

The joy which mothers experience the wide world over when they hear the first faint cry of their own little children is quickly followed by that greatest of all emotions, mother love, so intense, so all comprehensive of the needs of the child and the privileges of motherhood—that love so utterly without fear of the future, so sure that all the dreams of all the long waiting shall be realized, that love is the nearest to God's love that we ever know, the love that knows no sacrifice, no limitations, the love that even in that first hour plans a wonderful future for the child, where only absolute victory over every obstacle shall be the crowning of the love-guarded life.

But as the days come and go, and the little life grows into years, the mother learns that mother love alone is not sufficient for the development of the wonderful life of her child, surrounded as it is by the evil as well as the good.

The mother realizes that she must have at her command the power which controls the evil and so illuminates the good that after faithful teaching on the part of the mother the child may naturally use his own God-given privilege of choice, and follow mother into that life of comradeship and fellowship with the greatest of all teachers, the Christ.

Where shall you go, mother, for the power you need for the growing of a life, and that life the eternal life of your own child? Listen to the world of that disciple of the long ago, who loved the Christ "the best of all." "As many as received Him, to them gave Me power."

Power for the asking, mother beloved, after having received Him; receiving Him, just as you received your own child into your life, ever more to be in your heart, in your thinking and doing, and in all your living, never to be without Him again, to have the power in you "to will and to do," to know that all things are possible for you and your child, that you, mother, are a co-worker with God, that you cannot fail, because God never faileth.

Taking the Christ into your heart gives you power over your affections. You will love only such things as are pure, true, just, honest, of good report, and the things that are lovely, praiseworthy and virtuous. You will be like them, and your child shall see you actually living the "vision splendid," shall catch the fragrance of your coming and going. Your very words shall be a benediction, for "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

Oh, Mother, receive the Christ into your heart, for without the power to control your own affections you cannot convince your child of the glory of the Christ life, or that what he loves makes or mars all his living. And all this power, after you have received the Christ into your heart.

Take the Christ into your thinking, for as one thinketh so is he. We are for that one moment what we think we are. O to think God's thoughts over after Him, and to receive the power that not only controls our thinking, but gives us the ability to so express our thoughts to those who hear may take knowledge of us "that we have been with Jesus and learned of Him!"

It was Mary who chose "that good part," and so learned of Jesus that even death had no terrors for her. She said, "Lord, if thou hadst been here my brother had not died."

To know Jesus means life, and life is what mothers must give to their children. O for the power, the life-giving power to give our children the abundant life, the life full of opportunity of service, the life of harmony with nature and science, with joy and sorrow, with rich and poor, life human and divine, life eternal, life without death. And all this power, mother, to give to your children after having received the Christ.

Mothers, take the Christ into your "doing," into the activities of life, that the very work of your hands may be established, that your child, seeing your good works, may glorify your Father and his, that the everyday, commonplace, homely duties of life, the fashioning of garments, the preparing of food, the little things that mean comfort and rest and peace in the home; the story and song at bedtime, the patient living and loving every day the whole year through, the quiet waiting on the Lord that renews your strength. So live that your child may become a worker, the brotherhood of man, his ideal, the fatherhood of God his passion; any place in God's great world his opportunity, to make the kingdoms of this world the kingdoms of his mother's God; and all this power, mother, after having received Him.

"As many as received Him, to them gave H power." Will you be one of the many mothers on this Mother's Day to receive the power? Oh, this is what we lack; we are mothers without power, without force, without the dynamic of God, which impels our children to the right, and holds them to God in the crisis of life. The promises of God are yea and amen to those who believe to you and your children and your children's children, not only for this life, but for that great day also when we who have received power to become the children of God shall appear before Him. Here, Lord, are we, and the children thou hast given us, saved by thy divine power, according to thy word.

"The partnership with God, in motherhood,
What strength, what purity, what self-control,
What love, what wisdom, shall belong to her,
Who helps God fashion an immortal soul."

THE BEST TRIBUTE

By Rev. John Mann Walker, D.D.

Hunt out the modest violet, the prim carnation, the gorgeous rose, the royal lily; gather them into a group like an angel choir, all their fair throats hymning the praises of mother, and the tribute will not be extravagant. Send her a magic instrument from whose mysterious heart shall sound forth the voices of the world's kings and queens of eloquence and of song, and mother will be a fit audience for all. Ransack the shops, seek out the most exquisite fabrics, the richest artistry of silver and of gold, the rarest gems, and she will be worthy of all. But know that there is a fitter tribute each may bring, a gift that more than all else she will prize.

It is "the white flower of a blameless life." Lay that upon her bosom living or her casket dead, and it will most become her life and satisfy her heart. Good and useful sons and daughters are a mother's crown of joy and of glory. How shall we attain to such a life?

There is no way but her way. The sacred shrine at mother's knee, most precious memory of every child, gives the secret. The heaven that cast its radiance upon her path must illumine ours. The hidden music that transfigured her heart must enrapture ours. The Christ who held her faith must have ours. Only as we drink at the same exhaustless fountain that fed her life, as we have a similar faith and reverence and devotion, shall we be able to bring to her the one gift that can satisfy; share with her a fellowship of love, deep as the spirit; and in the end attain a triumph which, like hers, shall endure forever.

Thanks be to God that the same mystic anchor which has held secure the noble mothers of the world through all the hurricanes of time, can and will sustain all who, like them, trust and serve.—Zion's Herald.

THE NEED OF CHURCH EVANGELIZATION

By Henry G. Riser of Ruston, La.

II.

Evangelism in the Church is very important. Evangelism is very important in the Church, because it is the very life of the Church and it keeps things going, and also "the young people and children are the Church of tomorrow, and must be developed for leadership as well as for their own sakes." And if the Church does not have the spirit of Evangelism, she certainly isn't going to keep the young people at work and interested in the Church. We will have to have system in our churches, "God is a God of system." —Modern Church Management, by A. F. McGarrah—because this is the only way we can reach everyone in the Church and the only way we can keep all the church members busy and at work. We certainly cannot have the spirit of evangelization in our Church if we haven't organized, so that all will have some part in the great program to be carried out. And on the other hand it is absolutely necessary and important to have Evangelism in the Church in order to be well organized and to keep organized.

"When one mentions Evangelism do you intuitively think of revival services? There was a time when the two terms were synonymous. In practice we know better now. We know that evangelism is the much bigger term of the two and that a church may be distinctly evangelistic and yet never have a revival meeting." Therefore, this statement from William H. Leach in his book, "How to Make a Church Go," goes to prove the importance of evangelism in the Church. It would be useless for a Church to try to sponser a big revival campaign if the peoople were not ready for it; and how can the people be ready for it if the evangelistic spirit isn't there? As Rev. Thomas Waugh says in his book on "Special Missions," "In the Church the work of the Evangelist would be largely impossible but for the good work done before he goes on the ground. When his mission is over the result would count for every little but for the work that must be done when he is gone." Therefore, we can clearly see that it is very important that the Church have a continual spirit of Evangelism in order to accomplish anything at all. We can readily see from the experiences of others; that an expert Evangelist cannot come into the Church for a few weeks and do a great work unless he has the support of the Church before and after the revival meetings.

Through Evangelism the Church accomplishes a world of unknown good. In many churches where the spirit of Evangelism prevails and it is on fire for God, a stranger comes in, sits down in the midst of all this, and the Holy Spirit immediately begins to work within his sinful heart, but perhaps it may be several days later before he really accepts the Lord Jesus Christ as his personal Saviour. And it may so happen that this church or any of its members will ever know of this man's conversion, because he may live in some other neighborhood or some far away city, and probably never again while he lives on earth be able to return to this church in which he was convicted of his sinful life and accepted Christ. So this is another great and important reason why we should have Evangelism in the church at all times, because we know not when we are turning some wayfaring man unto the Lord, and we do not know who is watching us and studying our Christian life.

Souls gained for the Kingdom of God are more precious to the Church any day than all the silver and gold anyone could possibly give to it. Therefore, why does not the Church put more stress upon the Evangelistic work of the Church? The Evangelism in the Church is very, very, important, I say again, because no Church can function properly and for the glory of God without it.

WITHOUT MOTHER!

"It's awful lonesome at our house
'Thout mother;
"it's awful hard to get along
'Thout mother;
It seems that everything goes wrong
'Thout mother;
'Course father does the best he can;
But then, you know, he's just a man;
An' don't know how to fix and plan
Like mother.

"Seems like I don't enjoy my play
'Thout mother;
Things just get worse every day
'Thout mother;
There's no one now to mend my doll,
Nobody's sorry when I fall—
O, home just ain't no place at all
'Thout mother;

"But father says we must be brave;
'Thout mother;
'Cause him an' me, we only have
One 'nother.
An' if we're brave, an' strong an' true,
An' good just like she told us to,
We'll go up home when life is through,
To mother!"

DR. R. H. WYNN IMPROVES

Dear Brother Deeell: It has been on my heart to write a few words for the Advocate concerning Mr. Wynn's serious illness since February 14, but not until today have I felt I could take the time form his bedside to carry out my desire.

As I look back over these weeks of frightful anxiety, I realize clearly that nothing but the marvelous grace of Our Lord, expressed through His faithful children who have ministered to us in so many ways, as well as through the "Comforter," have I been able to meet the problems daily presented. I cannot express my very deep appreciation of Brother W. R. Harvell's untiring devotion and determined efforts to accomplish Mr. Wynn's restoration to health. He has proven the wonderful quality of his friendship, having given himself in prayer unceasingly that the power of God would be manifested. And it has. I have had scores of the most inspiring letters from numbers of the congregation and the uniform message was that as they all gathered around the altar at prayer meetings conducted by Brother Harvell, in special intercession for Mr. Wynn's recovery, they had the assurance that in spite of very little hope being offered by attending surgeons at John Hopkins Hospital, his life would be spared.

The various activities of the church among men, women, young people and children have been carried on successfully and enthusiastically. Various pastors have given their services gladly; as Dr. A. W. Turner wrote me, "Now that Bob is ill, we are all pastors at Minden." News of crowded church services have reached us. Space forbids my mentioning those who have offered or given their services. Heartfelt thanks to every one. The district conference, through the secretary, Rev. A. S. J. Neill, sent the following telegram during session of that body: "The Minden District Conference in the First Methodist Church, greatly missing beloved pastor, send love and greetings to you and wife. We rejoice at the news of your rapid improvement and prospects of your early return to your beloved work and place among us."

When the Conference Board of Christian Education met in Alexandria, Rev. H. L. Johns, secretary pro tempore, wired telling him they had missed him from his accustomed place and sent love and every good wish for his recovery.

This unusual experience has demonstrated to me how marvelously God sustains His needy children, has deepened my devotion to Him and increased my desire to be of use in spreading the glad news of His ever-present help.

Mr. Wynn entered John Hopkins on March 18, had preliminary brain operation on the 21st and removal of a tumor on the 21st. He left the hospital April 8. We have been staying with relatives in Baltimore since then and are planning to leave for Houston shortly to visit our daughter, Mrs. W. N. Blanton, before returning to Minden.

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL LECTURES

Seashore Divinity School has brought lecturers and preachers of national and international reputation to its platforms since its organization in 1909. These platform speakers have been among the greatest churchmen of this generation and have always brought inspiring messages on vital subjects.

This year we are very fortunate in securing two of our outstanding men to deliver the platform addresses. The date of the school is June 16-26. June 16-20 Dr. C. C. Selecman, president of Southern Methodist University, will speak twice each day on the general subject, "Christian Epoch Makers." A few of the subjects for his lectures are: "Jesus, the Teacher," "Paul, the Pastor," "Wesley, the Founder," and "Workers Together With God." Dr. Selecman's record as a preacher of large vision and power, is the assurance of great help from his lectures.

Dr. Costen J. Harrell, pastor of Monument Methodist Church, Richmond, Va., will begin June 21 and continue through June 26. Dr. Harrell's subjects for Sunday will be, "The Root of Iniquity," at 11 a. m., and "The Gospel of Grace," at 8 p. m. During the week his lectures will be on the general theme: "The Ministry and Message of Isaiah," during the morning hours. He will discuss these subjects each morning in the order given, "The Prophetic Movement of Israel," "Background and Crisis," "Years of Apprenticeship," "Clashing Policies," and "Final Victory." His evening addresses will be on the following subjects: "The Pharisees, Ancient and Modern," "The Sadducees, Ancient and Modern," "Up From Paganism," and "The Word of His Grace." Dr. Harrell is another gifted son of Methodism, and as a preacher and lecturer he is in great demand.

Director of Publicity.

THE NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The New Orleans District Conference met in Pharr Chapel in Morgan City, La., April 21-22. The people of Morgan City were ideal hosts and did everything in their power to make the conference a success and succeeded nobly and well. The pastor, Rev. Don E. Dulany, and his good wife were tireless in their labors for the comfort of all those present.

The conference was a very successful one and enjoyable all the way through. Business was transacted speedily and effectively under the wise guidance of our presiding elder, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr. The connectional speeches were brief yet inspiring and the members of the conference made their reports without a great superfluity of words. The following connectional officers were present and addressed the conference: Dr. J. G. Snelling, for the Memorial Mercy Home; Rev. R. W. Vaughan, for the Louisiana Orphanage; Rev. H. N. Brown, for the Board of Missions; Miss Elizabeth Langford and Rev. A. K. McLellan, for the Board of Christian Education; Rev. D. B. Raulins, supplemented the presentation of the Christian Education matter and also spoke of the S. M. U. scholarship fund. The New Orleans Christian Advocate was well represented by Dr. J. B. Peters. Mrs. Annie L. Swan, district secretary of the W. M. S., and Dr. R. S. Crichlow, district lay leader, represented these great causes.

The conference was inspired by helpful sermons by Dr. J. G. Snelling, Dr. M. S. Monk and Rev. D. W. Poole and by devotional services conducted by Rev. A. M. Martin, C. J. Thibodeaux and A. D. Martin.

The reports of the various ministers were encouraging indeed. In view of the prevalent financial depression some of the items are little less than marvelous. It is worthy of note that every church in the district has observed the Kingdom Extension cultivation period and that the progress of the offering promises a fine showing in the end. The easter offering for the orphanage was especially gratifying. Within the city of New Orleans alone nearly $1500 was given to this great cause. But the thing that causes the most joy in the hearts of all those present was the number of additions to the churches since the last annual conference session. A grand total of 460 members have been added to the several churches in the district, of which number 221 were by profession of faith and 239 by letter.

The following were elected as lay delegates to the Annual Conference: H. P. Wall, R. S. Crichlow, R. E. Brumby, E. E. Cayard, Miss Nettie Stroup, Mrs. Martin Hebert, J. H. Thacher, Mrs. J. A. Alford. The following were named as alternate delegates: C. O. Chalmers, J. H. Carter, M. F. Wilson and A. D. Carpenter.

The conference accepted the invitation to hold its next session in Houma.

JAMES T. HARRIS, Secretary.

To the Presiding Elder and Members of the New Orleans
District Conference:

Brethren: Your committee on financial systems, acting under instructions from the General Board of Lay Activities, has investigated the methods used in raising church funds in the several churches in the New Orleans district. We find that those churches which are most successful in raising funds use the weekly collection envelopes in connection with the every-member canvass, and that the local congregational expenses and conference benevolences are included in what is generally known as the budget.

For the purpose of initiating plans and perfecting organizations to utilize effectively the principles of Christian Stewardship in the work of the church, the General Conference has made it the duty of the Board of Lay Activities to stress the practical application of these principles in connection with the every member canvass and financial plans of the local congregations.

Your committee is of the opinion that the financial condition of many of the churches in the New Orleans district may be greatly improved if they will adopt and apply the following recommendations:

1. At the beginning of the Conference year the Board of Stewards will meet and budget all local congregational expenses for the ensuing year, said budget to include the Annual Conference Benevolent apportionments.

2. Care should be exercised in making up the budget so as not to overload it with funds which should be raised by special collections, such as paying off debts on church and parsonage, Kingdom Extension offering, orphanage collection, Golden Cross, etc., which said collections should be taken separately, after thorough preparation.

3. On the first Sunday in the new Conference year, if the weather is good and the pastor is in his pulpit, a spokesman appointed by the Board of Stewards should present the matter to the congregation at morning and evening services, reading and explaining the budget in detail, and make an appeal for liberal pledges from members and friends of the congregation to cover the budget, pledge cards and pencils being provided and distributed by the stewards.

4. On the following evening the stewards should hold a meeting and check the pledges, make lists of church members who have not pledged, and distribute the lists to conscientious persons for the purpose of visiting the homes of said persons and securing pledges to cover the budget.

5. About the fifth month of the Conference year the Board of Stewards should hold a meeting, check up on the pledges, and visit those members who have fallen behind in payment of church dues, with the purpose in view of persuading all pledgees to pay in full for the first half of the year.

6. "Let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him." Weekly giving should be urged, and all of our members should be persuaded and encouraged to set apart at least a tenth of their income for benevolent work. This can only be done by long and persistent effort, but it should be done, and a list of those who have become tithers should be kept in a suitable place in the church, and enrollment of additional names continually sought.

7. The weekly duplex envelope system should be adopted in all of our churches and the "D. E." Ideal Record book should be used by the treasurer in keeping individual pledge accounts.

8. About 45 days before the close of the Conference year plans should be made by the Board of Stewards for collection of all pledges in full. The treasurer should furnish lists to the stewards giving names and amounts due on pledges, and all whose pledges are in arrears should be sought out and interviewed. Two-minute talks should be made by spokesmen at morning and evening services the last four Sundays of the Conference year, said spokesmen informing the congregation of the financial status of the church each Sunday, urging members and friends to pay off their pledges, and making a fresh appeal to those new members who have not pledged.

9. It is urgently recommended that due cultivation and thorough canvassing be made the rule in taking every essential collection of the church, whether it be for the local church budget, general apportionments, Kingdom Extension Offering, Golden Cross or Orphanage.

Respectfully submitted,

C. O. CHALMERS,
JOHN B. PETERS,
S. H. RADCLIFFE.

REPORT OF THE GREENWOOD DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Greenwood District Conference met in Webb, Miss., April 23 and 24. This was one of the best, if not the best, district conferences that has been the privilege of the writer to attend. It was characterized by a spirit of optimism, Christian fellowship, and harmonious relations.

Brother L. P. Wasson, our efficient and beloved presiding elder, presided with ease and dignity. Truly he is a man of God filled with the Spirit.

There were many high points of interest in the two days session of the Conference. We received information and inspiration from all of the visiting brethren. There was Dr. J. L. Decell, editor of our conference organ, who spoke in the interest of our paper; then a little later at the eleven o'clock srevice the first day he brought to our waiting hearts a strong and stirring sermon on the subject, "The Garden of Life."

The subject of Christian Education was well presented by Dr. J. R. Countiss, president, Grenada College; Brother R. G. Lord, executive secretary of the Conference Board of Christian Education, and Brother Wm. L. Robinson, Conference director of young people's work. These men of God are doing a wonderful work in their respective fields.

Brother J. T. Lewis, our pastor at Drew Station, preached a most excellent and helpful sermon at the evening hour Thursday.

The first day of the Conference did not surpass in interest the second day, which we called "Laymen's Day." We find our laymen are not neglecting their work, but in depressed times they are proving their great loyalty as never before to the great Church of God. The masterly address of Hon. Gerald Fitzgerald of Clarksdale at the eleven o'clock hour was an inspiration to all who heard him.

The Woman's Work, and the Epworth League Work of the district was well represented by the secretaries of these two organizations, Mrs. J. H. Holloman of Ruleville, and Miss Rosa Lee Price of Itta Bena.

Our Annual Conference director of Superannuate Endowment, Brother A. T. McIlwain, and our Conference Missionary secretary, Brother R. G. Moore, are busy and successful pastors in our district. These men represented the Superannuate Endowment, and Kingdom Extension Work.

The following were elected as lay delegates to the Annual Conference: G. R. Stokely, R. L. Ward, D. N. Foose, B. P. Brooks, J. B. Streater, M. F. Pierce, T. C. Sledge, Mrs. J. H. Holloman, E. A. Tanner and A. L. Marshall.

We could not bring this report to a close without saying a word about the good influence and inspiration to us all of our beloved superannuate preacher, Brother J. J. Brooks, who was in the active service fify-six years, and for six years has been out of the regular work. This Soldier of the Cross is still "carrying on," and his presence, his words of council, and his prayers are a benediction in all of our conferences and preachers' meetings. Truly he was a blessing to us in this District Conference.

The Confrence adjourned with prayer by our presiding elder, Brother Wasson, to meet next year with the good people of Tchula.

SAM E. ASHMORE, Secretary.

HATTISBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

By Rev. John D. Ellis, Secretary

The Hattisburg District Conference was in session at Broad Street Methodist Church April 21-22 inclusive, and under the able planning and supervision of Rev. W. A. Hays, Presiding Elder, and Bishop Collins Denny, fulfilled its mission, and met the Disciplinary requirements.

The opening sermon was preached by Rev. W. A. Terry.

About sixteen committees looked into the various interests of the Church and made written reports.

Divers resolutions were passed to show appreciation, to stir interest and to help meet situations.

Harmon Lee Smith was licensed to preach.

Devotional exercises were conducted at proper times by Bishop Denny, S. C. Moody and A. J. Boyles.

Bishop Denny also preached three times to the delight of the congregations.

Every time the Bishop talked it was with spiritual illumination and edification, dignity and poise, purity of diction, grace and ease, and with that simplicity which was devoid of affection and self-consciousness. His classical knowledge and extensive travels enable him to draw illustrations from sources far beyond the power of one less versed in literature, geography and cosmos. Like unto John Wesley, Alexander Stephens, and other notables before our day, Bishop Denny is a small man, and does not weigh very much in flesh and brawn, but when he walks along, the congregation cannot help but notice that he makes tracks mentally visible, and conspicuous. His power to say things and to quote whole sections is remarkable. It does the Church good for a Bishop to come along.

The Church has had some apostles, evangelists and ministers which can be weighed by the side of anybody in that part of the world, which is worldly.

If the end of the world is the gathering up of that which is useful, and which has final standard of value, then men like Paul, Wesley and others, who minister and serve, will not be pitched into the trash pile.

The visiting brethren from other parts of Missippi and Louisiana were Revs. T. J. O'Neil, J. T. Leggett, B. L. Sutherland, H. J. Moore, Charles Assaf, J. A. Smith, J. C. Chambers, G. F. Winfield, P. M. Caraway, J. L. Decell, J. W. Sells, W. M. Sullivan, H. E. Raley, C. H. Ellis, L. F. Alford, W. J. Fergunson, J. A. Wells, Otto Porter, J. G. Snelling, Dr. D. M. Key, and Mr. W. D. Hawkins.

At different times speeches were made upon matters of interest by Bishop Denny, D. M. Key, G. F. Winfield, J. C. Chambers, J. A. Smith, B. L. Sutherland, J. L. Decell, J. W. Sells, W. D. Hawkins, W. M. Sullivan, H. E. Raley, W. S. F. Tatum, J. G. Snelling, W. M. Williams, A. J. Beasley and W. J. Ferguson.

Lay Delegates elected to Annual Conference: W. S. F. Tatum, H. V. Waite, Mrs. A. J. Boyles, H. C. Norsworthy, Dr. T. J. Burnham, W. C. Mathis, J. M. Gandy, F. B. Woodley, W. H. L. Carruth, Mrs. W. M. Williams, J. A. Cameron, Mrs. H. C. Castle, Mrs. Jeff Brown.

Alternates: B. M. Stevens, H. Ogden, W. U. Corley, H. W. Reynolds, H. C. Clarke.

Licensing Committee: W. H. Lewis, L. L. Roberts, R. H. Clegg, J. D. Ellis.

Golden Cross Director: A. C. Lynd.

Ellisville, Miss., was chosen as the place of meeting in 1932.

Local Preachers passed in examination of character: L. E. Wicht, D. R. Campbell, H. B. Gilmore, W. P. Meadow, H. C. Norsworthy, W. J. Stokes, E. D. Dennis, J. J. Smylie.

Local preachers license renewed: M. E. Edmonson, C. Hudson, J. D. Slay, W. C. Ellis, Samuel Moody, Jr., J. B. Rowell, F. J. Davidge, W. A. Terry, Jr., C. L. Stewart, R. S. Howse and Thos. A. Carruth.

The Conference instructed the Secretary to send to Bishop Warren A. Candler a telegram, indicative of high esteem, and prayer, which was done.

Resolutions of thanks were passed for hospitality, kindness and courtesy and the Conference adjourned after a pleasant and profitable meeting.

A veteran of the Cross who attended the Conference, and who irradiated cheerfulness and hope, was Rev. C. H. Ellis, who has been exhorting and preaching, with license, for seventy-two years, and he can still preach.

The writer approached the seat of the Conference through a virgin forest of long-leaf pine, which at this season is a riot of gorgeous colors, and which belongs to a splendid Methodist layman, Mr. W. S. F. Tatum: Brother Tatum has been a billionaire lately in dog-wood blossoms, red maple blooms and wild flowers of every hue. Each pine tree towers skyward, silent indicators, which point the way to heaven

This duty is now performed. The writer can now stick his beans, and then with fishing pole in hand, can be found somewhere in Brother Tatum's wilderness, where a sparkling stream laughs its way to the sea.

Brother W. T. Griffin has promised: "I go with thee."

TO THE PASTORS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

The Board of Missions of the Louisiana Conference will furnish you with envelopes to be used in taking your Conference Benevolent Offering. On this envelope is printed the causes to which these benevolent offerings are directed. I found them very valuable when accompanied by a letter sent out to my people last year, and secured about $150, that would not otherwise have been secured. If you will write to me indicating that you will use them, I will have them printed at the Advocate office, and you can order them from Brother Chalmers there. But it will be necessary to have a sufficient number of promises to use them to make it worth while for the Board to provide for having them printed.

POETICAL THOUGHTS

By Mrs. George S. Brown

Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, that this night, before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. Matt. 26:34.

Denial

"With frightened lips I shall not ever say,
'I know Him not,' for none will question me.
I shall not need to speak a word today,
To publish to the world my loyalty.
And yet a hundred times there comes the voice,
'Know you this man, the Master?' and behold,
A hundred times I make the fateful choice,
Today, as the apostles once of old.—
And every unkind word or straying thought,
And every deed of hatred or disdain
Say plainly to the world, 'I know Him not'."
And then the cock crows—bitter morn of pain;
And would indeed today that they might be—
The times I have denied Him—only three!

—Mabel F. Arbuthnot.

How often, as we have read in the Scriptures, has the hot blood of indignation burned within us as we pictured the meek and lowly Jesus, left all alone, after years of faithful teaching and exemplifying daily living, every disciple fleeing in terror, and in the background, Peter, denying that he ever knew the man.

We wonder how he could when warned by the Saviour so as to be on his guard. We feel that we would have been heroic enough to die with the Saviour, but would we? Is Peter so very different from us? We are not put to the severe test that he was but we very much fear we would fail if we were. We read even now of martyrs in other lands who undergo all manner of torture rather than deny their Lord and we put the question to ourselves, "Would we be as brave?"

We live in a Christian land where nearly all are at least professing Christians of one denomination or another and we know not what persecution means, yet we are far greater sinners than Peter when by our lives we deny our Saviour. In a moment of temptation and fear, Peter fell, but afterwards he bitterly repented, and proved his penitence by his loyal devotion and his countless sufferings for Christ.

Many of us deny our Lord in a hundred ways. As professed followers of Him when we do the things he condemns, when we join ourselves to sinful things of the world, when we are unkind, bitter, selfish, we say by our acts plainer than words, "I know Him not."

Happy indeed are those who can count only three times denying their Saviour, and oh may we be as truly penitent when the reminding cock crows in our consciences as was Peter. May we prove it by eternal vigilance and by constant prayer so that we fail not again. May we, as we see the sorrowing look in the Saviour's face, throw ourselves on His Mercy and like Peter become heroes in our Master's cause.

WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE?

By Mrs. Nellie N. Somerville

This inquiry is suggested by the study book now in use among auxiliaries of the North Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society. The book referred to is "The Turn Toward Peace," by Florence Brewer Boeckel, Education Director of the National Council for Prevention of War. One woman said "It sounds Bolshevik," another said, "It is very radical." Numerous objections have been made, and sincere loyal women have been puzzled and disturbed. Loyalty (to say nothing of credits and honor points), requires that books coming with the authority of official sanction be read. Not only is it expected that such books be read, but it is expected that they be accepted as right and righteous. Herein is the danger. Such a book could be read and discussed by a woman's club, and opinions would be freely expressed. Not so with a book coming through Church channels. Objection raises the issue of disloyalty and official displeasure is to be expected.

This book is certainly not Methodist nor is it religious. Pages 162-171 cover the subjects, The Churches and Peace and Missions and Peace. These occur as information. The argument for peace is based upon business reason and economic conditions. The foreword has this, "To enlist men's emotions, to engage their spirit of adventure, the Peace Movement must include within its conscious reach, World Projects and World Plans." Naturally the question arises, who is to make these world plans and projects? Just as naturally thoughts of the communist party and its world plans come into the conscious reach of the reader at this point. Page 136 has the following: "A Nationalistic Spirit although identified with patriotism is actually incompatible with it." This recalls the fact that the word "international" is the key word of the Socialist, Communist, Bolshevist combination. To substitute international for national seems to be their plan. A socialist candidate for Congress is quoted approvingly on Page 115. On Page 108 Birth Control is applauded. In a paragraph on "Race Prejudice," Page 110, the following occurs: "Research tends to prove that all races of any importance today are mixed races." The D. A. R. and Gold Star Mothers get unfavorable mention on Page 133. This book is actively and positively anti-national.

It seems appropriate to supply some information on communism, so I take the following quotations from a reprint of The Iron Trade Review of Cleveland. "Socialism is Communism, Communism is Bolshevism, Bolshevism is Sovietism. The sooner this fact seeps into the minds of the American people, the sooner will the Agencies engaged in promoting socialism be exposed, and their efforts made to no avail.

"The strength of the red movement is not in numbers, but in the use it is able to make of other organizations and movements stronger than itself. Herein lies the menace of Communism.

"A peculiarly frank socialist has said concerning American women who are supporting or financing socliaist famine drives or lecture halls, or magazines or pacifist bureaus without really understanding the Socialist connection: 'The ladies are helping to braid the rope which, if it is ever finished, will surely hang them.' 'The germ of present day socialism and communism is found in an old cult known as illumanism.' Weishaupt founded the Illuminati in Bavaria May 1, 1776. The name illumanism was given to the teachings of the Illuminati. The following is a quotation from Weishaupt, 'At the moment when men united themselves into Nations they ceased to recognize themselves under a common name. Nationalism or National Love took the place of Universal Love. Diminish, do away with this love of Country and men will once more learn to know and love each other as men.'

"Peace causes are mentioned as one means of advancing World Revolution. A page from the International Socialist Review is shown; the following is taken from that page. 'Anti-patriotism, anti-militarism and anti-nationalism must become cardinal points in our propaganda for Peace. We must work for the abolition of the army, the navy, the militia'."

This closes quotations from the Iron Trade Review. No rash assertions or charges are made. Facts are given. Page 176 of the Woman's Study Book quotes Frederick J. Libby as executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War. On January 23, 1925, the Washington Post described this man as a "superpacifist" and said he was denied the right to speak in public schools of the District of Columbia, adding "This was done by the action of the Board of Education in adopting a report of the special committee to investigate Libby." The report referred to had this statement:

"From the evidence submitted to us, we have become convinced that Frederick J. Libby is one of the recognized leaders in the movement originating with the avowed enemies of this country." The Book sponsored by the organization of which Libby is the active head is now in use among Methodist women as part of the officially required study course. Failure to use the required study is penalized by loss of credits and honor points.

The objectives of socialism, or communism, or Bolshevism are these: Complete destruction of Civilization and Christianity. The objectives, as set forth in more than one printed document are, the Abolition of Government, the Abolition of Patriotism, the Abolition of the Property Right, the Abolition of Inheritance, the Abolition of Religion and the Abolition of Family Relations.

Surely to know these things is to abhor them.

Can two walk together except they be agreed? Christians labor and pray for peace through faith in Christ entering into the hearts of all men of all nations. The Peace Movement, so called, embracing various non-Christian groups has no such foundation.

The Christian Church can do its own work for Peace. Can the Church in its Peace Work unite with and accept the Leadership of non-Christian Bodies? "In all thy ways acknowledge Him and He shall direct thy paths."

MONROE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Monroe District Conference met at Tallulah, La., April 16 and 17, Rev. William H. Giles as host. This conference was one of the most spiritual ever held in the Monroe District, the members seem to have caught a real vision of the work of the church, and its need today.

There were seventeen pastors present, and three absent on account of sickness, fifty-three lay delegates present. The conference opened with a devotional service, led by Rev. R. A. Bozeman, pastor of Oak Grove, and the opening sermon was preached by Rev. R. R. Branton, pastor of Newellton.

All the great causes of the church were well presented by conference representatives, Dr. J. Lloyd Decell, representing the New Orleans Christian Advocate, delivered a very inspiring sermon at the evening hour.

The report from the pastors showed all the work in fine shape, and the finances in the best condition the district has ever reported. The report showed that of the amount of $21,000 to be raised for Benevolences and Kingdom Extension, there was in sight at this time $6000, which is the best report in the history of the district. This is largely due to the work done by our presiding elder and the district lay leader and his associates, with the untiring work of the pastors and local lay workers.

The following resolution was adopted by a rising vote of the conference: Be it resolved, that we the members of the Monroe District Conference now in session at Tallulah, La., do hereby express our very sincere appreciation for the splendid and efficient leadership of Rev. Elmer C. Gunn as our presiding elder during the quadrennium that ends at the next annual conference, that we recognize the definite steps of progress, made under his leadership, in the erection of new church buildings, new charges created, the increase in pastors' salaries, and the amounts raised for benevolences, and other special causes.

Resolved further, that we offer a rising vote of appreciation in standing, adopt these resolutions, and wish him and his family God's richest blessings as they are sent to new fields of labor from the next annual conference.

The district lay leaders were elected as follows: District lay leader, W. B. Clarke; associates, Richard Hatch and John F. Madden.

Delegates to the annual conference were elected as follows: S. M. McReynolds, Rev. G. L. McNeese, Mrs. Frank Hatch, Mrs. J. B. Pollard, W. B. Clarke, J. B. Irwin, Mrs. W. H. Giles and John F. Madden. Alternates, A. C. Ewing, Frank Hatch and Richard Hatch.

The conference adjourned with benediction by Rev. Louis Hoffpauir.

The Home Circle

FOR MOTHER

He was only a mite of a boy, dirty and ragged, and he had stopped for a while in one of the city's free play grounds to watch a game of ball between boys of his own and a rival neighborhood. Tatters and grime were painfully in evidence on every side; but the little fellow attracted the attention of a group of visitors, and one of them, reaching over the child's shoulder as he sat on the ground, gave him a luscious golden pear. The boy's eyes sparkled, but the glowing eyes were his only thanks as he looked back to see from whence the gift had come, and then he turned his face away, too shy or too much astonished to speak.

But from that time on his attention was divided between the game and his new treasure. He patted the pear; he looked at it and at last as if to assure himself that it was as delicious as it appeared, he lifted it to his lips and cautiously bit out a tiny piece near the stem. Then, with a long sigh of satisfaction and assurance, he tucked the prize safely inside his dirty blouse.

"Why don't you eat it, Tony?" demanded a watchful acquaintance.

"Eat it? All meself? Ain't I savin' it for mother?"

The tone, with its mingling of resentment and loyalty, made further speech unnecessary. Whatever Tony lacked—and it seemed to be nearly everything—he had learned a beautiful lesson. He had another dearer than self, and knew the joy of sacrifice.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

MOTHER'S DAY

On Sunday, May 10, the annual tribute of the nation will be paid to Mother.

Mothers present or mothers departed are to be remembered by a grateful childhood, the former by wearing a red rose or flower, the latter by wearing a white rose or flower.

Mand and woman, boy and girl, should observe this day, the one day in the year set apart to pay gratful homage to Mother.

"The woman who rocks the cradle rules the world," some one has said and no truer words ever emanated from the month of mortal than those.

"The woman who rocks the cradle" is Mother. It is she who has looked after the boys and girls when no one else was by to look after them.

It is Mother who sees that the occupants of the cradle are properly fed and properly clothed.

It is Mother who sees that the boy and the girl is off for school on time, winter and summer.

It is Mother who takes pride in their personal appearance, in their progress, and their successes.

It is Mother who sympathizes with them in their big or their little distresses, who binds the wounds and kisses happiness back into frowning faces.

It is Mother who looks after the home and the little comforts that make home.

It is Mother who does these things, and many more that are never seen by eye or heard by ear.

Let us all wear a flower on Mother's day, May 10, a red flower for the living, a white flower for the dead.

It is little enough to do for Mother. She will appreciate it as though it were so much more, God bless her.—Exchange.

MOTHER'S VIOLETS

By Daisy M. Moore

Meg and Peter looked very, very sober; whatever were they going to do? Here it was Saturday and exactly half past three and they had not yet decided what to get Mother.

You see, tomorraw was Mother's Day and last Sunday their teacher had said, "I hope every little girl and boy will try to make mother happy next Sunday."

Meg and Peter had thought and thought until their brains felt all awhirl.

"I wish we had asked Daddy what to get before he went away," said Meg. "He always knows nice things to do."

"Well, why didn't we think of that?" Peter was disgusted.

In Meg's little bureau was the long, narrow box daddy had given them to keep until Mother's Day.

"Mother may be a bit disappointed not to get the violets I always have given her," he said. "But since I will be away I thought it better to get something else this year. I think she will like this as well, and I know it will last longer!"

Father's eyes twinkled as he gave the box into their keeping.

"I am sure my little folks can keep a secret."

He did not tell them what the box held for they agreed that they would rather wait until Mother opened it.

"I do wonder what is in it, Peter!" Meg was peeping into the drawer for the fifteenth time. "He said she might be disappointed —" Meg stopped and her blue eyes popped wide, wide open.

"O me, O my, Peter, I know, I know!" and she hopped joyfully about the room.

Peter's brown eyes were puzzled.

"We'll get the violets ourselves, Brother. Won't that be fine? Lois told me they are blooming on the hill back of us right now—great big light-blue ones. She showed me some yesterday."

Mother wondered why the children's eyes sparkled so as they trudged off. They wanted to go for a walk, they said.

On the hillside the violets looked like beautiful blue rugs spread here and there. And now Meg and Peter picked the great long-stemmed beauties! Meg's skirt was piled high and on the way home Peter had to peek many times, for this seemed too good to be true. How stupid of them not to think of this before when they knew Mother was so fond of violets!

She did not hear them as they tiptoed up to their room. When they filled the great glass bowl, which mother always used, the violets' faces were not one bit brighter than those of the small boy and girl who touched them so lovingly.

Next morning when Mother went downstairs, Meg and Peter popped into their clothes. Peter carried Father's gift and Meg got a huge bowl of fragrant flowers from the balcony; together they slipped quietly down the stairs.

Setting the gifts on the breakfast table at Mother's place, they darted into the hall just as the kitchen door opened.

"O-o-o-oh!" Mother's voice sounded so pleased.

Huddling there just outside the door the children nudged each other and giggled delightedly.

"Meg, Peter, where are you?" cried Mother peeping out. "Some fairies have been here and I believe they are a little girl and boy I know!" she said happily, holding Meg and Peter very close.

"I didn't expect to get violets this year when Daddy is so far away, but here they are—prettier than the hothouse ones, too! There is only one thing Mother loves more than violets," Mother's voice was very low and tender, "and that is the givers."

The glad givers were in Mother's arms and Daddy's lovely scarf was about her neck—and to tell you the truth, they were all too happy to care whether they ate breakfast or not!—Child's Gem.

"LITTLE MOTHER" BESS

Retold By Mrs. A. P. Fish, in The Burning Bush

Dear children, I will tell you a very touching incident about a little girl who gave her life for her little brother and sisters. And should such an experience ever occur in your lives, may you be just as faithful and trustworthy as this little "Mother" was. Only by the help of the Lord can you prove true in every test, but He will help each one who will lean upon His never-failing arm.

This little Mother was a clear-eyed, fresh-cheeked little maiden, living on the banks of the great Mississippi. She was the eldest of four children, and mother's "little woman" always. They called her so because of her quiet matronly care of the younger Mayfields—that was her father's name. Her own beautiful name, "Elizabeth," they had shortened to "Bess." She was only thirteen years old, when, one day, Mr. Mayfield and his wife were called away to the nearest town, six miles away.

"Be Mother's little woman, dear," said Mrs. Mayfield, as she kissed the rosy face. She did not expect it to be the last time she would plant a kiss on her dear child's face. Her husband added: "I leave the children in your care, Bess; be a little Mother to them." Bess waved her old sunbonnet vigorously, little knowing what awaited her, and picked up Baby Rose, that she might watch them to the last. Old Daddy Jim and Mammy had been detailed by Mr. Mayfield to keep watch over the little nestlings and were to sleep at the house. Two days went by, when Daddy and Mammy begged to be allowed to go to the Quarters, where the negroes lived, to see their daughter "Jinnie," who was suffering with the toothache. They declared they would be back by evening, so Bess was willing. She put the little girls to bed, and persuaded Rob to go; then she seated herself by the table with her Mother's work-basket, in quaint imitation of Mrs. Mayfield's industry in the eveningtime, to do the family mending.

But what was that? Her feet touched something cold. She bent down and felt around with her hand. Water was spreading over the floor. She knew what it was; the Mississippi had broken through the levee. What should she do? Mammy's stories of how homes had been washed away and broken in pieces, came to her mind. "Oh, if I had a boat!" she exclaimed. As she ran hurriedly out to look for Mammy, she stumbled over something standing near the edge of the porch. A sudden inspiration came to her. There was her boat—a large oblong tub. The water was now several inches deep on the porch, and she contrived to half float, half roll the tub into the room.

Without frightening the children, she got them dressed in the warmest clothes they had. She lined the tub with a blanket and filled a basket with the bread and cold meat, left from supper. With Rob's assistance she pulled the tub upstairs. There was a single window in the room, and they set the tub directly in front of it, so that when the water should rise the tub would float out. There was no way for the children to reach the roof, which was a very steep one. It did not seem long before the water had risen very nearly to the top of the stairs leading from below. Bess flung the window open and made Rob get into their novel boat; then she lifted in Kate; and finally baby Rose, who began to cry, was given into Rob's arms; and now the little mother taking the basket of food, made ready to step in too, but lo! there was no room for her, with safety to the rest. Bess paused a moment, drew a long breath and kissed the children quietly.

She explained to Rob that he must guard the basket, and that they must sit still. "Good-bye, dears. Say a prayer for sister, Rob. If you ever see father and mother, tell them I took care of you." Then the water seized their insecure vessel and out into the dark night it floated. The next day Mr. Mayfield who, with his neighbors, scoured the broad lake of eddying water that represented the Mississippi, discovered the tub lodged in the branches of a tree with the children weeping and chilled, but safe. But Bess—where was Bess, the "little Mother," who had resigned herself to death? They found her later floating on the water, with her brave, childish face turned to the sky, and, as strong arms lifted her into a boat, their tears paid worthy tribute to the "little Mother."

Children, Jesus gave His life for you that you might have eternal life in Heaven. Are you appreciating that gift today? If not, O come to Jesus, and get saved.

AN APPROPRIATE AND USEFUL MEMORIAL TO BISHOP GALLOWAY

been restored to health and will appreciate his continued interest in the cause of a better educated ministry. No more appropriate memorial could be raised for our beloved Bishop Galloway than that which the unnamed generous donor has begun. Out of grateful appreciation for this honor done Bishop Galloway and the urgent need of such a fund, thousands of Methodists in this section should contribute, large or small amounts, to make the memorial the blessing it should be.—Editor.

A HOUSE OF MERCY

The moral order, like the natural, is inviolable. If the moral order could be violated without disaster there would be moral-chaos. Broken laws of nature mean sickness, yet nature has remedial agencies and restorative powers. The moral order is not heartless, but benevolent. It is controlled by a merciful Person, who said, "Come unto me," and "Go and sin no more."

The Sermon on the Mount, like the Ten Commandments, has its duties toward man and God. "Blessed are the merciful" is a fixed star in the heavenly Beatitudes. Mercy is more than a feeling of pity, it is love in action helping those who have failed and fallen by the wayside.

In a recent issue we carried a picture of the Memorial Mercy Home in New Orleans. That building is inadequate, but studying the purpose and ministry in its existence those wooden boards become stepping stones to a door of hope; and those simple entrances open into a House of Mercy, those walls become "a hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest," and the location is found to be in "the shadow of a Great Rock in a weary land."

Dr. and Mrs. Snelling are representing our three Conferences in a service, not of condonement, but of mercy, hope, and salvation. To those who mourn their misfortune and sin they minister in a way to bind up their broken hearts and to give them courage to overcome despair. We approach Mother's Day and liberal contributions should be made to the Memorial Mercy Home, and it should not be forgotten in our prayers. Shakespeare said:

"Consider this,
That in the course of justice none of us
Should see salvation; we do pray for mercy;
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of Mercy."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

Mrs. L. M. Elliott, chairman of the Christian Literature Committee at Rolling Fork, Miss., has our thanks for the splendid service she has rendered in assisting the pastor, Rev. J. A. Moore, in his work for the Advocate.

Dr. G. F. Winfield, president of Whitworth College at Brookhaven, Miss., recently delivered commencement addresses at Enterprise and Purvis, Miss., and preached commencement sermons at Liberty and Hickory.

Kirby Page, editor of "The World Tomorrow," sent out another questionnaire. It is reported that 10,000 Protestant preachers stated that they were opposed to future wars. This was fifty-four per cent of the total who were asked to express an opinion.

Rev. Hugh C. Castle is having a splendid response to his leadership in his second year at Lucedale, Miss. Brother Castle is faithful to all the work of his charge and we thank him for five renewal subscriptions recently sent to the Advocate.

We regret to learn that Rev. W. B. Jones, the devoted pastor at Philadelphia, Miss., had to undergo an operation Wednesday, April 29. We trust that he will be fully restored to his strength and be able to continue his loved employ at an early date.

The thirty-fourth annual convention of the King's Daughters of Louisiana was held in the Rayne Memorial Methodist Church, April 24-26. Mrs. Walter S. Willis, New Orleans, was re-elected president, and Mrs. W. B. Sommerville, vice-president.

Mrs. Mildred McCaul Baggett, Rolling Fork, Miss., has paid for a year's subscription to the Advocate to be sent to the Old Ladies' Home, Jackson, Miss., as a memorial to her mother. What a beautiful thought and deed just prior to Mother's Day.

During this week Rev. P. D. Hardin is having a Standard Training Class in his church at Magnolia, Miss., on "Training—the Devotional Life." Brother Hardin takes advantage of all agencies to promote the spiritual interests of his church and community.

During April the Millsaps College Ministerial League conducted a week's revival services. The following students did the preaching: James D. Slay, Martell Twitchell, Basil E. Moore, Leroy Shoemacher and Roy L. Lane. Mathis Armstrong directed the music.

Rev. Del Longgrear delivered the principal address at the Confederate Memorial celebration, which was held at Hazlehurst, Miss., April 26. Nineteen veterans died during the last twelve months. One by one the soldiers of the Sixties answer the last call.

Any pastor desiring the services of Rev. Otis Spinks as evangelistic preacher or singer may reach him at Cedar Grove Station, Shreveport, La. Brother Spinks had to retire from his pastoral duties at Newellton on account of his eyes but is now able to assist pastors in their revivals.

We are carrying in this issue a letter from Mrs. R. H. Wynn which will be a welcome message to all who know Dr. and Mrs. Wynn. We are indeed thankful and happy that Dr. Wynn is making such a marked recovery and pray that he may soon be fully restored to his strength.

Rev. Robert A. Cross, the gifted pastor at Marksville, La., is having a pleasant and successful year. His second quarterly conference held at White's chapel was well attended and the reports are that his presiding elder, Dr. A. S. Lutz, preached a helpful sermon at the eleven o'clock hour.

Rev. Fred W. Long, secretary of the Mississippi Sunday School Association, spoke at the Methodist church in Louise, Miss., on Sunday, April 26. Brother Long has had wide experience in Sunday school work, and we doubt not that he delivered a helpful message to the people at Louise.

Rev. E. G. Kilgore, 104 Terrace View, New York City, renews his subschiption to the Advocate and says he enjoys the visits of the home-paper. Brother Kilgore was for thirteen years a member of the North Mississippi Conference and we pray that he may enjoy the Advocate for many years to come.

Mr. John U. Robinson, formerly associated with Rev. Burke Clupepper, announces that he is available as evangelistic singer and worker to assist pastors or evangelists in revivals. Brother Robinson needs no introduction to the people of our Conferences. He may be addressed at 1100 Vance Avenue, Memphis, Tenn.

Mrs. Stanley Wilson, 2212 Fifteenth Street, Meridian, Miss., succeeds Mrs. T. B. Cottrell as editor of the Woman's Missionary Society page in the Advocate. We welcome Mrs. Wilson to this cooperative responsibility and know that with her wide experience in the work of Missions she will ably edit that important page.

At the opening of the new $75,000 Y. M. C. A. building at Columbus, Miss., Mr. Wm. H. Black, New Orleans, was the principal speaker. Others who participated in the program were: Francis Harmon, president of the National Y. M. C. A.; Lamont Rowlands, State president, and Blake W. Godfrey, Mississippi secretary. Columbus is to be congratulated upon this notable achievement.

Bishop Theodore DuBose Bratton, the widely beloved Episcopal Bishop of the Mississippi Diocese, preached the commencement sermon for the Crystal Springs, Miss., Consolidated School. This is said to be the largest consolidated school in the world, and Bishop Bratton edified the students and patrons in a helpful message on "Concerning Spiritual Gifts, Brethren, I Would Not Have You Ignorant."

Brother G. D. Cameron, a devoted member of our church at Canton, Miss., died on Sunday, April 20. For forty years he was a baggage master on the Illinois Central. He was a respected citizen, a loyal friend and a faithful Christian gentleman. His age of 81 years seemed not to take any of the joy of living from him. Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor, and Rev. W. M. Sullivan, a former pastor, conducted the last rites from the Methodist church at Canton.

Former Governor A. H. Longino, now Judge of the Hinds County Court, a member of the First Baptist, and Judge J. M. Foreman, chairman of the board of stewards of the Capitol Street Methodist church, co-operated with the W. C. T. U., the ministerial association, and the mayor and city commissioners of Jackson, Miss., in laying plans for a more adequate enforcement of the liquor laws in that growing city. If the public wants enforcement they can get it.

Rev. P. B. McCullin is doing more than running rings around Ringgold, La. He is meeting the demands of the work on its spiritual side and improving the property on the physical. He writes, "Everything is going fine; we have placed new furniture in the parsonage and are now giving it a general overhauling. We will soon have a nice pastor's home." We thank Brother McCullin for an invitation to visit him and also for subscriptions to the Advocate.

We acknowledge with appreciation the receipt of the following announcement: "Mr. and Mrs. A. Hill Fatherree announce the marriage of their daughter, Lucille, to Rev. Albert Yeats Brown on Sunday, the nineteenth of April, 1931, at First Methodist Church, Starkville, Miss." Brother Brown is one of the promising young ministers of the North Mississippi Conference. We congratulate him and his good wife and pray for them a long life of happiness and usefulness in the Master's service.

Rev. W. A. Terry and his people at Richton, Miss., had the privilege of having the Lewis brothers lead them in a great revival which closed on Sunday, April 19. Revs. J. T., H. P., J. M. and O. S. were the brothers who did the preaching and singing. Mrs. Terry is a sister of the Lewis brothers and she also had with her Miss Patty, their other sister. This happy reunion of loved ones helped to make posible a refreshing revival that brought the lost to Christ and built the church up in the most Holy Faith.

PROTECTION
AGAINST OLD AGE

The reports from the revival meeting recently held by Bishop Arthur J. Moore with Dr. W. Angie Smith and his people at First Church, Shreveport, state that it was one of the best meetings ever held in that city. At a number of the services hundreds of people were turned away for the lack of standing room. Bishop Moore is giving himself unreservedly to leading the church in a spiritual life advance that will demonstrate the old-time growth of Methodism. We trust we shall be furnished with a full account of this great meeting.

The many friends of Mr. Lawrence Herman and family will sympathize with them in their sorrow in the passing of Mrs. Herman. Mrs. Herman was a devoted wife and mother. She was a patient, silent sufferer for many years. At the time of her death Mrs. Herman was a member of the Carrollton Avenue M. E. Church, South, in which church Mr. Herman serves as a member of the Board of Stewards. There are left to mourn her going the husband, three children, Mrs. E. E. Brock, Theodore and L. Arthur, and six grandchildren. May our Heavenly Father sustain them in their great sorrow.

Renewal subscriptions help out as much as the new. Please send $1.50 for your renewal.

REPORT OF DISTRICT QUOTAS ON 100 NEW CASH SUBSCRIPTIONS EFFORT, FEB. 24 TO MAY 15

This report is a tabulation of new cash subscriptions received from each of the twenty-one districts since February 24. We fear that some might have counted renewals or those sent in prior to February 24. The Bishops and Publishing Committee met with the manager and editor February 24, and it was hoped that new subscriptions would create a reserve, while the renewals would provide for cost of operation until the bank could be paid.

We have realized less than thirty percent of the expectancy from the districts as a whole. May 15, was set as the time to reach the goal of 100 new cash subscriptions from each district. The time is extended until June 1, but that is the last day as the bank has notified us that our account due that date must be paid.

We appreciate what has been done and trust that many will find it possible to double their efforts for the Advocate between now and June 1, and increase the following credits:

MRS. SUSIE L. (CARSON) POWELL, wife of Rev. C. A. Powell, honored member of the Mississippi Conference, who died some years ago, was born in Forest Grove, Leak County, Mississippi, July 27, 1855. On Sunday night, November 29, 1930, Sister Powell fell and broke her hip. She was carried at once to the Methodist Hospital, where everything possible was done for comfort and to prolong her radiant life, but in spite of all that could be done she passed to her reward a few minutes after midnight, February 8, 1931. On November 28, 1875, Miss Susie L. Carson became the wife of Rev. C. A. Powell, this happy couple were married by the Rev. W. E. M. Linfield, D.D. Eleven children were born unto them, five of whom have passed on. Sister Powell for more than a quarter of a century labored with her husband here and there, answering to the call of the church, rejoicing with him in his success, weeping with him in his sorrow as she devoted herself to her young and interesting family, six of whom are left to mourn her going and to cherish the memory of a devoted mother. Soon after her husband's death, Sister Powell moved to Hattiesburg, Miss., placing her membership in Court Street Church and was faithful to every call of the church until failing health forced her retirement from all active duties. While these came to an end, she remained in her heart life, bright, cheerful and happy. It was my privilege to minister unto her for five years as her pastor and I do not recall a visit to her home but that I felt on leaving that her faith in God and her bright and cheerful life imparted far more to me than I as her pastor had carried to her home. The funeral services were held from the home of her son, C. A. Powell, on Williams Street, Hattiesburg, Miss., Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, February 8, 1931, conducted by her pastor, the Rev. L. L. Roberts, assisted by the Revs. W. H. Lewis, W. J. Ferguson and the writer.

Servant of God, well done,
Thy glorious warfare past,
The battle fought, the victory won,
And thou art crowned at last.

C. M. CROSSLEY.

BROTHER THEOPHINE H. LANDRY, for a number of years a faithful member of the McDonoghville M. E. Church, South, passed away on April 9, 1931, at the age of eighty-one. He was a resident of this vicinity for fifty-three years and his occupation was that of mechanic and millwright. Brother Landry leaves behind him many loved ones and friends to lament his passing, although they "weep not as those who have no hope." Among his near relatives are: his faithful Christian wife, who was Madelyn Sutter, three daughters, Mrs. T. V. Thaggard, Mrs. Harry Morgan and Mrs. W. H. Black, and one son, Mr. John A. Landry; also a number of grandchildren and two great grandchildren. The pastor has known Bro. Landry for more than two years and always enjoyed his glad, welcome and warm handshake. He loved his church and was faithful to his vows. His well preserved and erect body, although played upon by many winters, was symbolic of the fine and noble character within. Devoted and faithful to his wife and family, strong in his convictions, true to God and man, he slipped away with praise coming from the lips of those who knew him and eternal hope from those who knew him better. Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor of the Carrollton Ave. Church, assisted at the funeral services at the home and cemetery, for which the loved ones and pastor were grateful.

D. W. POOLE, Pastor.

MOTHER'S DAY

We mothers ought to try to understand modern youth and their problems in this modern age. We must dignify the profession of home making, to fill the need of real mothers and real homes today.

Mothers hold the key to the soul and stamp the coin of character.

It is the mother's high privilege to so firmly fix the impression on the heart of her child, that he will withstand the stress and strain of later years.

If she fails to perform this duty, she will not be held guiltless. This requires patience and wisdom and Divine help. How can mothers while away their time, playing games of chance and not expect their sons to become gamblers? The tributes paid to "Mother" should make us strive to be worthy.

A MOTHER.

REVIVAL AT LONG BEACH, MISS.

We have just closed a most successful revival meeting at Long Beach church.

Rev. M. L. Burton of Gulfport did the preaching. The meeting started Sunday, April 12, and closed on the 19th.

We had good congregations each night. The closing night we had the largest congregation that has attended a service during the pastorate of the present pastor.

Brother Burton brought great soul-stirring messages each night. His messages were to the church members largely.

The general theme he used throughout the meeting was: "Jesus' Plan of Evangelization." He emphasized the fact that each Christian should be a soul-winner for Christ.

There were fifteen that united with the church, ten on profession of faith and five by letter.

There were four babies dedicated to God in baptism. One of these babies was named John Wesley Capers; he is a descendant of Bishop Capers.

So we feel that our church and community have been greatly blessed.

We are having a very fine year at Long Beach and also Pass Christian. The enrollment of the Sunday school at Pass Christian is the same as the membership of the church. We do not know of but one church in the conference that can beat that record.

We have raised our quota on the Kingdom Extension and it has been sent in.

We hope to be able, at Conference this year, to truthfully say: "Bishop, we have had a good year."

H. L. DANIELS, Pastor.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT, ATTENTION

Our District Meeting will be held in the lovely little city of Magnolia (also known as the cleanest ciy in the State of Mississippi), beginning promptly at 10 a. m., on May 13. I am working on a really vital program and our Conference president, Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, is to be with us as well as some of our other Conference officers. By all means let's have each auxiliary represented, eager to learn of the program of the new quadrennium. The pastors are especially invited.

At noon, a picnic lunch will be served outdoors; if rainy, provision will be made for same indoors. I think the members will find it easier for each auxiliary or each circle to bring one lunch instead of each individual bringing a lunch, and then we will all spread together at Magnolia.

MRS. C. A. BUTTERWORTH,
Dist. Sec. of Brookhaven District.

A NEW DISTRICT SECRETARY FOR LAKE CHARLES DISRICT

Mrs. D. B. Carre, corresponding secretary of the Louisiana Conference, announces that Mrs. J. N. McDonald of Leesville is the new secretary for Lake Charles district. The former secretary, Mrs. R. S. Walton, has moved from the district.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT MEETING OF THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Zone No. 4, embracing the Missionary Societies of Alligator, Sherard and Duncan, was hostess to the Greenville District Conference at Duncan, April 2, 1931. The meeting was held at the Methodist church with the district secretary, Mrs. Hillary L. Talbert of Clarksdale, presiding. Twenty-two of the twenty-seven auxiliaries responded to the roll call with written reports which were records of successful work accomplished during the year 1930. One hundred fifteen representatives were present.

"Advantages of Zone Meetings," was the subject of an interesting message brought by Mrs. W. H. Ratcliffe of Sherard, after which group meetings were held for zone leaders, where they discussed in detail zone activities. They brought to the Conference the recommendation that the Zone Special, known as the Sally Evans Memorial Fund, be continued for the support of a Bible Women in Brazil. The recommendation was accepted.

A group meeting for the corresponding secretaries to discuss the matter of reporting was called. Also a group meeting of the superintendents of children's work, conducted by Miss Helen Dunn, superintendent of children's work in Greenville district.

Mrs. J. C. Fair of Cleveland gave an enthusiastic talk on the "Octagon Soap Campaign," urging hearty cooperation in the collection of coupons from the Octagon products, from which we expect to receive sufficient funds to pay off the debt of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson.

The Council Message was brought by the Conference president, Mrs. Ernest Moore. Very clearly and forcefully she presented the spiritual message as well as the new plans and enlarged programs in the several departments. Leaders of Young People's societies were requested to continue their work until summer and were asked to direct their offerings to the rural work of North Mississippi. The organization of Young Women's Circles was recommended, where a sufficiently large group is found, these circles to function as a circle of the adult auxiliaries, though under the supervision of Mrs. J. C. Wax of Amory, Conference secretary of this work.

The finances of the district were discussed by the district secretary. The use of a graff set forth the quotas of the different funds and the percentage raised last year for same. A chart gave the financial standing of each auxiliary. Greenville district led the Conference in finances, as well as in Voice subscriptions.

A skit, "Christian Social Relations," explaining the enlarged program of this work, was presented by the Clarksdale auxiliaries. Three-minute talks on the Voice and Grenada Mission school, emphasized these phrases of our activities.

The periods of worship were led by Rev. W. C. Galceran of Duncan in the morning; at noon by Miss Mathilde Killingsworth of Clarksdale, at closing by Mrs. R. H. B. Gladney of Jonestown.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

All churches of the Columbus district, Methodist Missionary zone, were represented with the exception of New Hope, at the zone meeting, held at First Methodist Church, this city.

Mrs. Frances White, district secretary, presided, opening the program with a song.

Mrs. J. W. Ward offered the opening prayer, and Rev. W. N. Duncan, presiding elder, gave the devotional, stressing "hope" as his keynote.

Notes from the recent missionary conference at New Albany were given by Mrs. John U. Tate, delegate from the First Methodist auxiliary, and Mrs. W. G. Vaughn from Central. Mrs. White, who attended the conference as district secretary, contributed other echoes from the meeting, calling attention to the extension work of the missionary society, included as temperance, citizenship, law observance and law enforcement.

Entertainment features of the program embraced a playlet, and a demonstration of a model missionary meeting. The playlet was an amusing satire upon the life of a frivolous society woman. The cast was composed of Mesdames Olen and George Dowdle, A. Butera, Savage, Englebert and Swanzy.

The model meeting was enacted by Mrs. Houston Cox, president of the hostess auxiliary, and the officers and superintendents of her society.

The attendance of seventy-three ladies included representatives from the auxiliaries of Artesia, Brooksville, Caledonia, Crawford and the two churches of Columbus.

Brooksville was named as the place for the next zone meeting, which will be held in June.

After benediction offered by Mrs. Battle Bell, the ladies enjoyed a get-together social hour, when a delicious plate lunch was served.

ZONE MEETING AT YAZOO CITY

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Yazoo City Methodist church was host at an all-day zone meeting Thursday, with delegates from all auxiliaries in the zone present.

A splendid attendance marked the meeting and all received inspiration from the splendid program rendered.

A welcome address was given by Miss Lizzie Murphy, and was responded to by Mrs. W. G. Smith of Midway. A reading, "A Turn Towards Peace," by Mrs. W. E. Phillips of Belle Prairie.

Mrs. H. Y. West next sang a lovely song, and this number was followed by Mrs. L. A. Magruder, who talked on "Stewardship." Mrs. Magruder concluded her talk with an original poem that was both timely and enjoyable.

The session adjourned at noon and those present enjoyed a bountiful lunch, temptingly prepared and served with the Yazoo ladies as hostesses.

The afternoon session opened with devotional services. Mrs. Jack Strickland of Eden gave a talk on "The Object of, Meaning and Challenge of Worship."

Mrs. H. E. Frizell of Deasonville gave a very clear explanation of the Honor Roll, and Mrs. W. H. Ewing of Vaughan gave an interesting discus-

HEADACHES

"If I have the headache or feel the need of a purgative, I take Black-Draught," says Mr. Edgar Gamble, of 114 Fowler Ave., Hopkinsville, Ky. "It is easy to take and quick to relieve. I used to have dull headaches. My eyes would burn and when I would stoop over I seemed to turn blind. This isn't much of a good feeling when one has to work, and I have had to work hard in my time, being a timber man. This work takes me from home a good deal and one never likes to get sick, especially away from home. I found the best way to avoid this was to take an occasional dose of Black-Draught, and keep the system cleansed." FHA-8

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The Hattiesburg District Conference was a success. The bishop delivered telling messages which were sympathetically received by large congregations. The reports of the brethren indicated progress and hopefulness.

The Seashore District was well attended. The entertainment was greatly enjoyed ,as it had as one feature an old-fashioned fish fry and as another a trip on the gulf. The visitors enjoyed this very much indeed. A good hearing was given to the bishop.

The Jackson District Conference was the best conference in this district it has been my privilege to attend. The sermons were timely and well received. The reports indicated progress and the attendance of the laymen was thrilling.

The reception of the Board's programs at each district conference was inspiring and helpful to the workers. We feel grateful to the presiding elders and the bishop for their kindness to us in this matter.

I have more hope for the future since attending the district conferences. Many charges reported the Kingdom Extension paid in full. Many reported more paid than last year. A large majority reported the salaries paid up to date. There was a wonderful increase in the number of subscriptions to the Advocate. Almost every preacher reported an increased attendance to the preaching services. More preachers called attention to their prayer meetings than I have ever known of before. While the matter of a need for readjustment was in the air the workers were not hopeless nor were they downhearted.

One circuit preacher in the State of Mississippi writes, "I have said to the people, 'Conference Assessments FIRST' and if you have anything left over pay it to me, BUT the kingdom comes first and the pastor comes last." When I read these words my own selfishness rose up and smote me. Whatever may or may not be wrong with our brother's statement I am sending this out that his godly faith and self-sacrifice and unreserved unselfishness may stir the hearts of us all. Certainly God will not let a workman like this suffer. None of us can see the future and it is a good thing that we cannot, but thank God for a faith that will not give under and sees through and beyond clouds.

PAINFUL, WEAK CONDITION

Mrs. H. V. Skaggs, of Van, Texas, writes: "A number of years after I was married, my health was very poor. I suffered so much in my hips and shoulders. Had some pain across my body.

"I read of Cardui, took a bottle, and it did me good.

"I was weak before I took Cardui. I was yellow as a pumpkin. I was hardy able to get around. It sure did help me. I felt like a different woman after taking Cardui. It did me more good than anything I had ever taken." FH-5

CARDUI
Helps Women to Health

I have no way of knowing how many Leagues have observed Anniversary Day. The future of the young people's work in our Conference depends largely upon the results of this day. All who love the work of the young people have an opportunity of rendering a real service by observing the day and sending in the offerings.

We have received encouragement from the early return from Sunday School Day. If we could only hear from all the schools and hear from them within the next two months your Board would be able to give to these small and more or less neglected places the service they desire and deserve.

More schools are sending in offerings for Missions than at any other time. We thank you for this support of the Kingdom enterprise. May the number increase until we have an offering from every Sunday school in the Conference. A mission Sunday school just organized with about every difficulty to face a Sunday school takes its first offering on the fourth Sunday and send it for Missions. May this example be an inspiration for others.

May we pray much. Remember your workers and the work.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

WORK OF THE BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Because of the many requests for this information, we have decided to put it in the Advocate that everybody may know what the work of the Board of Christian Education is.

First—Indirect Service—Membership in General, Council and committees. Suggestions to General Board. Answering questionnaires in regard to church-wide policies. Conducting experiments. Discovery and testing new plans and policies. Direction of the work through correspondence, articles in the press, the News Letter, and articles in the Advocate. This has reached a large group of workers. One thousand five hundred letters is the average for a month and two articles a week for the press. Our Library is serving an increasing number. Many schools never visited are benefited by this work.

Second—Direct Service—Interviews, telephone conversations, etc., in the office. Sometimes interviews consume an hour and sometimes more. Interviews and conferences with local workers in their home churches.

Field Work.—Visiting churches, Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, and Boards of Christian Education. These visits may last from an hour to several days. Surveys are made for communities by the workers of the board.

Training Work.—Cokesbury classes or schools. Standard classes or schools. Institutes—Church, charge, county, sub-districts and district offer another field of service. Child study conferences are rendering service to a large group. Vacation church schools serve as many communities as we have money and workers to do the work.

Your board supports four Sunday schools entirely. Your Board supervises several Sunday schools. This has enabled the Board to improve their work and carry on experiments for the General Board.

The planning of church buildings and improvements. We have been called upon frequently to aid churches in making better use of the equipment they already have.

Aiding teachers to learn how to use literature more meaningfully.

Meeting Methodist students in the Junior Colleges and other institutions besides our own. Student groups are organized and enlisted under the Wesley Foundation movement.

Third—Organization—Churches, Epworth Leagues, Sunday schools, workers' councils, brotherhoods, missionary societies, local church boards of Christian education and various committees are organized by the workers. Churches are graded and departmentalized. Parents' groups and classes, study groups and departmental councils, city federations, Bible classes, prayer meetings organized.

Fourth—Promotional Work—Missionary education, Sunday School Day, Epworth League Anniversary Day, Childhood and Youth Week, world peace, national prohibition, evangelism, patriotism, co-operation with other institutions is promoted through institutes, letters and the distribution of leaflets as well as personal visitation.

Fifth—Finances—To pay our bills it takes $1000 a month. Our income is derived from the following sources: Direct assessment upon the Conference, 40 and one-half per cent of the missionary offering, the Sunday School Day offering, and 75 per cent of the Epworth League Anniversary Day offerings. In order for the Board to pay its bills this year we must realize $4500 from missions, $2500 from Sunday School Day, and $1200 from League Anniversary Day.

Specific Work

Miss Denson, office secretary, attends to all the general correspondence, keeps the books, records, and library, interviews callers and performs all duties necessary to the maintenance and efficiency of the work.

Miss Doris Alford is responsible for the correspondence and promotion of children's work, vacation church schools, and other allied work; teaches in Cokesbury and standard schools and classes and represents the entire program in her personal visits.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The school at Cleveland this week is being attended largely and most excellent work is being done by those enrolled. People are in attendance from Cleveland, Shaw, Boyle, Pace, Merigold, Shelby and Doddsville.

Rev. W. P. Buhrman and his people at Tupelo are hard at work in preparation for the school there, May 10-15. Four courses will be offered in this school. Bible, taught by Rev. W. P. Buhrman; Worship, taught by Mrs. V. T. Hoyle; Principles of Teaching, taught by Mrs. W. W. Templeton, and Christian Education in the Local Church, taught by the writer. The places adjacent to Tupelo are expected to attend this school.

The other instructors in this school at Cleveland, Miss Virginia Thomas and Rev. J. E. Stephens and the writer, are holding institutes this week at Leland and Shelby, presenting the unified program of Christian education in the local church. These meetings are being well attended and there is a very keen interest manifested in this work by those attending.

Renew Your Health by Purification

Any physician will tell you that "Perfect Purification of the System is Nature's Foundation of Perfect Health." Why not rid yourself of chronic ailments that are undermining your vitality? Purify your entire system by taking a thorough course of Calotabs,—once or twice a week for several weeks—and see how Nature rewards you with health.

Calotabs purify the blood by activating the liver, kidneys, stomach and bowels. Trial package, 10 cts. Family package, 35 cts. All dealers. (Adv.)

Rev. C. A. Northington, the live and efficient pastor at Ripley, seems to be the first pastor in our Conference to fully put into operation the unified program in the local church. He says that it works. It has given new life to the young people's division of his church. Many others should begin to put on this program. You will learn how to work it only by working at it.

We do not have any set paper organization to offer any local church for the unified program. The church has simply made possible a program and this program will be as different as the various churches differ in their needs and possibilities. The leaders in every local church must get together, study their needs and possibilities and determine just what sort of a program and organization will suit that particular church. We will be very glad to offer suggestions as to how this may be done. There is a great deal of literature being published to this effect. Some of it may be had in pamphlet form and much other is appearing in the periodicals of the church. Read closely the editorial section of the Sunday School Magazine, Adult Student, and Elementary Teacher, Workers' Council, both the New Orleans and Nashville Advocates and you will find many suggestions being offered there by those who are already putting on this program,

Have you observed Sunday School Day? If so, have you sent in the offering? Send it to the Board of Christian Education, Grenada, Miss., or to the writer.

Remember the Grenada Training School, June 8-13, and the Young People's Assembly, June 15-19.

Epworth League

EPWORTH LEAGUE WORK IN THE NEWTON DISTRICT

Dear Dr. Decell: Two outstanding Epworth League meetings have been held in the bounds of the Newton district in April. The first of these was a joint meeting at Morton, on Sunday afternoon, April 12, of the Epworth Leagues at Brandon and Pelahatchie, in the Jackson district, and Shiloh, Morton, Salem, and Forest, in the Newton district. The program was led by Miss Mary Waddell of Brandon and given entirely by the members of that League. It was decided that a permanent Epworth League Union would be formed of the Leagues in Scott and Rankin Counties, meeting each fifth Sunday afternoon alternately at Morton and Pelahatchie. The next meeting will be held at the latter place on the fifth Sunday afternoon in May with the program given by the Forest Epworth League. A nominating committee was named with one member from each of the Leagues present to meet before the next meeting and nominate officers for the year. Dr. Lamar Russell of Morton was named temporary chairman until the election of permanent officers. Eighty-eight were present at this initial meeting, Pelahatchie having more than a third of the total number present.

The Epworth League Institute for the northern part of the Newton district was held at Union on Friday afternoon and night, April 24, under the direction of Miss Jack Wall, district secretary. One hundred and fifty-six were present when the official count was made and others came in after. The largest number was from the church at Union with fifty-three present, Philadelphia coming second with twenty-seven. Other churches represented were Decatur, Carthage, Freeny, Burnside, Harperville, Forest, Beech Springs, and Garlandsville. Discussions of the departments of Worship, Missions, and Social Service were led by Rev. J. F. Campbell of Meridian, Mr. W. D. Hawkins of Meridian, and Mrs. J. L. Carter of Union. Mr. Hawkins also spoke on the financial policy of the Epworth League. Rev. J. L. Carter of Union explained the new plan of the Young People's Division enacted by the last Geneal Conference. Two choruses were sung by the Philadelphia Leaguers and solos by Warren Hartsfield, Jr., and Miss Grace Jones, both of Philadelphia. Prominence was given to announcements of the Assembly at Whitworth College, June 8-12, and Newton District registered a determination to win the attendance cup. Recreation was led by Miss Chesley Hagan, district secretary of the Vicksburg district. Supper was served on the lawn of the church by the members of the host church under the capable direction of Mrs. Holliday. Recreation and supper were both interfered with by the rain, but thoroughly enjoyed despite that fact. Resolutions of appreciation to our hosts were offered by W. M. O'Donnell of Burnside and adopted by a rising vote. Vespers were conducted by the Carthage Epworth League and the opening devotions in the afternoon by the Decatur Epworth League. The meeting closed with an inspirational address and prayer of consecration by Rev. Porter M. Caraway, pastor of East End Church, Meridian. It was a well-attended and helpful program.

FROM PONCHATOULA, LA.

Dear Editor: If you could have visited the Ponchatoula M. E. Church on Easter morning, about 8:30, you would have found a beautifully decorated church and a quiet movement of young people preparing for the pageant as outlined in the workers' council. Slowly the church was filled to capacity and the best Sunday school pageant was put on. An old-timer said, "The best since we used to do it."

At a morning service of quiet dignity, following a good sermon, 12 Sunday school students were received into the church and several babies baptized

Later in the day the Junior, High and Senior Leagues held their meetings, followed by another capacity congregation at night.

Our collection for the Orphanage was over $200. The pastor said that he would rest quite well that night. Our prayer meetings are a continuous wonder—such large congregations and many young people.

It is not too much to say that the Ponchatoula church is singularly blessed in its present pastor.

It is High League social night; around a monster fire amidst tall pines the fun is fast and furious, the leader the pastor. Next evening, Senior League; great times, leader—the pastor. Boyscout master—the pastor.

Choir practice, pastor's wife trying to sing with small baby in arms. In comes daddy and relieves the mother, the Pastor.

A looker-on who understands, feels that J. Henry Bowdon is winning his spurs in the Master's work.

He is ably supported by a band of loyal and faithful workers.

MRS. R. D. HINES, Sec.

BELZONI, MISS., METHODIST MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The Methodist Missionary Society of Belzoni, Miss., met in general meeting in the ladies' parlor March 23, with a committee from Circle No. 3 as hostess. The attendance was splendid, there being 81 per cent of the active membership present. Mrs. Winn acted as secretary in Mrs. Watkins' absence. Mrs. Cooley led the devotional, after which the roll was called showing fourteen present from Circle No. 1, fourteen from Circle No. 2, and eleven from No. 3.

The superintendent of mission study reported that the classes in Missions were studying "The Turn Toward Peace," and were doing good work. She announced that this is a most interesting book and one well worth reading. The interest in the class is splendid as is shown by an attendance by over 50 per cent at the meetings and by 50 per cent of the members reporting that they are reading the book.

The Superintendent of Children's Work reported her department well organized and functioning well. Her offerings for the first quarter are in hand and up to the standard.

The Superintendent of Publicity reported that at the last Conference it was decided that the auxiliaries should meet in a body instead of in circles for the regular monthly program meeting. This being a move by the Conference to curtail expenses, the Belzoni Auxiliary voted unanimously to initiate this plan in April. The society will meet at the church April 13, for the regular Voice program, at which time the program will be in charge of the superintendent of Christian relations. The topic will be "Adult Illiteracy—It Background and Causes." The last program was on "A New Mission Field—The Cajans in Alabama." The poster that attracted so much attention and caused so much favorable comment was prepared by Mrs. Embry. Many of our people did not know that in a community only 40 miles from Mobile, there were 5000 people who had never heard of Jesus until Council opened up this new mission field.

The Voice agent reported 46 subscribers to the Missionary Voice, distributed as follows: Circle No. 1, 11; No. 2, 24; No. 3, 11.

The special order of business for the day was the report from the delegate to the Wonman's Missionary Conference in New Albany. The report was given in a most interesting and instructive manner by Mrs. Montgomery. She set forth the new plans and purposes for the coming year, urging that all funds be paid in full in order that the missionary work may carry on in all departments and not in any wise be crippled for lack of funds. Especially did she stress the work in Mexico, where this society gives a scholarship in our Mission school at Parrall to a needy child. Last year the scholarship was given to a boy, Encarnacion Saenz. He no longer needed help, as his older brother can now support him and send him to school, so the scholarship will be given this year to a girl, Blacita Frausto. Mrs. Montgomery further reported that both Adult and Junior departments were on the Honor Roll and that we also received certificates of honor in adult and in junior Mission study.

After concluding the business, the hostesses served cherry pie and coffee.

DR. JOHN R. MOTT SEES ENCOURAGING SIGNS IN PRESENT-DAY CONDITIONS

Not a hindrance but an urge to greater missionary effort is the way Dr. John R. Mott, internationally known missionary leader, characterized the present widespread economic distress, speaking recently before the staff of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at mission board headquarters in Nashville, Tenn. Dr. Mott spent the week of April 12-19 in Nashville, where he delivered the Cole lectures at Vanderbilt University.

As Dr. Mott sees it, there are many encouraging signs in the present-day situation, for he believes that with the economic stringency there has come a better understanding and unity of purpose among organizations fostering missionary programs and a greater spirit of prayer and sacrifice that will overcome all obstacles and lead to the greatest missionary advance the world has yet known.

"All over the world there is an atmosphere of faith and wide expectation that God has great things in store for all nations," said Dr. Mott.

Dr. Mott, who has recently seen every piece of work carried on by the Methodist board in foreign lands, said he believed that denomination had every reason to feel encouraged. In the mission fields he saw a keen interest in everything pertaining to the Christian movement and found every door open to the gospel. This interest, he said, might express itself in inquiry, criticism, or even opposition, but it all foretokened a forward movement for evangelical Christianity.

"Today is the last moment in the history of missions when any board should curtail its work," said Dr. Mott, "for we are now on the threshold of something that is going to transcend anything that has yet happened in the missionary movements of the world."—Board of Missions.

A WORD FROM NORTH MAIN ST. CHURCH, WATER VALLEY

We give daily thanks to our God because we are permitted to live and work in such a pleasant environment as we find at Water Valley. Our people here at North Main Street Church are not strong numerically or financially, but they are mighty in faith and service and are animated by a glorious spirit of optimistic courage as they battle daily for the Lord.

Our audiences at our preaching services have increased considerably since we came and religionists from all of our churches favor us with their presence from time to time.

We have received since November some forty-three into our fellowship, twenty-three of these being by baptism and vows.

We have organized a strong Epworth League of thirty members and these loyal young people are a great asset to our church. Our Sunday school has made a thirty-three and one-third per cent gain.

Right now we are engaged in accumulating money for the renovation of our building. My comrades of the World War have promised about $200, most of which has been paid and we are now engaged in a general appeal to our townspeople of all denominations. We fully expect to begin operations by May 1.

The good people of this city have received us with true Christian courtesy, and many of our civic and social organizations here have opened their doors to us.

I enjoy my work with the American Legion of this State. I am serving my second term as State chaplain and am daily strengthened by helpful contacts with my comrades.

In prayer, faith and service we are going forward in the work of the Lord here in Water Valley.

CHILDREN OF THE WORLD WILL "MEET" BY PHONE TO MARK INTERNATIONAL GOOD-WILL DAY, MAY 15

(Special to The New York Times)

Washington, April 12.—With Washington and London as focal points, a novel telephone conversation between school children of the world will take place on May 18, World Good-Will Day, commemorating the first Hague conference, which opened May 18, 1899, under the auspices of the World Federation of Education Associations, in co-operation with the National Council for Prevention of War.

Augustus O. Thomas, president of the former organization, who announced the plans today, said that negotiations were being carried on with the United States and British governments, so that the calls could be made from the White House and from 10 Downing Street, the official residence of British Prime Ministers.

Beginning at 8 a. m. on the Pacific Coast, Mr. Thomas said, schoolboys and girls will telephone from capital to capital of every State until the call reaches Washington. At the same time call will be coming into Washington from the capital cities of South America and Central American countries and from the provincial capitals of Canada through Ottawa.

During the same day calls from all over Europe and from Africa and Australia are to center at London.

The program will reach its climax when, at 4 p. m., Washington time, which will be 9 p. m. London time, a student from London and one from Washington will converse and exchange word of the messages of good-will which they have been asked to send from the young people of one-half of the world to those of the other half.

"The great problem of our times," Dr. Thomas stated, "is to realize the new kind of world, closely united and interdependent, capable of quick communication for the adjustment of any differences or misunderstanding in which we live. It is believed that to talk in this way around the world, to hear each other's voices across thousands of miles, will help young people in the schools to form a new picture of the world."

The student chosen in each State to receive the good-will message from Washington which will be relayed to a neighboring State will speak either from the Governor's Mansion or from the State Capitol.

JOHN ROBERTSON PEPPER

By Rev. Theodore Copeland, D.D.

When the hand of Divine Providence wrote finis to the earthly career of John Robertson Pepper, and the voice of mortal death had called him from his work, it was the culmination of the life of a man who had proved that industrial enterprise and the great unfinished work of God may go hand in hand. With an accepted philosophy that the teaching of God to others was wholly incomplete without personally living the same doctrine of unselfish service, Mr. Pepper left an impress upon the life of the city, state and nation which the erosion of time will not efface.

Beginning early in life to erect the structure of business success, he began earlier the task of making himself a fit servant of God. His business ambition made him president of a great grocery concern, the head of a manufacturing enterprise, president of an insurance company, a director in an important banking institution. But when his name is forgotten in the sweep of business progress, his loyal service to his church and to his God will hold an abiding place for him in the hearts of those who knew and loved him.

John Robertson Pepper recognized early in his work at the First Methodist Church of Memphis the fact the Sunday school must be conducted in the same well organized manner as that in which a man conducts his business; that the training of young people to a knowledge of God and a clean, strong philosophy of Christian life must be a work to which he might well dedicate his own life and intellect. For the furtherance of his work, he became superintendent of the First Church Sunday school. And as a member of the international Committee helped make possible the standardization of religious education througout the Methodist Church. His influence was felt not in America alone, but abroad as well.

Probably no one ever undertook with a more heartfelt and Christian interest any nobler enterprise than Mr. Pepper did in seeking the establishment of the Southern Methodist Assembly. To this assembly of the brilliant leaders of Southern Methodism, over whom he presided, he forcibly brought the realization that the work of God must include not only the training of the mind for Christ but the body as well. And with this end in view he urged the development of Lake Junaluska, that young people and old might more fully appreciate the beauty of the world of nature which God had given them. He saw that by its beautiful shores youth might be inspired to serve with a greater fullness of knowledge and love. He visioned that by its peaceful waters the stern reality of the city, the grind of daily business and everday cares, might be laid aside and young and old might rejuvenate in themselves the militant spirit of Christianity, and awaken in their souls a new consecration to His work, a new consecration to His service. So the work was begun and to him with several other leaders of the church, was assigned the tremendous task of the financial support necessary. A short time afterward he completed the task and the camp was permanently established. Thereafter every summer he and his family spent part of their time at the Lake. To Mr. Pepper was given the title of Bishop of Jualuska by the visitors there who learned, as all who knew him did, to love and revere him. He made it as much his business in life to give of himself, of his love and his splendid intellect to the service of young people and the settling of their problems, as he did to make his own economic enterprises a financial success.

Physically handsome, and intellectually brilliant, he used his magnetic personality to draw to the Church those whom he met. It may well be said of Mr. Pepper that no preacher could preach so convincing a sermon to the skeptic as he did by the simplicity and wholesomeness of his devotion to the Cause. For after all a man may write great lessons for others to learn in Sunday school and may speak verily "with the tongues of angels," but if his daily associates find in him no richer glow of the practical application of those lessons to his own life, they become as "sounding brass and tinkling cymbals." And that in the final analysis is the greater tribute which we who knew and loved him may pay. Dauntless courage of convictions is the trait of many; unwavering faith, of others; intellectual diligence, of as many; and steadfastness of character, the attribute of others. But the long and difficult test of eighty years of nobility in life itself proved to the most doubting skeptic that in Mr. Pepper these qualities were combined.

Biographies from the pens of masters, after time has dulled the remembrances of those who are left behind, may add to the glow of earthly fame of small men. Painted glory may become attached through legend to the lives of those who were not, in life, truly great. We who stand near may fail to see the underlying motives which made men aspire to service or to glory. It may require the softly cloaking hand of time to dull their failures and faultings, or the relentless carving of its erosion to lay bare the littleness which marked small men who were successful in the conquest of mortal fame. Not so with John Robertson Pepper. He who would praise him need only tell the simple story of his life, filled with devotion, with consecration which he inspired in others, touched with the high mark of the true Christian spirit. He was the man in whom all may equally recognize the goodness, the nobility, and generosity, that man is capable of.

To repeat here a mechanical biography of his life is not necessary, nor is it needful to list here the publications of his works, all in the interest of Christian education through the Sunday schools of Southern Methodism. Most of these are already well known. His fifty years as superintendent of the Sunday school of First Church in Memphis, and his forty years of splendid service on the General Sunday School Board were marked by an international recognition of his efficiency in direction and organization of the work. From all over the nation came representatives of many churches, many denominations, to study his methods. Each of these carried back to his respective constituents not only a beneficial report of how to reorganize and re-establish successful Sunday school work, but likewise a new inspiration in their work, which they received from personal contact with the great teacher and leader himself. For Mr. Pepper never lost an opportunity to impress upon those actively engaged in Sunday school leadership and teaching the utter necessities of meeting the requirements of the Christian life. And no one was more capable of making such an impression, of preaching so true a sermon—by living it—of how Christ might live with the individual. And to him the tribute is just and deserved of calling him the greatest Sunday school superintendent which America has produced.

To Mr. Pepper there existed no such thing as personal partiality. His open hand of friendship and help was extended to all. In his own home, occupying the position of father and husband, he made to live the very principles which he sought to teach others. A magnanimity of personal love and fellowship has carved for him a niche of immortality in the hearts of those who came to meet him.

There is little way, and too few words, to describe how his church, his city and this nation will miss him. The Methodist Church can hope to replace his service only by the hand of God. The Memphis Conference will mourn a long time the absence of his benign leadership and council in the hours of need. Perhaps no one, unless it be his own family, will feel so strongly the vacancy which his deah has left, as will his own church, First Church of Memphis. The desk at which he sat and guided the destinies of the Sunday school for fifty years, presents cause for mixed feelings to those who pass it by, at first the sorrow for his going, the feeling that his place can never be so fully filled as he himself filled it, but above all it must remain to the First Church and to Southern Methodism a living challenge to "Sail on." Of him they all might say, he strove to seek, to find, to serve, to love, but not to yield.

The journey is completed to that city whose builder and Maker is God. The sound of sorrow is gone out unto all the people, but the record left shall stand for us a symbol of greatness in simplicity, loyalty in living, and consecration in service.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY GREENWOOD DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Whereas, this is the fourth and last Greenwood district conference over which our much beloved and efficient presiding elder, Brother L. P. Wasson, will preside for awhile at least;

Whereas, his service as our leader has been outstanding, and his labors have made this one of if not the outstanding district of the entire Conference; and

Whereas, by his brotherly spirit he has won his way into our hearts; therefore be it resolved,

First, that we express to him our love, confidence and thanks for his labors amoung us;

Second. That we pray God's richest blessings upon him, his family as they go to some other fields of labor and wish for him continual success in the Master's service. Be it further resolved,

That we express to him our sincere thanks for the excellent program we have enjoyed these two days of the District Conference.

TO OUR ADVOCATE

I cannot believe it to be true that
Thou art dying, dear old friend: thy loved voice
Seems so strangely sweet in thy death struggle
And so vitally alive; Must thou see
Physical death, who wert once so glowing?
Once the breath of courage breathed swift through thee;
The blood of martyrs flowed in thy blood stream;
Thou wert the insiration of pulpit
And pew alike! News of our church was live
News in that day; thy page a stay and guide
To all who read; a page close to our hearts,
For 'twas scanned by our fathers and mothers
And helped their footsteps in the way of ways.
How they stood by thee, thou tangible friend,
Instiller of spiritual wisdom!
Thou wert then a loved week-end visitor,
Telling of the living heroes of faith;
Making spiritual things seem closer
By imparting better understanding;
Standing up for the right against the world;
Telling of local church happenings, news
Of our sister churches, records of faith!
In that day, children read thee with profit:
They were not given choice between harmful
And wholesome reading, for our mothers were
Not so careless with poison, and nothing
Noxious was given entrance to our homes!
Those were blessed days, dear friend, were they not?
In the light of them it comes to me, that Thou mayst be tired out by indifference
And neglect. Surely there are those who will Re-consecrate themselves to thy service!
Without thee, dear mouthpiece, what a silence
Would set up in our church life! Impotent Hands, too late, would be raised in thy stilled cause.
If we do not awake and see thy need
We are the dead! The world our sepulchre!
Let us run to the aid of the one who
Is staying by thee, giving of his blood
To hold thy ebbing strength lest all be lost.
Dear friend, live on a little while longer
Until we can bring help in the form of Subscriptions, to feed thy weakening frame!
We will work hard to save thee for our church.

"Christianity on the Defensive"

By BISHOP W. A. CANDLER

General Pershing has written most interesting chapters concerning his large part in the World War and the whole history of that tragic chapter in the annals of mankind.

But more recently he has published an article that, if possible, is more important than his letters. He believes that Christianity is on the defensive, and he calls upon his fellow churchmen to join him in withstanding the prevalent attacks upon the religion of Jesus Christ. Part of what he says is as follows:

> "The strength of the obligation of citizenship is dependent upon the teaching of Christianity. That is the bulwark of our whole governmental structure."
> Drawing upon his World War experience, the general told of seeing upon the walls of the Verdun citadel Petain's famous phrase: "They shall not pass."
> "Christianity is on the defensive. I fear that we are unprepared at present to withstand the onslaughts that are being made against us. We must unite in our efforts to strengthen our lines without delay. The attacks are increasingly dangerous and we must unite our efforts and we must polish up our armor and defend ourselves with all our might. . . . . If we stand firm, it is certain that 'they shall not pass.'
> "When their attacks are repulsed, it will be our turn to assume the offensive and carry the teachings of Christianity into the enemy's territory."

There is justification for what General Pershing says. It has been the vogue for a good many years now in the many professing Christians, including not a few preachers, to submit tamely to assaults upon our holy religion in the name of tolerance. By tolerance they mean accepting any belief, or no belief, as put forward by some prominent man, especially by some conspicuous scientist. Thus, they have created an atmosphere of indifference and insincerity. Many of them go so far as to say it makes no difference what you believe, as if there was nothing certain and definite in Christianity but the tone of the New Testament is quite different.

A striking fact throughout the New Testament is the frequency with which the word "know" is used in such a manner as to exclude all uncertainty.

The apostles made no concession to the wordly spirit of the men of their age. They demanded absolute submission to Christ and his teachings, holding the Saviour's words to be matters of certainty.

St. Paul said near the close of his life, "I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day."

All the great preachers who have mightily influenced the history of mankind have been men who asserted that they knew that Christianity was true. There was in none of them any weak and vacillating talk.

Others beside these mighty preachers spoke after the same manner. The great Michael Faraday, when on his death bed, was visited by some friends who came to ask him about his theories or speculations. To them he answered, "I have no speculations. I am resting on certainties."

We must come back to this note of certainty in both the pulpit and the pew, or we must submit to triumphant attacks upon our holy religion. Men will not hear or heed preachers who have no certain knowledge of truth, and they are right. No teacher would be accepted in the secular realm who was uncertain about what he taught.

When speaking of the certainties of the divine revelation, some men are fond of boasting that they are "open-minded" and "broad-minded." These terms sound well, but really they are charged with doubt of the divine word.

There are some things about which a man cannot afford to be open-minded. If he is open-minded about the chastity of his mother or the honor of his father, he is disgraced by the fact. In like manner when one declares he is open-minded about the revealed Word of God, his faith is a matter of question.

Occasionally we see articles discussing "The Morality of Tomorrow," as if even morals were not settled by the Scriptures. There will be no morality of tomorrow that is not essentially the morality of today. The Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount are final concerning Christian morals. By them men will be judged in the last day as well as their present lives will be determined.

The gospel is often neglected and practically ignored by preachers who discuss side issues all the time.

There was an old maid who was ambitious to marry a handsome preacher who was a widower possesed of considerable wealth. In order to compliment him, she said to him after one of his sermons, "Doctor, I love to hear you preach, because you preach so much else than the gospel." Some preachers compliment themselves on the same ground.

A distinguished Presbyterian preacher said recently that the ministry must abandon the discussion of side issues and concentrate on preaching the gospel. In this view he is entirely right.

There are many important subjects that have no place in the pulpit. Tariff reform, for example, might be discussed in the pulpit, and as a matter of fact is discussed in many of the pulpits of America. But the discussion of it in the pulpit is utterly out of place. Moreover, most preachers know little or nothing about that subject.

There are other political questions that are of importance, but they are not to displace the gospel in the pulpit. The curing of people is an important matter; but if a preacher abandons his pulpit and goes around giving medicine to the sick of the community, he renounces the gospel and becomes a sort of quack.

There are matters of literature that are extremely interesting, but they are not to be brought into the pulpit as substitutes for the Word of God. The writings of Shakespeare and Tennyson and Browning and others are most interesting, and, in proper places and on appropriate occasions, their discussion may be very valuable, but they do not furnish material for the pulpit except perhaps in brief and apt quotations here and there in sermons.

These things to which reference has been made have resulted in putting Christianity on the "defensive," as General Pershing has truly said; but the gospel of Christ is not a thing for mere defensiveness. It is revealed truth, and it is to be proclaimed rather than defended. Men called to preach must proclaim it rather than ignore it or set it aside for themes of a worldly character. It is an authoritative utterance by divine inspiration, and nothing can substitute it. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation, but no other book has any such quality.

General Pershing says Christianity is on the "defensive," and evidently he used the word "defensive" as it is commonly employed in military usage. When an army is on the defensive, it is near defeat. Likewise, if we put Christianity on the defensive, it will be defeated.

Moreover, there is nothing in Christianity that needs to be put on the "defensive." It is essentially an aggressive system and for it there is no place for defensiveness.

If we read carefully the Acts of the Apostles, we find that the apostles and the primitive Church never spoke the Word of God defensively. They proclaimed it as ultimate and indisputably true, and demanded the submission of their hearers to its truth and authority.

It would be a most strange thing to find in the writings of St. Paul, St. John, or St. Peter any passages of a defensive sort. They call upon all men everywhere to repent and return to God.

There has been much talk of a general revival of religion; and surely such a revival is to be desired; but we will never have it as long as any considerable part of the ministry is speaking the Word of

Lost, The Local Preacher

By REV. D. B. RAULINS, Assistant Editor

Once upon a time the writer was attending district conference. Routine was under way. Now, the names of the local preachers were being called that their characters might be passed and their licenses renewed. The business was proceding with decreasing satisfaction as the reports appeared to be of doubtful import and uncertain value. There was a scarcity of dependable information with reference to certain members of the "local ranks."

Then the name of Brother Blank was called. "Is Brother Blank present?" inquired the elder. Each one looked at each other one making a complete survey of the audience. The brother could not be located. "Is there a report from the brother?" was the next question thrown out. No report was to be found. "What has his pastor to say for the brother?" was the third attempt to make a landing. This was a bit more personal as his pastor was present. With certain apologetic "hemmings" and "hawings" the pastor succeeded in convincing the conference that his information with reference to the local preacher was somewhat less valuable than the situation demanded. "Shall we pass his character and renew his license?" Hereupon the conference went into a "huddle". "What shall we do?"

At this point the writer became sufficiently aroused to sit up and take notice. The memories of his local preacher days began to roll in upon him. He recalled that "august" ad interim committee before which he appeared with nervous misgivings. Each face passed before him. He could hear again the profound (?) questions propounded by the committee. He saw again the faces of the other two boys with whom he was being examined. He could hear the boom of the voices of those grave worthies of the itinerant ranks. He remembered how the questions propounded at times exploded in the wrong direction precipitating discussions among members of the committee thus relieving the boys of the mental strain incident to the ordeal. The big words used served admirably as a substitute for the profound thought of the examiners. He felt again the misgivings with which he waited the decision of that committee. The tempo of his heart-beat was appreciably increased. As he walked from the room to await the verdict his knees did not seem to render the support needed by the prospective preacher. At the end of the century that had passed during the short interval that marked the deliberations of the committee the boys were called back into the house. There they stood ready to be about as much surprised by an agreement for them to have license to preach as to hear a sentence to a term of hard labor on the "county farm." Then came the words that pulled a fellow together and started him toward the goal of his ambitions. "The committee has voted unanimously to grant you young brethren license to preach."

No college diplomas ever had the meaning or produced the thrill of that little parchment carrying the commission of a local preacher in the Methodist Church. Why, it had on it the signatures of the presiding elder and the secretary. That was not to be overlooked. How that boy prized that paper. With what pride, in the years that followed, did he try to make his annual report of the feeble labors he had performed in the Master's vineyard. As the license was renewed and returned each year, bearing on the reverse side the date and signatures, it acquired a larger and more sacred meaning. He had been granted another year in which to attempt further the glorious enterprise of extending the dominion of the Kingdom in the hearts and homes of his people out in the "rural district." Could he not do that work a bit better this year and plant himself a bit more deeply in the favor of God and the hearts of his fellows? It would all bring him a little closer to that desired goal of the "itinerant ranks."

So, from this reverie, he jumped to his feet. "Mr. Chairman, will you permit me to go out and look for Brother Blank? Surely he desires his license renewed." The privilege was granted while other matters of business were taken up.

After a drive of a few miles Brother Blank was found. In reply to the inquiry there appeared a lack of interest in the matter. If the conference wished to renew the license he would submit to it.

The drive back to the conference was punctuated with misgivings, interrogations and disappointment. Could a local preacher, with this attitude of indifference, maintain the sacred responsibility and the holy privilege of that licence? Could the district conference, by renewing a license under such circumstances, maintain the honor and dignity of the church, and uphold the glory of that high calling?

Recently at a district conference the names of the local preachers were being called. The name of another Brother Blank was read. There was no report from the brother, and no request for the renewal of his license. His pastor was uncertain as to whether he desired the renewal. After some discussion the conference voted to pass his character and thrust the license back into his indifferent hands.

A little book with which preachers, at least, should be more or less familiar, called "The Doctrines and Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 1930," has some words like this bearing upon the matter: "The law of our church requires a local preacher to report annually in writing the extent and result of his labors." (Paragraph 705). "An 'application' for a license to preach or for the renewal of a license must be made by the applicant, or by letter, or by someone he has requested to act for him." (Paragraph 744).

In a number of other places on the pages of the Discipline the local preacher appears, in all of which he is rated as of dependable value and importance. Honor and usefulness is written across it all.

What is the trouble? Is the day of the local preacher passed? The seriousness of the matter does not hinge upon the point of overlooking the disciplinary requirements in handling his case, but rather upon the condition reflected by irregularity. We do not pass lightly over matters that we regard as of serious import.

The local preacher appears to advantage not only upon the pages of the Discipline, but in Methodist history he enjoys a place peculiarly his own. Why begin so late as that? Go further back. He is of a long lineage. The New Testament carries a note on him. Was not Stephen the first "lay preacher?" The tides swept strong about him in the very dawning of the life of the Christian church. We call him the "first martyr." Should a local preacher ever forget the founder of this line of noble work? Should he not be proud of this unordained "apostolic succession?"

In 1744, John Wesley organized and held his first Conference. Listen: "Since Scripture doctrine was to be interpreted by experience, and as the work became so manifold and extended, it was necessary that the chief workers should confer together. The first Methodist Conference, destined to become the mother of many conferences in many lands, was summoned by Wesley in 1744. It was held at the Foundery, London, from Monday to Saturday, June 25-30. Ten persons were present, six being clergymen—John and Charles Wesley, John Hodges, Henry Piers, Samuel Taylor, and John Meriton. By agreement they invited to their councils four lay preachers—Thomas Maxfield, Thomas Richards, John Bennett, and John Downs." (A New History of Methodism, Vol. 1, page 307).

From this and other exposures to the clergy Thomas Maxfield seems to have contracted the preaching habit, an exceedingly dangerous thing for a layman in that day. Mr. Wesley became very much agitated over it. Complaints were made to him about Maxfield's dangerous overstepping of the bounds of the preserves of the clergy. How dare he encroach upon the sacred territory of the "cloth?" This would never do. He must be "silenced." He could not be "unfrocked" as he had no "frock." Poor Maxfield took Stephen too seriously.

Mr. Wesley hastens to London fully determined upon croping the assumed "flock" of Maxfield. Fortunately he goes by home. He rushes in to his mother saying, "Maxfield has turned preacher." He had not yet committed murder but it might be next. (Let Methodists never forget that Methodism had a "mother" as well as a "father," and that the mother was mother of the father).

Mrs. Wesley's words to her boy were about like this: "Now, Jackie, don't tear your jacket. Calm down a bit. You know my sentiments. You cannot suspect me of favoring readily anything of this kind. But take care what you do with respect to that young man, for he is as surely called of God to preach as you are. Examine what have been the fruits of his preaching." He did so, so the report goes. "His prejudice bowed before the force of truth (the glory of Wesley), and he could only say, 'It is of the Lord; let him do what seemeth him good.'"

Those early local preachers caused the clergy of the Church of England great grief. In their mind a man who could get religion under the preaching of one of them was hardly worth saving. This unpardonable and treasonable "irregularity" was destined to disrupt the Kingdom and the Romans would come in and sack the nation. But the local preacher was God's rebuke to this calloused clerical indifference to the souls of men, his way of making the wrath of even preachers to praise him, and his method of making things work together for good to those who loved him.

Furthermore, by way of emphasis, let us not forget that Methodism in America was established and given its original momentum by two local preachers. Hear this word from Dr. Garber in his recent volume, "The Romance of American Methodism:" "American Methodist ministers are now numbered by the thousands, yet at one time a single Methodist lay preacher constituted the active ministerial roll. That lone lay preacher was Robert Strawbridge. It was he who began the romance of American Methodism. To him belongs the honor of priority for it was Strawbridge who preached the first Methodist sermon, formed the first Methodism society, and built the first Methodist church in the New World. Without ecclesiastical appointment and without salary, he became the pioneer Methodist minister in the American wilderness."

Then, if there be those who may insist that Methodist history took its rise farther "north" let Dr. Garber give this word: "It was Philip Embury who became the second American Methodist pioneer, and the only possible rival with Strawbridge for the honor of priority in American Methodism." "In both places the work had been accomplished by 'irregulars' (local preachers without any official orders from Mr. Wesley)." "It is often forgotten that the local preachers were the vanguard of American Methodism and that they preceded the circuit riders in the frontier sections," says Dr. Garber in another place.

When the work of the local preacher is torn from the pages of Methodism's glorious history, "Ichabod" may not be written over its door, but most assuredly much of its glory will have departed. Ask the members of the Conferences how many began as local preachers. Hands will go up all over the house. One of the most dramatic moments in the 1930 session of the Louisiana Conference came when a frost crowned local preacher, who had served for many years as a supply, announced that he had reached the time in his life that demanded that he retire. How the preachers regretted that he could not become a member of that glorious group whom we call our superannuates. But it could not be done. He was a local preacher, a lay preacher. But they were not to be outdone. They gathered around him, grasping his hand, and leaving on the table a very substantial love-offering as a token of their love and esteem.

Is God through with the local preacher in Methodism? If so let him be bowed from the stage in a manner befitting the service rendered by those of his rank. If he is not through with him, let the elders, preachers and local preachers pull themselves up sharply before the task still to be done. Let elders and pastors sound the trumpet and call them again to the colors. The Kingdom is not here yet. Swing those local ranks into line, turn their faces to the foe, and tell them the word is "Forward!"

The first man who ever struck the meaning of religion into this writer's soul was a local preacher. His name was Milton Ferrell. He is not sure that this is the correct way to spell his name. It has not so much as occurred to him that Brother Ferrell's name needed to be spelled. Certainly it was long before he had learned much about spelling when he met him. Brother Ferrell did not have a Ph. D. His was the plain R. F. D., but he had received it summa cum laude. He was no painter's model for personal appearance and bearing, but he wore the smile of God. His clothes smelled of the fields and the woods, the saddle and the dusty road; but he walked with God. He was no musician, but he went up and down the country singing, "Is not this the Land of Beulah; blessed, blessed land of light, where the flowers bloom forever and the sun is always bright?" just about as Gabriel would have it sung. For in that song he was celebrating his own release from sin, his enfranchisement in grace, in such a way as to make other people desire the experience.

One day some young fellows whose sinful lives had been disturbed by the preaching of Brother Ferrell circulated a damaging report on the man of God. When it reached his ears he quietly went to his presiding elder and turned in his precious credentials, saying that he would not need them until his name was cleared. Some of his neighbors "got word of it." They threw down their work and set out to find the men who set the report going. When the scandal-mongers were located they were advised that life was too short and Brother Ferrell's character too precious for them to waste time in correcting the rumor. In the presence of the burning life of the preacher, and the fervent loyalty of his neighbors, the culprits found it more pleasant to restore the glory of that name than to do anything else, and discovered that the task was the most honorable thing they had ever done. The credentials were returned. He saddled his pony, threw his saddlebags across his neck, and set out once more up the road to open the doors of more hearts and more homes to the Gospel light.

Years later, when Brother Ferrell, worn out by the work of his life and ill-health, one day word came that he had laid aside his body and had crossed over into "the Land of Beulah." Neighbors and loving friends prepared the body for burial, brought it over to old Adams Camp Ground, and placed it before the altar of the "tabernacle" where he had led souls through to the light that burned in his own heart. As the funeral, as simple and sincere as the saint it sought to honor, proceded a shout was heard. No one seemed to think it out of order. That was the way they did when he preached. Now they had joined the angels in heaven as a reception committee to welcome home the servant of God.

The school boy followed the body to the grave whispering to God, "Let at least the corner of his mantle smite on me."

LITTLE TIN GODS

By Rev. Joseph A. Smith, M.A.

Text: Exodus 20:3—"Thou shalt have no other gods before me."

We have all seen the ugly little idols exhibited by missionaries on furlough from their fields in India, China, or Africa. Seated in our comfortable and orthodox pews, we view these grotesque images of metal and stone and wood, superciliously, and pity the poor benighted people who worship such impotent deities.

But what if we should put our idols on exhibition? Such a frank disclosure would probably reveal an array of little tin gods. Whatever a person loves and trusts supremely, that is his god; the thing that comes between him and the worship of the highest, the thing he gives his best to, that is his deity.

Ancient Athens was the incarnation of pagan idolatry. Many fanciful deities were worshiped. Magnificent temples and beautiful shrines invited the devotions of the populace. Mariners prayed to Neptune; farmers made offerings to Ceres; warriors sought counsel of Mars; the witty looked for inspiration from Comus; the covetous worshiped Plutus; pleasure seekers trusted in Bacchus; the licentious bowed down to Venus; and lovers of power did obeisance to Jupiter.

In spite of all our boasted scientific progress and modern knowledge the world has not escaped the delusions and degrading effects of idolatry. Countless multitudes still worship at pagan temples and shrines, and under the spell of credulity and selfish desires, sacrifice their most precious gift to little tin gods.

Millions in our modern world worship Plutus, or Mammon, the god of gold and greed. His temples are stately banking houses, cathedrals of commerce. His revered high priests are money magnates whose magic incantations manipulate economic markets. His creed is "business is business!" And his sacraments are business contracts, enforceable by law. Men and women, impelled by avaricious ardor, fall at his marble shrines and worship at his gilted feet.

What are you sacrificing to the glittering god, Plutus? In lust for gain, are you offering your health, the happiness of your family, your personal honor, or loyalty to Christ on his golden altars?

Men continue to worship Comus, the pagan god of pleasure. He is a gay and tinseled deity, with cap and bells. The temples of this idol are theaters, stadiums, dance halls, casinos, saloons and countless palaces of vice which pander to the inordinate gratification of the senses. His creed is the twentieth century version of the ancient Epicurean conceit, "Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die." The slavish devotees of this god of pleasure are legion. They sacrifice life's eternal values on the altar of momentary sensation.

Another pagan deity, worshipped under modern guise, is Mars, the god of war. His shrines consist of military barracks, battleships, arsenals, and laboratories for the creation of poison gases and deadly germs. His priestly hierarchy includes hundreds of officers from generals to recruiting sergeants. The creed of this war-cult is the Junker philosophy that "Might is Right;" and its ritual is elaborate and exacting military etiquette. The evangelists of this religion include powder manufacturers, steel magnates and sensational newspapers. Their evangel is the pugnacious advocacy of nationalism, increased armament and compulsory military training. They bow down in fear and the most pathetic credulity before their little tin soldier god and pray him to protect them from all evil.

A divinity at whose clay feet many pay idolatrous homage is Jupiter Olympus, the god of power. The altars of this deity are political offices. His creed is "Rule or ruin." His high-priests are demagogues who gain office by pandering to the prejudices and reasonless passions of the people. Such priests burn incense of self-praise until they come to think they are demigods. Those who are deceived by the honeyed words of these sons of Belial who make vast promises they cannot keep, pay the price of human rights and jeopardize the life of free government.

Yet another god popular with modern idolaters is Bacchus, god of intemperance. His shrines are speakeasies, drinking clubs, roadhouses and wine cellars of the rich who flout the law. His hymns are foul drinking songs and ribald laughter. Thousands of reckless revelers and reeling bacchanalians crowd his altars and pour out oblations of alcoholic beverages. They laugh and sing and curse and scream and brawl in drunken frenzy as the blue flame of unbridled lust destroys beauty, health, chastity and hope.

The only solution of idolatry is to find a God sufficient for all our needs and who can compel our full devotion. Idolatry divides. It presupposes a different deity for every fundamental need, and implies divided allegiance and affection. But we cannot become complete selves, whole men and women, and know the peace and joy and power of abundant life and character unless we love one God with all our soul, all our mind, and all our strength. Our personality must not be divided and swayed by alien ideals and conflicting loyalties.

God in Christ, the God of love manifested to us and shared with us in Jesus Christ, alone has the ability to claim and satisfy our all. He is adequate for all human needs. He draws us to trust Him altogether. He engrosses all the capacity for the Divine within us; and wins the whole of our adoration, our confidence, our loyalty and our affectionate devotion.

SAFETY SIGNALS

By Rev. S. J. Davies

Dr. S. A. Steel, sage of the Pelican Pines, gives to the world at large some sound and healthy counsel. Among other things he advises, "plant a garden." The first thing God did after creation of things and men was to plant a garden "eastward in Eden." Here is the earliest horticulture on record. Lots of trouble would be avoided and lots of vain talk about depression and the current evils of the day relegated to oblivion, if men lived closer to the soil. For, from the fruitful, fertile breast of mother earth come not only the reward and harvest of healthful toil, but a large measure of joy, peace and contentment. Partnership with nature, nature as seen in growing, springing life from soil prepared and enriched by wise culture, I hold, is man's true estate. I never knew a real gardener but that he was somewhat of a philosopher, with that sane and solid wisdom that comes from communion with nature, and the divine laws of life and growth given to man from God. The lore of the ages is not all written in books. In fact it was in the mind and heart of man before it was expressed in writ of any kind. One bed of garden peas may teach us lessons of wonderful meaning and worth if we will but look, listen and learn, as they lift their tiny leaflets upward, then grow, bloom and fruit. For therein is more of life's meaning and mys-

...very than Plato or Newton could teach. Again, in working a garden all the muscles of the body are brought into play. Hands, arms, legs, muscles abdominal and spinal, lateral or pedal are used in honest work with hoe, spade and rake. No use, then, for those [illegible] with which men take parlor exercise, or of other vain and [illegible] things we summon to call games and sports. Most men are by birth and training static by nature; only so, if I am to exercise, let it be of a fruitful kind. Give me some substantial reward that it may sweeten labor. Moreover, stirring the soil stirs the mind. Some of the best preaching I ever did was from thoughts born and wrought out while engaged in physical toil. Plant a garden, beloved. Then go into the pulpit on Sunday morning, after a Saturday of some hour's exercise amid the beds and rows replete with growing, blooming life; go with a message fresh from God and the breath of the garden, with red blood flowing through heart and brain, and every fiber glowing with the joy of holy ministry for Him who first planted a garden. We have not inaptly called paradise a type of heaven.

Yes, Spring is here again. Gentle Spring, gentle reader. The laughing, growing, storming, sunny season. Spring with its frosts and flowers, its days as variable as the flecking cloud shadows chasing one another over velvet swards. Wind and rain, then anon sunshine the weather man's problem, the days of preparation and promise to the farmer, the poet's dream, and the fresh awakening of all life in bird, bush, and all the animal kingdom. New garments for all things green and vital, lambs in the fold, calves in the herd, even new spring hats and dresses, and if (you) one does not feel new and vigorous, with a new lease on life, it is because he does not catch a vision of the resplendent beauty about him. The renewal and awakening of all nature should be a promise and a prophecy of a larger life, an eternal Spring, whose flowers are amaranthine and its glories supernal. All the winter long we held fast to the faith of a coming spring! We were glad for the frosts and rains, the ice and snows, for they were tokens of a fruitful spring, harbingers of balmy days, when the genial sun would be re-enthroned and reign as queen of men and things. For God's blessing to earth's children, are best known and seen by comparison, not unlike all else. Nature can teach us of God's creative power and his providence, but the deeper lesson of his fatherhood and loving care can only be known by faith in the living Christ. After all, he is the master teacher, for he touches the inner springs of life and gives lasting lessons of spirit and of truth.

NEW ORLEANS CHURCH EXTENSION SOCIETY

On the night of April 20 there came into definite being an organization that was the result of the dreams and plans of Dr. W. L. Doss, Jr., the presiding elder of the New Orleans district. This organization is called the New Orleans Church Extension Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. At an earlier date during the month of February there had been a set-up meeting for this organization at the Y. W. C. A. building with Bishop H. M. Dobbs present. At this meeting the plans and aspirations for the organization were outlined by Bro. Doss and more than fifty ministers and laymen signified their willingness to become members of the society.

The meeting at St. Marks on April 20 crystalized all that had gone before by the adoption of a constitution and by-laws for the society. The purpose of the society as expressed in the constitution is "to secure locations for the erection of churches and parsonages for the M. E. Church, South, in the city of New Orleans and its suburbs; and to aid in the erection of church buildings and parsonages in said territory." The primary object of the society was defined as being the opening up of new territory, but that the society would also assist existing organizations where possible and necessary. Membership in the society is of three classes: Annual membership with fees at $1 per year; contributing membership with fees at from $5 to $25 per year, and sustaining membership with fees at $25 and above.

The actual functioning of the society is delegated to a board of managers composed of the presiding elder, the pastors of all the churches in the constituent territory and two lay members from each church. On the night of May 7 this board of managers met in Epworth Church for the purpose of effecting a permanent organization. At this meeting the following corps of officers was elected: president, C. O. Chalmers; vice-president, H. P. Wall; secretary, E. H. Prescott; treasurer, W. W. Carre.

The most important single item of business of this last meeting was the approving of a plot of ground for the erection of a church for the Chalmette mission work and the laying of plans to make the purchase in the near future.

This organization promises to be one of the outstanding achievements of a most efficient and sagacious presiding elder, and should mean much indeed in the future of Methodism in this great city of New Orleans.

REV. J. T. HARRIS, Reporter.

THE CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The 41st session of the Corinth district conference met at Booneville, Miss., May 4-5. One hundred thirty official members were in attendance besides a large number of visitors. Business was dispatched rapidly and orderly yet without undue haste.

Among the visiting brethren of note who addressed the conference were Dr. J. R. Countiss, of Grenada, Miss.; Dr. D. M. Key, Jackson, Miss.; Dr. J. G. Snellings, New Orleans, La.; Rev. A. Y. Brown, Shannon, Miss.; Rev. E. G. Mohler, Grenada, Miss.; Rev. M. P. Woods, Nashville, Tenn., and Rev. T. W. Lewis, Jackson, Tenn.

The conference enjoyed a rare treat in having as its guest Rev. T. W. Lewis, a former presiding elder of the Corinth district, who is now pastor of First Church in Jackson, Tenn. Bro. Lewis delivered some plain gospel sermons, worthy of any bishop's hearing, filled with power and helpful inspiration, both to the pastors and the laity.

Bro. James Dewey Wallace was licensed to preach. Rev. T. F. Sartin, supply pastor at Burnsville, was recommended for admission on trial into the traveling connection.

The work as a whole reported by the pastors were very satisfactory, especially so considering the many adverse conditions with which we are having to contend at present.

The conference reported a total of 105 new subscriptions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate raised since the campaign was launched for 100 subscriptions from each district in the three annual conferences.

After some discussion of the work of the Advocate and opinions expressed as to what was desired of the Advocate as a publication, the following resolution was submitted by Rev. J. H. Holder of New Albany and adopted by the Conference:

Resolved, that it is the sense of the Corinth district conference that the New Orleans Christian Advocate be made first and primarily a news organ. That it keep before the Church the institutions of our conferences and the causes of the Church and the work being done in local territory.

Our conference host, Rev. J. V. Bennett, was on the job when it came to looking after the needs and comforts of all visitors. The conference was royally entertained by the people of Booneville. They have a beautiful modern church building. The ladies provided for the midday meals in the basement of the church building. So the conference lost very little time between adjurnment and the time of reassembling. Dr. Decell, you should have been present in that basement. Food was on display and arranged for each person to serve himself just how and how much he pleased, exactly like any first class large cafeteria, except that no cash register or cashier was there to dampen the high spirits of the occasion. After the conference was served, there still seemed to have been enough left for the whole editorial staff of the Advocate and all its 105 new subscribers in the Corinth district had they been present.

Bro. Felts, our presiding elder, has won the hearts of the people of Corinth district. Through his untiring efforts and efficiency as a leader, he has succeeded in getting the Corinth district into quite a different rating. As one prominent layman expressed it on the floor of the conference, "The tail has changed ends." So highly is Bro. Felts esteemed and so greatly are his services desired, that the conference unanimously passed a resolution asking for his return the fourth year as our presiding elder.

W. R. CROUCH, Secretary.

ATLANTA HOST TO HOSPITAL LEADERS

Two meetings of far reaching importance to the hospital program of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, were held in the city of Atlanta, Georgia, April 22-23. The sessions of the General Hospital Board occupied the morning and the afternoon of Wednesday, April 22, and the sessions of the Hospital Association began on Wednesday evening, April 22 and concluded with a banquet on Thursday evening, April 23.

General Hospital Board Meeting

The attendance upon the annual meeting of the General Hospital Board was good, with only two absences from the clerical members and three absences from the lay membership. Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, vice president of the Board, presided over the sessions, in the absence of Bishop Warren A. Candler, who has been for nearly ten years the honored president of the Board. Messages of regret and assurances of early recovery were conveyed from Bishop Candler to the Board.

The annual report of Dr. G. C. Jarrell, General Secretary, called attention to important changes in the law of the Church with respect to its hospital program, among which may be mentioned the following: Golden Cross funds shall be sent from the local church direct to the Annual Conference treasurer, who shall remit same monthly to the treasurer of the General Hospital Board, the treasurer of the General Board being directed to forward such funds promptly to the hospitals for which they were raised.

The report of Dr. Jarrell contained an interesting survey of the hospital work of the Church for 1930, with particular emphasis upon the new fifty bed hospital recently opened at Elkin, North Carolina, the property of the Western North Carolina Conference, and also upon the new Mary A. Ott Memorial Building being completed in connection with the Good Samaritan Hospital at Lexington, Kentucky. The latter building has been made possible through a gift of $100,000.00 made by Mrs. Mary A. Ott just prior to her death last year, and also a generous gift of $200,000.00 made by her son, Mr. H. L. Ott, who is a member of the General Hospital Board.

The report of the General Seretary reviewed the events leading up to the recent transfer to the General Hospital Board of the property in Savannah, Georgia, now known as the Warren A. Candler hospital. This property occupies an entire block in the very heart of the city of Savannah, facing on Forsyth Park, and is estimated to be worth from $350,000.00 to $400,000.00. The General Board is considering the erection of a new buliding which will serve as a medical center for the city and also provide additional hospital beds for the institution.

Methodist Hospital Association

At the sixth annual meeting of the Hospital Association Bishop W. N. Ainsworth delivered an eloquent address upon the theme "The Spiritual Objectives of a Christian Hospital," and Dr. C. W. Webdell gave a vivid account of his experience as Chaplain in Barnes Hospital, St. Louis. He reported fifty-six conversions in the hospital last year, one of these converts being an old man seventy-three years of age.

Papers on hospital problems and managements were read by Dr. H. Hedden, of the Memphis Methodist Hospital and by Dr. R. H. Oppenheimer, Superintendent of the Wesley Memorial Hospital in Atlanta. Dr. Newton H. Davis, Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Hospitals, Homes and Deaconess Work, of the M. E. Church, delivered a stirring address upon the theme "Fifty Years of Hospital Progress in the Methodist Episcopal Church," in which he reviewed the history of the development of the seventy-seven hospitals of his branch of Methodism, which are now worth in the aggregate of $60,000,000.00.

A visit was made in the late afternoon by the members of the Hospital Association to the Emory University Medical Center and the Wesley Memorial Hospital. At the benquet on Thursday evening, Dr. John W. Daniel, of Savannah, Georgia, who is a member of the medical staff of the Warren A. Candler Hospital, read a paper on "The Mutual Obligation of Hospital Doctor and Patient," and Dr. Newton H. Davis, spoke on "Methodism's Philanthropic Challenge." The report of the Committee on Findings and Resolutions contained a paragraph favoring a possible alignment under one Board control of the Hospitals, the Homes for the Aged, the Homes for Orphan Children, and allied institutions helonging to the M. E. Church, South.

Miss Lake Johnson, Superintendent of the Good Samaritan Hospital, Lexington, Kentucky, was elected President of the Association, Dr. C. W. Webdell, Chaplain of Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, was elected Vice-President and Mr. Fred T. Barnett, Associate Secretary and Treasurer of the General Hospital Board, was re-elected Secretary and Treasurer.

A fine Methodist fervor pervaded all the meetings of these hospital workers, which blended well with the careful thinking of the General Board in administrative matters.

The report of the auditing committee showed office affairs in good shape. The Board stood the shock of last year's depression and reported a net excess of assets over liabilities, in the amount of $9,174.10. The work of the office and the plans of Golden Cross promotion were cordially approved by the Board.

THE SPIRITUAL LIFE OF WHITWORTH STUDENTS

By Aun Stevens Lewis

Being denominational, Whitworth College is essentially religious, and more than that it is Christian. There are exceptionally splendid advantages here for spiritual training and growth, and each exercises a definite amount of influence.

Each student is urged to worship with her own denomination and to do definite work in the organizations of her church and Sunday school. The splendid spirit of cooperation and comradeship that exists between the churches of Brookhaven and the college makes for happy and natural spiritual development of the students. The Epworth League also plays an important part in the spiritual life of the students.

On the college campus the chapel exercises have a good deal to do with the religious growth of the student body. Four chapel assemblies are held each week at Whitworth. One is conducted by some member of the faculty. Another is under student leadership. The third is given to some pastor, and the fourth is devoted to Fine Arts programs.

Perhaps the organization that means most to the students in a spiritual way as well as in developing in them qualities of leadership is the Young Women's Christian Association. The vespers, the Sunday evening Y. M. C. A. services, and morning watch services enlist the participation of the entire student body from time to time members of the faculty. The Y. W. C. A. Cabinet acts as a guide in suggesting topics for discussion in planning special inspirational or entertaining services. The Y. Hut is kept attractive and offers a place for quiet reading or meditation any time during the day. There the Tea Room, Y. Store, and Kitchenette in the sub story of the building are open to the students during their leisure hours. The visits of the National Y Secretary and the student delegation to the Blue Ridge Conference every summer furnish particular inspiration in the work of the Y. W. C. A.

As a member of the Mississippi Methodist Student Conerence Whitworth was hostess to the third meeting of this organization recently.

The Epworth League at the church and Conference Epworth League Assembly are attended by students.

Personally each of these factors has aided me greatly in developing the spiritual side of my life. My two years on the Whitworth campus in close contact with Christian instructors have been years of finding larger fields of Christian work and deeper foundations for my own beliefs —years of steadying and developing my Christian ideals.

TO CURATORS AND OTHER OFFICERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI HISTORICAL SOCIETY

You and others interested are asked to meet at the Y. W. C. A. building of Whitworth College, at 2 p. m., June 9. One purpose of the meeting is to hear from our historians, Revs. M. L. Burton and J. B. Cain, and discuss with them plans to advance their work. Another purpose is to consider a program for the next meeting of the society at the Annual Conference.

"CHRISTIANITY ON THE DEFENSIVE"

truth with uncertainty and hesitation. The revival must come as the power of God as Pentecost came—through positive preaching and the presence of the Holy Ghost.

Parsonettes speaking with hesitation and discussing all manner of secular themes never have and never will promote the progress of the Kingdom of God. From the days of John the Baptist until this hour men have been brought to repentence and faith by the positive preaching of ministers who uttered the Word of the Lord with certitude and confidence.

The Reformation began by Martin Luther who declared the Word of God with a tone of perfect certainty; and the men who united with him in the movement were of the same mind. We cannot think of such a man as Melancthon sounding an uncertain note in his preaching. There would have been no Reformation at all if the Reformers had boasted their "open-mindedness," "broadmindedness," and liberalism.

After the same manner, John Knox did his work in Scotland—a work that abides to this day and will never perish.

Likewise, John Wesley and his co-laborers preached the Word of God without uncertainty and doubtfulness.

Similarly, Jonathan Edwards and his co-laborers, by whom "the Great Awakening" was brought to pass, preached confidently the Word of God, and they preached nothing else.

General Pershing says truly that good citizenship in our country rests on Christianity; but it will rest on a very insecure foundation if it is rested on liberalistic and secularized preaching.

LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Lake Charles District Conference met in the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Lake Charles, La., on April 29 at 10 a. m. and continued through the 30th, meeting again at 3 p. m. on the 29th and completing the work at 12 noon. The Conference was royally entertained by Dr. and Mrs. R. H. Harper, our very genial host and hostess, who were ably assisted by a very efficient committee. Our stay in Lake Charles proved to be a very great pleasure and inspiration to preachers and laymen and laywomen alike. The entertainment given in the many beautiful homes and the hospitality we enjoyed could not be surpassed.

Rev. Claude K. Smith, pastor of the Crowley church, led the conference in the opening devotional service, reading for a lesson the 6th chapter of Isaiah. Rev. Mr. Smith emphasized the necessity of a greater vision both among the ministry and the membership of our great Church in order to meet the very unusual condition with which the Church is faced today.

The executive session was called to order by Dr. J. W. Lee, our very efficient presiding elder. Rev. Claude K. Smith, of Crowley, was elected as secretary.

Every pastor of the district was present with one exception, the Rev. J. H. Hoffpauir, pastor of Acadia circuit, who was absent on account of illness.

In the reports of the pastors of the district, conditions were shown to be very good, while at the same time there was in many reports evidence of the financial depression which the country is facing generally. The most encouraging note in the reports of the pastors over the district was the many conversions and accessions to the Church. The interest and determination to go forward with the great work of the Church was very much in evidence among the ministers and the many laymen and laywomen who were in attendance. Rev. H. E. Ploet, pastor at DeRidder, preached at the 11 o'clock hour on the first day of the conference, using as a Scripture lesson Matthew 7th chapter, 24 to 29, inclusive. Bro. Ploet placed much stress upon the necessity of building under our entire activity and life a firm foundation. That foundation which we could be sure would withstand all the storms of life is Jesus Christ. At the evening hour Dr. A. M. Serex, the pastor at New Iberia, preached a very interesting and inspirational sermon. Dr. Serex proved in a most convincing manner that the Church of Jesus Christ had sponsored and actually had brought about every real blessing with which the human family is blessed today. Dr. Serex stated: "That the Church was still on two crusades, that of outlawing war, and the liquor traffic, in that both were a curse to all intelligent civilization."

Special interests of the Church were presented by Dr. J. G. Snelling, superintendent of the Memorial Mercy Home; Dr. W. W. Holmes, Conference secretary of Christian Education; Dr. L. W. Cain, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, representing the Hopital Board and the Golden Cross; Dr. D. B. Raulins, representing the New Orleans Christian Advocate; Dr. H. N. Brown, representing the Kingdom Extension work of the district; Dr. R. W. Vaughan, superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage; Mrs. J. N. McDonald, district secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society.

Dr. J. A. Crawford, of Lake Charles, was elected district secretary of the Golden Cross; Mr. J. Ed. Eaves, district lay leader; Mr. J. W. Wynn, associate district lay leader; Mr. J. H. Cain, associate district lay leader.

Delegates to the Annual Conference were as follows: A. M. Mayo, J. H. Cain, J. W. Wynn, J. Ed. Eaves, Rev. R. P. Howell, Mrs. C. K. Smith, Mrs. A. C. Adams, Mrs. J. N. McDonald.

Telegrams of best wishes and an assurance of the prayers of the conference were sent to Dr. R. H. Wynn and Mr. W. L. [illegible], Sr.

The district conference accepted an invitation from Rev. J. E. [illegible], pastor of Many, to hold the 1932 session in the new church recently dedicated in the town of Many.

JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE

By Rev. Marvin H. McCormack, Jr., Secretary

Wednesday afternoon, April 29, saw the closing of what was perhaps the greatest session of the Jackson District Conference. More people were in attendance upon the sessions than ever attended a district conference in Mississippi. It was held in that beautiful edifice erected to the glory of God by the saints of the church at Canton. Rev. Osmond F. Lewis, that ever congenial pastor-host, led his good people in entertaining the conference in a manner befitting royalty.

There were over 175 members and delegates present and a large host of visitors. Great interest and zeal were manifested in the affairs of the Spirit and Kingdom.

Our conference was presided over by that venerable shepherd of God's people and beloved presiding elder of our district, Dr. J. T. Leggett, who guided the affairs of the conference with a dignity and grace characteristic only of those who have waxed strong and tender in the mellowing years of long experience in faithful and sacrificial service.

We were favored with the presence of a large number of distinguished visitors, among whom was Dr. J. B. Peters, pastor of the First Methodist Church of New Orleans. Dr. Peters endeared himself to the hearts of the people of our district as he so ably represented the Advocate before us. We were delighted to have with us as guests Rev. J. G. Snelling, also from the Louisiana Conference, and Revs. S. A. Brown and M. E. Scott of the North Mississippi Conference, and Revs. L. E. Alford, M. L. Burton, I. H. Sells, B. L. Sutherland, R. H. Clegg, H. E. Raley and others of the Mississippi Conference.

There was that same genuine spirit of fraternity among the brethren of the ministry and laity. There was that suave gentility of Westbrook, that tender word of Sharp, that voice with a twang that grips your soul as Schultz speaks, that warmth of heart that comes from the kindly smile of Downer, that courtly, Laconic style of Applewhite, that sparkling vigor of Strait, that unpretending frankness of Harkey, that vigorous cordiality of Prewitt, that boyish earnestness of Kelly. These things touch one's heart and move him to a deeper appreciation of fellowship and fraternity.

Then, too, how lifting is that princely bearing and mighty eloquence of Smith, how refreshing that Irish wit of that big-hearted trio of Walters, Coker and White; they kept the conference turbulent with laughter. Then there's that refined, spirited, antithetical, sententious, vehement, sparkling, impassioned, poetic facon de parler of Cowen; it always produced that vociferous equoidean laughter of Barry and Chambers.

The preaching of the conference was of high order. The sermon Tuesday morning by Dr. Joseph A. Smith on "What Think Ye of Christ?" was truly great. He will do the Church an injustice if he fails to put it into permanent form that it might be handed down posterity. Rev. G. E. Allan preached Tuesday night on "The Eyes of Our Understanding," and Rev. Geo. H. Thompson brought the message Wednesday morning on "Christ, Our Guest." Both sermons were well prepared and splendidly delivered.

Brother Leggett had to leave for Nashville Wednesday morning and Brother Thompson presided over the conference during his absence. He showed that his many years in the "elderate" were not in vain. You know he is the presiding elder [illegible] of the Jackson District anyway.

One of the high points of the conference was the rendering of several Negro spirituals by the Rust College quartette of Holly Springs, under the direction of Professor [illegible] of the college. We were also glad to have with us a group from the Millsaps College Glee Club, who assisted in the program given by the Conference Board of Christian Education. Professor Gilmore, Director of Religious Education of the Galloway Memorial Church, was with us and sang a solo at one of the preaching services.

Several splendid messages were brought by laymen, including Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Judge J. M. Foreman, and Dr. [illegible] L. Lewis. The laymen elected the following delegates and alternate delegates to the Annual Conference: J. M. Foreman, J. M. Kay, W. H. Bradley, J. [illegible] Wood, E. O. [illegible], J. M. Sullivan, J. C. Brown, W. C. [illegible], Mrs. W. H. Watkins, W. L. Davis, J. A. [illegible], G. P. Cook, Mrs. G. C. Swearengen, C. L. Ray, J. P. Bennett and Mrs. W. F. Mahaffy. Alternates: M. S. Enochs, W. E. Carnall, H. A. Rawlings and G. L. Harrell.

Two young men were granted license to preach; they were William [illegible] Layman and Martell Twitchell. Rev. [illegible] Hilton was elected to local deacon's orders.

The cause of missions was presented to the conference in a very timely way by Rev. O. S. Lewis in the absence of Brother W. D. Hawkins, whose absence was regretted by the entire conference. Rev. W. M. Sullivan made a forceful appeal in behalf of the Methodist Orphanage, and Mrs. G. C. Swearengen gave a report on the Orphanage's Octagon coupon campaign. Rev. B. L. Sutherland very effectively represented the Superannuate Endowment cause. Dr. J. G. Snelling spoke briefly on the work of the Memorial Mercy Home of New Orleans. Dr. Jno. L. Sutton gave us a very interesting and inspiring report of the work of the Mississippi Children's Home Society.

Special mention should certainly be made of the fine lunches served by the ladies of the Wesley circle of the Canton Woman's Missionary Society. Nothing is quite so eloquent as a good dinner to a hungry man. We may well apply the words of the famous cigarette slogan to these lunches and say "They Satisfy!" "What a whale of a difference a few biscuits make!"

The conference accepted the invitation of the Bentonia church to hold its next session in Bentonia.

MINDEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Minden District Conference of the Louisiana Annual Conference was held at the First Methodist Church, Minden, La., April 23-24, Rev. W. R. Harvell, presiding elder, presiding.

All the pastors were in attendance, at least part of the time, except three, one of whom Rev. R. H. Wynn, D.D., pastor of the Minden church, was in Baltimore, Md., where he had undergone a serious operation. It was reported by those informed that Dr. Wynn's condition is greatly improved and it is expected that he will be able to resume his pastoral work at an early date. The non-attendance of the other two pastors was due to funerals they were to conduct.

There were also more than forty lay delegates in attendance, part or all the time, representing all the pastoral charges of the district except three. Visitors from outside the district introduced at different times were: Rev. H. T. Carley, D. D., presiding elder of the Shreveport District; Rev. A. S. Lutz, D.D., presiding elder of the Alexandria District; Rev. R. M. Brown, presiding elder of the Ruston District; Rev. W. W. Holmes, Conference Secretary of the Board of Christian Education; Rev. H. N. Brown, sec. Conference Board of Missions; Rev. R. W. Vaughan, superintendent Methodist Orphanage; Rev. A. W. Turner, superintendent Louisiana Prohibition League; Rev. A. K. McLellan, Conference Sunday School Extension Secretary; Miss Elizabeth Langford, Conference Young People's worker; Dr. W. W. Drake, D. D., Revs. L. Hoffpauir, H. W. Ledbetter, W. F. Henderson, Jr., Otis Spinks and H. B. Hysell, pastors; Rev. B. F. Griffin, a Methodist Protestant preacher; J. B. Nelson a layman, and Mrs. C. H. Carson, a daughter of a deceased member of the Louisiana Conference.

The entertainment given by the good people of Minden was all that could have been desired, and the noonday luncheons at the church, served by the ladies of the Woman's Missionary Society, were greatly enjoyed and appreciated by all who had the good fortune to partake.

Rev. W. R. Harvell, the presiding elder, dispatched the business of the district conference with ease, giving ample time to all the varied interests of the Church and the routine business of a district conference. Dr. Harvell seems to be in great favor with all the pastors and people of the district.

The reports of the pastors showed that the interests of the Kingdom of God are being looked after and faithful efforts to carry out the program of the Church, under very trying conditions, are being made.

No business or other matters whatsoever was injected into the usual hours of Divine worship, which was as it ought to be. Sermons of force, interest and true gospel ring were preached by Revs. J. M. Alford, J. B. Williams, Briscoe Carter and C. C. Wier. The last worship service held was characterized by the manifest presence of the Holy Spirit, at which time those present knelt devoutly at the altar of the church in a consecration service.

The licensing committee elected to serve until the meeting of the Annual Conference is: Revs. Briscoe Carter, J. B. Williams, R. H. Wynn and A. S. J. Neill. Delegates elected to the Annual Conference are: P. K. Able, Miss Mary Morton, Mrs. J. M. Alford, Mrs. W. A. Hall, Mrs. W. R. Harvell, Mrs. M. P. Hodges, A. B. Hagle and F. G. Phillps. Alternates: J. G. McDade, W. R. Akin, H. R. Wimberly and Mrs. H. C. Boyet.

Practically all of the first session of the conference, from one to five o'clock p.m., except that consumed in organizing, was taken up with addresses on the various interests of the Church and other causes, each speaker pleading for special efforts to raise money, or more money, for the cause he or she represented, and practically all urged that the cause they represented has the greatest need or merit. When the speaking was about over the presiding elder called for the singing of "A good old-time hymn." At the suggestion of the secretary, and led by the presiding elder, all joined heartily in singing "How tedious and tasteless the hours."

On recommendation of the committee on Christian Education, the selection of Miss Mary Searles, of Minden, as district young people's worker, and Mrs. James Kent, also of Minden, as district children's worker, was confirmed. A. B. Hagle, Ferriday, was re-elected district Golden Cross director; Prof. F. G. Philips, Plain Dealing, was re-elected district lay leader, and Judge R. W. Oglesby, Winnfield, and E. E. Richardson, Jena, associate district lay leaders.

In selecting the place of meeting for the next district conference, Winnfield and Olla were put in nomination by their pastors. Olla received a majority of the votes and was declared elected as the next meeting place.

After all business was finished the presiding elder addressed those present, urging all to do their best to carry out the program of the Church and promote the Kingdom of God, and to pray for a revival throughout the district.

"Blest Be the Tie That Binds," was sung; the presiding elder led in a fervent prayer and pronounced the benediction, and the 1931 session of the district conference was adjourned.

THE NEW STATISTICAL BLANKS

By Rev. Robert A. Cross

At the meeting of the Alexandria District Conference in Lecompte, La., Rev. R. W. Vaughan, superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage and statistical secretary of the Louisiana Conference, was present. As statistical secretary, he, with his assistants, does much hard work during the Conference session. Brother Vaughan called attention to the fact that by action of the 1930 General Conference, beginning with this year, the first of a new quadrennium, the manner of reporting statistics is different for charges containing more than one organized church. For such charges the statistics of each church will be listed separately, as well as charge totals for each item.

Some pastors may feel that this is just more work for them in making their reports. True it is harder, but if they feel that it is hard on them, they should also remember that it is doubly hard on the statistical secretary and his force, who must copy and compile all these figures. However, the results of this new system will more than compensate for the additional work attached thereto. Instead of having their individual identity completely lost, as is the case of most churches on circuits, each church will stand out as a separate and distinct unit. Many churches pride themselves (and rightly so) on rendering a full report at the end of the Conference year. Unless the church were a station in the past, there was no record in the Conference statistics of its individual achievements. Under the new system, each church, no matter how small, will get full credit for its work in the statistical tables of the Conference minutes, and no longer will a circuit church, which fails to render a full report, be able to "hide behind the skirts" of the other churches of the same circuit whose reports have been full. The fact that each stands alone should be an incentive for all churches to make full reports.

No pastor who waits until nearly the end of the Conference year before beginning to compile statistics can hope to render an accurate report. He must begin now. Let him send to the Publishing House and secure the new statistical blanks immediately. Then let him, as soon as the blanks arrive, examine them carefully, and see what statistics are required. Some he may be able to secure at once, such as value of buildings or insurance carried. The best way to get accurately the number of church members for each church is to get the church register and count the names. He will also find it necessary to compute the apportionments for General Conference, and District Work for each church, as this must be given as well as the apportionments for the entire charge. He should do all of this as early in the year as possible, for when the time for Conference draws near, he will find that there are many other matters demanding his attention.

NOTES FROM THE RUSTON DISTRICT

A Most interesting Gathering

On April 25, at the invitation of the presiding elder, Rev. R. M. Brown, most of the preachers of the Ruston district gathered at the Ruston Methodist Church for a round table discussion. The devotional was led by Rev. H. M. Johnson, who is pastor at Ruston. He gave us a splendid message. Brother Brown asked some very pointed questions, one of which was, "What does the Ruston district need most?" Someone replied, "A Revival." Several discussions followed and a season of prayer was had. This meeting was not in vain. The voice of prayer ascended the hill of the Lord and plans for future work were discussed.

Special services were held at the Arcadia church beginning Easter Sunday. The pastor, Bro. K. W. Dodson, invited several preachers to preach during the meeting. Revs. P. B. McCullen, H. M. Johnson and Cleanth Brooks were the special speakers. Brother Dodson and his wife are happy in the Lord's work at Arcadia. Brother Dodson told the writer that he had never enjoyed the work of a pastor any more than he does now.

Dr. Andrew Johnson of Wilmore, Ky., is coming to the Ruston district for at least two revival campaigns. His first meeting will be held at our church at Ruston beginning the fifth Sunday in May and closing second Sunday in June. After this meeting Dr. Johnson will hold a meeting for us here at Gibsland. Dr. Johnson is nationally known as a preacher and writer. We are expecting great things to come to pass as a result of his efforts in the Ruston district. The writer recognizes the fact that revivals are not the result of human might or power but of the Holy Spirit. We believe that Dr. Johnson is a man through whom the Holy Spirit is blessing many. The dates of the meetings are: Ruston, May 31 to June 14; Gibsland, June 17 to 28.

To Dr. Decell and the whole Advocate family we will send this question of St. Paul and also a little poem to match:

"If God be for us, who can be against us?" Rom. 8:31.

" 'Neath the banner of Hope will we bravely press forward,
For who can o'ercome us with God for our aid?
Should the world, or the flesh, or the devil assault us,
Our Captain is stronger—then why be dismayed?"

Editorial

BISHOP DENNY ITINERATES IN MISSISSIPPI

During the first year of his episcopal supervision of the two Mississippi Conferences Bishop Collins Denny preached at one or more places in each of the fourteen districts—in several of them many times.

In April he presided over the Columbia, Aberdeen, Sardis, Newton, Meridian, Hattiesburg, and Seashore district conferences. He traveled hundreds of miles by train or automobile, delivered addresses, preached from six to eight times a week, and met engagements at general church meetings at Louisville, Ky., and Nashville, Tenn. Withal, a strenuous month's toil.

The bishop's uniform courtesy, able addresses, and strong sermons made the district conferences occasions of unusual interest and benefit. He is a marvel of stamina and efficiency. The long journeys, constant administrations, frequent addresses, and edifying sermons did not seem to tax his strength. Mississippi Methodists were honored with his presence and blessed by his ministry.

THE DISTRICT CONFERENCES

Methodism is an intelligently organized Church. One of her most important conferences is the district conference. It is largely a people's conference—other members sometime outnumbering the clerical by ten to one. The district conference is not waning in interest for well prepared programs are arranged and the general causes of the church are brought to the people of the various charges. Twenty-one of our district conferences have already been held and the reports are inspiring.

The claims of the New Orleans Christian Advocate were presented at a number of the conferences by the following brethren: V. C. Curtis, Columbus, Aberdeen and Sardis; G. F. Winfield, Brookhaven and Meridian; J. E. Gray, Newton; D. B. Raulins, Alexandria and Lake Charles; H. T. Carley, Minden; Briscoe Carter, Shreveport; J. B. Peters, New Orleans, Seashore, and Jackson; J. H. Felts, Corinth. We appreciate the courtesy extended these representatives and the splendid service rendered by them for the Advocate.

The editor was privileged to attend several of the Brookhaven district conference he was entertained in the happy home of Rev. and Mrs. [illegible] Baldwin at Crystal Springs, Miss. [illegible] superannuate he could [illegible] finer spirit and happier surroundings than to be found in that home of a [illegible] superannuate and his devoted wife. Rev. J. E. [illegible], pastor-host, and his people as well as the entire conference were thoughtful and considerate.

Through the kindness of Dr. [illegible] W. Fraser we were privileged to accompany him, Dr. [illegible] Jones and Dr. G. F. Winfield to Centreville, Miss., where the Vicksburg district conference was meeting. The Vicksburg district, like the land of Gilead, stretches far along a river. However Presiding Elder [illegible] Alford and members of the conference from far and near were there. At the opening of the conference Rev. [illegible] McKeown, pastor at Woodville, preached a soul-stirring sermon that gave the conference a spiritual tone for all its sessions. At the afternoon session the presiding elder with his accustomed thoughtfulness made opportunity for the "visiting brethren" to hold forth. We found no finer spirit in any conference than was at Centreville and the brethren pledged enough subscribers to place that historic district well up with the minimum quota of 100. Rev. J. E. [illegible] Ferguson and the people of Centreville did themselves credit in the gracious and "sufficient" manner in which they supplied all the needs of delegates and visitors.

At the Monroe district conference we found cordial hospitality in the home of Mr. and Mrs. K. P. Ewing, and found Presiding Elder E. C. Gunn dispatching business in splendid form. Rev. W. H. Giles and his people are to be congratulated upon their modern church building and the work being accomplished at Tallulah. The Monroe district brethren heard with patience and responded with subscriptions.

The next gathering of the hosts was at Hattiesburg, where Bishop Denny and Presiding Elder Hays were directing affairs with courtesy and celerity. The bishop accorded the editor the privilege of the floor early in the sessions and the conference was sympathetic and responsive. New subscriptions were given and more were promised. Brother Clegg and his people helped in every way possible.

In the heart of the delta is to be found the Greenwood district. Their conference was held in the hospitable town of Webb. Presiding Elder Wasson, who has won the hearts and support of the Methodists in that section by his untiring devotion to all the interests of the Kingdom, accorded us the privilege of speaking to the conference at its first session and subscriptions and assurance were not lacking. The uniform kindness of the presiding elder, Pastor Rev. S. E. Ashmore, preachers and people, and the delightful home of Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Catoe, made us regret that our schedule called us to hurry on to the next place.

On the train to Ruston we met Rev. E. C. Gunn, who invited us to detrain and accompany him in Judge W. B. Clarke's Hupmobile to Jonesboro, where the Ruston district conference was being held. It could be inserted here, if we had space, just what Judge Clarke says about how free his presiding elder is with space in his car. To our delight, Dr. W. W. Drake was also a passenger aboard to Jonesboro, and Judge Clarke piloted us safely and in time for the delicious luncheon served by the good ladies of Jonesboro. Before the afternoon session, Mrs. R. M. Brown, at the request of Pastor J. S. Henley, presided during a program which preceded the dedication of their attractive new parsonage by Rev. R. M. Brown. At the afternoon session the presiding elder, Rev. R. M. Brown, willingly readjusted their program for the convenience of the visiting speakers. He and the conference bore with patience the editor's Advocate prolixity and generously assured us of continued interest and support. There is no rust on the ecclesiastical machinery under the direction of the alert and consecrated presiding elder of the Ruston district and we think not that the year will close with encouraging success for the Advocate and all other causes.

The Grenada district conference convened in the beautiful little city of Lexington, Miss. We joined the presiding elder, Rev. E. H. Cunningham, at Durant and was happy to find upon reaching Pastor Stephens's office that we had been assigned to share the joy with him of being in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wilburn. Mrs. Wilburn for twenty-three years has been the treasurer of the North Mississippi Woman's Missionary Conference and knows and loves all the work of the church. Brother Wilburn was one of the leaders in co-operating with the pastor, Rev. J. E. Stephens, in erecting one of the most complete and attractive educational buildings for the church at Lexington that it has been our privilege to see. It is a model of efficiency and economy in space and means. Presiding Elder Cunningham conducted the district conference in true and ancient form and directs his work with deftness and vision. After the preaching service the editor had opportunity to present the claims of the Advocate and the large audience listened with respect and concern. The largest number of subscriptions were received that we found at any of the conferences. Such kindness as was accorded by presiding elder, pastor, members of the conference and people of the town and host and hostess would make an editor want to stay and stay, but another conference was on the list.

From Lexington we traveled over the Illinois Central through the wonderful Mississippi delta up to the little city of Tunica, where the Greenville district conference was in session. Met at the train by hospitable members of the entertainment committee we were soon at the church and in to the session. Rev. E. Nash Broyles, the experienced and affable presiding elder, was turning out much work with ease and precision. He soon gave opportunity to have the Advocate interest presented, and how the conference did listen, consider, and respond! A goodly number of subscriptions were received and more were assured. The list was started by Mrs. H. P. Lewis, who said: "My son is in Honolulu and I want him to have the Advocate and here is the money for his subscription." We have been suggesting that the Advocate be sent to Mother and could but thank God for this beautiful thought, on the eve of Mother's Day, of a mother for her far-away son. Dr. Chapman, the genial pastor-host, rendered every courtesy and kindly placed us at the Hotel Tunica as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Kennedy, who operate that hostelry of genuine Southern hospitality.

The preachers and people of our three conferences are loyal to the Advocate. In the midst of many, many other duties they have not forgotten its claims and we feel assured that the future months will justify our confidence in their continued interest and support. We thank one and all for their kindness during our journeyings here and there in behalf of the paper.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

Rev. E. M. Allen, the faithful pastor at Walnut Grove, Miss., has our thanks for his efforts in behalf of the Advocate. His people are loyal and the year bids fair to be successful in every way.

Sister M. J. Cooper, Prentiss, Miss., writes, "I am 83 years old and not able to attend the Church services but enjoy reading the Advocate very much." We are thankful that the Advocate can add to her comfort at eveningtide.

Rev. F. H. McGee, pastor Herando, Miss., writes, "Everything is moving along nicely with us. We serve an excellent people and they are treating us royally." We thank brother McGee for twelve subscriptions.

Mrs. C. W. Shannon, Flora, Miss., sent the Advocate for one year to her mother, Mrs. S. P. McKay, Farmhaven, Miss., as a Mother's Day gift.

it will, we trust, prove a blessing every week through the year.

Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, the energetic pastor at Centreville, Mississippi, lost no time after the Vicksburg district conference in securing new subscriptions to the Advocate. He serves a splendid people and the Church is making progress along all lines.

Brother C. W. Scott, McNair, Miss., in renewing his subscription, writes: "Truly The Advocate is good unto edifying. It is good measure pressed down and running over." We appreciate Brother Scott's interest in the paper and pray it may continue to be a blessing.

Rev. A. C. McCorkle, pastor, Winona, Miss., writes: "I find no better people can be found than here at Winona. They have been thoughtful of the pastor and his family at all times. We have a well organized Church, large congregations, good Sunday school, and the best choir in the conference."

We are not surprised to learn that Rev. J. D. Simpson is finding his fourth year on the Byhalia, Miss., charge to be the best. He writes, "We are serving a great people and things are moving well." We trust that the thirteen subscriptions be favored us with will mean even a deeper interest in the Church on the part of the readers.

Rev. R. A. Bozeman and the pastors of other denominations at Oak Grove, La., began a revival on Mother's Day. This union revival with local pastors doing the preaching and local people leading the music will doubtless prove a great blessing to the town. Brother Bozeman preached the commencement sermon at Oak Grove on May 3.

Sunday School Day exercises, according to the program furnished by the Board of Christian Education, will be held at Jefferson Street Church, Natchez, Sunday, May 17, at 11 a. m., and the pastor, Rev. H. G. Hawkins, at that hour will preach the commencement sermon for the high school of Waterproof, La.

Rev. Harry S. Allen, of Dallas, Texas, is now assisting Rev. D. B. Boddie, and his people in revival services at the Pineville, La., Methodist Church. Evangelist Allen is just closing a series of revival campaigns in the Houston District, of the Texas Conference. Since January 1, he has held six revivals in and near Houston, Texas, with most gracious results.

Rev. B. W. Ware, the consecrated pastor on the Raleigh, Miss., charge, is happy in his work and meeting with success. He has organized a new Sunday school, a missionary society, repaired one church building, and received sixteen into the Church this conference year. We pray that increasing success may attend his labors on that excellent charge.

Rev. A. L. Davenport, Tyro, Miss., sent The Advocate to his mother, Vivian, La., as a Mother's Day gift. He writes that his second quarterly confernece was a great occasion and that things are looking upward for all causes on his charge.

Rev. J. S. Maxey is serving a very fine people on the Mathiston, Miss., charge and all the work of the Church moves forward with assurances of success for the year.

Rev. T. L. Oakes, pastor at Derma, Miss., writes "These good people received us most cordially and have done everything humanly possible for our comfort. Some of them have sacrificed until it hurt. We have shared with them every good thing they possessed. There are visible signs of a great revival among us." One good sign of a revival is for the members to sacrificially respond to the leadership of a devoted pastor.

Mrs. F. L. Brownfield, Athens, La., in sending in two years' renewal, wrote: "I have been a regular subscriber every since I have lived in Louisiana, thirty-five years, and do not want to be without The Advocate, as I find that is the best way to keep informed as to what our great Church is doing." We thank Mrs. Brownfield for her advance subscriptions and pray that The Advocate may continue to prove a blessing.

Rev. C. Karios Smith, pastor Crowley, La., is scheduled to leave June 1 for Vienna, Austria, where he will attend the International Rotary Convention June 21-26. He will visit the Holy Land before he returns in September. We wish him a joyous trip and journeying mercies. We thank him for thinking of the Advocate before he leaves. The 13 subscriptions will help us to carry on in his absence.

"Things are moving nicely with us. The people are extremely nice to us and the pastor and his family are happy." This is the way Rev. W. D. Bennett of Crenshaw, Miss., writes. Not only so, but along with this personal comment he includes words to the effect that the Christian Advocate should be going to certain names listed. A lot of people up there in Mississippi are reading the Advocate. It will help them out of the depression.

The Men's Bible Class of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, New Orleans, the largest men's class in the District, at a meeting recently held at the home of Mr. C. P. Mackenzie, secretary, held their annual election of officers with the following results: Mr. Ed. W. Brown, president; Mr. Rohiiio, vice-president; Mr. C. P. Mackenzie, secretary; Mr. Lloyd Lacher, assistant secretary; Mr. E. Neuwirth, treasurer, and Mr. H. B. Bradley, absentee secretary. Mr. Wm. H. Black, prominent layman of the Louisiana Conference and a member of this church, is the teacher of this fine class.

BIENNIAL MEETING OF CONFERENCE BOARD REPRESENTATIVES, BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION

Report of Committee on Findings

Incorporate in our report to the Annual Conference:

1. That no presiding elder, pastor or other person has any right to promise any amount of loan or donation to any building project.

2. Recommend the following:

"That the Conference Boards offer their services to any pastor contemplating building or repairing church or parsonage to assist planning and financing."

3. That a program of education in institutes and pastors' schools be promoted.

4. That the wording of the Discipline be literally applied with reference to the amount in cash or bona fide subscriptions before beginning to build, and we cannot too strongly discourage unreasonable church debts.

5. That the stronger churches be discouraged in asking help from the Church Extension Board and that the Church Extension money is to be used to help weaker churches who cannot help themselves.

Respectfully submitted,
J. J. CREED, Chairman;
W. S. WRIGHT, Secretary.

Resolutions on Pastors' Schools

We respectfully request the Board of Education to put in the pastors' schools a course of church promotion to be taught alongside the course of church architecture, and to lay stress on the methods of financing and inspirational data to promote giving instead of asking for help from the Church Extension Board.

Also, that at least one week of training be given to young preachers in our schools of theology on church promotion and financing.

C. M. LIPHAM,
JAMES E. McCONNELL, Committee.

A TRIBUTE OF RESPECT TO HENRY OLIVER WINSTEAD

Ollie, as he was familiarly known and called, was born in Smith County, Miss., near Burns, on the 8th day of February, 1880, and departed this life April 25, 1931, aged 51 years, 2 months and 17 days. He joined the Methodist Church in early boyhood at old Boykin church and was ever thereafter a consistent and devoted member of the church of his choice. He served as a member of the board of stewards at Burns for eighteen years and was an active and responsible steward at the time of his death. The loss to his church is so great it can be best expressed by quoting the following, spoken by his pastor in paying his last respect to the deceased, "The strongest, the best and most useful person in this church is gone," and all who heard knew his pastor spoke the truth and the sentiment of every person present in the large congregation assembled to pay its respect to him.

He was first married to Miss Maggie Caughman of Burns on February 8, 1900, who departed this life February 8, 1917; to this union were born eight children, six of whom survive, four splendid sons and two excellent daughters, Cliff, Delton, Arwood, Gladstone, Lola Mae and Loree, all of Burns, Miss. On December 29, 1918, he was again married and this time to Miss Kate Livingston of Burns, and to this union two baby girls were born, both having died in infancy. He is survived by his last wife and his saintly and devoted mother, Mrs. Sue Winstead, and one sister, Mrs. May Kelly, all of Burns, and four brothers, Rev. T. B. Winstead, of DeKalb, Miss., a member of the Mississippi Conference; W. C. Winstead of Washington, D. C., R. H. and T. W. Winstead of Donna, Texas, and one grandchild, little Ollie Jeane Winstead also of Burns, and a host of other relatives.

Of him, his pastor said, "that no man or person ever lived in the Burns community who had more friends than did Ollie." This fact was attested by the many kind hands that ministered unto him in his last long illness, and as evidenced by the bountiful and magnificent floral offerings made on yesterday when he was laid in his last resting place. It is rare indeed that a more touching scene is witnessed than was witnessed yesterday while the great host of friends were viewing his mortal remains for the last time—there was scarcely a dry eye to be seen, and this was as it should have been. He was sick a long time and some of us cannot understand why, but the Holy Scriptures teach us to pray that we may not suffer sudden death, meaning, doubtless, that we might be exempt from the precipitation of so great a change without opportunity to reflect and to attune ourselves to it. During his long and painful illness, he did reflect and attune himself to the impending fact and even planned for his devoted family to the last, and, therefore, he had the indescribable advantage of the happiness of thinking of the great change as being near with all that it involves. When we dwell upon his life we deal with a character which was indeed excellent, rich and rare; with a life that was clean, exalted and noble; with garnered results which are worthy of study and emulation. There beat in his breast a heart large, warm and true. He loved and was loved. He had faith in others and was himself trusted implicitly; he lived beyond reproach; he was honest because it was right to be honest. He lived a high-minded, whole-souled Christian life.

He was of a retiring nature, but that did not mean that he shirked responsibility or duty. He was always ready to stand in the front rank for what he considered right. His home life was ideal and there his loss is felt the keenest. He was devoted to his wife and children and they in return were greatly devoted to him. He died beloved of all who knew him and is mourned the most by those who knew him best. We know that he himself, with his high ideals and his spotless record, has gone on to

Join the Choir Invisible
Of those immortal dead who live again
In minds made better by their presence; live
In pulses stirred to generosity
In deed of daring rectitude, in scorn
For miserable aims that end with self.
In thoughts sublime that pierce the night like stars,
And with their mild persistence urge man's search
To vaster issues.

I'M GOING HOME NOW

By Rev. H. S. Westbrook

As I was walking leisurely along the street one day, two men met as I passed them.

"Hello, James, where are you going?" said one to the other.

"I'm going home now," replied James.

Many things passed rapidly through my mind on account of this short conversation. First, I wondered what kind of a home James had, whether it was a sinful home or a bright, happy Christian one; second, how long it had been since he had been home with his family; and third, can he say he is on his way to that bright heavenly home far, far above the starry sky?

As I thought soberly on, I asked myself if I appreciated the happy Christian home I had as I should, and honestly do all the old and young people of this pleasure-seeking age appreciate their homes as they should. It is quite a comfort to one after being out amid the cold, dark and cheerless world and its ways to know he has a real home to go to for rest. Home is spelled with four letters of the alphabet, but the word can never be defined or explained as it should be. The word home, sweet home is very sacred. Do you appreciate your good home and are you doing everything you can to keep it good? You can live a life that will keep it full to the brim with sunshine and happiness as time goes fleeting on. Says one, I should be glad to keep it good if I had such a home, but my home is sorrowful and no sunshine is therein. Ah, there are many, many things you can do to help bring a happy home there, in place of an unhappy and sad one. Be a radiant sunbeam yourself. Fill that dark home with bright smiles and you will soon see a decided change come to that home.

Then I paused in my pace and wondered, do I and all of God's children appreciate the fact as we should, that Jesus is preparing a heavenly home for us to enjoy after this life of service is over? Do you know we are on our way to that beautiful home not made with hands eternal in the heavens now? Jesus is preparing this home for all those who love him and keep his commandments. The door will be opened wide to each faithful pilgrim that has fought the fight as a good soldier at the battlefront and has served God in this present, sin-scarred world in the beauty of love and holiness.

Invite Jesus to live in your heart and home on earth and then when your life is ended and your soul is leaving this obstreperous world, should someone ask, "Where are you going?" you can look away with confidence to Jesus and say, "Praise God, I'm going home now," to live in that home whose builder and maker is God.

"I'm going home, I'm going home,
I'm going home to die no more,
To die no more, to die no more,
I'm going home to die no more."

FROM WALNUT GROVE, MISS.

Dear Brother Decell: Just a line from the Walnut Grove charge. Things are looking bright and I think we will have a good year on the charge. We are serving a good people, as loyal as has been our privilege to serve. We are trying to forget hard times and to do the work of the Kingdom. We have four real good Sunday schools, two Woman's Missionary Societies that are doing a fine work, and three Epworth Leagues with a membership of 113. We are praying for a real revival.

Pray for us,

E. M. ALLEN, P. C.

CENTREVILLE, MISS.

The first zone meeting of Zone 6, Vicksburg district, was held in Centreville, March 26, 1931, with the following representatives: Centreville 17, Liberty 3, Gloster 15, Woodville 7, Gibson 2.

The presence of Rev. Geo. P. McKeown and Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson added much to the inspiration of the program by helpful devotionals and talks.

The theme of this program was, "Forward With Our Lord in 1931." The need of steadfastness was presented by Mrs. Nettie Priest, zone leader.

Mrs. Whittington showed how we must go forward through deeper consecration and spiritual life, and Mrs. Ford through financial offerings known as our collections, and Mrs. Lowry suggested "How to Make the Pledge in Hard Times," which was with great faith, sacrificially and remembering the cause to which we give. Mrs. Roberts let us see the ways in which we could go forward in being a good officer; knowing our duties and carrying them out faithfully. She was followed by Mrs. Brown, who said, "Officers Need Love and Encouragement, not Criticism." Taking stock of our duties was ably discussed by Mrs. McKeown, who used our constitution and catechised each auxiliary much to the edification of all present. Mrs. T. B. Clifford gave a most inspiring talk on our duties as members of the W. M. S., stressing consecration of service.

Mrs. Cottrell, superintendent of publicity and editor of the Woman's Page, gave an inclusive forward step through the Woman's Missionary Society. She began by asking, "What is the Woman's Missionary Society? What does it mean to you?" She gave us a backward look over its very beginning and brought us up to the present in membership of over 300,000 in 12,000 auxiliaries, stating that our sisters across the sea have 795 auxiliaries with a membership of 17,585.

The next meeting will be held at Liberty.

CHANGE OF LIFE

"I used Cardui about sixteen years ago, and found it helpful," says Mrs. Ruth Scott, of Tuscumbia, Ala. "I also used it during change of life. I was very nervous and my back was weak. I did not sleep well at night, and was restless and very worn-out in daytime. I took Cardui at this time. It built me up and from then I have been well and strong." FB-6

LORMAN, MISS.

One of the very best zone meetings was held at Lorman, March 4, 1931, with a record breaking attendance of over 100, and a most splendid program, which evidenced preparation and originality. Mrs. Lyons, chairman, had the hearty co-operation of the following auxiliaries: McNair, Lorman, Greendale, Fayette, Mizpah, Natchez, Nebo and Washington. The following pastors were present and took part on the program: Revs. W. F. Baggett, W. W. Murray, Percy Vaughan and T. B. Cottrell.

Mrs. Kaiser having resigned, Mrs. Puffer was elected secretary for 1931.

The Officers' Training Class was conducted by Mrs. Cottrell, and many original ideas were advanced which will appear elsewhere. Each subject was ably discussed.

Washington auxiliary gave a playlet, "The First Church Missionary Society," which portrayed how little is accomplished if we fail to prepare our programs.

MISSIONARY BAND

While dozing beside my fire one day
An army of women seemed to pass
my way,
Each bearing a torch and a banner gay,
As they journeyed on the King's Highway.

Mrs. Sue Laugley was the first in line,
And her face bore no trace of Father
Time;
She was to lead this little band
While they traveled on to the promised land.

Rules and regulations meant little to them;
Debts were to be paid, and purses were slim,
So oyster suppers of various kinds
Were planned quite often by busy minds.

Rankin St. Church was new, you know,
And much was needed to make it go,
For workers were few and the harvest great,
And no one must loiter outside the gate.

Many faithful leaders have served so well,
And all their names I cannot tell.
For I entered the ranks along the way
And have not toiled in the heat of the day.

Ofttimes the road has been rough and
steep,
And some have paused to rest and some to weep.
Many have grown careless and untrue,
And left the climbing for others to do.

Mrs. Dorroh was a leader so bold,
And as she led us, we reached a goal
Sometimes far beyond our dreams,
While she gave bountifully of her means.

Brave Mrs. Avery, years ago,
Led so nobly through weal and woe,
We caught a vision of a greater church
And for a new site, soon began to search.

O, how we toiled for a few more years!
Sometimes with many doubts and fears,
While dear Mrs. Reddington, Armstead and Bruton, too,
Led the band onward with steps slow but sure.

Soon a new building came into view,
And O, how we toiled with you anew!
For the W. M. S. must do their share While burdens seemed most too heavy to bear.

Dear Mrs. Fazakerly, with always a smile
Has borne her lot bravely each step of the mile,
And quiet Miss Nellie we find in her place
Leading the music of the Church of Grace.

Some of our number sleep under the
the sod,
And today are serving in the Palace of God.
Yet their memory is fresh in our minds
each day
As we travel in the straight and narrow way.

Our present leader, Mrs. Rickman, so
dear,
Leads in a manner so firm and sincere
And the aid each day of this Christian Band
Is some day to reach the Promised Land.

A PLAN OF THE PROGRAM OF WORK

By Mrs. T. B. Cottrell

The success of our work depends upon a well prepared program based upon Prayer and Preparation—linked together; and the key words to this program should be adaptation, participation, and co-operation; adaptation to the program in Year Book; participation of every woman in the auxiliary; co-operation of all members in every plan of the work.

In all our planning we need more faith, more folks, more facts, and more funds. More faith in God, in people, in ourselves. Our faith in God is increased by prayer and daily Bible study. Our faith in people is had by loving rather than criticising. Quoting from Miss Conde: "Expect some one to rise to your ideal, and she'll do it." No woman can lead unless she loves. Faith in ourselves is often diminished when we refuse to perform duties required of us—such as accepting an office when elected or taking part on program. In our weakness, we should go in His strength, remembering that strength comes by obedience to God, to the laws of life, and service, the only worthwhile definition of life; the only way to serve God.

We need more folks—we must find them; bring them; win them; teach them; use them. After finding them we must bring them by personal invitation; win them through individual interest and teach them by giving in program work, facts of missions, which are the fingerprints of God mileposts along the road in God's kingdom; and use them by giving each one something to do.

More facts are gathered from the most splendid literature sent out from headquarters and other missionary periodicals. These should be presented in an attractive way which will bring information and inspiration. An informed woman is a transformed woman. Our literature, published at a cost of $20,000, is a great storehouse of knoweldge and if rightly used will lift our horizon and so broaden our vision that we shall see the needs of the world and increase our activities in hastening the coming of His kingdom.

More funds are needed to carry on the work already established, to repair and equip buildings, to enlarge our work and to take care of our missionaries, as they represent us on the fields. The financial chart shows through what channels the offerings go:

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Rev. J. M. Lewis, Louise, Miss., writes of a most successful Sunday School Day program given at Louise. This program was most impressive and its influence has aided the entire work of the church. We were glad to get this write-up of the Sunday School Day program. We feel if every church can get the information and inspiration from this program we will be able to move forward all along the line.

A letter from E. L. Walton, superintendent of Mount Zion Sunday school, Union charge, has this to say for his Missionary committee: "Our Missionary Committee is doing fine. The young people especially are responding to the committee to take active parts in each program. We had almost 100 per cent present last Sunday." We thank God for faithful workers who are doing what they can to build the Kingdom of God.

Letters of encouragement like the above put new life and heart into every worker of the board. With support from each church like the above case we would be assured that our work would carry on and those churches who are now asking for service, and should receive it, would be served. Testing times? Yes, but they are bringing a wealth of gold to the surface that has been hidden away in the hearts of the people.

We understand that May and June are school closing months, but are anxious that the Kingdom be not forgotten during these months. Can we not make an effort for missions right now that will make it possible for the program planned at last conference be carried through without sagging? If each Sunday school would hold a missionary program and take an offering and send it in, I believe that we would come out on top.

The Christian Education Magazine has been sent to the pastors of the Conference. In these magazines you will find the programs for College Day, May 31. Already I see that several places will be having school commencements on that day. Then, observe the day as soon afterwards as possible. If you can take an offering, send it in that we may aid worthy students in our colleges next year. If you know students that should go to our colleges next year send their names to Dr. D. M. Key, Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss.

Have we the faith to place the Kingdom of God first? This question is being asked often. Surely some churches are demonstrating that they have and also many individuals. God will honor all of us who do this.

Pray for the work and the workers.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The training school at West Point this week is being well attended by the local people. No other church is represented in the school. Rev. W. R. Lott and his workers had made fine preparation for the school and the spirit of the school is excellent.

Some improvements have recently been made on the Sunday school part of the West Point church that greatly facilitates the work of the Sunday school. The school is fully departmentalized and doing most excellent work. Brother Lott has organized the local church board of Christian education and it is functioning well. A church that is well housed and being led by a trained leadership cannot be defeated. It is a victorious church.

College Day will be observed the last Sunday in May. Begin now to make your plans to observe this important day. The new legislation makes it possible for the first time for the church schools and colleges to be presented regularly and effectively before the local churches. These schools are our institutions and let us do all that we can to give to the local congregations information concerning the fine work that is being done in these schools. Ample materials for a program may be found in the periodicals of the church. You are expected to take an offering that day and the offering will be used to help worthy students gain an education in our colleges.

The Young People's Work. During the training school at Grenada a course will be offered for all workers with young people. The course is "The Program and Organization of the Young People's Division of the Local Church." We want all the workers with youth from 12 to 24 years of age to be in this class. Rev. E. C. Rule of Pine Bluff, Ark., will be the teacher. Bro. Rule is a pastor and has had experience in doing the thing that he will teach. This should be a large class.

Institutes. An all-day institute will be held at Shaw, Friday, May 22. The meeting will open at 10 a. m. A good live program is being prepared and we want all the workers of the southern half of the Greenville district to be present.

We are expecting to have an all-day institute for the Greenwood district at Greenwood, Saturday May 23. The Epworth Leaguers will take part in these institutes.

Have you sent in your offering for Sunday School Day? Send it at once to the Board of Christian Education, Grenada, Miss.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Dear Young People: Things are happening so fast now that I am wondering how we can wait another whole month before we start journeying towards Mansfield. You have just received copies of the programs. You have seen for yourelves what courses are being offered and what plans await you. We have urged you to select your delegates early and prepare them for the best assemblies ever held. I have already heard of a large number of young people who plan to go. One young fellow is taking the janitor's job at the church so he can have the pay. Another is cutting grass. Another is saving that weekly allowance. I would not advise all of you to wait for your church to finance your way. Those who get the most out of life are the ones that put the most into it. If you can take care of your own expenses you'll not regret it at all. Of course, it is always fine for the fellow who is selected to represent his church, with expenses all paid in full. Anyway, we want you there. You'll be so glad you came.

Did I tell you about the fine time I had at Harmon about two weeks ago? The young folks in that church were so fine. After a jolly time at games we enjoyed a picnic lunch and then we talked over our League plans for the rest of the year. Rev. L. W. Smart is their pastor. I went with him to Pelican, where the next evening we had equally as fine a time with the young folks of that church.

Sunday, the 26th, I spent in Natchitoches. In the morning I had the pleasure of speaking to a large number of the College students, many of them being our Leaguers from every section of the State. That evening the young people of the church presented the pageant "All for Christ," in observance of Anniversary Day. It was most beautifully presented and acclaimed a success by those who witnessed it.

I enjoyed attending the Minden, Shreveport and Ruston district conferences. Many fine reports were given me concerning our young people throughout the conference.

The best news of recent date has been concerning our rally the past week end. I certainly enjoyed the two-day retreat we had at Bluff Creek. There were seventy-six registered young people and many visitors during the two days. A large number of these young people were from among the University students from First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge. Others came from Keener, Istrouma, Clinton, Jackson, Hammond and other places within the district. We had heaps of fun and the inspirational addresses brought us by the different speakers helped us, anew, to find our Christian quest, an interesting and thrilling experience. Many thanks are due those who made the camp a success.

The Alexandria district rally reports a large attendance in spite of the terrible rains. There were 125 present from every section of the district. The meeting was reported a grand success.

Luckily the rain did not penetrate all of Louisiana. Monroe district reports a great all-day meet at Little Creek, with more than 200 present and "no rain." If the other meetings over the Conference were all as well attended it means that we had about 1000 young people rallying on that afternoon, in interest of what? Assemblies. We are anxious to hear from Homer, Cotton Valley and other rallies.

Since publishing the last Bulletin that you folks received around the 5th, several more Anniversary Day Offerings have been sent in. If we wait LONG enough I think we'll get that one that you are still forgetting to forward to the treasurer. We don't like to keep the conversation on one subject for so song, but some people won't let you forget it. Please send in your offering before Anniversary Day of 1932. Now, you'll think I'm getting sassy, but we were a year getting in those of last year, honest. I was hoping we might make a new record this year.

Keep up your interest in the Assemblies, and get ready for the best time you ever had. You won't be disappointed.

Your co-worker,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

A new day has dawned for the Leaguers of the western section of the Baton Rouge District, for on January 16 the Hoyt M. Dobbs Union, named for our bishop, was organized, for which organization we are greatly indebted to our senior district secretary, Miss Lillie Mae McQuaid, of Baton Rouge.

The first meeting was held at Keener Memorial Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, with two Leagues represented and twenty-five present. Temporary officers were elected, holding office until May, when permanent officers will take their place. Those elected were as follows: President, Vance McLean, Keener Memorial;

This meeting was a big success and much interest was shown. The second meeting was held at Istrouma Church with three chapters represented and thirty-five present. A short devotional enjoyed by everyone was followed by the business session, after which refreshments were served to those present.

The third meeting, held at Zachary, showed a marked increase in interest, as sixty-six were present, with four chapters represented. At this meeting a joint retreat with the union in the western section of the district was decided upon, and held at the Bluff Creek Camp Grounds, May 2, 3.

After the business meeting we were entertained with refreshments, served by the Zachary Leaguers. We are striving to bring other Leagues into the Union and to do those things which become us as followers of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

About ninety young people of the Corinth district came together at New Albany last Saturday for an institute and a splendid institute it was. Miss Dorothy Smith is their leader. This was a very enthusiastic meeting and the young people seemed to be deeply interested in the work which the church has called them to do. The following pastors attended this meeting: Revs. E. S. Lewis, N. N. Maxey, L. M. James, C. A. Northington. We were glad to have these pastors present. We have observed that where the pastor is deeply interested in the young people's work the young people themselves are usually interested too.

Another district institute was held last Saturday. This was the Aberdeen district institute and it was held at Shannon. They had more than one hundred young people present and they had a very interesting program. Miss Zereda Green is secretary of that district and she is doing a fine work. The following pastors were present: Revs. A. Y. Brown, W. C. Galceran, Jr., W. N. Dodds, W. M. Hester, W. R. Hammontree, S. M. Butts, W. R. Goudelock, and the Hon. R. T. Hollingsworth. Brown Brown and his bride were just back from their honeymoon. Brother Hammontree said he was very much encouraged after Brother Brown succeeded in getting married.

It was our privilege to attend two district conferences on Christian education last week with Brother R. G. Lord and Miss Mary Skinner. These conferences were held at Amory and Corinth and were well attended. One thing that impressed us at these conferences was the keen interest which the people manifested in the new program of work. They were anxious to learn about it. Brother C. A. Northington of Ripley already has his church organized and working under the new plan and he says that his people are delighted with it. Brother A. T. McIlwain of Greenwood is just about ready to set up the organization in the young people's division of his church.

We have attended four district conferences in the interest of the young people's work and we received a very cordial reception at each conference. The presiding elders were kind enough to give us a place on the program. The pastors seemed to be very much interested in our young people's work and that was very gratifying of course.

Brother S. E. Ashmore, our Conference treasurer, has received about eighty dollars on the anniversary day offering thus far. If you have not sent your offering in yet it is not too late to do so. You may have observed the day but failed to send in the offering. Will you attend to that matter real soon?

The district secretaries are busy now telling their young people about the Assembly which is to be held June 15-19. They are going to be there from Dan to Bersheba. A splendid course has been planned and capable instructors have been secured. Some mighty fine young people will be there from the Sunday schools, from the Epworth leagues and from the young people's missionary societies. You will want to be there too. You can't afford to miss it. Come prepared to meet the first class on Monday afternoon.

About one hundred and fifty young people from six charges came together at Batesville last Sunday evening for a young people's rally. Tate Scott, district secretary of the Sardis district, presided over this meeting with ease and dignity. Tate is not only district secretary of the Sardis district, but be is also assistant superintendent of the Sunday school at Batesville.

It was our pleasure to speak to this fine group of young people. We had a fine spirit of worship in this service. It is such a challenge to a man to preach to young people. He realizes that he is speaking to growing life and that, in some measure at least, he is contributing to that growing life. Young people are so responsive that it causes a man to want to give them only the very best that he has.

While we were at Batesville it was our privilege to spend some time in the hospitable home of the pastor, Brother R. P. Neblett. He and Mrs. Neblett are very happy in the work at Batesville. Brother Neblett says that he has four sons and that Mrs. Neblett has five, he makes the fifth. All who know Brother Neblett will agree with him. He is still a boy.

We were glad to have with us in our rally at Batesville, Rev. W. M. Jones, pastor of the Sardis circuit, and Rev. J. M. Bradley, presiding elder of the Sardis district. Brother Bradley is deeply interested in the young people of his district. We appreciate his interest. Another dignitary in this meeting at Batesville was Dr. D. W. Whitaker of Sardis. We were also honored with the presence of Mrs. Dan Comfort of Como. Mrs. Comfort is district secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society in the Sardis district. Rev. C. T. Floyd of Sardis was represented in this meeting by the Speaker of his House, Mrs. Floyd. It was a pleasure to have all these distinguished visitors.

Wherever we go we find the people interested in our young people's assembly, Mrs. Dan Comfort told us that six young people from Como are planning to come. That was encouraging news. Sardis district is going to be well represented at the assembly this time. Remember the time is June 15-19. Your expenses at the assembly should not be more than eight dollars, possibly it will not cost you that much.

Yours sincerely,
WM. L. ROBINSON.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI

The Epworth Leagues of Corinth district, North Mississippi Conference, enjoyed a League Institute at New Albany, Miss., on Saturday, April 25. The New Albany leaguers extended a very cordial welcome and served the visitors a nice lunch in the church at the noon hour.

There were about ninety leaguers present representing sixteen leagues. The leaguers were most happy to have with them Rev. W. L. Robinson, Coffeeville, Miss., superintendent of young people's work, who was the chief feature of the day's program, and who rendered a splendid talk on "Jesus, the Pioneer."

The League presidents made brief reports regarding work of the chapters. The Potts Camp League outlined their splendid program of social service, which has already proved workable. The Booneville League told the institute of a fine piece of work they are doing along this same line.

Ralph Manning, of the Ingomar League, gave an enlightening talk on "The Standard of Efficiency." Flora Lee Craddock, of the Iuka League, gave an illustrated talk on the "Epworth League Symbols." Willard George, Lula Merle Waddey, and Kate Shaw furnished special music for the day.

Departmental discussion groups were held to inform the leaguers of the specific work of each department.

The policy of the district was worked over and definite plans made to carry it out, stressing that each league in the district make a pledge to missions and observe Anniversary Day. The leaguers also promised to organize a league in every pastoral charge in the district in the immediate future.

Announcement and follow-up talks of the "Young People's Assembly," June 15-19, Grenada College, were made, and the leaguers were urged to take advantage of this annual opportunity.

The district secretary feels that the meeting was a complete success and trusts that it will prove to be an aid in furthering the work in the district. She also appreciates those who helped make the day possible.

FROM BELEN, MISS.

Editor Advocate: The article on the first page of April 30 issue, is a terrible shock. That is a worshipful admiration of a common nature raised to an inexplicable degree. Gandhi admires the sermon on the Mount but does not repent of his sin. He is as far from the Kingdom as Africa was. I answer Mr. Rankins' statement. There is something in the [illegible] Hindoo or Hindu Indian mind temperament race or soil that is a great unknown force—please, not God-Force unless that means lost souls—of which we are yet deficient but does not seem to make for happiness here or hereafter. See Matt. 7:21-23. Where do we get authority in the Old or New Testament for sanctioning reverence and sympathy for false faiths? Please look up Ex. 23:13 and Deut. 13:3. That kind of charity is what my religion condemns. Rev. 18:14 sounds fearful and we are commanded to be separate from evil communications.

As for Gandhi lecturing us, why, God is as much his God as He is ours, Christ Jesus is as much his Saviour as He is ours and he is to blame for not using that monumental genius to carry the "good news" to others of his country—unless he is evil personified. Read the paragraph in this article starting with "How does he acquire this soul-force?" and then read Dr. Steele's article in the January [illegible] should be ignored in our religious work. Then in January you called the Baptists "fraternal" and I have studied to understand that statement. I was in the church across the street from my home last Sunday—no other preaching in town—and the Baptist preacher talked like an angel about "do this in remembrance of Me," and then said, "those who will not partake with us just remain quietly seated till services are over." The deacon with the elements passed rapidly by me—and other Methodists, with the plate—a positive declaration of contempt. Not giving us even dogs crumbs. If you can say that is fraternal, or that their refusal of our church letter is fraternal, or that we are not weakened by condoning and accepting intentional insults done in the name of the only Lord, why, then I'm all wrong. A leading Baptist woman, widow of a former member of the Legislature, has, since last Sunday, when she was at church participating in Baptist belief—or is it tradition which still makes the Word of God of no effect? asked me to join her in furnishing and eating club refreshments. I seem to be a respectable woman, but not a respectable Christian. It reminds of reversing our anti-racial ideas in some sort of way without any fellowship. The Presbyterians do not pat us on the back nor do they put us out of Christ's fold.

Respectfully,

MRS. S. C. STONE.

There May be Poison in YOUR Bowels!

STEP out tomorrow morning with the fresh buoyancy and briskness that comes from a clean intestinal tract. Syrup Pepsin—a doctor's prescription for the bowels—will help you do this. This compound of fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other pure ingredients will clean you out thoroughly—without griping, sickening or discomfort.

Poisons absorbed into the system form souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that, gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied bowel troubles for forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drugstores sell.

Dear Advocate: Brother E. D. Phillips, an honored superannuate of our Conference, wishes the brethren to know that he is "happy on the way," putting in full time, praising God and praying incessantly, and has prevailing faith for the coming of the Kingdom. For thirty-five years he has been preaching the gospel—twenty-five years in the South Georgia and Mississippi Conferences, and thirty years as a local preacher, five of these as a supply. Has never been out of a job and has been well paid and expects "all his needs to be supplied," according to Phillippians 4:19.

He will soon be eighty-three years young. Sister Phillips is eighty-five. They have lived together in happy union fifty-nine years; she has shared with him his joys and sorrows alike.

Neither of them are in robust health, but the Lord keeps them. He is at present with his daughter at Hattiesburg, and she at McNeil with their daughter at their home.

It is a great pleasure to visit Bro. Phillips and hear him recount his travels, his trials and triumphs in the Lord's work.

He has Heavenly light in this the evening time, and finds that "E'en down to old age all my people shall prove my sovereign's eternal unchangeable love. And when hoary hairs shall their temples adorn, like lambs they shall still in My bosom be born."

He sends love to all the brethren.

THE OTHER NINETY PER CENT

By C. [illegible] Smith

We hear much of tithing. What of the other 90 per cent? It seems that there are several dangers connected with the tithing doctrine, and of the preaching of it.

In the first place, tithing is an Old Testament doctrine and one that was never fully enforced. It originally seems to have been a levy to celebrate a patriotic feast but later became more conventional and finally dropped into disuse. Of course some of the Pharisees practiced it, but they were more meticulous about the mint and the cummin than the "weightier matters" of financial considerations. For the rank and file of Jews the tithe was no more than the priests and tax collectors could get out of them.

Charlemagne seems to have introduced the practice of tithing into the Christian church along with a lot of other hurtful innovations. For the church to emphasize an obsolete Old Testament doctrine in this modern time smacks of going backward, unless it is properly presented.

Another danger. Preaching tithing from the pulpit may give the wrong impression. By far the largest item in the church budget is the pastor's salary. For the pastor to insist on a tithe may give a little hint of preaching for the advantage of self.

What would happen if everybody tithed? The church would immediately become the most powerful institution on earth. I mean powerful materially. And with this power would come corruption. "Where the carcass is there the buzzards are gathered." It looks as if this fact alone would be enough to question the validity of tithing as a Christian doctrine.

The essence of the doctrine back of tithing is that of stewardship. Our emphasis on tithing is apt to make us neglect the real meaning of the doctrine. To stress bare tithing is to lay ourselves open to the danger of materialism. Jesus was concerned with 100 per cent, not merely 10 per cent. We are entrusted with certain "talents," or whatever we have, which includes our possessions. How we use them is what counts. The church is concerned with how money is made and spent, and not merely in collecting its toll of one-tenth.

The world is facing one of its worst depressions, and the church is suffering with the world. How much of the present unemployment and depression is due to the failure of the industrial system to put into practice the principles of Jesus? How much inequality is due to improper distribution of wealth, and how can the present system be changed to correct this inequality? This is the challenge to the modern church. To preach tithing is no solution.

If the church would preach that the fullness of the earth is the Lord's and that we must use it for the benefit of his creatures, not selfishly and individually, there would be no occasion to resurrect an ancient, meddling, dead and obsolete Jewish law.

BILIOUSNESS.

The Rev. J. J. Wisener, of Drakestown, Ga., says he has taken Black-Draught, when needed, since childhood, and he is past fifty years of age. "When I would get bilious," he says, "I would feel like shuffling along instead of walking. My feet felt too heavy to lift. I had such a dull, tired feeling, and I would feel dizzy and nauseated like I couldn't hold my head up. I found how much the Black-Draught helped me, and I took it. I quit having these bad spells, and find now I only have to take a few doses and I am good as new. Don't have to take much now. My health is good."

FROM BILOXI, MISS.

Dear Editor: We closed a Cokesbury Training School at North Biloxi Church last Friday, the 24th. Mr. O. C. Hull taught a class, using the book, "The Worker, His Life and Work." The attendance was much better than we expected and the interest was exceptionally fine. Bro. Hull was at his best. The spiritual results of the meeting were such that the comment of the people was to the effect that it was as good as a revival. Nine persons took the work for credit. We feel that the church and community were greatly benefited by the school. On Sunday the 19th at the beginning of the school we held a charge institute. The three churches of the charge, viz., Wesley Memorial, Epworth, and North Biloxi, came together for an all-day meeting. A basket dinner was served. Miss Laura White and the pastor assisted Brother Hull with the different discussion groups.

Friday, May 1, we begin a revival at Epworth Church. Rev. E. L. Ledbetter, our pastor at Pascagoula, will assist. Preparation is being made and we are expecting a great revival. Pray for us. The work is needy; the fields are white unto harvest.

GRENADA COLLEGE

Grenada College is maintained by the North Mississippi Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to promote sound scholarship together with thorough training for the many forms of Christian activities and for home making. Every graduate for the past [illegible] years has been a professed Christian and a number have entered upon full time Christian service. The college is represented by [illegible] alumnae in four mission fields of the Methodist Church: Mexico, Brazil, China and Japan. Several graduates have married ministers.

Among recent campus visitors who are taking an important part in the religious and educational world are Miss Martha [illegible], editorial assistant of the General Board of Education, Miss [illegible] Green, employed by the Presbyterian Sunday School Board of Texas, and Miss Katherine [illegible], for nine years teacher in Hiroshima Girls' School, now at home on furlough.

In proportion to the number of students enrolled, the Department of Bible and Religious Education is one of the largest in Southern Methodism. The same is true as to the number of teacher training credits with the General Sunday School Board.

Grenada College is a member of the Southern Association of Colleges for Women, of the Mississippi Association of Colleges and of the Methodist Educational Association. It maintains a regular four-year course leading to the B. A. degree and offers the best advantages in music, art, expression and home economics. Its campus, buildings and equipment are valued at [illegible] and its productive endowment is [illegible].

The graduating class of 1930 was the largest in the history of the school, numbering [illegible]. Notwithstanding crowded conditions in the teaching profession, [illegible] of these secured good positions as teachers. Three are pursuing graduate study in universities. One is in charge of Girl Scouts in Jefferson City, Missouri, and one is keeping house for her widowed mother. Grenada College graduates have always been in demand as teachers, more than [illegible] per cent of them having entered that profession.

Miss Mary Miller Murry, B.A. '30, is making honor grades as a graduate student in Northwestern University, Evanston, Ills., and expects to receive her master's degree in June, majoring in English. She is the fifth Grenada College alumna to receive this degree from Northwestern in the past five years. Mrs. W. H. Gardner (nee Katherine Bryson), B.A., '22, took graduate study in Edinburgh University, Scotland, 1929-30, where she made honor grades. She and her husband are now filling a pastoral charge at Thomaston, Ga.

Grenada College students do practice teaching in the city schools of Grenada. This year they have done a unique piece of practice work in making educational tests and measurements of students in the rural schools of Grenada County. They are able to follow up these tests and get accurate data on their grading from the teachers' records on work of the students.

The students of Grenada College have exceptional opportunity for development of personality and training in leadership. More than 50 per cent of them are officials in some organization—academic, social or religious. They conduct chapel once a week and each class has one special class program at chapel hour each month.

The students edit and publish "The Grenadian," monthly paper, and "Treasure Trove," the college annual. They manage the colleg Sunday school, have a student government organization and clubs in music, home economics, dramatics, French, Spanish, Latin and mathematics. Some of them assist in the library and aid teachers in grading papers. So complete is the training given that it is a saying among high school superintendents who have employed our alumnae that "Grenada College girls can do anything."

The cost at Grenada College is only $295 per year for board, laundry and tuition. The charge for music, art and expression is less than in most standard colleges.—J. R. C.

PROHIBITION AND UNEMPLOYMENT

Nothing has raised so great a storm of protest among the wets in recent months as our denial of their absurd claim that two million men would be employed in case of a repeal of prohibition.

Just prior to prohibition the liquor business endeavored to scare the country by proving that [illegible] men in the liquor business and allied trades would lose their jobs. How can a business that had only [illegible] jobs to lose when it stopped, offer two million jobs in case of a resumption of the business, particularly under the reduced program promised by the wet formula, "Of course, we do not want the old-fashioned saloon back again?"

Just prior to prohibition the census reported 62,920 men employed in the strictly manufacturing end of the liquor business. This was one per cent of the wage earners employed in all industries. Furthermore, there were fewer men and lower wages in the liquor industry, in comparison with money invested, than in any other business.

For example, for each million dollars invested in the liquor business required only 37 men. In every other leading industry from four to seven and a half times as many men were required, and the amount of raw materials used by liquor was insignificant in contrast to other industries.

When the saloons closed, a great stream of money flowed from the liquor industry with its few employees and small use of raw materials, to legitimate industries using tremendous supplies and employing many times the people in liquor manufacture. This phenomenon expanded the basic industries. Money in the form of increased wages went into more wage earners' pockets and the economic change occurred which definitely raised American living standards, gave us more and better homes, and kept our bank of savings at a high point throughout a world-wide depression in which the United States maintained itself at a much better level than any other country, particularly those countries with a large drink bill.

The probability is that an immediate repeal of prohibition in the course of a year would turn the course of American purchasing power from homes, home owning, home building, automobile buying, radio buying, clothing, food and education, so that there would be a business panic of severity and extent in contrast to which the present economic depression would be a minor experience.—National W. There is torture in sin, beware! A daily paper of a neighboring city carried, the other day, a story full of pathos and human tragedy. A young girl looking out from behind the county jail bars said: "Two years ago I was happy and didn't know it. I met ——— and was told about the life of the city. I came, and things went smoothly for awhile, but liquor and the fast life began to take its toll. I have sold my soul for a few shiny coins and pretty dresses, and now I am paying for my fun with torture and sleepless nights. It doesn't pay." There is an old Book, the morals of which some deride in this "new" day, but life witnesses to its truth. It says: "The way of the transgressor is hard." The world's best possession is the gospel of Him "Who is able to save unto the uttermost."

The world has become a community responsibility, regardless of whether we like it or not. At a meeting for Jewish relief in Europe, held in New York City recently, the intrepid Senator William E. Borah, Idaho, is reported as saying, "Durable peace must have as its foundation economic justice. All the armies and navies in the world cannot give us security with one-half of the world in economic distress. And our country cannot escape from this deep trough of depression and at the same time leave the balance of the human race behind." Concentrated selfishness and ignominious greed are brands that will set the world on fire, and the power of the gospel of Jesus Christ is necessary to quell their flame. The practice of the principles of Jesus will inaugurate a spiritual supremacy that makes "economic justice" real.

The Christian's work is never finished. Dr. Samuel Palmer Brooks, for 28 years president of Baylor University, a Baptist institution, at Waco, Texas, died on May 14. When physicians advised that but a few days of life remained he endeavored to affix his signature to diplomas for 429 students who are soon to graduate. His strength failed before he could finish the task. Dr. Brooks began his education after he was twenty-two years of age; and won degrees at Baylor and Yale. A long and honorable career closed with an unfinished task at hand. Only the Son of Man, the Saviour of the World, could look all history and eternity in the face and exclaim, "It is finished." How thankful the Christian should be that he works at a task that cannot be exhausted. "God has something better in view for us than that we should ever have nothing to do." Heb. 11:40.

SPOTS ON THE SUN

The sun, that great luminary which warms, lights, and rules our physical world, is flecked with dark spots. All of its white radiance cannot remove the dark spaces from the photosphere.

Edgar Allen Poe, a star of the first magnitude in the circle of American authors, has his dark spots. In some respects Poe has no equal. But the scintillations of his intellect, majesty of movement, and brilliance of creation, cannot conspire to remove the dark spaces. He is at once a guide and a warning. However, we shall never cease to be interested in intimate facts connected with the young genius who rested under the shadow of a Raven's wing. A letter was sold in New York last year that was written by Dr. J. J. Moran, a Baltimore physician who attended Poe in his last illness. The letter composed thirty years after Poe's death and addressed to C. H. Umer, Rockingham County, Virginia, was as follows:

"Poe was of fair skin, fine set of teeth, hair raven black and curly; weight, in health, about 140 pounds; height, five feet and ten inches.

"I regret that want of time will prevent my doing more than to give you a few brief sentences dropped from the lips of the poet, Poe, and a brief account of his dying words and burial. . . . . He died in my hands. He did not die from delirium tremens or mania, had no smell of liquor on his breath or person when received in the hospital of which I had sole charge. . . . . He was sent to the hospital about 10 a. m. and was found on a bench by the side of a large house. I paid the hackman who brought him and the nurse who attended him, and paid for his coffin; wife and lady friends made his shroud.

"In my attentions to him he said I was very kind and asked 'Where am I?' I answered in the hands of friends. He said: 'The best friend to me would be the man who would blow my brains out with a pistol. Wretch that I am, sir, when I behold my degradation, ruin, what I have suffered and lost and the misery I have brought upon others! I feel like I could sink through this bed into the lowermost abyss below, forsaken by God and man, an outcast from society.'

"After much more and answers to various questions, he said, 'doctor, I am dying,' to which I replied, I fear it is so, put your trust in your Saviour, there is mercy for you. He then said, 'Write to my mother, Mrs. Clemm, and say Eddie's no more.' I said, look to God for salvation."

How fortunate there was some one—the good physician—to whisper "there is mercy" and "look to God for salvation" into the ears of the dying Poe. Even unsurpassed powers of poetic genius could not withstand the ravages of sin, drink, and opium. How much brighter Poe's star would shine were it not for the spots. Though the Raven's wing shadows, the Crystal Christ can remove the darkness "as far as the east is from the west."

THE SALT OF EDUCATION

In writing of the small colleges the Literary Digest said, "The innumerable little colleges which exist at the cost of struggle, are the salt of education." The word small in connection with colleges is relative. There are hundreds of colleges in our country which have from two to eight hundred students enrolled and most, if not all, of them are "existing at the cost of struggle." Dr. William Lyon Phelps, Yale University, says: "The small college does work that cannot be done elsewhere, because it furnishes education to young men and women in the same locality who would grow up without it, for they cannot attend a distant university." And, "I regard their endowment an absolute necessity for the cause of education. I believe every dollar spent in assisting these small colleges to be a magnificent investment for the future manhood and womanhood and for the welfare of America."

Our colleges: Centenary, Grenada, Millsaps and Whitworth are in the class of "the salt of education" and are struggling to exist. It is neither possible nor desirable that all students attend the larger colleges and universities. This quartette of institutions within our three Conferences open the door of opportunity to young men and women who could never enter the way of life's best service did these colleges not stand and beckon them to come and "prepare to meet their God" in the morning and walk with Him through the heat and burden of the day toward a golden sunset.

We have had no communication regarding the financial outcome of the work of the session soon to close, but take it for granted that, under the circumstances, not much money has been cleared; most likely a deficit will be shown in a majority of the accounts. This should only call for renewed efforts on the part of the constituency to see that the colleges are enabled to continue the high service they have been rendering. Consecrated men are at the head of our colleges and experienced and faithful people constitute the several boards of trustees. Budgets will be balanced and the time is here for a solid line of support. These colleges do not belong to their presidents and trustees; they are the property of the more than two hundred thousand Methodists in Louisiana and Mississippi, and responsibility for their maintenance and operation rests upon each Methodist.

There are 203,000 members in our three conferences, and a conservative estimate gives forty thousand heads of families. If one-fourth of these would contribute $100 to an educational security fund, it would give an assurance and light a torch of hope for a generation to come. Our youth de-seriously, just then, in the devils that were supposed to be impeding their progress. Over the coffin was the usual covering of vivid coloring, and over all stretched a canopy of faded blue cloth. Here were no banners nor long line of mourners—only a middle-aged woman and a girl around whose head was a crown of twisted straw. On their faces not one sign of grief or loss.

This little procession saddened me as none of the few large ones I've seen have done. Doubtless it was just a girl or unloved woman over whom the necessary physical rites must be performed. Her place as wife or household drudge would quickly and easily be filled.

Another passing from this life of mystery to the greater mystery of the Beyond. None to mourn in hope or despair—only the grinning, chanting pall-bearers; the straw-crowned girl stooping to pick some gay bauble from the street; the rabble of street-children running behind; and, last of all, the grave-digger with his tools upon his back, as the procession disappeared around a curve in the dirty sunlit street.

NEW PLANS READY FOR YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

By John Q. Schisler

After months of careful study and work the staff of the General Board of Christian Education has worked out plans for the program and organization of the Young People's Division in the local church. The proposed plans are issued under the direction given by the General Board at its annual meeting on April 27. They are now in booklet form and available for distribution to local churches.

Two booklets have been prepared, one of which deals with the Young People's Division in the large church, "The Program and Organization of the Young People's Division in the Local Church," No. 200, and the other with the Young People's Division in the Small Church," No. 202. It is suggested that each pastor write at once for the booklet which is appropriate to the type of church he has.

Because of the enormous printing expense involved in publishing a vast quantity of material on Christian education in the local church it will be necessary for the General Board to make a small charge on orders for these booklets. The price is as follows: Single copies, 5 cents; one-half dozen copies 20 cents; one dozen copies 35 cents, one hundred copies $2, postpaid. One copy will be sent free of charge to every pastor who writes for it.

These are considered by the General Board of Christain Education to be very important booklets as they point the way to, the organization and program of the young people's work in the local church.

For these booklets, write: Young People's Division, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

THE THIRTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOARD OF FINANCE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH

By Luther E. Todd, Secretary

The Annual Meeting of the Board of Finance convened at the Missouri Athletic Club, St. Louis, Mo., April 27, 1931.

The following members were present: Bishop W. F. McMurry, Luther E. Todd, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, Bishop Sam R. Hay, Rev. W. L. Clark, Rev. B. R. Turnipseed, Rev. H. E. Draper, Rev. J. W. Mills, Rev. Clare Purcell, Rev. J. C. Glenn, Rev. O. T. Cooper, Mr. Will Stackhouse, Mr. J. C. Wood, Mr. W. G. Hardy, Mr. J. R. Domnick, Mr. G. W. Bright, Senator X. P. Wilfley, Mr. James E. Lambeth, Dr. S. P. Cresap, Dr. C. W. Tadlock, and Mr. J. W. Fristoe.

Letters and telegrams regretting their inability to attend the meeting were received from the following members: Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, Rev. T. A. Smoot, Mr. T. L. James and Mr. D. H. Hall.

This was the board's thirteenth annual meeting since its organization in 1918. The secretary's report revealed many interesting facts about the work, and those that are of special interest to the Church are as follows:

1.—Superannuate Endowment:

It was shown that the total Superannuate Endowment in the hands of the Board as of March 31, 1931, was $6,095,148.12, as compared with $5,928,186.01 a year ago. Of this total Superannuate Endowment in hand on March 31, 1931, $3,749,626.51 is in the General Fund and $2,345,521.61 is in the Conference funds handled by the board. Of the total endowment in the hands of the board, as stated above, the sum of $378,518 is subject to annuity.

2.—Endowment Income:

For the fiscal year which ended March 31, 1931, the board was able to collect 5.24 per cent income on the total endowment capital for the time it was in hand, which amounted to $313,891.82, or $13,771.18 less than the amount collected on income collected for the previous year. Considering the terrible business depression of 1930, which so severly affected all financial institutions, this showing of the board is very gratifying.

On July 1, 1931, the board will be able to distribute direct to the claimants, on the basis of service years, and from the income of the General Fund, the sum of $187,796.06—as compared with $187,534.35 so distributed a year ago, or July 1, 1930. However, there are 100 more claimants to receive the 1931 distribution than received the 1930 distribution.

The board will also be able to send to the Annual Conferences at their next meetings, for distribution among their claimants, on the basis of necessity, the sum of $126,464—as compared with $130,769.69 sent to the Annual Conferences at their last annual meetings. This decrease is due to the board having to reduce the interest rate on Conference Funds from 6 per cent to 5 and one-half per cent.

Thus the board is distributing this year for the claimants' support a grand total of $314,260.06—as compared with the grand total distributed a year ago of $318,304.04—a decrease of only $4,403.98 for this year notwithstanding the financial storm which the board weathered in 1930. This showing should be very satisfying to the Church.

3.—Annual Conference Endowment:

So far as the board has been able to obtain information on the subject, the Annual Conferences now have a total endowment of $4,307,743.61. Of this sum $691,077 represents the reported value of 180 superannuate homes owned by the Conferences; $1,270,125 in various securities handled by local trustees of the Conferences. And $2,345,521.61 is in trust with the General Board of Finance.

The value of the Publishing House, or net income from which should go to the Annual Conferences yearly for the support of the claimants, is not included in the figures given above. Furthermore, it is doubtless true that the Annual Conferences have some other assets equivalent to endowment which the board is not able to report for lack of definite information concerning these holdings.

4—The Investment Reserve Fund:

The board is striving to build up a Reserve Fund out of concessions of a fractional per cent allowed to institutions such as ours in the purchase of securities and out of earnings on investments in excess of what is expected. This Reserve Fund will be used as necessity may arise to protect the endowment capital against any losses which may come from investments that do not work out as expected. This fund was started April 20, 1924, and it has grown steadily. At the close of the fiscal year, March 31, 1931, it amounted to a total of $47,181.28.

5.—Superannuate Endowment Bequests:

The secretary's report revealed that the board has evidence in its files that bequests have been made to Superannuate Endowment amounting to an estimated total value of more than $[illegible]00,000. This item is not included in the report given hereinabove of the total endowment actually in hand. It is, however, an item of interest. Furthermore, it should be noted that these bequests are those which the board has knowledge of. It is undoubtedly true that a great many other bequests have been made to this sacred cause which have not yet been reported to the board. In this connection, it should be stated that the board received during the past year from bequests a total of $59,367.58.

6.—Contributions on the Annuity Plan:

During the year the board received $21,607.96 from contributions on the annuity plan, and $250 was released from annuity obligations by death of one annuitant. The annuity bond of the board of Finance appeals strongly to those who wish to contribute to a worthy cause in this way. The entire resources of the board are back of these bonds, thus making them an absolutely safe investment.

7.—Collections on the General Conference Assessment:

The board has a General Conference annual assessment of $191,000 on the whole Church. Of this amount, there was collected during the Conference year a total of $103,021.97, as compared with $125,535.08 collected from this source the previous year.

8.—Total Support of the Claimants:

The secretary reported that there are now 2804 claimants—1166 being superannuates, and 1638 being widows of preachers, which is an increase of 99 claimants over the total number reported last year. The total amount paid these claimants from all sources during the year which closed March 31, 1931, was $881,254—a decrease of $990 as compared with what was paid them from all sources last year.

The average per capita amount, from all sources paid the claimants for their support for the year just closed was $410 for superannuates and $247 for widows of preachers.

9.—Expenses of the Board:

The expenses of the board proper for the year ended March 31, 1931, amounted to $27,675.89, which is $1,457.01 more than the previous year.

The expenses for the year of the Special Effort Department of the board amounted to $33,280.07, which is $11,796.22 less than the previous year.

II.—CONCERNING THE SPECIAL EFFORT FOR SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT

The secretary's report brought to light many interesting facts concerning this movement, as follows:

1.—Status of the Conferences on Quota Payments:

It was revealed that in seven years, or to March 31, 1931, all of the Annual Conferences had paid on Special Effort quotas the total sum of $4,341,094.53. The Florida Conference continued to have the distinction of being first in the per cent paid of the total quota, having paid 60.47 per cent; the West Texas Conference is second, having paid 56.6 per cent of its total quota; and the Baltimore Conference is third, having paid 55.18 per cent of its total quota. The entire table showing the standing of the Conferences on quota payments will be published at an early date in the Christian Advocate (Nashville).

It was shown that at the close of the fiscal year, March 31, 1931, 557 charges were on the grand honor roll as having paid, or more than paid, the original total quota.

2.—Future Plans for the Spelcal Effort Movement:

The board earnestly trusts that the work of adjusting the charges unpaid quota balances will proceed rapidly until an adjustment report is received from every charge. After that, it is

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT NEWS

The presiding elder of the district has just set in motion the plan of visitation by his boosters which is calculated to assist greatly in the raising of the finances of the circuits throughout our territory. Speakers, both lay and minister, will go with Brother Cain to these circuits and put on a real helpful program that will be an inspiration to the membership and ought to boost the morale as well as the collections at every point visited by these brethren.

The district conference will meet this year at the Bluff Creek Camp Grounds. These old grounds have been purchased by the Baton Rouge District for the use of the district at large, and plans are being made to further its usefulness as a place of meeting for all district-wide gatherings and for the institutes and camps of the young people. A splendid program of improvement is now under way at the camp in re-arranging and rebuilding the cottages in preparation for the district conference, on June 4-5, and the camp meeting and young people's meeting which follow. The district conference will be entertained by a very novel arrangement. The various charges of the district will furnish certain items on the menu and the delegates will bring their blankets for use on the cots provided by the camp management. Ye scribe looketh forward to the meeting with pleasure.

The camp meeting for this year will be conducted by Rev. Theodore Copeland, D.D., of Dallas, Texas. The meeting last year was the first under the management of the district and report has it that it was about the best attended meeting in the history of the grounds. The meeting is scheduled for July 19-26.

The presiding elder, Rev. L. W. Cain, has also made an itinerary throughout the district for a number of the station preachers who are giving from one to two weeks of their time in revival work in order to assist their brethren who are serving circuits with a number of churches needing revival services. One meeting—at Pearl River—has already been enterprised under this plan. We feel that this work will be of assistance to the churches involved in that no financial burden will be involved and certainly the preachers who are doing this work will find it a great blessing to their own hearts.

CHAS. E. McLEAN, Scribe.

TO THE PASTORS, SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS AND EPWORTH LEAGUE PRESIDENTS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Your Board of Christian Education which was organized at our last Annual Conference is charged by the General Conference legislation with heavy responsibilities. The work of the three boards is now clearing through the office of one board. Much new work must be done.

Our employed staff is efficient, and very busy. These workers have assumed these new and added duties without a murmur. Appropriations for the year's work and also expense accounts were cut to the minimum as the year's work was launched. This added work and added expense your board must assume with only the income expected from the Conference apportionments together with the income from Sunday school day and League anniversary day.

The date suggested for League anniversary day has passed. Even so, there is no good reason why any church where there is a League cannot observe the day. The young people are usually ready to enter into any effort that may be suggested by their leaders. The pageant, "All for Christ," as suggested through the Era, is very helpful and will furnish a fine Sunday evening service for an entire congregation. Have an anniversary day program, take an offering and send it to Rev. J. C. Chambers.

It is not always possible to have Sunday school day on the day suggested in the Discipline. The offering that is asked for on Sunday school day is the only special offering asked from the local Sunday school. The program suggested for the day is excellent. It gives information about the work of the new Board of Christian Education, and shows the value in working toward the unified programs in the local church. Any Sunday school that meets regularly can observe Sunday school day. If you fail to do it then you fail in having a part in making a Sunday school possible in neglected under-privileged sections.

You will greatly embarrass your board, you will handicap our employed staff, you will deprive many groups of little children and young people of having Christian training, many vacation church schools and Cokesbury schools will be lost if we fail to do this. Every Sunday school in the Mississippi Conference will make this offering for the work if it is suggested, planned and properly urged by superintendents and pastor.

Brethren, this may seem a small thing, but we are due our Christian education program this cooperation. We also owe it to our people to lead them into this avenue of helpfulness. We owe this, the least we can do, to the little children of Mississippi.

Let us stay by until every Sunday school and Epworth League in every charge has had the opportunity to share in our own task.

J. L. CARTER,
Member, Board of Christian Education.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES

We are today confronted with a situation without parallel or precedent.

The farms have yielded their fruits abundantly. The manufacturers' store rooms are filled with his products. Our very Government has filled the granaries with wheat (the most essential of all the staples to human life, a measure tending to relieve the productive farmer). Our banks stand overloaded with money; our national wealth never greater in all its history. It may be said truly that the "Seven years of plenty" are at hand.

Since time immemorial the economic cry has been: More production and more efficient methods of farming. Means and ways of mass production in the manufacture of the essentials necessary to present day life, and machinery that will relieve the burden of the labor necessary for its manufacture. A monetary system to relieve in times of stress the drain of currency on the banks.

All of these demands are now attained and have come to pass.

And now a greater question has arisen.

True, we have found the means of greater farm production and our granaries are filled to overflowing; but it is equally true that in the face of this condition, thousands face starvation!

True, we have found the means of mass production; machinery perfected in great detail to lighten the burden of labor, in consequence of which the store houses are filled to overflowing; it is also equally true that by reason of this condition, millions lack the means of possessing these essentials.

True, a system of monetary distribution has been inaugurated to legitimate banking by our government; precluding any monetary shortage. Yet, in the face of this condition, millions today are penniless and destitute.

What a paradoxical situation confronting man to-day. Swallowed by his own abundance; a castaway on his ship of plenty; marooned on his island of gold. Truly an epoch-making period. A true rebuke to the vanity and unsymmetry of the mind of man; afflicted by his very aims attained!

What may the answer be to this momentous question? Less production of the food supply? Or the curtailment in the manufacturing of the essentials necessary? Or the recalling of monies now in circulation? Since the abundance of these blessings seems to be the evil, these suggestions would seem logical in solution. I say no to any and all of these remedies, for each in turn has failed.

There is an old and ancient book; it antedates the history of man. The condition that this day confronts us, in this book has been foretold. On this great book I take my stand, and I know that it unfolds the remedy for every human need.

The present-day condition should be heralded as a warning. Man in this age of great achievements, so filled with ego and vain glory, stands alienated from the truths of his existence; and that the remedy for all ailments may be had by the strict adherence to the teachings of this the Book of Ages.

Despite the ingenuity of man, and the great scientific achievements of the present age, can any genius boast a parallel to feats performed by the humble NAZERENE? He healed all manner of disease without recourse to knife or drug. He stilled the tempest and defied the laws of gravity by walking on the waves. He fed the multitude from seeming nothing; and above all, His greatest feat, He raised the dead!

Can any mortal, despite the vain glory of his ego, boast of one achievement so easily manifested by the only true Philosopher?

Machinery, economic systems, electricity and radio, are but mortal dreams, and not applicable to the eternal question.

A call of battle to the rescue of the cross, the true solution!

Presented to me by a friend,
G. A. PERKINS.

CONCERNING REV. U. S. PITTS

Dear Brother Decell: May I express my pleasure over the announcement from the office of the assembly dean that Rev. U. S. Pitts, pastor of McCoy Memorial Church, Birmingham, will be the platform speaker at our Epworth League assembly this year? Brother Pitts is in every way fitted for this task, being a speaker of ability with a splendid preparation for the responsibility of speaking to young people. Younger himself than any platform speaker we have had before, educated at Birmingham-Southern and Emory, student pastor at the University of Alabama for some years, pastor in small towns and suburban churches, and now pastor in his own city of Birmingham of the church named for Bishop McCoy, which ministers to the students of Birmingham-Southern, he is eminently fitted for the task for which he has been chosen. I bespeak tor him a cordial and brotherly hearing.

TO THE PASTORS AND DIRECTORS OF THE GOLDEN CROSS OF THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

If you will notice the minutes of the Mississippi Conference for last year you will see that the entire district paid only $85 to the Golden Cross, which was a falling off of $39 from the year before. I trust that the roll call will be put on in every church in the district this year. At least distribute the envelopes and the leaflets in every church and give the people a chance to contribute to this most worthy cause. If this has not already been done, do it right away. Send the roll-call money to W. D. Davis, Conference treasurer, Jackson, Miss. I would appreciate it if the pastors will report to me when the call is completed, reporting the number enrolled and the amount sent to Mr. Davis. My address is 2607 C Street, Meridian, Miss.

IS GOD THE FATHER OF ALL MEN?

By Rev. R. H. Bamburg

In replying to Rev. John W. Ramsey's article which appeared in the issue of the New Orleans Advocate respectively January 15, April 9 and April 16. In due respect to him, I must admit they are well freighted with insinuation, sarcasm and misapplication. Void of "all mental gymnastics and mushy sentimentalism." Free from logic, true interpretation, citation and clarification. Well seasoned with extensive reading, and wonderfully decorated with beautiful phrases and well rounded-out sentences. And sweetened with spiritual syllogisms. This manner of division reminds me of the old darkey who was discussing homiletics. and said: "Breadern, I divides my text in three divisions. Firstly, I tells 'em what I am gwine tell 'em. Secondly, I tells 'em. Thirdly, I tells 'em what I have told 'em." His fourthly should be, Bamburg has shown me that I have not told anything.

If it were not for the seriousness of the subject under consideration, the universal Fatherhood of God and the universal brotherhood of man, I would lay my pen down and giggle, and root. But I think this a very vital question, one in which we should not get our "feet tangled in our whiskers."

So in justice to the cause I must arise with the sword of the Spirit and chase this false delusion back into its midnight cover from whence it cometh. Deigratia I will do this. In replying to my article which appears in the issue of the New Orleans Advocate of Feb. 26, he says: "Both Rev. S. W. Miller and Rev. R. H. Bamburg miss the mark, having based their replys upon misinterpretation and misapplication of the Scripture, and both evaded most of my Biblical quotations in support of my contention that God is not the Father of all men. I did not discover that Brother Ramsey quoted but one Scripture quotation other than from the sermon on the Mount. Namely John 8:42. As I contended that Jesus did preach to the whole multitude in his sermon on the mount, and as I also showed that by sin they served this connection with the Father and became children of the devil in a Spiritual sense, both in the case of the children and prodical son. It does not occur to me that I evaded a single Scripture quotation. He also says "I challenge these brethren to show that in every instance where our Lord spoke of God as 'Your Father,' He was not addressing His disciples, and I also challenge one or both of them to cite one single instance where our Lord called God the Father of any man or men other than His disciples. If either will point out one single passage which may be so interpreted, leaving no reasonable doubt, as the lawyers say, I shall surrender the question without further argument.". If he will do this he will surrender the question. I think he should do so through this paper. Now as to the sermon on the Mount where he said "Your Father" more than any other time. There can be no "reasosable doubt" that he was speaking to the multitude. It begins: "And seeing the multitudes He went up into a mountain; (and the period does not appear till the close of the third verse. There is a colon at the beginning and close of the phrase) "and when He was set His disciples came unto Him:" which shows the multitude was the subject, and his disciples were incidentally put in. Showing beyond a doubt the multitude is the antecedent of the pronoun "them;" that its especial relativity is the multitude, just as it is in Mark 3:32-33. "And the multitude sat about Him and they said unto Him, Behold thy mother and thy brethren without seek for thee. And He answered 'them' saying, etc." Would Brother Ramsey tell us "mother" and "brethren" is the antecedent to the pronoun "them?"

Now substitute "them" for its antecedent "multitude" and read. "And seeing the multitudes, He went up into a mountain: and when he was set, His disciples came unto him: And He opened his mouth, and taught the 'multitudes' saying, Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." There you are. You have it in its true meaning.

To make it more clear, if it be possible, "And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, "the people" were astounded at His doctrine for he taught "them." There can be no reasonable doubt that the antecedent of the pronoun "them" is the "people." Mat. 7:28-29, which of course is the multitude. I wonder if this can soak through Brother Ramsey's noggen. Does he forget his grammar? I should say he does. They that live in glass houses should not throw stones. This is an unpardonable blunder that a child in the seventh grade should not make. To say nothing of an extensive reading knowledge. Evidently he did not read to the close of the sermon on the Mount else he would have known that Matthew positively said he was teaching the people and not the disciples only, and would not have made this public display of his lack of knowledge of the Scriptures. Again referring to his challenge. We cite the quotation above as one instance. No guessing here.

Instance two: "Then spake Jesus to the multitude, and to His disciples, saying, etc." Matt. 23:1. "And call no man your father upon the earth: for one is 'your Father' which is in heaven." Same chapter, verse 9: There can be no reasonable or unreasonable doubt. I shall refer to this scripture later. Furthermore, "And the multitude sat about Him. And they said unto Him, Behold thy mother and thy brethren without seek for thee. And He answered them, saying, Who is my mother, or my brethren? And He looked round about on them and said, Behold my mother and my brethren." Matt. 3:32-24.

Here Jesus not only established universal brotherhood of man, which, of course, includes the universal Fatherhood of God, but the universal brotherhood of man as well. Brother Ramsey seems to have had the "nervine" of his well polished ears grated upon, if you please, by my using "universal Fatherhood of the whole human family." He had hinted at the universal Fatherhood of God: as relative to the birds, flowers, etc. I was trying to entirely eliminate this thought from my article. Perhaps I should have been more particular in choosing my words.

I will use "universal Fatherhood of God" so that the brother will not have to stretch his imagination too far to catch my meaning. I purposely left down a few gaps in my first article hoping Brother Ramsey would step in, and as he did, I will close the gap, lock the gate and thro-o-o! the KEY away.

He seems to want to land his extensive reading of the works of theological writers, but of course seems to disagree with all of them. Perhaps if he had read more of the Scripture, he would have known that Jesus was speaking to the multitude, as I have just shown when he spoke of God as "Your Father," and saved the embarrassment that is bound to be his as I call his attention to these unpardonable blunders.

In his reference to the status of the children, he concludes by saying, "Children of God and children of the devil." I cannot conceive of such a dual relationship. Will he tell us how it can be done? Let me say here with all the powers that are within me that Jesus did teach this dual parentage, which no man can doubt. Will Brother Ramsey permit me to call his attention to the Scriptures again, which in his extensive reading he has overlooked? "Then spake Jesus to the multitude and to his disciples." Matt. 23:1 "And call no man your father upon the earth: for one is 'your Father' which is in heaven." Matt. 23:9. "Woe unto you scribes and pharisees hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the 'child of hell' than 'yourselves'." Matt. 23:15. They were children of the heavenly "Father," and children of hell at the same time. So said Jesus. All spoken at the same time, to the same multitude; all recorded in the same chapter. Here Jesus wielded the sword with mighty force. And bear with me if I seem to be too tautological and severe, for I am trying to wield the sword in His name.

So let me say I wender what is the matter with a man that has education enough to read the English language. And with an open Bible before him And these Scriptures so very, very plain, to make the following statement: "It is true the multitude heard the discourse, but it is not said that it was addressed to them." Jan. 15th issue. Are we to suppose that Jesus intended to teach that God is the Father of hypocrites, as he is of his disciples? The only answer is an emphatic NO." Same issue. "I also challenge one or both of them to cite a single instance where our Lord called God the Father of any man or men other than His disciples." issue April 9. If you do not recall the foregone citations in this article you should lay this paper down and get your Bible and read Matt. 23:1-33, every word. Also Matt. 7:28-29.

Does Brother Ramsey mean to tell me that Jesus applied all these epithets to his "disciples only?" I cannot conceive of a minister of the Gospel making such a tremendous blunder. Does he dare differ with the Holy Scriptures?

Should I say "Paul, thou art beside thyself: much learning doth make thee mad?" He tries, though vainly, to destroy the weight of my contention that the parable of the prodigal son taught universal Fatherhood of God. Also the universal brotherhood of man, and correctly states, I think, "The central truth of this particular parable being in justification of our Lord's association with publicans and sinners." The central truth he was showing just why he associated with the publicans and sinners. That God was still their Father and they were still God's sons; that they had sinned and severed. I use the word severed—their connection with the heavenly Father, and joined themselves to another citizen; and that the Father would rejoice upon their return. I fail to see that it teaches anything else. He says. "It may be that I am lacking in mental capacity, but I shall have to confess my inability to see the point in the reference of Brother Bamburg and Miller. Adam and Eve, unless they intend to base the Fatherhood of God upon the act or fact of creation." When at the close of my article I had plainly stated the five points upon which I based the universal Fatherhood of God, one being the atonement which Brother Ramsey had admitted, it does oocur to me that he with his extensive reading experience would have the mental capacity to see that I referred to Adam to show that God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul. Gen. 2:7. May I call Brother Ramsey's mind to the fact that Adam was living and breathing his natural breath as the other things created by God were when this was done? Gen. 1:25-30. That our soul which is something different to the air we breathe and call our breath is the breath of life—eternal life, came out of God, begotten of God? God is the Father of the soul of man. And that Adam's children were not only children of Adam and Eve, but children of God as well. Gen 4:1, Gen. 4:25, Gen. 3.20. I have the Fatherhood of God not merely upon the act or fact of creation, but that our souls come from God, clear on back to the first man, Adam. We are children of God in our natural make-up, if Brother Ramsey will permit the expression, and so is every human being. This fact was made very clear by Luke in giving the genealogy of Jesus. It begins, "And Jesusu himself began to be about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph, which was the son of Helide," and ends, "which was the son of Enos, which was the son of Seth, which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God." Luke 3:23-38. There! There! it does seem that if Brother Ramsey had have known that Adam was called the son of God, he would not have been so badly nonplussed when I referred to Adam in discussing the Fatherhood of God. One of the gaps closed.

SUNSHINE AND SHADOW

Joy is often tinged with sadness,
There is a thorn with every rose,
Tho' the face be wreathed with gladness
The aching heart nobody knows.

Every sunbeam has its shadow,
Every soul its joy and woe,
The summer brings its roses
Winter comes with ice and snow.

Thus we tread life's rugged pathway,
Sometimes smiling, often weeping,
But our tears will change to rainbows
If we are in our Father's keeping.

Let us then press bravely onward,
Helping others on the way,
'Til our night of clouds and darkness
Fades into the perfect day.

WASHINGTON'S LOVE FOR HIS MOTHER STRONG AND LASTING

The nearness of "Mother's Day" with all of its tender significance to each individual turns the thoughts also to the great men of the world in history, and the tribute of love and honor the world owes to the mothers who guided their uncertain steps through childhood and youth and brought them to fine upstanding manhood.

Of all the mothers of America we owe unfailing homage to the memory of Mary Hall Washington, the mother of our great national hero for the sterling qualities she implanted in her son, according to the Division of Information and Publication of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission. Together they gave to the world a beautiful example of filial love and respect. While life lasted he gave his mother loving homage, respected her wishes, obeyed her commands, and did his best to gratify her requests. She shared his triumphs, his troubles and his disappointments. To the honors he gained her comment was: "George deserves well of his country; he was always a good boy."

Mother Wins Tribute

No more beautiful picture can be found, in the annals of history, than is presented by the Peace Ball of Fredericksburg, Va., which General Washington attended with his frail and aging mother on his arm, garbed in her rich but simple black silk gown. Although she had never participated in the brilliant social functions of the courts of Europe, nor even the lesser gayeties of the large cities of America, she received the salutations of the elegant French generals with a poise and queenly dignity. Her composure and quiet reserve brought forth the tribute: "If such are the matrons of America, well may she boast of illustrious sons." So deep an impression did this Colonial Virginia mother make upon the distinguised Marquin de Lafayette, that before departing for his own land, he journeyed again to Fredericksburg, to bid her farewell and seek her blessing.

In the hour when General Washington received the news of his election to the Presidency of the new nation he had founded, he felt that he could not depart for New York to be inducted into office as its first President, until he had seen his mother. He traveled 60 miles to share his new honor with her, and to bid her farewell and get her blessing. He found her feeble in body and wracked with pain but clear minded and full of loving thoughts for him. This was indeed farewell, as her death occurred four months later, August 25, 1789, and at a time when her son, the President, was himself ill and unable to attend her funeral. She was laid to rest with all of the honors her towns-people could confer. Members of Congress wore the conventional mourning and orations and addresses sounded her virtues and her praise for many days.

Grave Long Unmarked

Her grave was long unmarked by any memorial. In the National Gazette of Washington, D. C.; May 13, 1826, was published a moving tribute to her life and her death by George Washington Parke Custis. This aroused much attention and interest and a project was started in Virginia to erect a monument over her grave, but it was not until seven years later that any actual progress was made and then it was through the interest of Silas M. Burroughs, of New York, who offered to erect a monument to her memory at his own personal expense. As a result of his interest on May 1, 1833, amid most elaborate ceremonies, the cornerstone was laid with Andrew Jackson, President of the United States, officiating. Members of the Cabinet, of Congress and many distinguished citizens journeyed to Fredericksburg to participate. The President made an appropriate address as he deposited the inscribed plate on the stone and at the conclusion of the services a poem written for the occasion was read by the author, Mrs. Lydia H. Sigourney.

The base of the monument was completed and the stone selected for the obelisk that was to complete the design when Mr. Burroughs suffered financial reverses and went to China to recuperate them. He died abroad and before he had accomplished his mission. For more than 50 years thereafter, Mary Washington's grave with its unfinished and deteriorating monument was neglected.

Then the women of Fredericksburg arose in their united strength of purpose and interested the women of the land far and wide and saved the spot where the mother of Washington lay, from auction sale. They set to work to erect to her memory a monument that should last to the end of time and in 1894, the little city on the Rappahannock was again thronged with thousands of people who came to do honor to the mother of Washington, in the dedication of the monument erected to her memory by the women of America — the first monument by women to a woman.

Erect New Monument

President Grover Cleveland, Vice President Adlai Stevenson, with the cabinet and members of Congress, the Governor of Virginia and his staff were part of the long procession which marched to the music of the Marine Band.

An address by the President, by the mayor, the governor, and an oration by the gifted Senator Daniel, with solemn Masonic ceremonies comprised the ceremonies that has given to the world, the nation, Fredericksburg, the family and to the women of America the right to point with pride at the shaft 50 feet high similar to the one in the National Capital that honors George Washington, which in its simplicity of white marble, expresses the simplicity, unwavering uprightness and Christian purity and fortitude of "Mary, the Mother of Washington."—Bicentennial News.

WHEN ERNEST DISOBEYED

"Here, children," said mother early one morning, "I want you to go to the store over at Hillville and buy the groceries I have marked on the slip of paper. And be sure to get back by eleven o'clock," she added with a mysterious twnkle in her eyes.

"Yes, mother," said Violet. "May Ernest go too? You know the big snake we saw in the woods the last time we went to the store? We may need brother along to protect us."

"Yes, Ernest can go with you, only be sure to get back by eleven o'clock."

It was about a mile to the grocery store. Arriving there, the children purchased the groceries mother wished and also some candy with the dime she had given them. Then they started for home.

"I wonder if we will have time to pick some raspberries," suggested Violet. "I saw such nice ones on our way over."

"Sure, loads of time," replied Ernest with the air of one who knew a great deal.

So they stepped into the wood, and all picked berries until they had several quarts.

As they were again starting for home John Groves happened by with his big dog. He was whistling and seemed to be having a great time.

"Come on, Erny," he said, "let's go down to the creek and have a swim."

"No," replied Ernest. "We must get home by eleven, and we won't have time."

"Sure we will. My dad's coming down this way with the team, and he said he would stop at the creek and get me at 10:30. You just come along, and you'll have plenty of time."

"No, brother, don't go," pleaded Violet.

Ernest was undecided. He looked first at John and then at his sister. Then he said: "You walk slowly home, Violet, and I'll go with John, have a swim and then catch up with you before you reach home."

"O, but Erny," pleaded Violet, "you know mother said we are to be back by eleven o'clock, and, besides, I might meet a snake!"

"There are no snakes at this time of the year," said John Groves scornfully. "Come on, Erny."

Ernest followed with hesitation. He felt rather bad and that he should not have left his sister. But the creek did look so cool and inviting.

The boys had a fine swim. They were splashing and have a splendid time when suddenly Ernest realized that a great length of time had passed since he left his sister. "O, John, it surely must be after 10:30 by now!" he cried.

"O, I don't think so! Father will most likely be here any minute now."

But father did not come.

The boys presently started to walk home. Meeting a man on the road, they inquired what time it was.

"Ten minutes to eleven," he replied.

When Ernest reached home, it was just noon. His mother prepared lunch, and they sat down. Mother was very quiet. Ernest wished she would talk.

After lunch mother asked him to go into the garden and finish weeding.

But he could stand the silence no longer. "Where is Violet, mother?" he asked.

"She has gone to town with your Uncle James. They are going to ths Zoo this afternoon. Uncle James said he had to leave promptly at eleven o'clock, but that if you and Violet were ready he would come and take you along in his new automobile. That was why I wanted you to be sure to be back by eleven."

"But, mother, why didn't you tell me," asked Ernest.

"Your uncle wanted to surprise you, so I promised not to tell you until he drove up in his car."

Ernest wended his way slowly and thoughtfully into the garden, where he set about the task of weeding.

The Zoo! That was the one place Ernest had been wanting to visit for a long, long while.

But Ernest was a good boy, and the thing that caused a little ache in his heart was that he had disobeyed his mother.

As he weeded the garden beds a little bird sat up in a tree near by and seemed to say with his merry voice: "Al-ways o-bey! Al-ways o-bey!"

Ernest looked up at the little bird, and then with a smile he said aloud: "All right, birdie, I guess it's the best thing to do."—Primary Weekly.

MISSIONARY BRIEFLET

The Bible classes of the Union Methodist Seminary, Seoul, Korea, and the Woman's Methodist Seminary are now conducted together. There are about an equal number of men and women students. Rev. J. L. Gerdine, who has the chair of Bible at the Union Methodist Seminary, says: "Under the constitution of the Korean Methodist Church the women are now in line for ordination and, theoretically at least, for appointment to charges. However, their main field is Bible teaching and evangelistic work."

THE SALT OF EDUCATION

serve it and we owe it to the future to not let our educational salt lose its savor.

O. H. Benson, who has done considerable research in country-life problems, says: "In the last eight years $17,000,000,000 have been given for philanthropy, and practically every dollar has been to the advantage of the cities and to the disadvantage of the country and the country village." Louisiana and Mississippi are "country" States, and have reaped comparatively little benefit from the seventeen billion dollars distributed. It would be magnanimous of some wealthy benefactor to promote our educational security, and the wealthier ones should contribute now, but the needs are too urgent to permit postponement and the privileges are too inspiring for any of our people to be denied the opportunity of investing "where thieves do not break through nor steal."

The Church pioneered in public education and now must persist, at all costs, in Christian education. Centenary, Grenada, and Whitworth need endowment, Millsaps needs a girls' dormitory; and these clamorous needs should not go unheeded. Certainly, today is no time to be querulous, but the interest of our colleges should be sympathetically promoted and small or large investments, according to ability, should be made "for the future manhood and womanhood and for the welfare of America."

HISTORY OF CENTENARY COLLEGE

Mr. Curtis B. Haley, editor of the "General Minutes and Yearbook" of the Methodist Church, in writing to his personal friend, Dr. Angie Smith, made the following statement: "During the last ten days I have had the pleasure of reading Dr. William Hamilton Nelson's story about the history of Centenary College, entitled, "A Burning Torch and Flaming Fire." You may well believe me when I tell you that it is certainly very interesting, illuminating, and rare and racy. If there is a Methodist and sympathetic collegian in Louisiana and Mississippi who does not read the book, it will be because he has no idea concerning its contents."

In order to encourage advance sales of the book, a reduction in cost has been made at $1.75 for those who send in their subscriptions before June 1.

The book will be ready for delivery about June 1. Place your order now with Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, Shreveport, La.

BISHOP DU BOSE'S "BIBLE AND THE AGES" RECEIVES DESERVED RECOGNITION

Bishop H. M. Du Bose has been informed by the publishers, Messrs, Fleming H. Revell & Co., that his new book, "The Bible and the Ages," has met with a cordial acceptance in England. A London firm has placed a large order for the same. The bishop has been much gratified with the circulation of this volume in America.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE CHANGED

We received the following telegram from Rev. L. W. Cain, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District: "Please announce Baton Rouge District Conference will be held at Ponchatoula, June 4-5 instead of Bluff Creek Camp Ground, as first announced. Let pastors and delegates attending write Rev. J. H. Bowdon in advance."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

Rev. R. Y. A. Carlisle is doing very effective work on the Cedar Bluff charge this year. The brethren will be glad to know that Brother Carlisle is making this progress after several years inactivity on account of ill health.

Rev. W. N. Dodds does not dodge any of the responsibilities involved in the pastorate of a growing church. We are glad that he did not overlook the Advocate, for he sent us nine subscriptions with cash accompanying.

Rev. J. D. Fomby and Mr. and Mrs. John R. Nash attended the revival held by Bishop Arthur J. Moore at the First Methodist Church in Shreveport. Brother Fomby believes good preaching is worth going a long distance to hear.

The Epworth Leagues of Seashore District held an efficiency institute at the Seashore Methodist Assembly Grounds, Biloxi, on Sunday afternoon and evening, May 10. The Assembly grounds afford ideal conveniences for meetings of this kind.

Rev. K. W. Dodson preached the sermon at the twenty-eighth annual commencement exercises of the Arcadia High School on Sunday, May 10. There was a large attendance and the sermon of the morning is reported to have been an appropriate and forceful message.

Harmon L. Smith, Ellisville, Miss., is a local preacher in our church and is available for assisting in revivals as an evangelistic singer and young peoples' worker. Brother Smith has had six years' experience in this work and has rendered effective service.

Rev. J. E. Lawhon assisted in a meeting at Prairie, Miss., recently. The people report that the largest congregation ever seen in the Methodist church heard the sermons. Rev. W. C. Galceran, Jr., is the pastor. Seven united with the church, all adults.

Rev. J. F. Waltman, pastor, Merryville, La., makes the Advoate office merry by sending in fourteen subscriptions with a check to cover. We thank Brother Waltman and trust that the Advocate will supplement his faithful efforts in carrying the good news of the gospel to his people.

Mrs. John W. Boone, president of the Woman's Missionary Society, Brookhaven, Miss., was presented with a life membership at a recent meeting of that auxiliary. Mrs. W. H. Frizell presented the membership in well chosen words of appreciation for the long and useful services of Mrs. Boone.

Mr. James H. Skewes, editor and publisher of the Meridian Star, was elected governor of the Louisiana-Mississippi Rotary district. Mr. Skewes is an active member of the St. Paul's Episcopal Church at Meridian. We congratulate the district upon the election of such a forward-looking and worthy citizen.

Rev. J. M. Bradley, the capable presiding elder of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, says that his district has achieved good success the first half of the Conference year. The people are faithful and the outlook is encouraging. We thank Brother Bradley for his interest in the Advocate.

Rev. Clyde E. Lewis, a local preacher who is a member of the Pearl River Avenue Church, McComb, Miss., would be glad to assist in revival meetings in the capacity of song leader or young peoples' worker. He is a young man of splendid Christian character and will render good services where the community affords.

The General Board of Church Extension at its annual meeting approved loans and gifts to the amount of $542,319. Because of reduced receipts the board was forced to decline additional requests amounting to $811,858. It is to be hoped that a larger per cent will be paid on the benevolences this year than for several years.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham and his good people of the Grenada, Miss., District are to be congratulated upon being the first (and only district up until this time) to send in their full quota of 100 new cash subscriptions to the Advocate. We appreciate the splendid work done in the Grenada district.

Mrs. N. B. Aiken, 1229 Clifton Street, Conway, Ark., sends in her renewal, though the time does not expirt until June. She says: "I would not miss a single issue of the Advocate, for it seems indispensable and it brings us news from our old home in Mississippi." We trust that the paper may continue to be a love letter from home for many years.

Mrs. A. P. Holt, 507 Tejon Street, Colorado Springs, Colo., renews her subscription to the Advocate and writes: "I look forward from week to week to the coming of the Advocate which keeps me in touch with the old home Conferences. After ten years' absence, Louisiana is still home, and all that concerns our Methodists interests us."

The editor preached the commencement sermon at Tylertown, Miss., for the High School on Sunday morning, May 10. This was a promising class of twenty-four young women and eighteen young men. It was his pleasure to enjoy the hospitality in the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Grover C. Ball and Rev. and Mrs. W. B. Alsworth.

Mrs. P. A. Cooper, Quitman, Miss., in renewing her subscription, said: "I am eighty-five years old and have taken the Advocate for forty-one years and cannot do without the paper. I love my church and all of God's people." We thank Sister Cooper and pray that the Advocate may continue to afford her pleasure and inspiration for years to come.

Mississippi mourns the death of one of her most deserving citizens and competent officials, Hon. W. J. Buck, who was clerk of the Supreme Court. He was a loyal member of the Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, and a meek man who possessed the confidence of thousands of his fellow citizens. Brother L. P. Brown, Meridian, is an uncle of the deceased officer.

Rev. Marlin H. McCormack, Jr., pastor at Eden and Bentonia, Miss., is to do the preaching in a revival meeting at Bentonia. He is to be assisted by Captain Leonard Van Egmond, Vicksburg, who will direct the music. Rev. John L. Sutton supplied the pulpit at the first service on Sunday morning, May 17, since the pastor was preaching the commencement sermon at Louise.

We acknowledge with appreciation the invitation from the curators and faculty of Central College, Fayette, Mo., to be present at the inauguration of Dr. Robt. H. Ruff, president of the College, on Monday, May 25. Dr. Ruff, a Mississippian, has won the hearts of Missouri Methodists and we congratulate him and the Conferences upon the splendid work he is doing as president of that great institution.

Many will be grieved to learn that Dr. J. M. Catching, Hazlehurst, Miss., died Monday. May 18. He was a good physician, patriotic citizen, devoted member of the Methodist Church at Hazlehurst, of which he had been an official member for years. The funeral services were held at Hazlehurst on Tuesday by his pastor, Rev. Del Longgrear, who was assisted by the other ministers of the town.

Mrs. Alice Boland Hearn, Meridian, has been interested in Christian literature, which is not surprising since her father was a Methodist preacher. In 1874 her father had a volume of the Sunday School Visitor bound for his children, and in 1914 Mrs. Hearn had a volume bound for her grandchildren. One of the ways to provide the best for the future of our children is to provide them with good literature.

Mrs. B. L. Chambers, who recently passed to her reward at Lena, Mississippi, left an assuring testimony of a triumphant entrance into the Father's House. She was 87 years of age and had been a reader of the Advocate for many years. Her last words to her loved ones were: "Do all the good you can in all the ways you can, and be sure to stand by your pastor and your Church." We thank Mrs. C. O. Langford for words of appreciation for the Advocate and her renewal.

Rev. J. T. Abney, the faithful pastor at Lauderdale and Electric Mills, Miss., in sending in seven subscriptions, writes: "We are kept busy in the work and I feel we are making progress on all lines. Our revival at Electric Mills, in which we were assisted by Rev. J. L. Neill, of Vicksburg, and Rev. A. P. Stephens, Kosciusko, was a great success." A revival will promote progress along all lines of the church endeavor and we rejoice in the good meeting that has come to Brother Abney and his people.

Mrs. Florence Travis, Liberty, Miss., who has been a friend and subscriber to the Advocate for many years, in renewing her subscription said: "I have read the Advocate most all my life and it would be hard to do without it. I find it such a storehouse of good rich things on which to feed my mind and soul." The printed page is doing more than some think to carry on the great interests of the Kingdom. We pray that Mrs. Travis may continue to receive the Advocate for years to come.

The Jefferson Street Church, Natchez, Miss., has lost through death two of its choicest members, Mrs. B. B. Parham, who was born in New Orleans in 1861, and whose father, Andrew Ferguson Haynes, was killed in the Battle of Shiloh, was buried from the Jefferson Street Church Saturday afternoon, May 2. On the next afternoon from the same church was buried Mrs. E. J. Meath, who was born in Antrim County, Ireland, in 1857. Both had hosts of relatives and friends, and the funerals were largely attended.

We received the following telegram from Rev. J. H. Felts, presiding elder, Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, on the close of his recent district conference, which was held at Booneville: "Large attendance upon district conference; pastors report 105 new subscriptions to the Advocate since February 24. Sorry editor could not attend." We congratulate the versatile presiding elder and pastors upon their good district conference and are grateful for their interest in the Advocate.

Rev. B. H. Williams, pastor at Osyka, Miss., and the local Baptist pastor, Rev. S. A. Williams, joined with their people in a union revival services at Osyka, April 26-May 3. The following did the preaching: Revs. B. H. and S. A. Williams, Osyka; Revs. Carter, Mayfield, and Gill, Baptist ministers of McComb, and Revs. Hunt and Guice, Methodist and Presbyterian pastors from McComb. Capt. Van Egmond of Vicksburg led the singing. We have not learned of the results of this unique revival, but feel assured that it was a helpful and refreshing season.

Henry Riser, Chicago radio artist, broadcast over station KRMD Sunday afternoon from 12 to 1 o'clock. Mr. Riser is a singer, composer, organist and pianist, and has been giving radio performances for three years in Chicago. Among Mr. Riser's religious compositions are "The Lost Sheep," "In Paradise," "Gird on His Armor," "Oh, Wonderful Gift," "Come On to Jesus," "He Heard My Plea," and others. His best known work is "The Lost Sheep," which has been acclaimed by music critics as a masterpiece in the sacred song world. Mr. Riser was born at Ruston, La.

The Adams church Community Home-Coming Day is an annual event that is looked forward to by many families in Mississippi. This year the day will be celebrated on Sunday, May 31. Dr. C. W. Crisler, pastor at Brookhaven, will deliver the sermon and Hon. Forest B. Jackson, an attorney of Jackson, Miss., will deliver the afternoon address. Mrs. Maggie Flowers Ewing, Wesson, will have charge of the music. The Adams church is one of the historic churches of Mississippi Methodism, and we trust that this day will prove of great benefit to the church and community.

PROTECTION
AGAINST OLD AGE

Mrs. J. H. Hinton, daughter of the late J. J. White, died at her home in McComb, Miss., Tuesday, April 28. Mrs. Hinton was an elect lady of grace and refinement. She was a faithful member of our Centenary Church at McComb. The children who survive are: Mrs. Irene Ainsworth, Helena, Ark., Mrs. B. H. Steen, Shreveport, La., H. H. Hinton, Baton Rouge, La., and J. W. Hinton, McComb. Hon. H. L. White, Columbia, Miss., is a half-brother. Rev. B. M. Hunt, pastor, conducted the funeral services. We extend sympathy to the sorrowing ones.

The Sunday School at Shannon, Miss., celebrated its Golden Jubilee on April 26 with a historical program arranged by Mrs. T. C. Lauderdale and superintendent J. D. Stringer and pastor, Rev. A. Y. Brown. Rev. John Redus, a local preacher, was the first superintendent and served from 1881 to 1901. The charter members present on the fiftieth anniversary were: Oscar Vaughan, John Vaughan, Mrs. Bettie Vaughan James, Miss Rena Rhodes, Merle Miller, and Mrs. Wardie Miller Lauderdale. It was an inspiring occasion and the School started off on its last half of a century with grateful memories and enlarged vision.

Rev. J. O. Haines, general evangelist, is assisting the pastor and his people in a revival at Bonhomie, Miss., which is on the charge constituting churches of the W. S. F. Tatum Lumber Co., of Hattiesburg. Special trains are run without cost to those who wish to attend. The Church building at Bonbommie was destroyed by fire last year and was immediately rebuilt by the Tatum Lumber Co. Brother Scott, of Milan, Tennessee, is leading the music and Prof. C. L. Stewart, principal of the public school and superintendent of the Sunday School, is cooperating in every way. This is Brother Haines' eighth year in the Camps and much good is being accomplished.

Dr. Theodore Copeland is now closing his second week in the meeting at Norcross, where he is assisting our pastor, Rev. J. J. Copelan. Great congregations are greeting his eloquent messages. By invitation of our presiding bishop, Bishop John M. Moore, Dr. Copeland attended our Georgia Conferences at their last sessions. At that time, he was introduced to our Conference bodies and by our bishop commended to the good-will of the brethren. Having filled such pulpits as St. Luke, Columbus, Ga.; Rayne Memorial, New Orleans, etc., his varied experiences peculiarly fit Dr. Copeland for his evangelistic service. Fortunate is the pastor, therefore, who has this resourceful soul-winner in his pulpit.—Wesleyan Advocate.

A friend sent us a church bulletin published by the pastor, Rev. James M. Lewis, Louise, Miss., in which he carried the following vigorous paragraph: "It is as necessary for parents to give their children good literature to read as it is to give then substantial food to eat. The Advocate is real, genuine, pure literature and spiritual food. We would all look with horror upon anyone who would willingly starve his child to death by depriving him of food for the body, yet we think nothing of it when we starve his soul and mind by depriving him of Christian literature. Hard times of no hard times, it is our duty to give our children literary and spiritual food. The New Orleans Christian Advocate is only one dollar and fifty cents per year."

The First Methodist Church, Union, Miss., of which Rev. J. L. Carter is pastor, witnessed an inspiring sight the morning of April 26, when 500 persons crowded into the auditorium to attend a union Bible class taught by Mr. Guy W. Green, layman of Kansas City, who was holding a meeting in the First Presbyterian Church. Rev. Mr. Carter and his people co-operated heartily with the Presbyterians in their effort, and he handled the music for their meeting. The Bible class was attended by everyone, regardless of denomination, and was the largest that ever has assembled in east central Mississippi. On the morning of May 3 the Methodist church received twelve new members, almost all of whom came by confession of faith.

June 1, we will need every possible new and renewal subscription. Help your Advocate now!

WILLIAM JARVIS OURY

Judge John P. Marshall, everybody's friend, especially interested in and helpful to young men, was for three-quarters of a century a force for righteousness in Carroll County, Miss., and during a half century was a county officer of unquestioned probity and fidelity. During the closing years of the War between the States his daughter Sue was married to T. H. Oury, for more than twenty-five years proprietor and publisher of The Conservative. The four sons and beautiful daughter of that devoted couple and I became faithful friends, though thoy were younger than I. For years Jarvis and I were closely associated in business; during a part of that time he was an inmate of my home. His ready wit and sparkling humor were as cheering as the flowers in spring, and gave added zest to the social life of the community. In business he was the soul of honor and integrity—diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord. His unusual popularity was attested by the many young men in Carroll County who bear his honored name, sons of parents who dealt over the counter with this good man. After years of success in Carrollton he engaged in business in Itta Bena, where the same noble characteristics marked his career, and bound to him fast friends as with hoops of steel. In Sunday school and church he was as devoted as he was in business.

His marriage to Miss Estelle Reeves was an unusually happy one. Their home was a center wherein reigned and from which was radiated good cheer and wholesome religion. Through the years that home stood for the best. Carrollton and Itta Bena are better because of the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Oury.

Some years ago his robust health began to fail. The last week in April he was stricken with a fatal malady, which skilled physicians, trained nurses, a loving family and sympathetic friends failed to relieve. After two weeks of suffering and weakness and failing strength, on Friday, May 8, 1931, the weary wheels ceased to revolve, and he fell on sleep. His worth and popularity were attested by the large concourse of friends who attended his obsequies in Itta Bena, bringing loads of flowers, words of sympathy and wealth of love to comfort the heart-broken wife and weeping son and daughter. May family and friends emulate his spirit and follow his example, and meet him in the home on high.

THOMAS JEFFERSON O'QUIN, AN APPRECIATION

In the death of THOMAS JEFFERSON O'QUIN at his home near Red Lick, Miss., on April 8, 1931, Methodism in Jefferson County lost one of its most faithful followers and a dependable Christian gentleman. Bro. O'Quin was born in this same community December 17, 1860, and had spent his life near the place of his birth. He was married to Miss Mary Ellen Stephens on January 12, 1881, and for fifty years these two had lived a happy and devoted life together, setting before the world a Christian home as an attainable ideal. Thirteen children came to bless this home, most of whom grew to manhood and womanhood, ten of whom still live as useful and active men and women. Funeral services were held in Mispah Church on Wednesday morning, April 9, conducted by his pastor, Rev. W. F. Baggett of Lorman, assisted by Rev. J. L. Neill of Vicksburg, a former pastor, and Rev. T. B. Cottrell of Fayette. Burial was in the Fayette cemetery. Brother O'Quin had been almost a lifelong member of Mispah Church, had been a faithful attendant at its services, and had served many years as steward and superintendent of the Sunday school, holding the office of trustee at the time of his death. Every pastor of the charge had been a welcome visitor in his home and a multitude of friends had come under the influence of his life and had been made better thereby. His devoted wife and sons and daughters may await with confidence the joyous reunion in a better world. Those of us who knew him, even for a few short years, can bear a glad and willing testimony to the fact that he was worthy of a place in that long list of sainted Christian laymen who made Jefferson County Methodism such a vital factor in the lives of the people in that section.

MRS. MARY ALFORD ELLIS

MARY ALFORD, wife of J. R. Ellis, was born in Brandon, November 2, 1855, and died at her home in Mt. Olive, February 28, 1931. She was the daughter of Cincinnatus Alford of Fannin. Her people were loyal Methodists. Miss Mary was converted and joined the church when a young girl. The writer was converted at the same altar, the same night, and joined the church at Fannin the same day. On November 10, 1875, near Fannin, in Rankin County, Miss Mary and Mr. J. R. Ellis were happily married, and lived together, sharing each other's joys and sorrows, for fifty-five years. She was active in the Master's vineyard and no service for her Lord was ever irksome. She was district secretary of the Hattiesburg district Woman's Home Mission Society for several years. While secretary of this district, she made a contribution to the Wesley House at Biloxi to establish a day nursery. The nursery still bears the name, "Mary Ellis Nursery." The opportunities for service while in this office afforded her more pleasure than any other work ever did, and in her old age the memories of those days of service were very precious. She is survived by her aged husband, who has passed his eightieth milestone, three nieces, Mrs. Maggie Brown of Jackson; Myrtle, wife of Rev. T. H. Sells, our pastor at Carthage; Mrs. Kathrine Hemphill of California; two nephews, Ernest Alford of Canton and Tom Watt Alford of Birmingham. The funeral services were held in the Mt. Olive Methodist Church, and were conducted by her pastor, Rev. M. M. Black, assisted by the writer. She was tenderly laid away in the Mt. Olive Cemetery.

"Friend after friend departs.
Who hath not lost a friend?
There is no union here of hearts,
That finds not here an end;
Were this frail world our final rest
Living or dying none were blest."

GETTING MY "WANT TO" FIXED

By Rusticus

A preacher some years ago said that he drank as much whiskey, used as much tobacco, gambled as much, cursed as much, danced as much as he wanted to, but that he thanked God that "seventeen years ago I had my 'Want to' fixed up by the power of Almighty God."

Meetings of various kinds that are being held, set up meetings, institutes, district conferences, at all of these and from the anniversary days, the Sunday school days, and so on, and from all the "Connectional" men, we hear one song, and the title of that song is "We Need the Money," all of which we most humbly admit, and also that we are able to pay it if we "want to."

Some seem to think that the giving of money will lead to a great revival of religion; others seem to believe that if we had a real revival of religion the money as well as other things would be forthcoming, because our people had had their "want to" fixed.

A country church paid for all purposes $91, a great revival came the next year and continued in their church, and at the end of the year they had paid $350; it continued and the second year saw them pay $750, and they planned for the next year to furnish a house for the pastor, take every Sunday instead of once a month and to pay $1200 with other assessments that might be levied. What made the difference? They had no new folks, but had their "Want to" fixed, and under the tactful leadership of their pastor they were led—not driven—to do the things that needed to be done, and do it gladly, willingly.

I do not doubt for one moment that our people called Methodists have ample money to do what they "Want to" do. Perhaps not all of them, but a sufficient number, to pay into the treasury of the church twice the amount that is now paid in.

Somo will respond through pride, some when they are informed. But I should like to have someone who knows tell me how many ever took up all the duties and obligations of the Christian life—whatever they may be—just because they were informed, or because they had pride.

Men spend money for what they "Want to," tobacco, whiskey, luxuries, amusements, church, etc.

"They first gave their own selves to the Lord," and when this happens today, the church will have all the money it needs and these others less; then we will have "Kingdom Extension" in earnest. May God speed the day.

RUSTON DISTRICT MEETING, APRIL 23, 1931

District meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Ruston district was held at Hodge, April 23, with Mrs. Carolyn Dawson, district secretary, presiding. Devotional was given by Mrs. Lucille Garrett of Wesley. The secretary called the roll with the following adult auxiliaries responding with delegates and reports: Arcadia, Bernice, Farmerville, Gibsland, Homer, Hodge, Haynesville, Jonesboro, Marion, Ruston and Wesley. Children's oraganizations: Arcadia, Gibsland, Haynesville, Jonesboro, Ruston, Marion and Downsville, with a total of 84 present.

Zone leaders were asked to make reports of their work. Mrs. J. C. Baker of Ruston and Mrs. R. H. Brown (former zone leader) also of Ruston, told of the work of Zone No. 2, mentioning in particular the progress made by Salem auxiliary. Mrs. Baker also spoke her appreciation in regard to the organization of the woman's work.

Mrs. Staples of Marion, representing Zone 3, gave an account of her work among the organizations of her zone. No one was present to represent Zone 4, but the chairman spoke commendably of the plans and efforts of Mrs. W. A. Gray, of Summerfield, who leads this zone.

In absence of Mrs. S. Rowe, of Gibsland, Mrs. K. W. Dodson of Arcadia gave expressions as to the accomplishments of the work in Zone 5. Zone 6 and its developments were given by the leader, Mrs. H. F. Lewis of Hodge.

Awards for Council and Conference recommendations were presented as follows: Arcadia and Summerfield were awarded certificates for outstanding work in Christian Social Relations; Arcadia, Jonesboro, Haynesville and Homer, certificates for Mission Study; Zones 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 were each presented with badges of honor for reaching 75 points of Zone Standard of Excellence.

"Teach Me to Pray," was a wonderful message in song presented very sweetly by Mrs. Clark Rankin of Hodge. Rev. George Fox, pastor, was introduced and made announcements concerning the noon hour.

CARDUI
Helps Women to Health

In bringing our quiet hour message, Mrs. W. R. Whitaker of Farmerville read extracts from similar messages given by Dr. Henry T. Hodgkin at Council recently held at Memphis. Dr. Hodgkin made a plea for the Church to be more concerned about its Faith, its Hope, its Joy and its discipline, or at least our attitude to Jesus. As a Bible lesson, Mrs. Whitaker read the 46th Psalm, speaking from the 10th verse, "Be still and know that I am God." In her appeal she said we should be more concerned as to our manner of concentration and should strive to concentrate more on things eternal. As women, we are not wanting in organization, but if we stand we must be filled with the Spirit, so we must quench our spiritual thirst at the fountain of God's love by doing as Dr. Fowler has said, "We must go deeper before we can go further."

The noon hour was a delightful time of feasting and fellowship. A long table out under the lovely trees spread with plenty for all, and fit for the gods, was enjoyed to the fullest.

Afternoon session opened by singing "More like the Master." Members from the Bernice auxiliary were recognized at this time. Rev. Harvey B. Hysell of Gibsland read precious truths to us from 1 Cor. 13th chapter and last verse of 12th chapter. He emphasized the importance of possessing divine love. His earnest assertions vindicated that love embraces all Christian ideals. Mrs. Ad. Thompson of Ruston contributed so much to this love thought by singing "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go."

Memorial service was held by Mrs. E. L. Walker of Ruston. Lovely bunches of sweet peas were placed in a beautiful basket of green ferns in memory of these our loved ones who have passed on, leaving the torch to us to carry on—Mrs. E. H. Fisher and Mrs. Lelia Collinsworth of Arcadia, Mrs. M. O. Brown of Haynesville, Mrs. Lynus Dawson of Homer, Mrs. Mattie Landers of Marion. Mrs. Edna Dickards of Ruston. Mrs. Dawson said that these are not dead but sleeping, resting in the arms of Jesus, and requested that these flowers symbolic of so much, be carried to another who is resting, resting from recent serious operations, and presented with our love to our beloved former Conference president, Mrs. V. H. Spinks of Ruston, whose work still lives and goes on through us.

An offertory with Rev. Mr. Townsend of Farmerville at the piano, with a collection of $9.70 was made at this time.

A school of instruction for the new work was held. Always zealous for the work to go forward, Mrs. Dawson gave suggestions and instructions along our plan of work and study. In doing this she brought to us a financial statement given on blackboard showing that we are failing as missionary women in so much that our amount spent for local work exceeds all that given for home and foreign combined through our dues, pledge, Week of Prayer, Scarritt and scholarships. Our apportionment for Mt. Sequoyah is $150.10, which amount is one-eighth for each district. Suggestions for raising this amount was discussed.

It was suggested that this district assume a life membership, the first district life membership to be listed is hoped, and same to be placed in honor of our former Conference president.

It was also pleasing to note that Ruston district again led in publicity, and Mrs. Dawson added that we should make our aim no less in all divisions for this year. She brought to view a letter of value, contents of which were a 10 and two 5-dollar bills with enclosed request that same was a contribution to China, but no clue as to who was the contributor. This gift will be given through the Haynesville auxiliary to Miss Ava Morton's salary, who was consecrated at Council and who is our very own Louisiana girl to China, graduating at Scarritt College in June.

Mission study plans, pledges, Daily Vacation Church Schools were topics of general discussion. Minutes were read and adopted. Doxology was sung and Rev. Mr. Fox pronounced the benediction. Each one returned home feeling this a day well spent. Hodge women showed themselves equal to the occasion by a well planned entertainment as hostess to this meeting, and each one felt a spiritual uplift from the devotionals and quiet hour, and we hope to feel this spirit throughout the year.

MRS. LUCILLE GARRETT, Sec.

FROM BROTHER REES

Dear Advocate: You have been a weekly visitor in my home for forty years and are always welcome. I don't see how a Methodist can do without you. Our district conference has just closed and it was a fine conference. The attendance was good, 175 being present. The spirit fine, and our presiding elder, Bro. J. H. Felts, was at his best and knew just how to dispatch business. He is the right man in the right place. Our church is moving on nicely under the leadership of our pastor, Bro. J. V. Bennet whom the people love. Our Sunday school is growing and we are hoping for a great year.

We had with us at the conference a former member of the North Mississippi Conference and now of the Memphis Conference and stationed at Jackson, Tenn., namely, Dr. T. W. Lewis, who was at one time presiding elder of the Corinth district and lived in Booneville. We all love him. He is a great man and a great preacher. He preached three times and his sermons were strong and uplifting. He admonished us if we had lost our salt, or it had lost its savor to resalt ourselves. We thank God for his sermons and his life. May God bless you and your editor. We are sorry, Doctor, you could not be with us at our conference.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Plans have been completed for the Conference Leadership Training at Grenada College June 8-13. Eight courses will be offered as follows:

"Beginner Worship," Miss Willette Allen of Atlanta, Ga., instructor. This course is for all workers and mothers of children 4 and 5 years old. Miss Allen has for a number of years done special work in this field and is considered the best instructor that the church has for this course.

"A Study in Middle Childhood, Pupil Study," Miss Lynda Ramey of Oxford, Miss., instructor. All workers and parents of children 6, 7 and 8 years of age should take this course. Miss Ramey has had large experience and training in this field.

"A Study of Later Childhood, Junior Pupil Study," Miss Freddie Henry of the General Board of Nashville, instructor. This course is for all workers and parents of children 9, 10 and 11 years old. Miss Henry is a church-wide recognized instructor.

"The Program and Organization of the Young People's Division of the Local Church," Rev. E. C. Rule of Pine Bluff, Ark., instructor. This course makes a study of the new unified program for the young people and all teachers and workers with young people from 12 to 24 years of age should take this course. Rev. Mr. Rule is pastor of one of the leading churches in his Conference and is in position to teach this course from a practical standpoint.

"The Formation of the Canon, Bible," Rev. J. E. Stephens, instructor. This course deals with how we have gotten our Bible and is of very great value to Bible students. Bro. Stephens is well known as one of the best teachers that we have in the field of religious education.

"Teaching in Training Schools and Classes," Rev. B. L. Schubel, Nashville, Tenn., instructor. This course has never been offered in our conference before. It deals with the methods and problems of teaching in training schools and classes. All those who do this sort of work and wish to do such work should take this course. Brother Schubel has charge of accrediting all instructors in our training work.

"The Church Serving the Community, a Course on Rural Problems," Dr. W. M. Alexander, instructor. This will be a very practical course for those working in the field of rural activities. Dr. Alexander will be remembered as being the general board representative during the Kingdom Extension institutes this year. He is considered the greatest authority in this field that we have today.

Missionary Course.—The Conference Woman's Missionary Society will conduct its school in connection with the leadership school. The book to be used this year is "The Challenge of Change." Mrs. E. L. Hobdy will be the instructor. This course is designed for all the mission study leaders of the missionary societies of the conference. A unit of credit will be given by the Board of Missions for this course.

Other features of the school will be the recreational activities every afternoon; special groups for discussion; special music by a double quartet of Millsap College and Grenada College students; rich Christian fellowship, and inspirational addresses.

Expenses while at the school will be $6 for the six days. Bring your linen with you for your rooms.

The school opens Monday, 2:30 p. m., and closes before noon Saturday. Write for your reservation now to Dr. J. R. Countiss, Grenada, Miss. For any other information write to Miss Virginia Thomas or the writer.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Dear Young People: Is it true that you are already sticking things into your suitcase, making bargains with Sister Sue for her best dress, or borrowing that tennis racket or kodak of your best boy friends, with Mansfield uppermost in your minds? I'm glad you are. Be sure that you don't forget anything. And if you are cold-natured you might put in a thin blanket, or tie it to the car just before you leave, because when the wind whistles around that college it gets kinda cold, and you won't want to sleep in all your clothes to keep warm. I know Mr. Grambling won't lend you his blanket and you surely can't get mine. In fact I usually borrow one from Mrs. Nowell, or one of the neighbors. Last year, Hazel Lea had about all her mother's cover loaned out to the boys, and that doesn't seem quite fair, does it? Boys shouldn't be so forgetful.

I spent the last week at home, supposedly resting up for a hard pull next month. I've been getting more sleep than usual, and eating all I could get hold of, so I hope to be ready for some real work in a few weeks. I'm surely sorry that I could not keep the engagements I had in Minden district, but I just played out too soon and Brother Holmes ordered me to come home.

The West Monroe League is trying to break all State records with its growth of late. They had seventy-six at their devotional service last Sunday night. They have already elected their five delegates to the assembly at Mansfield and are now talking of chartering a bus to go to Mt. Sequoyah. If any of you folks want to get in on that bus ride you had better speak up. They will have room for twenty-five and the more that go the less will be the expense of each. If you are interested in going, July 30-August 12, write to Miss Helen Hunt for details of the trip.

I am attending a meeting of the Service Union tonight at Gordon Avenue Church. They meet the second Thursday of each month. Mr. Onar Perry [illegible] Bastrop is the president.

Today I received a letter from Mr. T. W. Holloman of Alexandria accepting an invitation to speak at our Hi-League banquet on Thursday night of the Assembly. His subject is to be, "Spisizinktum." It's to be an Indian banquet. I don't know what that means in Indian, or English, but I bet it's good.

I also visited the Brown Paper Mill of West Monroe end secured the paper for our scrap books and kodak books for the handraft classes. The manager of the mill was mighty fine to give us this large amount of paper and we appreciate it.

This letter is one day late in going in to the editor. I hope it gets printed. Don't lose all that enthusiasm you have for the assemblies, because it won't be so long now until we'll all be standing in a line, registering and getting our room assignments.

Until then, remember,

Your Young People's Secretary,
ELIZABETH LANGFORD.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

We are very happy to announce to you that Rev. Walter Towner will be with us during our assembly at Grenada this year. Brother Towner is director of the Young People's Division of the General Board of Christian Education and he is making good in his new field of work. We will be very fortunate in having Brother Towner with us. He will explain the new program of work to us and he will also teach a class. So you may bring your questions along with you concerning the unified program of work and Brother Towner will answer them for you. We hope you will send your outstanding young people to this assembly. Send someone who is interested in the work so they can bring something back to the local church. Tell them that they are representing the church and that you are expecting them to bring something back to the church which will be a real contribution to the church.

The recreational program is going to be an outstanding feature of our program this year. A splendid program is being planned and we are expecting every one to participate in the program. We want you to get some information which will enable you to go back home and put on a church-centered recreational program. We believe you are going to enjoy the recreational program at the assembly this year even more than you have been enjoying these programs in the years gone by. Come to the assembly filled with the spirit of youth so you can enjoy the recreational program.

Have you sent in your offering which you received on Anniversary Day? It is not too late to do that yet. We want to receive at least one hundred dollars from this source this year. Will you please see that your League sends in this offering to Brother Ashmore before you go to the assembly?

Then you will not forget to take an offering for missions during this month. Our goal is to have every league making an offering for missions. Send in at least one dollar if you can't send in more than that. That will give you a place on the honor roll. We have heard a great deal about the financial depression, but it is a mighty good time to test our loyalty to the kingdom of God. We must not fail to respond to the appeal which the church is making today. As loyal young people we will not fail.

Please remember that we will be looking for you at Grenada the 15th of June. Be there in time for luncheon that day. We will have our first class that afternoon. We are expecting great things from the assembly this year and we will not be disappointed.

FROM SPRINGHILL, LA.

Dear Advocate: After several years of absence on account of my health, I am back in the home mission work. I am requesting prayers from all who really pray, for my health and success in the work. I work six days a week and preach somewhere on Sunday. I have Oak Grove, Parker's Chapel and Peace Chappel as regular appointments. I have worked up quite an interest at each place. I trust by the Lord's help I will soon have them back on the map.

J. C. SUTTON.

FROM PINEVILLE, LA.

Dear Dr. Decell: We have just come to the close of the most gracious revival in our church at Pineville, La. General Evangelist Harry S. Allen had charge and did us most excellent work. Bro. Allen is one of the most effective evangelists that I know of anywhere. He is a good and forceful preacher; a clear expounder of the Word, sending his message direct to his hearers. The attendance was good from the very start and grew throughout, 'till the closing night, we had to send about one hundred to the balcony.

The altar was filled time and time again with penitents seeking God. Members of the other churches came and knelt for prayer. It is impossible to estimate the number that professed Christ as so many church members came and prayed through to God and we only kept a record of those who applied for membership in the church, which shows ten for the Baptist and forty-nine for the Methodist Church. My congregation is united in praises to God for sending Brother Allen this way. The board of stewards is elated to find after the revival that when all bills are paid the treasury is in better shape than before the meeting. Brethren, you can hear all over the church the complaint that our evangelists are demanding too much money. I want to say that I too have had to make this statement, but I also am ready to tell you that Harry S. Allen is one man that will not give you any trouble about the money. He is the most modest man I know of in the evangelistic field about money. So you need not let this get in your way.

I fully believe that our church has been so revived that it will never be the same again. My people are happy and are telling their pastor that they are ready for service. In fact, it has already begun. Members are at work already doing work that before the revival they had shirked.

D. B. BODDIE.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

We are delighted that foourteen more Sunday schools are supporting the Dual-Extension this month than any other month this year. We are rejoiced at this fine result. We feel sure that it means that more of our people are praying and more of them are sacrificing for the cause of Missions and it brings cheer to the heart of all. Read the missionary articles in our papers. Write for "Here and There" if you are not getting it. This little paper is being mailed to every Sunday school superintendent in the Conference.

DROPSY Have made the treatment of dropsical troubles a specialty for many years. Have treated hundreds of cases, have yet to hear of anything to equal the treatment I give for dropsical troubles. Write, giving a full statement of your troubles and present condition, if sufficient further information with a test or trial treatment will be sent to you absolutely FREE. Dr. Thos. E. Green, Dept. 42, Chatsworth, Ga.

Sunday School Day has made a fine start. We feel that God is surely with us. Courage to go on is given us and we are trusting that more of our people will use the program this year than ever and that more of our churches will send in offerings.

We have heard of seven Epworth League Anniversary Day observances. We trust this important event will not be neglected this year. The young people's work in our Conference depends largely upon this effort.

I trust that every pastor will write to the General Board for the following booklets, as you need them in your churches. Samples will be sent the pastors. The Conference Board is charged with them and we have no sample copies to give out: The Small Church; Christian Education in the Small Church; The Young People's Division in the Small Church; The Large Church; Christian Education in the Large Church; The Program and Organization of the Young People's Division in the Local Church; The Local Church Board of Christian Education; Adult Division in the Local Church; Parent Education and Home Co-operation. These booklets are unusually helpful and I am sure that they will prove valuable to each church in getting the work lined up and better established. They will prove helpful to the individual worker and to those who are to be members of committees. The General Board has made a decided contribution to the Church in bringing these booklets out and making them available to the Church. It is regretted that the budget of the Board was not large enough that they might be given away rather than sold. They sell for 5c each, which is about cost. This charge will enable the Board to bring out other materials that are greatly needed at this time.

The Kingdom of God placed first in a man's life will mean a real revolution in all his work. It will vitalize his every action and bring spiritual victories never thought of before.

It was our privilege to visit the Northern Group Meeting of the Jackson District. It was a great program and meant much to each of us.

Pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

TWO MADE ONE

Nuptials of Miss Young People's Missionary Society and Mr. Epworth League Solemnized Before Large Audience

At the last meeting of the General Conference of the Methodist Church it was decided there were too many organizations among the young people of the church and it was thought best to bring about a unification of the societies, and let the one big organization be recognized as the "Young Peoples' Division of the Church, including the ages from thirteen to twenty-three. When that age is reached the young ladies are to become members of the Woman's Missionary Society and the young men are to engage in the various activities and responsibilities of the church.

As a result of that meeting, Mrs. J. H. Holloman, superintendent of the young people of the North Mississippi Missionary Conference, planned a most impressive ceremony for the young people here—a ceremony unique in its setting, and inspirational in its purpose.

As Mrs. Katherine Walton was president of the Young People's Missionary Society, and Mr. James Clark was president of the Epworth League, these were chosen by the two organizations to be the bride and groom for this occasion. According to agreement a lovely union was solemnized in the Methodist Church Friday night, at 8 o'clock.

Under the skillful hands of friends, the church was most beautifully decorated for the occasion in Southern smilax and roses, pink and white being the predominating colors, while the soft glow of many tapers added beauty to the service.

Just before the ceremony Miss Rebekah Holloman, with Mrs. William McCarthy at the piano, sang most sweetly "O Promise Me" and "Before You Came." At the first note of Lohengrin's wedding march as a processional, every eye was centered upon the doors from which the bridal party, composed of thirty-eight of Ruleville's lovely boys and girls, emerged. Four young men acted as ushers; ten young girl friends of the bride dressed in pastel shades of organdie, carrying shower bouquets of roses and sweet peas, served as maids to the bride, while the groom claimed ten of his friends as groomsmen. These were followed by ten maids of honor, also attired in pastel shades of organdie and carrying shower bouquets of roses and sweet peas.

Miss Vlvian Bardin, in blue organdie carrying pink roses, as maid of honor, preceded the bride to the altar, while Mr. Hunter Cochran served the groom as best man. Little Misses Mary Simpson and Jeannie Hughes as sprightly fairies in green organdie, brightened the path of the bride with rose petals. Master Billy McEachern, in his cherub beauty, acted as ring bearer.

The bride, Miss Kathryn Walton, was dressed in white embroidered satin; her coronet veil swept the floor; pearls were her only ornaments, suggestive of her innocence and purity. She carried a shower bouquet of Sweetheart roses and peas, and entered upon the arm of her superintendent: Mrs. J. H. Holloman, who gave her in marriage to the groom, Mr. James Clark. Rev. A. T. Clanton impressively read the ring ceremony uniting Miss Missionary Society and Mr. Young People's Division, which had been arranged by a talented member of the party, Miss Ruth Peterson.

Never was there a more impressive sight in the local church than when this young popular couple, representing the Epworth League and the Young People's Missionary Society, plighted their troth in the presence of the bridal party and their host of friends "Until death do us part," not as man and wife, but as members of the Young Peoples' Division of the Church, then consecrating their lives to service in the extension of the kingdom here upon earth. Mendelssohn's March was played as a recessional.

Immediately following the ceremony at the church, the bridal party, the members of the Missionary Society and a few friends met at an informal reception in the Community Home. Mrs. H. P. Thomas, as president of the Missionary Society, acted as hostess. Here, as in the church, pink and green was the color scheme with a profusion of roses. The tables were attractively arranged for thirty-eight with pink bonbon basket, place cards, and bags of rice for the bridal party. Instrumental music, with Mrs. Walter Johnson at the piano and orchestra, was an enjoyable feature of the program; and the cutting of the bride's' cake gave the young people many a thrill. Rev. Clanton acted as toastmaster and while the refreshments of ice cream and cake were being served Mr. Hunter Cochran as best man, Miss Vivian Bardin, as maid of honor, Miss Ruth Peterson, as the writer of the ceremony, and several other friends responded to the call and showered the bride and groom not only with rice, but with many fond wishes for their future happiness in their Christian activities.—Exchange.

GROUP MEETING, MERIDIAN DISTRICT

Southern Section, McGowan's Chapel

After the devotional services led by Brother O'Neil the meeting was called to order and Brother T. B. Winstead, visitor, kindly conceuted to act as chairman in the absence of Brother C. M. Crossley. Brother Crossley could not be present due to the fact that he had just begun a meeting in Waynesboro.

Brother M. R. Jones gave us a deeply spiritual and inspirational address on "The Pastor As a Shepherd." Out of his own personal experiences he showed how vital and important it is for ministers to be good shepherds. We, as Peter, are commissioned to go out and feed His lambs, His sheep, and if we really love Jesus we will do just that.

H. W. F. Vaughan spoke on "The Pastor As a Student." It has been proven in history that the greatest "spiritual shepherds" have been men who spent much time in study. John Wesley certainly understood that a preacher needed to study.

Brother O'Neil, our presiding elder, brought us the message of the hour on "The Minister and the Church, Their Reciprocal Duties." The sermon was very helpful in that he brought out the true place of the minister in society, what should he expect of the members of his church. Brother O'Neil knows how to go to the very root of the matter in his sermons.

At the noon hour the ladies served dinner on the grounds in the old-fashioned way. Everyone enjoyed the food and social hour very much.

Brother H. C. Herring, carrying out the theme of the day, read the twenty-third Psalm for the afternoon devotional. He described to us anew David's picture of the great Shepherd of shepherds, the Shepherd of the Universe.

Brother T. C. Cooper discussed "The Pastor As a Citizen." He emphasized Christian citizenship, its responsibilities, its limitations, its rewards. He showed how much politics needs religion, how little religion needs politics.

"The Pastor As a Prophet" was the subject of a paepr written and read by Brother H. Millard. It was a very splendid paper depicting the true preacher-prophet. He made the careful distinction between the preacher and the prophet. There are more preachers than prophets, we preachers need more and more to become prophets, standing and "speaking in the place of" God.

Upon request of Brother Winstead, Brother J. F. Campbell, visitor, spoke on "The Pastor As Evangelist." His talk centered around the theme that a good shepherd will always go after the lost sheep, the strayed sheep; he will care for the sick sheep.

Brother C. W. Wesley talked on "The Pastor in the Sunday School." He emphasized that little word "in." He brought out the fact that a pastor may try to do too much—he must learn to become a good listener sometimes. A pastor should not teach a class or be superintendent except in cases of rare emergency.

The group was honored with the presence of four visitors, Brothers T. B. Winstead, E. W. Wedgworth, J. F. Campbel and P. M. Caraway.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES

S. A. Steel

"The Editor Receives Deserved Reprehension." No, sir; you're mistaken. You deserve commendation for your editorial on Mencken. You have good Biblical authority for answering a fool according to his folly. I was glad when I read your editorial for two reasons: first, because it administered a deserved spanking to the Baltimore Yahoo, who, with the brain of a philosopher, has the spirit of a gorilla; and, second, because it showed that we had an editor who could say things. I don't know who it was that got after you about it; I suppose it was some mild-mannered saint who would have rebuked Paul for calling the Cretians "liars, evil beasts, slow bellies." It is true Paul was quoting "one of their own propheis;" but did not hesitate to use strong language. If your censor had been with the disciples that day Jesus released his fierce philippic against the Pharisees, he would probably have retired from the place. Thank God for a patriotism that will hurl a dart with barbs at the traducer of his State. Stick to your gun and shoot again. This is no time for using blank charges.

IS GOD THE FATHER OF ALL MEN?

This sonship or fatherhood was not claimed on his Spiritual connection with God the Father. It was on the material or natural make-up. Here I will have to ask Brother Ramsey to pardonnez-moi. As God gave us the breath of life; our souls, and as our souls cannot die; lives on in hell. Luke 16:23. We cannot cease to be the sons of God, in a natural sense, of course. The thing that makes us sons of God in a Spiritual sense, however, is being born of the Holy Spirit. Must be born again. Then if we sin we lose our spiritual sonships, but not our natural. Here I would like to say to Brother Ramsey, provbliez pas, NO. I did not deny "the Methodist doctrine of apostacy. He tried to substanatiate his claim denying universal Fatherhood of God on what he claims as my grammatical error. He says, "Unfortunately Brother Bamburg forgets his grammar. In the first place the phrase, 'the cause of him hunting' should be 'the cause of his hunting'." I do not have the manuscript before me, and cannot say whether I used that phrase or not. Non mi ricordo. I do know, however, that there are four typographical errors in my article as follows: "I do not think 'anyoue' will," "One 'Godand' father of all," "Created 'not' the image of God," "the 'lost' man Adam. I have an idea that I used "him" instead of "his." I plead guilty to such woeful blunders. But I fail to see how this changed the force of my contention, or made his any strouger n' est ce pas?

He tries, but vainly, to destroy my logic by not fully quoting me. I said, "but this does not—it cannot destroy the fact that they were once God's children. They are God's lost children. May I call his attention to the fact that I said "sever" their connection with the heavenly Father? The definition of same is, "To put or keep separated or apart as two things that should be united." "They are God's lost children" modifies the statement above, and his statement "is an explicit admittance that under the condition stated, they are not now God's children" is at variance with His premises. Also my scripture quotation, "There is a natural body and there is a spiritual body." The first man Adam was made a living soul, the last Adam was made a quickening spirit," clarifies the whole of my argument. To this part of my article he is as silent as the tomb. And to quote him, "Under certain conditions, silence is the strongest adducible proof." This is virtually admitting his contention that God is not the Father of all men is lost.

You talk about a "non-sequiter." It is he that makes it, as I shall proceed to show. Now let's study his logic. "This has no reference, of course, to very small children who, by virtue of the atonement made for them on the cross, are born into the world already inside the kingdom and are therefore children of the heavenly Father." "The doctrine of the universal Fatherhood of God is utterly false," issue Jan 15. A non-sequiter? I should say. As the atonement was for all men, "by the grace of God should taste death for every man." Heb. 2:9. I still claim Brother Ramsey does believe in the universal Fatherhood of God. If we are to reach a true conclusion from his premises, whether he admits it or not. May I give an illustration of his logic? All children that are born into the world are children of the heavenly Father by the atonement. Some children have sinned. Therefore God is not the heavenly Father of all children by the atonement. What was that word he used? Let's see. O yes! Non-sequiter. There you are. Sin does not do away with the atonement, but the benefits that we have of the atonement. Therefore we remain children of the atonement whether we claim it or not. It was for the sinner that Christ died, but we must make it our own by accepting it and walking in its benefit. You will pardon me, I am sure, when I use a personal illustration. I am a son of R. L. Bamburg. Of course this is equal to saying R. L. Bamburg is my father. Whatever I do cannot destroy the fact that R. L. Bamburg is my father. God being my father by virtue of the atonement only whatever I do cannot destroy the fact that God is my Father by virtue of the atonement.

When Brother Ramsey said children, evidently he meant it in a universal sense. And thereby endorsed the Universal Fatherhood of God. He cannot logically deny this. I would like to call his attention to a few passages of Scripture: "I have said ye are God's: and all of you are 'children' of the Most High." Ps. 82:6. "Have we not all one father? hath not God created us?" Mal. 2:10. "They were potential fathers, having children in their loins." Jesus had in his thoughts the potential fatherhood of his disciples." GREAT balls of fire! Did he not say, Reductio ad absurdum? Yes he did. I will say, a tort et a travers.

If we wished to push this cause to its last analysis we could find God as the universal Father by the theory of teleology. God is found creative, and progressive, etc. All men, saint and sinner, are found creative and progressive. Brother Ramsey seems to be afraid of theories like this, and has shut them off when he reiterated the statement he made in his first article, Jan. 15th issue, as follows: "It should be kept in mind constantly that the answer to the question of the caption of these articles is not to be determined by philosophical preconceptions of men or sentimental preferences of that which commends itself to men as the theory of God; but let it be distinctly understood that the answer is to be found in a reasonable and sensible exegesis of the words of Jesus, and the teachings of the epistles. So the whole subject resolves itself into the question, What did Jesus say, and what do the epistles teach concerning the subject of the Fatherhood of God? Here he seems to try to even shut out the Old Testament making the same blunder that our Baptist brethren do on the question of water baptism. No man can make a full and complete reasonable and sensible exegesis of the words of Jesus and the teachings of the epistles without using the Old Testament as a background. Therefore I have tried to hold the subject simply to the teachings of Jesus and the epistles, referring to the Old Testament as a background. He has tried to fly the track, however, on false grammer, false logic. The Expositors and Lexicon. I wish you would listen to this statement, "It will be ascertained that Jesus" distinctly stated "that he was addressing His disciples, and spoke to them of God as 'your Father'." Here he did not say His disciples only, but as this has been his contention, it is equivalent to so stating. But gives no scripture to back up his contention. As silence gave consent to my statement, "There is a natural body and there is a spiritual body." The first man, Adam, was made a living soul, the last Adam was mado a quickning spirit." Also "I have never believed in the universal Fatherhood of God in a spiritual sense." Furthermore, "I believe just as Brother Ramsey does in a spiritual sense. But we must make a difference between sons of God spiritually and natuarally." For the life of me I cannot understand why Brother Ramsey would introduce spiritual sonship in his last section. I agree with him to a T on the question of spiritual sonship, or spiritual universal Fatherhood of God. If he meant in a spiritual sense, why did he not so state in his first article? I shall hold his feet to the fire and not allow him to side-step the question of universal Fatherhood of God by introducing the universal Fatherhood of God in a spiritual sense. The fact that God is not the Father of all men in a spiritual sense, so far as I know, is an accepted doctrine of all orthodox Christians. If this were his contention there would be no issue. I gather from his repeated statements "and the doctrine of the universal Fatherhood of God is utterly false," that he means in no sense under the sun. Now to his claim, "The Essential Element of Fatherhood is the fact of procreation," which is to engender. Engender, "To bring into existence; produce." There you are.

Coming to a close. That "tailspin" he took trying to interpret the parables of our Lord, "The lost sheep," "the lost coin," "the lost son" would be laughable if it were not so piteous. "Womanhood of God," "Coinhood of man." Pshaw! A fizzle. "Cart before the horse." I thought it was the woman that lost the coin. O well; live and learn. The universal Fatherhood of God does not lessen the power of the sacrificial death of Christ. He died for God's lost children. Neither does it lessen the work of the missionary or the work of the ministry. It makes it all the more stronger. They are God's children by procreation. Souls came out of God, which is the real man. We be brethren. We are our brother's keeper. God had breathed the breath of life in Adam and he became a living soul. Gen. 2:7. Then afterward took a rib from Adam and made Eve, so she, too, would be a living soul. Gen. 2:21-22.

First. I have shown that our souls were brought into existence by God. Produced by God. Came out of God. Therefore by his own definition, God is the Father of the soul of man.

Secondly, Jesus did preach to the multitudes when he said "your Father." Thirdly, Jesus did say to the multitude, "Your Father," and at the same time and place, called them children of hell."

Fourthly, the soul cannot die—lives on even in hell. Therefore we cannot cease to be sons of God in a natural or material sense. Establishing the universal Fatherhood of God beyond any kind of doubt.

It would be unjust to say Brother Ramsey was a nulifidian. But his faith seems to be of the warped nature.

I have heard of people who argued in a circle. Brother Ramsey does not seem to get far enough to make a circle; just a half-moon.

I dislike very much to have to lead a brother through the spankweed patch, but I feel the issue at stake, the universal Fatherhood of God, demanded the leading. I rest.

THE HISTORIC SEASHORE CAMP GROUNDS DESTINED FOR GREATER USEFULNESS

The enchanted plot of ground at Biloxi, Mississippi, known as the Seashore Camp Ground has become wedded to a new future under the name of The Seashore Methodist Assembly. Those olden trails that felt the tread of multitudes in the long ago will become vistas of another generation; and those giant trees which speak of sturdy men of the past have become sentinels of a glorious future, for the might of yesterdays is only useful as it is incarnated in a continuous present. Hallowed ground that has been the scene of spiritual awakenings and holy triumph is not to be yielded to the course of commerce nor a rendezvous of revelry, but the charm of its beauty and the wealth of its value are to still be consecrated to the greater glory of God.

Southern Methodism needs a place by the sea. Did not her Lord gather the multitudes by the seaside and teach them the way of life? Was not the seed of universal friendship planted in the mind of Paul, as the boy Saul watched ships from distant lands put in at the port of Tarsus? The Seashore Methodist Assembly is an Institution of far-reaching significance to Methodism — particularly to Methodists of the Central South. There are three-quarters of a million Methodists within easy distance of Biloxi, many of whom will be denied the spiritual and cultural benefits of an Assembly if the S. M. A. is not developed. The Seashore Methodist Assembly, therefore, is not a competitive but a complementary enterprise. The heights of Hermon, the lifts of Lebanon, and the shore of Galilee have their place in Holy Writ.

Resorts of worldly pleasure crowd the sealines of America and the Assembly movement is both timely and fortunate. The Church must offer to her people centers of spiritual culture and places of wholesome recreation, where young and old may go apart and rest awhile under the right kind of environment. It would be a master invasion of the future to have the Church mature plans to unify the interests and correlate the programs at Junaluska, Sequoyah, and Seashore, and in due time provide a fourth in the far West. In the meantime, Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi give assurance of a determined beginning and the hope of a worthy future at the Seashore Methodist Assembly.

THE SEASHORE METHODIST ASSEMBLY TABERNACLE

UNFINISHED HISTORY OF A NOBLE PURPOSE

About sixty years ago far-seeing Methodists of New Orleans, led by W. H. Foster and others, acquired valuable property on the Mississippi Gulfcoast and established a camp meeting near Biloxi. At first it was a meeting place for the New Orleans District, later it became the property of the New Orleans, Mobile and Seashore Districts. Refreshing seasons from the presence of the Lord were had year after year and the Seashore Camp Meeting became widely known throughout Methodism. After a number of years an Academy was established and operated by the three districts, and in 1922 the Seashore Camp Ground School was chartered as the property of the Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi Annual Conferences.

The development of Agricultural High Schools by the States, and a movement of consolidating church schools brought the Camp Ground School upon an uneven course and it was suspended for a time. During the period of suspension the three Conferences appointed committees to determine the future course in meeting the will of the donors who had entrusted that valuable property into their hands.

During 1930 representatives of the three controlling Conferences agreed that the property should be owned by the Conferences, but used for church-wide purposes. Brady and Dean, one of the strongest law firms in Mississippi, prepared a charter which set up a new corporation and greatly increased the kinds of service for which the property could be used. Under the provisions of the charter adopted by the conferences and approved by the proper authorities of Mississippi the Seashore Methodist Assembly became a legal entity on January 19, 1931, and assumed all the property and liabilities of the Seashore Camp Ground School on January 29.

Here at home, Christian people can come or send their children to camps, divinity schools. Bible schools and other types of Christian activities and be assured of the best in recreation, rest, and religion. The vision of W. H. Foster and others has widened through the years and its full realization is yet unfinished history.

Seashore Methodist Assembly

ASSEMBLY AMBITIONS AND PROGRAMS

BY REV. JAMES W. SELLS, Executive Secretary

The Seashore Methodist Assembly of Biloxi has only a very few ambitions this first year. But in the light of outstanding facts the Assembly should be a very ambitious institution.

A recent article in the Review of Reviews by an established journalist prophesies for the Gulf Coast a very bright future. Quoting one sentence: "The foundations, indeed, have been laid for an era of commercial and industrial development in the Gulf country in the next generation which will compare with that around the shores of the Great Lakes during the past generation."

The citizens of the city of Biloxi are assured of the future of their own city. Within the past few months they have been assured a deeper channel for the harbor, which will increase the seafood industry and enlarge the Coast Guard base.

The Federal Government has recently decided to build a $900,000 soldiers' home on Back Bay. This home will ultimately be equipped for 4000 retired soldiers. Eah of these men will be drawing ompensation and this amount of money, aside from the payroll of the staff comprising the administrative organization will be as valuable to the commercial life of the city as a large factory.

This new soldiers' home will be built within a few blocks of the north end of the property owned by the Seashore Assembly.

These facts make it imperative that we develop our organization on a long time basis and one planned to meet the needs of our constituency when these needs are understood.

So our ambitions are very vew. They are in fact these:

1. To make the physical appearance of the Assembly ground so attractive that not only will be proud that they are a part of Methodism, but that the other thousands of people who daily pass these grounds will be fored to respect our ownership.

THE OLD SPANISH TRAIL PASSES THROUGH S. M. A. GROUNDS

2. To present a program that will fit the needs of our church people and at the same time be so interesting and appealing that it will draw people this way for rest, recreation, and information.

3. To operate the institution this summer and pay expenses, thus demonstrating our ability to become a useful institution.

4 To so plan for the future that we may become an outpost on the firing line and in some certain manner assist in building the Kingdom of God here on earth.

DIVINITY SCHOOL

The date scheduled for the annual Divinity School is June [illegible]-26. At this period undergraduate preachers can get off half their regular course of study. The dean and trustees of this school have arranged a competent faculty. The time of year is that most favorable for a vacation. The location is ideal for rest and recreation. A special rate of $1.50 a day has been made to the undergraduates at Keller Lodge and dining hall. The White House will offer their same special rate of $2.50 a day for ministers. All is propitious for a good school.

Dr. J. T. Leggett, president of the board of trustees of the Divinity School, has secured Dr. C. C. Selecman, president of Southern Methodist University, as the speaker for the first five days, and Dr. Costen J. Harrell, author and preacher, of Richmond, Va., as the speaker for the last five days.

Not only will the undergraduate preachers be at the Divinity School in large numbers, but it is a regular habit of a large number of preachers to make their vacation coincide with the Divinity School.

SEASHORE BIBLE CONFERENCE

One of the important features of all of the old and well established assemblies of the United States is the Bible Conference. This is in the nature of the spiritual life conference that our church has recently been promoting.

Because of financial difficulties the authorities were not able to assist this new assembly in promoting a spiritual life conference. Feeling that one of the great needs of the present generation is a more intimate acquaintance with the English Bible, we have decided to offer for the constituents of the Seashore Methodist Assembly an annual Bible Conference.

This Bible Conference is scheduled for the last ten days of August, or, rather, August 19-30. The list of speakers is not complete as yet. But among those who have already accepted the invitation are Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs of Louisiana and Dr. E. C. Wareing, of Cincinnati, Ohio, editor of the western edition of the Christian Advocate.

Bishop Dobbs has not as yet announced the subjects of his lectures. Dr. Wareing will bring a series of ten addreses on "The Holy Spirit." The exact titles of his addresses will be announced at a later date.

While not definitely decided upon, it is possible that the morning programs will be given over to serious consideration of Biblical themes, the afternoon devoted to rest and recreation, and the night periods to a lighter, but still serious, matter. If this course is adopted a group of prominent speakers of the South will be invited to address the preachers and members of the Bible Conference on themes pertinent to pastoral activity.

The schedule for the summer will make if possible for those preachers who have the first part of the summer filled with meetings to take their vacation during the latter part of the year and vice versa.

The Assembly is trying to meet the needs of its constituents as these needs are revealed.

SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS DRAMA AND PAGEANTRY

One of the recent movements that is attracting the youth of the church is the revival of the age-old art of presenting in dramatic form the great truths of all ages.

One of Mississippi's city churches has a very successful dramatic league that passed the experimental stage. The leader of this church find that this dramatic league fosters a worth-while spirit and attitude on the part of the young people to the work of the church.

Seeking to find some great theme that would interest the young people the idea of a school for training leaders among the church's own people in this dramatic art resulted.

So it was decided to hold the first short school of religious drama and pageantry on August 5-16. If this has been done in the South before it is unknown to the writer.

Miss Ruth Winfield, who is head of the Speech Department of Wintworth College, will direct the ten-day school. In these ten days she will give a comprehensive course in church drama and its uses. A special period will be devoted to pageantry in the activity of the church. A practical course in its uses and abuses will be offered those enrolled in speech classes. If possible, a pageant will be presented one night about the end of the first five days of the school and a full play will be given by the company of students the last night of the school.

While this is a new venture it is thoroughly believed that this movement will offer a means of restoring interest in church work among those restless intellectuals who are ever willing to adventure.

SCHOOL OF HYMNOLOGY

Among the added attractions that the Seashore Methodist Assembly offers this summer is the first School of Hymnology. This school will run concurrently with the annual camp meeting.

The camp meeting will be under the direction of the presiding elder of the Seashore District, Rev. Otto Porter. He will secure a preacher who will attract large numbers of people for worship services.

The Assembly has secured the services of Professor C. C. Washburn of Scarritt College, Nashville, Tenn., to conduct the School of Hymnology.

Dr. Washburn has announced the following as his contribution to the life of our first summer assembly:

Schedule of Comprehensive Course in Hymnology:

1st Period—The Biblical background in Old and New Testaments.

2nd Period—The Contribution of the early church, Greek and Latin.

3rd Period—Germany's great contribution.

4th and 5th Periods—The hymnology of Great Britain.

6th and 7th Periods—Woman's contribution to hymnology.

8th Period—American hymns and songs.

9th Period—A study of hymn tunes.

10th Period—Practical application in program making.

Besides the lecture course Professor Washburn will also conduct a class in directing church choirs. These two courses afford an opportunity for small town and rural churches to send their choir leaders to this school for a training course in songs and their singing. It would pay well any church to contribute all the expenses of the choir leader and in this manner enable the church to regain the lost art of singing. Methodism sung her way around the world. She has about lost her voice. We need to restore the sweet singer to her throne.

IMPROVEMENTS

One of the older residents of Biloxi was recently taken to the Assembly grounds and shown over that portion of it lying north of the schoolhouse. He was amazed at the beauty of the shaded woods and stated that even though he had lived in Biloxi all his life and had been at the old camp grounds every year he had never known there were such trees on the grounds.

Early in February, right after the property came under the control of the Seashore Methodist Assembly work was started on clearing up the underbrush and cutting down the small undergrowth. It has revealed many things. To speak of the tons of rubbish burned or buried would not be pleasant. It has, however, made the property available to the sight and steps of the owners thereof, and now Methodists may stroll around these grounds and be proud of their possession.

A strip about one hundred feet wide has been cut as an air lane on the eastern edge of the grounds to the railway. And by the station a similar opening has been cut. Now passers-by on the L. & N. can see through the trees and catch a glimpse of the water beyond the buildings.

The recently cleared ground north of the schoolhouse will be the site of Camp Biloxie. The grounds north of the Lodge and dining hall will be used for playgrounds and athletic activities. These clearing-up operations have been the most expensive undertaken by the new management, so far, but any visitor will readily acknowledge that they are most fruitful.

As a result the land breeze will sweep from the north on the cottages and the sea breeze will blow away whatever mosquitoes may be in or around the grounds. As a health and sanitation measure the improvements were necessary if for no other reason.

ASSEMBLY APARTMENTS

Mrs. J. A. Bishop, who for the past three years has been resident keeper of the grounds, has been busy spreading paint and sunlight into various cottages and apartments. She will have the best arranged group of apartments yet offered to visitors to the Seashore.

One or two of the cottages are frankly fixed up for camping. No pretense at anything else is made. But every sanitary convenience is provided even in these cottages. Several of the other apartments are rather well furnished and will present a most attractive appearance to the guest.

The building that has commonly been known as "the president's home" for the past few years has been thoroughly renovated. An outside entrance has been cut and the stairway changed. This makes it possible for the downstairs apartment to be entirely separate from the rest of the house. This house is being painted and repapered inside and the furniture is being repaired and repainted. There are three apartments in this building and it will be very desirable as it fronts the water and every apartment in the building has a south exposure.

The following are the apartments that the Assembly owns and will have ready for occupancy by the first of June:

President's home, apartment No. 1, $25 per week; apartment No. 2, $15 per week; apartment No. 3, $10 per week.

White house, $20 per week.

Brown cottage, $15 per week.

Pearl cottage, apartment No. 1, $15 per week; apartment No. 2, $10 per week; apartment No. 3, $10 per week.

Apartment No. 1 in the president's home is a downstairs apartment and all these, like the other apartments, are fully equipped for light housekeeping. All the visitor needs do is bring his bed linen and silverware and begin keeping house. The White house is strictly a camping cottage, being equipped with seven double beds and necessary furnishings to care for fourteen people. Just recently an upstairs shower and toilet have been added to this house and at present it is one of the most popular buildings.

For those who plan to rent one of these apartments for the summer it would be advisable to make reservations as soon as possible. Inquiries are coming in constantly and several of the apartments are already reerved for special occasions.

Mrs. Bishop has charge of renting these apartments and a letter addressed to her in care of the Assembly will bring full and complete information. Such apartments as are available on the grounds make it possible for the entire family to come and have a vacation with very little expense.

KELLER LODGE DINING ROOM

A thoroughly experienced dietician will have charge of the dining room this summer. Mrs. T. D. Peets, who for the past four years has operated the cafeteria at the Gulfport High School, is bringing her staff of cooks and helpers to the Assembly grounds to assist her in serving most appetizing meals.

As every visitor to the coast expects to delight in seafoods, Mrs. Peets is planning to satisfy this craving in every possible manner. Fishermen who proudly display their catch will be afforded the opportunity of enjoying it served for dinner, all crisp and brown.

ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

Another feature that will appeal to some people is that college girls will assist in serving the meals. These girls will sign up for a month or six weeks' stay on the grounds and by serving table pay for their vacation. It is expected that a full fledged chapter of P. W. G.'s will be installed before the summer is over.

The campers attending Camp Biloxie, or any division of this camp, will be served their meals in the Assembly dining room, but will eat at a different period from the Assemblyites.

Meals will be served for $1.50 per day or $10 per week. When one takes into consideration the fact that on the coast they eat three times as much as they do when at home these meals are cheap enough!

This price of $10 a week for meals is the established price at the dining hall and has been the price for years. An effort will be made to make the dining room one of the most attractive features of the entire Assembly grounds.

KELLER LODGE

Keller Lodge, so named in honor of one of the faithful founders of the old Seashore Camp meeting, is a small two-story hotel. Under the present arrangements it will have fifteen rooms. Each of these rooms faces south and opens on a wide verandah overlooking the blue waters of the Gulf.

The Lodge is undergoing a thorough renovation. New beds and other bedroom furniture are being installed throughout the house.

Miss Thelma Cox, who has the chair of History at Whitworth College, will be hostess at the Lodge during the first part of the summer. She will personally see to the care and cleanliness of the Lodge and every guest will be made to feel at home.

Rates of Keller Lodge are as follows: $20.00 a week board and room for one person; $15.00 a week two or more persons in a room.

This Corporation shall be a religious organization and-or religious society and-or ecclesiastical body, and shall not be operated for profit, but all of its property, real and personal, shall be used exclusively for the benefit of the religious, educational and charitable activities of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

REV. H. W. MAY PASSES TO HIS REWARD

Rev. A. M. Wynne, pastor Zachary, La., informs us of the death of Rev. H. W. May, which occurred on Tuesday, May 12. The funeral was held from the Methodist church at Zachary, with Dr. Frank L. Wells, pastor, First Church, Baton Rouge, in charge of the service, being assisted by Brother May's pastor, Rev. A. M. Wynne. Preachers and other friends from over the Conference attended in large numbers. The body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Plains.

In 1888, Brother May was admitted into the Louisiana Conference. For nearly forty years he was active in his loved employ. He served some of the larger responsibilities in his Conference and proved himself to be a good soldier of Jesus Christ. At Homer and Acadia and other pastorates he displayed those qualities of sympathy and understanding that endeared his ministry to the people. As presiding elder of the Alexandria (twice), Lafayette, and Baton Rouge districts, he evidenced powers of leadership that marked him as a successful servant of his church in that capacity. He loved to preach and enjoyed the work of the active ministry and would have gladly fallen while on full duty, had his strength permitted. His days of superannuation were not days of idleness, whenever possible he assisted his brethren in their work.

Thus the ministerial brotherhood of Louisiana Methodism is called upon to mark the passing of another one of their fellow-workers, who has answered the call of the Bishop of his soul, and awaits the coming of loved ones and friends left behind.

We extend sincere sympathy to the sorrowing ones and pray that the influence of the love and labors of H. W. May shall abound more and more unto the perfect day.

MRS. FLORA BERRY BRADLEY

The many friends of Rev. O. W. Bradley, pastor of Rayne Memorial, New Orleans, will be distressed to learn that his devoted wife, Mrs. Flora Berry Bradley, passed away on Thursday, May 21. Mrs. Bradley had been a patient sufferer for several weeks prior to her death.

Rayne Memorial, the church she rejoiced in the privilege of serving with her husband, deeply sympathized with their beloved pastor and his two children, O. W., Jr., and Mary Frances, in their irreparable loss. All New Orleans Methodism mourn the going away of so consecrated and useful a life.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., D.D., assisted by Rev. H. L. Johns, and Rev. M. S. Monk, conducted the funeral services at Rayne Memorial, Friday afternoon. Interment was at Jackson, Miss., on the day following.

The manager and editor of the Advocate extend Brother Bradley and the other loved ones deepest sympathy.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

Dr. C. W. Crisler delivered the commencement sermon for the Brookhaven, Miss., High School at the First Baptist Church on Sunday night, May 17.

Rev. R. G. Moore is planning a meeting at Indianola, Miss., to begin May 24. Rev. W. R. Lott will do the preaching and Mr. Wm. F. Munday will lead the singing.

A wedding of much interest will be that of Miss Freddie Elizabeth Fishell to Mr. Cyrus Andrew Ashcraft of New Orleans, which is to take place at the First Methodist Church, Gulfport, on June 1st.

The Epworth League at Felicity Church gave a concert of song and organ music on Sunday evening, May 17. Rev. James T. Harris is rendering effective service with the young people of that historic church.

Mrs. J. L. Neill has our thanks for five subscriptions sent in from the Crawford Methodist Church, Vicksburg. Mrs. Neill is active in the work of the church, and is of no little aid to her husband in his pastorate.

Rev. C. C. Wier, the versatile pastor at Winnfield, La., favored us with the Mother's Day edition of his bulletin, "The Silent Preacher." It is an attractive bulletin replete with noble sentiment appropriate for the day.

Lawrence Evans Robinson, an eight pound boy, arrived at the Coffeeville, Miss., parsonage Sunday morning, May 17, and took possession of the household. We congratulate Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Robinson and pray that the little boy may be blessed with a long and useful life.

Rev. V. R. Landrum, Wesson, Miss., closed the community revival at Osyka on the first Sunday in May. The Baptist and Methodist pastors, Williams' report that the meeting was an inspiring occasion and that Brother Landrum's ministry on the last day was a great blessing.

Revs. E. L. Ledbetter, Pascagoula, and C. P. Jones, Biloxi, favored the office by calling on Friday morning, May 15. We were delighted to hear of the progress of the work on the Mississippi Coast, and that the outlook for the summer was encouraging.

Dr. David M. Key, president of Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., returned to his alma mater, Central College, Fayette, Mo., and participated in the seventy-fifth anniversary celebration by presenting Dr. Robert H. Ruff, a Millsaps graduate, who was inaugurated president of Central on May 25.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Wood, Moss Point, Miss., recently celebrated their fifty-sixth wedding anniversary. Brother Wood is a practicing attorney and has been for years an active member of our church at Moss Point. We wish for them many returns of their happy anniversary.

Dr. J. G. Snelling, superintendent of the Memorial Mercy Home, announces that Rev. M. L. Burton, is field agent for the home in Mississippi and Mrs. Olive Millsaps in Louisiana. Any courtesy extended Brother Burton and Mrs. Millsaps will contribute toward a worthy cause.

Rev. A. T. McIlwain, pastor of the First Church, Greenwood, greatly cheered the Advocate force by sending in twenty subscriptions with check to cover. He further encourages us by stating this is but a beginning. Brother McIlwain has a record of large usefulness in his conference, and we are not surprised at his success in behalf of the Advocate.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, Picayune, Miss., reports that the work in that interesting little city is making progress. Rev. M. L. Burton preached and represented the Memorial Mercy Home on May 17; and Rev. Mr. Bryant, Presbyterian pastor in Gentilly, New Orleans, preached the commencement sermon on Sunday, May 24.

Next Sunday is College Day in the Sunday schools and churches. This was a wise provision made in connection with the new Board of Christian Education. It connects the local church with the Colleges in a program that should mean much to the Colleges and people. It should be observed in every church.

We regret that we did not learn of Rev. H. W. May's death which occurred on May 12, until by letter, which was dated at point of mailing May 18. The letter was received too late to get into the first issue of the Advocate after the passing away of the lamented brother who served his day and generation so well.

In sending in subscriptions to the Advocate, Rev. Walter M. Hester, pastor at Houlka, Miss., writes, "We are in the midst of a fine Cokesbury Training School and Daily Vacation Bible School. Rev. W. R. Hammontree, Amory, is rendering excellent service. Our work is moving steadily forward. We are serving a splendid people and have a church second to none in the Aberdeen district."

PROTECTION
AGAINST OLD AGE

Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, the faithful pastor of the First Methodist Church, Gulfport, broadened out our subscription list and brought delight to the Advocate office by sending in fifteen subscriptions with check to cover. Brother Broadfoot serves a strategic place where he preaches to people from many sections of the country. We rejoice in the success of his ministry and appreciate the efforts in behalf of the Advocate.

Brother David I. Mohler, a loyal member of our First Church at Gulfport, Miss., died on Monday, April 14. He is survived by his wife, two daughters and one son. He was the brother of Rev. E. G. Mohler, Extension secretary of the North Mississippi Conference Board of Christian Education. His pastor, Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, conducted the last services. We extend to the bereaved heartfelt sympathy.

Dr. Rolfe Hunt, who superannuated at the last session of the Mississippi conference on account of impaired vision, underwent an operation at Memphis on Thursday, May 21, and it is reported that the physician gives encouragement that his sight will be recovered. Rev. B. M. Hunt, pastor Centenary McComb, accompanied his father to Memphis. We pray that Dr. Hunt shall be fully restored and his useful ministry continued for many years.

Dr. and Mrs. B. F. Jones celebrated their forty-ninth wedding anniversary on Sunday, May 17. In the morning at eleven o'clock, Dr. Jones preached at Beaureguard and held the second quarterly conference in the afternoon, after which Dr. and Mrs. Jones accompanied Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Bowen to Jackson where they enjoyed an anniversary dinner. The Advocate extends congratulations and prays that there may be many happy returns of the day.

The daily Times-Picayune for May 19, under the date line Vatican City, May 18, carried the following announcement: "John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Dr. Raymond Sullivan, of New York, Mrs. Sullivan and their daughter were received in special audience today by Pope Pius XI. They were presented by Monsignor Francis J. Spellman, of Whitman, Mass. His Holiness imparted the Apostolic Blessing to his visitors."

Mr. John H. Carter completed twenty-five years of service as Sunday school superintendent at Carrollton Avenue, New Orleans, on Sunday, May 17. Many messages of felicitation and congratulations were received. Among those who congratulated Mr. Carter were: Bishop Dobbs, Charles O. Chalmers, Dr. W. L. Doss, Jr., and Dr. J. Q. Schlisler. We congratulate Carrollton Avenue upon the splendid services of their superintendent, and pray that he may be spared to complete a term equal to that of the lamented John R. Pepper.

Rev. J. H. Felts, the hard-working presiding elder of the Corinth, Miss., district, sends in news item as follows: "New Albany reports 405 in Sunday school last Sunday, house filled, chairs being used at the 11 a. m. service, seventeen received into the church, and others applying for membership a little later. Holder is doing real work there. He is with Brother Sellman, Verona charge, in a meeting this week. The "Elder" had a good "all-day" service at Wesley, Kossuth charge, yesterday."

Rev. Jasper L. Smith has disproved the myth that thirteen is an unlucky number. On the thirteenth day of May he sent us thirteen subscriptions. Mrs. N. C. Cunningham has cooperated in securing the twenty-five subscriptions sent from the Gibson Memorial Church at Vicksburg. We thank Brother Smith and Mrs. Cunningham and pray that the Advocate will contribute somewhat toward the splendid accomplishments in that church which bears the name of Mississippi's first Methodist preacher.

Rev. John L. Williams, pastor, Louisiana Avenue Church, New Orleans, was a pleasant caller at the office on May 12, and we were delighted to know of the growth of the work in that section of the city. Mrs. Virginia Westbrook, of the Sophie Newcomb College of Music, is directing the choir, which is one of the best in the city, according to the pastor. Mrs. C. E. Mahaffy, daughter of Pastor Williams, is to conduct a Vacation Bible School and other plans are in the making to promote the work in that important field.

Rev. H. B. Thomason, pastor at Melder, La., has purchased the parsonage property at Bayou Chicot, La., and expects to make that his home when he retires from the active ministry. Bayou Chicot is now on the Marksville circuit. It is said that Bayou Chicot is the earliest Methodist congregation in Louisiana west of the Mississippi river. The appointment dates back to 1803. Richmond Nolly was on his way there when he died near Jena, La. We trust that Brother Thomason will find much pleasure in his historic surroundings.

RADIO PROGRAMS

Among the courtesies that have been extended to the new Seashore Methodist Assembly is the privilege of broadcasting a weekly program over radio station WGCM, of Gulfport, Miss.

This station is owned by the Great Southern Land Company, owners of the Great Southern Hotel of Gulfport and the Gulfport Country Club. While this station only has a power unit of 100 watts an application is before the Federal Radio Commission for increased power and is expecting favorable action.

Every Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock the Seashore Assembly goes on the air in a program of classical, semi-classical and sacred music. The last fifteen minutes of every hour's program is given over to singing requested hymns. The requests are increasing in number with each broadcast and more time will ultimately have to be devoted to this portion of the program.

These broadcasts are under the immediate direction of Mr. George Center, who arranges with local talent and helps to build the programs. Those who visit the coast this summer have a treat in store for them when the time comes for Mr. Center's baritone solos.

PRESBYTERIAN ASSEMBLY

Early in the spring a number of ministers in tthe Presbyterian church, U. S. A., visited the Assembly grounds and sought to make arrangements for a summer encampment of young people and Sunday school workers.

Dr. Glenn L. Sneed of New Orleans and pastor of the Westminster church, U. S. A., is moderator of the synod and he finally completed the details whereby this conference could be held on our Assembly grounds.

Their assembly will convene during the first part of August, immediately following the camp meeting. Among the visiting speakers will be Dr. I. T. Jones, pastor of the Madison Square Presbyterian Church of San Antonio, Texas. Dr. Jones is a speaker and author of prominence. Dr. and Mrs. Hodges of their headquarters staff will also be in attendance at the assembly and help to make it a success.

Contacts have been made with other church groups and from all appearances the summer of 1932 will see a number of denominations holding their summer sessions on our grounds.

PLAYGROUND ACTIVITIES

Miss Gladys Kirkwood, who is playground supervisor of the McComb City school system, has been engaged to direct the playground activities for the summer.

Miss Kirkwood is a graduate of Whitworth College and of Peabody. She has been at McComb for the past several years and through her work there has become known as a most efficient director.

She will supervise the children whose parents stay on the ground during the summer. In this manner the parent who come for a vacation and wish to assure their children the best of fun may know that they are being offered the best possible supervision.

This does not mean that Miss Kirkwood will be nurse-maid for children. It does mean that directed and supervised activities will be available for those who desrie it. No one will be required to play anything at any time, but the opportunity will be offered for many varied types of recreation.

Tennis courts will be ready for the tennis fan. Croquet courts will be completed for the younger children and adults who desire a less strenuous sport. Volley ball, baseball and other games will draw interested visitors from time to time.

A couple of innovations are being planned, but their secret is being closely guarded. If the necessary money is secured to install these sports something new in the way of competition will be offered everyone interested in one of the most popular pastimes. (This may be conceded to be a hint for some wealthy person to assist us right at this point.)

WATER SPORTS

People come to the Gulf Coast for four things: to swim, fish, eat, and sleep. When one sees the interest that the water has for the average coast resident or visitor one almost believes that among the fundamental urges is that to swim.

In seeking to assure all visitors to the Seashore Assembly a vacation full of interest it becomes necessary to provide a swimming instructor and life guard. While it is true that accidents are scarce it is best to avoid them. From time to time various persons may be scheduled to supervise the water sports but the one person who will give most of his time to it is Frank Casey of the Coplah-Lincoln Junior College.

He will have charge also of the boats which will be available for those interested in fishing. And he who fails to fish when he comes to the coast fails to enjoy one of the greatest pleasures known to man.

It is planned to schedule several water carnivals along the front and if these are successful they will likely draw hundreds of coast people to watch the contestants.

The wharf is being repaired and put in first class condition so that guests of the Assembly may enjoy to the fullest extent the water and water sports.

MISS CAMP BILOXIE

GOLF TOURNAMENT

The first annual golf tournament whose entrants will be ministers of the Methodis Episcopal Church, South, is announced for June 23 and 24. The course used will be that of the Biloxi Golf Club. Participants will play the qualifying rounds on the 23rd and the finals will be played the afternoon of the 24th. A handsome trophy will be awarded the preacher who turns in the lowest card.

This golf tournament will be played in two parts. The first half will be during the Divinity School, as herewith scheduled. The winner of this first heat will be called to defend his championship at the play-off which will be held during the Seashore Bible Conference.

The date for the second half will be August 26 and 27. The winner of the first contest will hold the trophy until the play-off at the Bible Conference and the winner of the final tournament will hold the trophy until the first summer tournament of 1932. Winning the trophy three times gives complete ownership. It does not necessarily have to be in succession, any three wins gives clear title.

Entries to this tournament are limited to clerical members of any annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

SOME PROBABLE RULES AND REGULATIONS

Every organization must find some means of support in order to exist and serve. No great endowment has been left this Seashore Methodist Assembly, neither do the conferences make great assessments for its support.

To offer our summer visitors some features which are new but worthwhile and to enable our guests to have vacations with pleasure and profit, a staff of assistants has been secured for the summer season. Some method to finance this larger program becomes necessary. So here are some regulations that will be enforced this summer:

1. During the summer season all persons on the Seahore Methodist Assembly grounds over nine years of age must have proper tickets covering the length of their stay, and there being on the Assembly grounds will be considered as voluntary submission and indicates a desire to conform to this and all other laws, rules and regulations pertaining to the government and management of the grounds. Tickets must be shown when requested.

The following tariffs will be in effect after June 1, 1931:

One night	$0.25
One week	1.00
One month	2.00
Season	5.00
Cottage owners, season and family ticket	5.00
Children, 9-13	Half Price
Children, under 9	No Charge

These tariffs are subject to change without notice.

All visitors staying overnight will be required to register at the Assembly office and secure admission tickets when registering.

2. No person, firm, or corporation shall do business or offer anything for sale at any time on the Assembly grounds without first securing a special permit from the executive secretary. All cottage owners who expect to cater to the needs of any summer visitor must also secure special permits.

3. No dogs or cats will be permitted on the grounds after June 1. (This ruling is made to protect the large number of squirrels on the grounds. It is also made in an effort to attract birds to these grounds. The large number of cats and dogs that have been permitted on the grounds heretofore have destroyed most of the birds.)

4. After 10:30 quiet must reign at Seashore Assembly. Loud talking, singing, playing of musical instruments, or any other disturbing conduct will not be permitted after 10:30.

5. On Sundays all unnecessary traffic, the offering of articles for sale, swimming after 8 a. m. and before 6 p. m., and the playing of public games are prohibited.

The above listed fees will be used to provide a director of supervised play; a swimming instructor and life guard; a musical director; playground equipment; boats and wharves, etc.

(All tentative as yet)

CAMP BILOXIE

By James W. Sells

Lure of pirate gold is again causing men to dig for buried treasure. Some recently discovered chart describes a magnolia tree with an overhanging limb pointing toward the east. Ten feet from the tree is buried the gold. And there they have been digging by the light of dim lanterns.

Workmen in clearing ground for Camp Biloxie on the grounds of the Seashore Methodist Assembly in Biloxi have come upon these pits, each of them dug according to this imagined chart. The most recent excavation was found while the footprints were fresh and the spade marks easily seen.

So this summer girls camping at Camp Biloxie will re-enact the dramatic scene of the planting of these chests. Who knows but that some of these campers may finally discover the treasure.

Camp Biloxie is a division of the Seashore Methodist Assembly and will operate in three parts. The first division is a girls' camp and is divided in two terms. The first term which will be held from June 8-20 will be for girls from 10-13 years of age, and the second term operates from June 22-July 4, and is for girls from 14-17 years of age.

These two term of the camp will be under the direction of Mrs. G. B. Jones, professor of religious education and psychology of Whitworth College, of Brookhaven. She will be assisted by Miss Ruby Chance of the Natchez city school system. These directors will have an able staff of trained assistants to direct the fifty girls enrolled in each term.

The boys' division of Camp Biloxie will operate during July, and the young people's division during August.

The uniform for the girls' division of the camp will be white sailor suits with green neckerchiefs. During each twelve-day term the campers will be busy learning how to swim, to sail boats, to take part in all kinds of athletics and how to become proficient in various arts and crafts.

Discussion groups under the leaderhip of experienced counsellors will lead discussions on "Personal Religion" and "My Body, Its Nature and Needs."

Among the counsellors are Miss Frances Harrell of Hattiesburg who will have charge of the arts and crafts; Miss Chance, who will teach dramatic art; Miss Berta Nall, of Hattiesburg, who will lead one of the discussion groups, and several others yet to be selected.

The registration of Camp Biloxie is limited to fifty girls during each term, but girls wishing to register for both terms have that privilege by making reservations in advance.

Each camper will be given individual attention and the safety of each person will be cared for by experts in each activity group.

New cabins are being erected to house the campers and each cabin will be screened and furnished with lights and water.

VACATION DAYS

By Mrs. Geo. S. Brown

"Only three more moons before vacation days," a man was heard to remark the other day.

"Where will you go for a vacation?" asked a friend.

"To the Seashore Camp Ground," he replied, "or rather to the Seashore Assembly, as it is now called, but a rose is just as sweet by any other name.' "

KELLER LODGE.
Place of Friendly Fellowship

"Oh, ho," laughed the friend, "I thought you were really going somewhere. Surely, you don't call that a vacation? Why, you've been going to that same place for twenty -five or thirty years. Don't you ever get weary of the same place? What is there anyhow that proves such a lodestone?"

Now, this man wouldn't be the only one to answer these questions with enthusiasm, for there are scores of people who go every year, who leave reluctantly in the fall and return eagerly the first summer days.

We would say first of all it is the very atmosphere of the place. You feel its warmth, its friendliness, its brotherly spirit—you feel nearer to God.

It is a beautiful place. You look at the trees in their variagated dresses of green, at the velvety grass, at the fleecy clouds over head. You sit on the pier and look at the twinkling "lights along the shore that never grow dim." You look up at the sky and see the myriads of stars or the silvery moon reflecting its glorious beams upon the water, and you exclaim with the Psalmist, "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth His handiwork." You feel the cool, refreshing breezes, listen to the music of the waves lashing upon the shore and feel a peace within your soul. There have been months of rush and frenzy, telephone and door bells ringing, calls here, there and everywhere, and it is so restful to come to this quiet place, to be free from household cares, to just relax—read, write, do fancy work, chat with your neighbor—just anything at any time. if you crave excitement, Gulfport and Biloxi are as near as "down town," with picture shows and varied amusements. Then, there are the drives—smooth and beautiful if you seek the shore or the woods; delightful places to picnic. All are generous with their autos—you can ride a different direction every day.

The nicest place to get acquainted is the pier, where folks congregate every evening to see the glorious sunset over the water and tarry until bedtime. The young folks bring out their musical instruments and familiar songs and hymns float out over the night air. Some like sailing parties—some go rowing—and nearly everybody revels in the bathing. The water is shallow enough near shore for the children, and deep enough further out for swimming. Truly it is a children's paradise. They are either playing in the sand, wading or crabbing all day long and are little care to the mother. The men would say, "don't leave out the best of all, the fishing." Dignified forlorne professors, doctors, ministers, don overall or khaki suits and day after day they go, nearly always returning with "a big catch," ready to divide with all their neighbors, and many are the marvelous fish tales they tell in the evening as "the birds of a feather flock together." If a newcomer hasn't a boat, he is invited to go with some one—such a spirit of friendliness prevails and all day long dainty dishes are passed next door. When one rejoices, all rejoice; when one weeps, all weep in love and sympathy.

The Sunday school may not be exactly up-to-date, but there is a fervor and an inspiration in it—classes go under the trees and teachers volunteer and there are social gatherings during the week of the varied departments. When the old Tabernacle bell rings for Story Hour, there is a scampering among the children and all on the Grounds wend their way in one direction. Little folks not only love to listen to stories, but to tell them too. It is surprising the amount of talent to be found among the people who come and go so there are always those who will sing or play or recite.

Ministers over on the Grounds for a short stay preach and some of the brainiest men are heard during Divinity School, camp meetings and other religious gatherings.

O, yes, there is a continuous feast there for body, mind and soul. If you go once, there is no need to urge you to come back. Something tugs at your heart and just pulls you there. If you haven't been "come on in, the swimmin's fine!"

RECOLLECTIONS OF OLD CAMP MEETING DAYS

By Rev. John F. Foster, D.D.

The history of the Seashore Camp Meeting is unique in many ways, and were we to attempt writing a history of its origin, growth and eventful incidents, a volume of considerable size would be needed to tell but a little of the same.

Recollections of the early days are fresh with me as yesterday and the peronalities which come before me from out the past are many indeed.

SYLVAN SOLITUDE AT S. M. A.

Among them are Bishops Keener, Parker, Morrison, Galloway and Tigert.

Among the outstanding ministers are Drs. C. K. Marshall, John Matthews, John Hammon, J. B. Walker, W. H. Watkins, H. D. Moore, A. J. Lamar, C. W. Carter, J. O. Anderson, Mark Anderson, J. B. A. Ahrens, Harvey Johnson, Sam Small and Sam Jones and a host of others too numerous to mention.

Among the laymen were such men as W. R. Stewart, L. N. Dantzler, Price Williams, Wm. Otis, G. W. W. Goodwin, Philip Hallahan, Ed. Notley, J. M. Herring, Henry Ware, Dr. E. F. Griffin, J. H. Keller, B. O. L. Rayne, E. P. Mackie, Mr. Hopper and W. H. Foster.

The idea of this gathering place for Methodists was the thought of W. H. Foster, the father of the writer.

Coming to him so soon after the war, when no one had any money, it took persistent agitation and frequent presentation to secure support and backing.

It was first worked with in the New Orleans District Conference and later Mobile District of the Alabama Conference joined in the movement, but for many years the Lakeshore District of the Mississippi Conference took no part, and when they did they did not give themselves to it very largely for some years.

The Board of Trustees were first from only the New Orleans District and later from the Mobile District and were in number thirteen, eight from New Orleans District and five from Mobile District, and when Seashore District came into the movement they were given two members on the Board, these two being Dr. L. F. Griffin and Henry Ware.

Dr. Griffin, as chairman of the executive committee for years, gave himself to the work with marked zeal and was indeed a most valuable member of the Board.

Wm. Otis and Price Williams had the interest of the assembly very near to their hearts and were always ready to make sacrifices for the same.

J. H. Keller loaned the money for the purchase when chances of return of the loan were doubted and later refunded all funds advanced, making liberal gifts himself, however, annually on camp meeting Tuesdays when a collection was taken for expenses and debts.

Philip Werlein, I judge, was the largest contributor on these annual occasions. The old days,

Some Histo

The first tourist to visit Biloxi, the popular the Mississippi Coast, was d'Iberville, gallant who carried the proud Fleur de Lis flag of France planted the first capital of the vast Louisiana stretching from the Gulf to Canada. This mighty of land being first governed by Biloxi gives the City the claim to one of the oldest places in the States.

Seven flags have flown over Biloxi—the is to be found today. A boulder marks the spot the French landed. It is located, together with at the north end of the new concrete d'Iberville

Louisiana territory before New Orleans or Mobile d'Iberville first met the Biloxi tribe of Indians his arrival. Even though way down on the Gulf of SAMPSON C. GIVINS was the oldest child of Thomas and Mary Jane Givins. Born March 3, 1861, he became a member of the church at the age of 16. He became a consecrated Christian giving gladly his time and talents to the church. He attended all the meetings his church and often led in prayer meetings himself. He lives today in the memory of his family and friends as a great Christian spirit. His wife, three children, twenty-nine grandchildren, and nine great-grandchildren, live today to bless and cherish his memory. The last ten years of his life were lived without eyesight, but his faith in God grew up to the very last when he happily fell aslepp.

He was laid to rest in the old Antioch Cemetery, Rev. R. Strickland officiating at the ceremony.

MRS. H. B. SKIPPER.

MRS. SALLIE CHAMBERS was born November 18, 1844, in Madison County, Miss., and died April 20, 1931; her spirit took its flight to realms above to dwell in the place Christ, whom she loved, has gone to prepare. When quite young she was converted and joined the Methodist Church, South. She was a consecrated Christian and loyal to her church. If there was any church program, she was always ready to do her part; it was a joy to serve her Christ. To know her was to love her. She will be missed in the religious and social life of the community. She leaves one son and two daughters and a host of friends to mourn her going. She was laid to rest in the Contrell Cemetery in Leake county, near Lena, Miss. Her funeral was conducted by her pastor. It can be truly said that she was a real Christian.

Just Called Home

Here we see a happy household broken by death's icy hand:
God has called a life most precious to the higher, better land.
She was ready for the summons to the land of fadeless day,
And upon her Saviour's bosom, with a smile she went away.
How we miss her blessed sunshine and sweetness of her love,
But we bow to our Redeemer, for He needeth her above.
God has called her to glory, but we hope to see her again.

Her pastor,
H. E. RALEY.

May 9, 1882-March 3, 1931, measures the earthly sojourn of A. SIDNEY AINSWORTH, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Ainsworth, of Sartinville. According to God's Word, or while he himself knew whether Bro. "Sid" had the type of conversion which some declare one must experience before one can be saved, or not; but this I know, his consecrated life and unbounded love for God was an undisputable evidence that he was a child of God. Frail in body and a sufferer most of his life he was never embittered. He was always kind, tender and affectionate to his loved ones. His sweet, sincere and happy nature made a friend of everyone who knew him. The love of God shed abroad in his heart radiated in his countenance when listening to the expounding of pleaded to the people to live righteously. He was a faithful steward in the Methodist church, and a beloved Sunday school superintendent. The true Christian character which he posessed was developed by a sane, spirit-filled father and devout mother, who constantly live and teach God's truths. He was laid to rest in the Sartinville cemetery, amidst a host of sorrowing friends and a number of bereaved relatives, who continue to miss him and his Christian labors. All who knew him were enriched by his life. The writer was assisted in the funeral services by Rev. M. K. Miller, a close friend to Rev. T. M. Ainsworth, brother to the deceased. The Masons impressively consigned the body of their worthy brother to the earth. So let us ever cherish his memory. He leaves a wife, children, father and mother, brothers and sisters. "Let us labor, therefore, to enter into that rest."

E. D. SIMPSON, Pastor.

"WEIRD AND TRUE"

Like an old worn-out mother,
Deserted for another
And left to pine and die alone,
With echoes of the past,
Her halls are all aghast,
We seem to hear her brick walls moan.

There has been none greater Than your Alma Mater,
None has given sweeter concern.
Then come to her rescue
Again she would bless you—
Too late to heed her heart's last yearn!

In some other quarters
Are lovely young daughters
She should have called her very own;
Dear children of the past,
Come to her rescue fast—
Too late! We've heard her dying grown!

The once beautiful grounds
Where loneliness abounds,
Are with weeds and grass overgrown.
Once there was gay chatter
And light feet would patter—
Our old college is dead and gone!

OLD MEXICO BUILDS SCHOOLS TO EDUCATE CHILDREN

"Everyone of us will pay the teacher one cent daily; we, being fifty-three in number, will pay consequently fifty-three cents daily; this amount will be regularly collceted by the treasurer of the school committee and delivered to the teacher precisely on the last day of every month."

Thus the neighbors of Boxaxni in the municipality of San Salvador, in the State of Hidalgo, in solemn conclave assembled bow before Professor Jose del Carmen Solis, the representative of the Mexican Department of Public Education, to establish and maintain a school. Marvin Pittman tells the story under the title "New Schools in Old Mexico" in the May Journal of the National Education Association.

The village of Boxaxui is populated by members of one of the poorest tribes of Mexico. They live on the slopes of a mountain [illegible] where limestone and cacti of the most thorny varieties make living hard. To an American, human existence in such barren surroundings seems impossible, yet these poor people, just as many others equally handicapped are doing since the new day in Old Mexico, are turning their faces to the light of education.

"We will, by turns, give the teacher meals of the quality which our poor economic circumstances will permit," chants the small but earnest community assembled in public contract with Inspector Carmen Solis, a contract which sounds more like a ritual than a business agreement.

Somewhere in the expression of that obligation there is an accent of hope for a tomorrow that will bring abundance where privation has reigned through centuries, that will bring a ray of light to souls that have lived in darkness of ignorance.

To an observer, the solemnity of the vow is not untouched by humor in the words reflecting the primitive habits of the people, which express a promise "to deliver these meals to the teacher in such hours as not to interfere with his school work."

Awakened Mexico is going about the establishment of a school system with a grim determination that should inspire increased zeal and faith in education even among those who have long enjoyed its opportunities.

True, the new schools in poorer rural Mexico show the poverty out of which they are growing. The citizens build their school houses out of logs as a community project. Teachers are sometimes paid as little as three dollars per month—meals delivered. Few trained teachers are available. Professor Pittman found one school taught by a thirteen-year-old boy. But the citizens support them not only with a pittance drawn from a marginal existence, but they support them with their hands and hearts. They surround them with gardens to make them beautiful. The adults themselves attend when they can.

A school committee of five of the best men in the village serve as the allies of the teacher. They guide the erection of the new school building, the teacher's residence, the open-air theater, and the community medical dispensary. They direct the construction of the rabbit warren, the pig sty, the chicken house, the bee hives, and the pigeon roost—part of the equipment of a modern Meixcan rural school.

A group of five workers constitute the health committee of the community and works under the guidance of the teacher, the doctor and nurse from the cultural mission, for the betterment of the community health.

The federal inspector of schools serves as the stimulating missionary, the messenger of the new faith. So long as the schools are in a primitive and beginning state they are designated "Circuit Schools." As rapidly as the federal government is able the Circuit Schools are taken over by the government, and they become Federal Rural Schools. These are better equipped, better taught, and better administered.

A unique system of teacher training has been developed to meet the needs of these Circuit Schools. Thirteen Traveling Cultural Missions have been established and are operating to train the teachers who are already in service. Each traveling mission consists of a faculty of six or eight instructors. There is a capable director, a teacher of household arts, a teacher of petty industries, a teacher of music, a teacher of physical education, a teacher of agriculture, a teacher of arts, a teacher of school organization and methods of instruction, a physician and a social worker.

These "flying teacher colleges" are rapidly improving the work of untrained teachers, though many of them can attend the courses offered for no longer than a month at a time.—N. E. A.

NEW DISTRICT SECRETARY FOR THE SEASHORE DISTRICT

Mrs. R. E. Johnson, Box 151, Gulfport, Miss., has assumed the duties of district secretary of the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference.

Mrs. J. W. Sells, who was elected at the annual meeting could not serve.

MERRYVILLE SOCIETY REPORTS

The Methodist Missionary Society conducted a missionary voice program at the church on Monday afternoon, May 18th. Twenty members were present.

Opening Song: "The Rock That Is High Than I." A beautiful Devotional was given by Mrs. W. H. Yawn; subject, "Facing Reality." Prayer was offered by Mrs. J. F. Waltman. A talk on Poland by Mrs. Toll Fuller. An article from Voice by Mrs. Lee Hilderbrant, and Mission News Topics by Mrs. Griffin were features of the program.

Mrs. D. W. Smith, president, closed the meeting with prayer.

MRS. JOHNNIE GRIFFIN,
Supt. of Publicity.

THE ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Alexandria conference met in Pleasant Hill at 10 o'clock Friday, May 8. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. O. E. Grant, district secretary. Brother Dring, local pastor, welcomed the visitors to the hospitality of their city.

Following this, the entire body sang Hymn 153, "Work For the Night Is Coming." Responsive Reading 327 in the Cokesbury Hymnal was led by Mrs. Grant. Then Mrs. J. C. Brown, of Pleasant Hill, led in prayer.

Mrs. Griffin, of Boyce, very ably gave the response to the welcome address. Mrs. J. L. Brunson was elected to serve as secretary for the meeting. A motion was made and carried to defer the roll call until the afternoon session.

Mrs. Grant gave a summing up of the Alexandria District Conference's accomplishments during the year of 1930.

The first on the program was Mrs. J. W. Cunningham, Pleasant Hill, who gave a very interesting article, "In appreciation of Mrs. F. F. Stephens." Mesdames W. D. Bozone and T. L. Owen, Alexandria, gave reports on the Annual Conference held in Baton Rouge in March.

Dr. Hull, Pleasant Hill, gave us a special treat by singing, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say." "The Unfinished Missionary Task," Mrs. J. C. Palmer, Natchitoches. "Reaching the children by new means and plans," Mrs. Queen, Boyce; "Making Our Auxiliaries Young by Reaching Our Young Women." Mrs. Powers. Mrs. W. W. Holmes, Alexandria, conducted the quiet hour. Her talk being based on the last chapter of Luke. Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, Natchitoches, dismissed us with a word of prayer.

After an hour of recess, during which we enjoyed a wonderful lunch, Mrs. Grant again called the assembly to order, opening with Hymn 85, "In Christ There Is No East or West." The first subject on the afternoon program was, "The Plans of Our Spiritual Life." After an inspiring address, Mrs. W. S. Mitchell, Natchitoches, closed her talk by having the entire body of women come to the altar for a word of prayer.

"Sunday Schools and Missions" was discussed by Mrs. Holmes. "Making Mission and Bible Study Standard" was given by Mrs. Grant. Again Mrs. Holmes came forward to substitute for an absent member on the subject. "Our Mt. Sequoyah Assembly." Mrs. Holmes so sweetly and graciously supplied all needed information that Mrs. Grant bestowed the title of "Bureau of Information" upon her. Miss Irwin, Pleasant Hill, rendered a special song, "I Know What You Want Me To Do, Dear Lord."

A playlet, "Publicity Pays," was enacted by a group of Natchitoches ladies. Mrs. W. T. Cunningham explained a little booklet setting forth the work of the publicity superintendents, and, incidentally making an appeal for subscriptions to the Missionary Voice.

Houma Mission and St. Mark's Community Center and Conference Recommendations was touched upon at this time by Mrs. Grant. Immediately after this "Open Forum" was held. After completing unfinished business the place of the next meeting was brought up. Alexandria adults and Alexandria Gleaners extended an invitation to meet with them in joint session of both portions of the District. The invition was gladly accepted.

Upon calling roll it was found that the following auxiliaries were represented: Alexandria Adults, Boyce, Natchitoches, Pleasant Hill and Marthaville.

After a collection was taken we were dismissed by Mrs. J. C. Brown, of Pleasant Hill.

Respetcfully,
MRS. J. L. BRUNSON.

ZONE NO. 3 OF JACKSON DISTRICT MEETS

Zone 3 of the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference, W. M. S., met with Braxton April 30th for their second meeting, with a splendid delegation, Mendenhall leading in the number of delegates.

Mrs. Paul Gates, of D'Lo, Zone chairman, presided, and Mrs. Sam Dear, of Florence, was elected secretary.

Mrs. H. P. Gates, of Mendenhall, used the 23rd Psalm for devotional, stressing the fact that the Great Shepherd promised to lead us not only "beside the still waters" and in "pleasant pastures green," but He leads us through "the valleys"—discouragements, want, disease and sorrows—if we but trust to His rod and staff as He guides and leads us. "His yoke is easy, His burden is light, if He is our Shepherd.

Mrs. J. M. Morse, of Capitol street, Jackson, gave an interesting report of the annual meeting at Gulfport. Our hearts yearn to sit in next time at this great feast of good things.

Mrs. Floyd Mahaffey, of Braxton, expressed sincere appreciation for the privilege of attending the Council meeting in Memphis as our district secretary, and gave a report of the work of our Council that is made up of many units just like our own auxiliary, yet reaches far as a million dollar soul-saving corporation. Hearts "were strangely stirred" as the wonderful possibilities were portrayed.

The Braxton women at the noon hour served a most delicious plate lunch, assisted by the young girls of the church. This social hour among women filled with Christian fellowship, in a place so beautified with flowers, brings encouragement and most pleasant memories to many a hard working stay-at-home woman, who has been able to attend the zone meeting and is hungry not only to hear the "Glad Tidings," but for the social contact.

In the afternoon Mrs. Will Brady of Mendenhall, spoke on the W. C. T. U. work and gave out interesting new leaflets. Mrs. J. Kelso of D'Lo, charmed her audience with the reading, "St. Peter at the Golden Gate," that would no doubt have comforted "friend husband" could he have heard.

Mrs. George Carraway of Mendenhall sang "Somebody Cares," that carried a sweet message to the tired, discouraged woman. The auxiliaries gave, at this time, helpful reports of the best feature in their society for the past quarter. Mrs. B. E. Walker, of Capitol Street, Jackson, led the discussion of ways and means of creating more interest in Mission Study in circles. Mrs. Chas. Stralt of Mendenhall, told of the new rulings for the young woman's organization.

Mrs. Jim Dear, of Florence, urged that we make greater effort to send more soap coupons NOW to Orphanage.

The largest delegation from any zone to our district meeting was to be the slogan for the week.

After a rising vote of thanks to the hostesses, Mrs. Bell dismissed us with prayer.

We will meet in July with D'Lo.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Dear Dr. Decell: Brother Lord asked me to send to the Advocate this week items from our Board in his stead. We are making considerable progress in our training work. Last week Brother Lord closed a Standard school at Tupelo with good results and the writer a Cokesbury class at Wheeler. Brother McCay, pastor at Baldwyn and Wheeler, is held in high esteem by his people. He is truly a sane leader and doing constructive work. We are perfecting our summer schedule for our Cokesbury classes. In addition to our office workers we will have in the field this summer several well trained, prepared and approved Cokesbury instructors from Millsaps College. We are anxious to keep these splendid young men busy week after week each working in separate districts. In order to do this—save traveling expenses, etc.—we would like for our rural preachers to let us know when and where they wish a Cokesbury class. This will help us in making out our schedule.

All things are ready for our Standard Training School at Grenada College, June 8-13. We are expecting a good attendance and one of the best schools ever held in our conference. Following the Standard Training School, June 15-19, will be the Young People's Assembly at Grenada College. It looks now like the Assembly will be a howling success. Our director of the Young People's department, Rev. W. L. Robinson, of Coffeeville, is leaving nothing undone that would add to the success of this assembly. It is great that our church program includes all the young people of the conference. This is as it should be. Brother L. M. James of Potts Camp, tells me that he intends to bring his entire League. Good for Brother James. He is some hustler.

Our Sunday School Day receipts are coming in very well. We are hearing from schools this year that never observed the day before. Sunday School Day offerings have been remitted as follows: Aberdeen district, 17 schools; Columbus district, 5 schools (Corinth district, 7 schools; Freeville district, 9 schools; Greenwood district, 9 schools; Grenada district, 9 schools; Sardis district, 9 schools. Amount from each district as follows: Aberdeen, $107.03; Columbus district, $33.87; Corinth district, $104.41; Greenville district, $58.58; Greenwood, $80.21; Grenada, $88.87; Sardis, $58.77. Total to date, $590.81.

We appreciate this splendid response and trust that every school in the conference will observe Sunday School Day and make a liberal offering to our work. We cordially invite our good editor to visit us—our Training School at Grenada, etc.

Cordially,

E. G. MOHLER,
Rural Extension Secretary, N. Miss. Conference.

Epworth League

NOTICE TO EPWORTH LEAGUERS

Dear Young People: A pamphlet entitled "Getting the Most From the Summer Assembly" has been mailed throughout the southern conference by Nashville office. It very clearly sets forth the reasons for choosing your best leadership for representation at your Conference Assembly. On the second page is an article entitled "Instruct Your Delegates." Under this caption there are twelve important items. Because of the importance of these items and the fact that the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences will be concerned I am giving them in this letter.

Interesting news continues to come in concerning the delegates at both assemblies. If your church is not being represented you will be "behind the crowd" in promoting your local program, especially in the young people's division. Read the following points and talk them over with your delegates. Remind them that they are representing your entire church and no one organization. Let the whole church share in this project. It is the most important thing that has come your way in a long time.

Instruct Your Delegates

Let your delegates know what you expect them to get from the Assembly. There are certain definite things that they should take along and other definite things they should bring back. The following suggestions to delegates may help:

1. Go prepared to take in the full program. The delegates who work hard and play hard, follow the rules, and "play the game" are the ones who will get most for themselves, give most at the Assembly, bring back most to the folks at home.

2. Work for credit. Two units toward the new Christian Culture Diploma may be earned at the Assembly by those sixteen years of age and over. Delegates who don't work for credit aren't popular at Assemblies and for good reasons.

3. Choose your courses on the basis of the needs of your group back home. If no one from your church has had the new course on Program and Organization of the Young People's Division, one of your delegates should plan to take this course. Where more than one delegate goes they should by all means take different courses at every period. If possible, secure a copy of your own Assembly program in advance. Look it over to see what courses would be of most help to your own group. Don't tie yourself down too hard, but talk the matter over with the group before you leave home with the idea of choosing the courses that will help most in meeting local needs.

4. Attend the business meetings, and all meetings for your district. You will learn a lot about your Conference organization and get a lot of new ideas at these meetings.

5. Keep your eyes open for new ideas. Maybe it will be a new game at the recreation period, a new pep song, a new hymn, a plan or program that some other group has carried out—there are all sorts of ways to learn things aside from the classroom. Look out for these ideas and put them in your notebook for future reference.

6. Get acquainted with your district secretary. Your district secretary is your very present help in time of trouble and your counsellor and adviser at all times. Get acquainted; talk over your problems with him; let him know how he can help you. Your Conference officers and the central office representatives are also there to help you. Don't hesitate to introduce yourself and to ask questions. They will be glad to help.

7. Mix with other folks. Ask questions and share experiences. Sometimes you will find that some other group has hit upon a solution to your most vexing problem, or maybe you have an idea that will help solve the other fellow's problems.

8. Be friendly. Don't wait for the other fellow to make advances; he may be just as new as you are. An Assembly group is one big family. Get acquainted. Try to help the other fellow have a good time. If there is a foreign student at your Assembly, be sure to meet him.

9. Take along a list of questions or problems on which the group back home would like to have help. One meeting preceding your leaving may well be given to a discussion of what these problems are.

10. Go prepared to make a pledge to the Young People's Mission Special. Talk it over with the group at home before you leave. Get their authorization to make a generous pledge for the year.

11. Keep a notebook. You think you will remember all the fine ideas you get and the good things you hear. You won't unless you write them down. Remember that you will need to report to your group back home. Some delegates come back and say they had a grand time and heard some wonderful speeches and had some good teachers—and that doesn't help anybody. Plan to bring home definite ideas, concrete suggestions that can be put into practice at home. The notebook will help.

LIQUID OR TABLETS
Relieves a Headache or Neuralgia in 30 minutes, checks a Cold the first day, and checks Malaria in three days.
666 Salve for Baby's Cold.

12. Take along some play clothes, your tennis racket, hiking shoes, bathing suit, your Bible, your good disposition, and an open mind. Go joyously, earnestly, hopefully, prayerfully, and you will come home renewed in body, mind, and spirit, with new help and inspiration for the folks who made it possible for you to go.

Use Your Delegates

Send your delegates away feeling that they go as your representatives. Have a special prayer for them in the last meeting of your group before they leave. Let them know that your prayers follow them and that you are counting on them. Give them a chance when they get back not only to report but to put into practice the new ideas and enthusiasm they have gotten. Many an Assembly delegate has gone home to find that the group isn't interested and that they throw a wet blanket on his enthusiasm and new plans. If you help your group to feel a sense of responsibility for their delegate and help the delegate to feel a sense of responsibility for getting the most for the group, Summer Assembly will yield the riches possible returns.

ELIZABETH LANGFORD.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

We are on the home stretch now. We will soon be in Grenada at our young people's assembly. Are you going to make it on time? A splendid program has been arranged and there is every reason to believe that we are going to have a great time. You will be the loser if you miss it. We want you to be there in time for the first class on Monday afternoon. Leave all of your worries at home and come to the assembly expecting to have a great time. The time is June 15-19.

We have a district secretary up in the Corinth district who is always doing something to promote the young people's work. She is Miss Dorothy Smith of Iuka. On Mother's Day she and the Epworth Leaguers of Iuka put on a splendid Mother's Day program, which was enjoyed by the people there. Miss Dorothy is expecting to bring a large delegation from her district to the assembly this year. One question which she asked every dele gation at the district institute the other day was, "Do you expect to have a representative at the assembly in June?" And most everyone said that they expected to be there.

The fine work which is being done (gratis), by all of our district secretaries is very much appreciated. They are rendering a very valuable service to the church and they are doing it gladly. Miss Rosa Lee Price of the Greenwood district is already planning a district institute for her district to be held soon after the assembly.

We hope you are making some progress with your mission special during this month. It would be a great day for us in this conference if every Epworth League in the conference would take an offering for missions. That is the goal which we are trying to reach. Will you help us reach it? It is not an impossible task. It just takes a little team work. Just a little of the spirit of co-operation. Let us manifest the real Epworth League spirit and make it one hundred per cent. Take an offering for missions before you come to the assembly in June.

Grenada district is planning to make it one hundred per cent in the observance of Sunday school day. All the pastors in the district have said that they expected to observe the day and take an offering. We hope the rest of the brethren will do likewise within the next few days.

Yours sincerely,

WM. L. ROBINSON.

FROM BILOXI, MISS.

Dear Editor: The revival meeting at Epworth Church, Wesley Memorial charge, closed on the night of May 14. Rev. E. L. Ledbetter, our pastor at Pascagoula, did the preaching very acceptably. He won the hearts of the people from the beginning, consequently, the congregation steadily increased. The preaching was such as produces conviction in the hearts of the hearers, and at the same time, pointed them to the Saviour in a very effective way. The meeting was most successful, both from the standpoint of attendance and of results. There were sixteen additions to the membership of the church, ten by letter and six by profession of faith. The church has been materially strengthened as a result of the meeting.

The pastor is leaving for Dallas, Texas, where he expects to enter Southern Methodist University for some months of theological work. Rev. Olia Nix, from Handsboro, takes his place here.

Most sincerely,

MURRAY COX.

REVIVAL AT MANGUM MEMORIAL, SHREVEPORT, LA.

Dear Dr. Decell: On last Sunday we closed a two weeks' series of services at Mangum Memorial, which resulted in a most wonderful revival. The preaching was done by the pastor. Brother Merlin McKinnon, choir director, assisted by a large chorus choir, had charge of the music. The music was inspiring all through the meeting. The attendance was fine from the opening service to the close, and the interest seemed to be at high tide all through the meeting. The spirit of co-operation at Mangum Memorial is beautiful indeed.

The presiding elder, Dr. H. T. Carley, and the Methodist pastors of the city co-operated with us in the revival. Dr. Angie Smith, pastor of First Church, led a large delegation from his church one night during the meeting, and Rev. R. T. Ware, pastor, led a large delegation from Park Avenue Church another night. The choir of Park Avenue furnished special music that night.

The meeting resulted in a greatly revived membership as well as in a number of additions to the membership of the church. More will be received into the church next Sunday.

Yours sincerely,

G. A. MORGAN, Pastor.

D. M. KEY, PRESIDENT

FROM ROXIE, MISS.

Dear Advocate:

The revival meeting of the Roxie Methodist church is in progress this week. The attendance is excellent and all denominations are cooperating splendidly in carrying on the work. Rev. Percy Vaughan, pastor of the church, is conducting his own revival. His sermons are truly filled with the spirit, and the congregations are held in thoughtful attention. He makes the way of salvation plain in his appealing and touching sermons on Repentance and Faith. We feel that his messages are straight from God, and that great good is being accomplished. It would be of great benefit to everyone to attend the services and hear God's word so clearly and powerfully portrayed.

The series of services will be brought to a close Sunday night, May 17th, and without a doubt the Christian spirit of the community will rise to a greater height than ever before.

I thank you.

Respectfully,
ANNETTE WILKINSON, Reporter.

SARDIS DISTRICT PREACHERS MEET

The Sardis District Preachers' meeting was held at Davis Chapel on the Sardis Circuit, for the month of May, with twenty-one preachers present, four of whom were superannuates, and two visitors from other sections.

Rev. W. D. Bennett, of Crenshaw, president of the association, called the meeting to order and had charge of the program. Rev. J. D. Simpson, of Byhalia, conducted devotionals and Rev. J. B. Conner, a former pastor of the Davis Chapel community, preached at the eleven o'clock hour.

Lunch was served under the shade of the spreading oaks, in real picnic fashion, at the noon hour. At the afternoon session, which was called at 1:15, Rev. J. M. Bradley, presiding elder of the Sardis District, spoke before the body on the topic of "Making the Gospel More Effective."

Rev. F. P. Jernigan, of the St. Louis Conference, who was present, was introduced to the meeting, as was also Rev. W. W. Jones, brother of the pastor host, Rev. W. M. Jones. The four superannuates who were present were; Rev. E. H. Rook, of Como; Rev. T. H. Porter, of Senatobia; Rev. W. A. Bowlen, of Olive Branch, and Rev. M. A. Burns, of Longtown.

Others having part in the discussions were: Rev. C. T. Floyd, of Sardis; Rev. J. D. Beasley, of Coldwater, and Rev. J. D. Simpson, who led the closing devotional and consecration service. Among those present were: A. P. Ashmore, W. P. Bailey, W. M. Jones, R. C. Mayo, C. T. Floyd, J. D. Simpson, J. B. Conner, E. F. Tuker, E. L. Jernigau, W. D. Beunett, W. C. Beasley, W. W. Hartsfleld, P. F. Luter, E. G. Potts, J. M. Bradley and R. P. Neblett.

THE NORTHERN GROUP OF NEWTON DISTRICT

The pastors and laymen of the Northern Group of the Newton District met at Harperville Methodist Church, May 5, at 10 o'clock for their regular monthly meeting.

The following subjects were helpfully discussed: "The pastor's attitude toward prohibition and law enforcement," lead by Rev. A. J. Davis, while several others spoke briefly on the subject; "The place of the layman in the revival," led by Brother Marlow. Before adjourning for the noon hour Bro. Gatlin spoke of the need for all to do their best for the Advocate and kingdom extension, and P. L. Blackwell urged the observance of layman's day in every church.

We all enjoyed the social feature of the noon hour and the splendid dinner served by the ladies of the church.

The devotional for the afternoon session was led by Rev. E. M. Allen and the following subjects were discussed: "The need of the study of Christian literature," by P. L. Blackwell; "Vacation schools, Sunday school day, and League anniversary," by Miss Doris Alford; "Main work of the local board of Christian education," by Rev. J. B. Cain. Before we adjourned Rev. H. E. Raley spoke briefly in the interest of the golden cross and P. L. Blackwell offered a resolution of thanks for the splendid dinner and cordial welcome that we received from the pastor host and his people, which was adopted by a rising vote.

Our next meeting will be in September, the place and time to be fixed by the presiding elder and chairman.

We regret that several of the pastors were absent this time and urge that we have a one hundred per cent attendance in September.

T. E. NICHOLSON, Sec'y.

FROM MERRYVILLE, LA.

On Sunday, May 10, Rev. J. F. Waltman of the Methodist Church of Merryville, preached the Baccalaureate sermon to a graduating class of twenty-five.

The exercises were held in the auditorium of the High School building.

The text was Phillipians 3:7-11. Dr. Waltman in is address asked: "Was Paul a success or a failure?" He brought out the thought that Paul was a living success in his day and an example of what is a success even in this day. "Though dead yet he speaketh." Dr. Waltman said that education was not everything, yet neither was it nothing; having its place in life and being rightly used makes life a great success.

The auditorium was well filled with an attentive crowd. Rev. Mr. Miller, of the Baptist Church, led in prayer. The assembly sang "Come Thou Almighty King," "America" and "Onward Christian Soldiers." A High School chorus sang "The Heavens Are Telling." Miss Virginia Taylor sang the "Holy City."

USED TO SUFFER EACH MONTH

"I used to have severe headaches each month," writes Mrs. Henry Heape, of 248 Lincoln St., Savannah, Ga. "I suffered a great deal. The pain in my head seemed to run down the back of my neck. I felt like I was drawing back. I would get very nauseated and have chills. I would have to go to bed. My mother and my mother-in-law both had taken Cardui, and I knew it was good. I bought a bottle, and after I began taking it I felt stronger. I kept on taking Cardui, for I found that by doing so I could avoid the headaches I have taken about eight bottles of Cardui."

RECOLLECTIONS OF CAMP MEETING DAYS

before electric lights, when square boxes raised from posts above ground and two foot square were used for large bon-fires by way of illumination lent a weird aspect to the grounds and made them far more a theatre than in later years.

The old days were marked by the singing and everyone joined in with a zest and zeal which was most impressive. "I will arise and go to Jesus," "When I can read my title clear to a mansion in the Sky," "O Happy Day," "I am bound for the promised land," "On Jordan's stormy banks I stand," were among the most popular songs. The experience meetings at 9:30 a. m. were meetings of marked interest and power and were not lacking in fervor and zeal. In the waves of emotion then felt souls were lifted and uplifted until heaven and earth seemed to meet as we sat in the presence of God.

The style or type of the preaching was evangelistic and you felt that God was, and that Christ died to save, and the verities of the gospel were all real and doubt never seemed to be in anyone's mind.

I can recall the old days when the very air itself seemed to be holy and man felt that he was in the presence of God. The fervor of the sermons, the earnestness of the prayers and the enthusiasm of the singing carried home conviction to the heart and that not of the "hold up your finger" type, but the conviction was pungent and man felt himself a sinner before God and in danger of hell fire.

I have seen parties standing when they had to hold on to the seats in front, or the walls, to stand up and when going to the altar they fell before God in the sawdust as though struck down.

Who that saw Brother Stewart can forget him as he walked up and down within the altar railing shouting praises to God?

It was not excitement but grace within the hearts and souls were born to God by the score. Ten, twenty, forty, sixty and more at the altar was no unusual sight and there they remained until, in the language of the day, they prayed their way through. Those were great days indeed and God was there in power.

The first prayer offered on the ground was made by Dr. Tudor, of Baltimore, but then pastor in New Orleans.

Brothers Rayne, Foster and Tudor went over to view the purchased ground and walked down from Biloxi through the woods by the old Pass Christian road and coming among a cluster of tall pines, near to the location of an old restaurant of the early days just inside the Biloxi end of the grounds, Brother Foster said, "Brethren, we are on holy ground," and with bowed heads they knelt in the pines as Dr. Tudor in prayer consecrated the ground to God and the salvation of mankind.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate was represented by Dr. Briscoe Carter. Rev. A. S. J. Nell, pastor, of Springhill, Minden district, was introduced to the conference.

The report of the Woman's Missionary Society was read by the district secretary, Mrs. H. B. Wren. Dr. A. W. Turner made a report of his work and spoke on the report of the Wickersham committee.

The following were elected members of the licensing committee to serve until the ensuing Annual Conference: Dr. W. Angie Smith, Dr. T. M. Brownlee, Rev. R. T. Ware, and Rev. G. A. Morgan.

Dr. H. T. Carley, the presiding elder, dispatched the business of the conference with ease, giving ample time to routine business and to all the varied interests of the Church, and by limiting the speakers to ten minutes each the business of the district conference was completed in one day—meeting at 9 a. m. and adjourning at 5:30 p. m. The next session of the district conference will be held at Mangum Memorial, Shreveport.

The noonday luncheon served at the church by the Woman's Missionary Society of Cedar Grove was a bountiful feast, greatly enjoyed by all.

JEFFERSON DAVIS RIGHTFULLY HONORED

Yesterday was a legal holiday in the two States of the Advocate's territory. Jefferson Davis was born in Christian County, Ky., June 3, 1808. In 1811, he removed with his parents to St. Mary's Parish, La., and after a few months (1812) his parents settled on a farm in Wilkinson County, near Woodville, Miss., which State was proud to claim him ever thereafter, and with Louisiana and other Southern States, has marked the day of his birth with a legal holiday.

On Tuesday of this week, June 2, there was unveiled in Statuary Hall, Washington, D. C., a bust of the distinguished American. Mississippi having selected Mr. Davis and Senator J. Z. George to represent her in that Hall of Honor. Twenty-three years ago, upon the one hundredth anniversary of his birth, Bishop Galloway delivered an address at the University of Mississippi on "The Life and Times of Jefferson Davis," in which he said: "When another hundred years have passed, no intelligent voice will fail to praise him and no patriotic hand will refuse to place a laurel wreath upon his radiant brow." Less than a quarter of a century since those eloquent words were spoken, Mr. Davis is given his place of honor along with other notable men in Statuary Hall at the Capitol of the nation.

We would not suggest reflections that would give occasion to the rise of uncharitable feeling, but would use this opportune time to indicate a few of the abiding excellencies of a leader who was a "citizen whose moral and religious ideals were the most exalted, and whose daily conduct was sought to be modeled after the Man of Galilee," which standards may be profitably emulated in this day and generation.

In private and public life, Mr. Davis was possessed of an unimpeachable integrity and his service was with ability and devotion. In the Black Hawk and Mexican Wars, and as Congressman and Senator, Secretary of War, and President of the Confederate States of America during the war for Southern Independence, he was dominated by high principle. In his unswerving devotion to State sovereignty he was not unlike other experienced and brilliant statesmen, both North and South.

The courage of Christian charity and poise of peaceful forbearance have scarcely ever crowned the life of a leader in an unsuccessful cause as they so nobly did Jefferson Davis. On the last visit to Jackson, the capital of his State, March 10, 1884, in speaking of Mississippians, he said: "It, therefore, behooved them, as they may, to promote the general welfare of the Union, to show to the world that hereafter, as heretofore, the patriotism of our people is not measured by lines of latitude and longitude, but is as broad as the obligations they have assumed and embrace the whole of our ocean-bound domain." And in the last address he ever delivered in Mississippi, which was near his home at Beauvoir, in 1888, he said: "The past is dead let it bury its dead, its hopes and aspirations, before you lies the future—a future full of golden promise; a future of expanding national glory, before which all the world shall stand amazed. Let me beseech you to lay aside all rancor, all bitter sectional feeling, and to take your place in the ranks of those who will bring about a consummation devoutly to be wished—a reunited country."

THE BLUE AND THE GRAY

By Frances Miles Finch

By the flow of the inland river,
Whence the fleets of the iron have fled,
Where the blades of the grave-grass quiver
Asleep are the ranks of the dead.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day—
Under the one, the Blue,
Under the other, the Gray.

Those in the robings of glory,
These in the gloom of defeat,
All with the battle-blood gory,
In the dusk of eternity meet.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day—
Under the laurel the Blue,
Under the willow, the Gray.

From the silence of sorrowful hours
The desolate mourners go,
Lovingly laden with flowers
Alike for the friend and the foe.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day—
Under the roses, the Blue,
Under the lilies, the Gray.

So, with an equal splendor
The morning sun-rays fall,
With a touch, impartially tender,
On the blossoms blooming for all.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day—
Broidered with gold, the Blue,
Mellowed with gold, the Gray.

So, when the summer calleth
On forest and field of grain,
With an equal murmur falleth
The cooling drip of the rain.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day—
Wet with the rain, the Blue,
Wet with the rain, the Gray.

Sadly, but not with upbraiding,
The generous deed was done;
In the storm of the years that are fading
No braver battle was won.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day—
Under the blossoms, the Blue,
Under the garlands, the Gray.

No more shall the war-cry sever,
Nor the winding river be red;
They banish our anger forever,
When they laurel the graves of our dead.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day—
Love and tears for the Blue,
Tears and love for the Gray.

He was urged to represent his State in the National Senate again and could have had any honor within her gift, but he steadfastly refused and preferred a quiet life so as to aid by his retirement the rebuilding of that friendly spirit that should return.

His fine spirit was again exhibited when General Grant was dying. The Boston Globe requested him to criticize Grant's military career and he replied: "Your request cannot be complied with for the following reasons: First, General Grant is dying; second, though he invaded our country with a ruthless hand, it was an open hand and, as far as I know he abetted neither arson nor pillage, and has since the war, I believe, shown no malignity to the Confederacy, either in the military or civil service. Therefore, instead of seeking to disturb the quiet of his closing hours, I would, if it were in my power, contribute to the peace of his mind and the comfort of his body."

This was but four years before he himself, while in the house of his friend Judge Fenner in New Orleans, died on the sixth morning of December, 1889. And tens of thousands of people passed his bier and sorrowful multitudes followed his body to its temporary resting place in beautiful Metairie Cemetery prior to its final interment in Richmond, Va., the capital of the Confederacy.

Mississippi and the Nation has rightfully honored his memory with the statuary testimony in Washington, and it is now but eight years until the fiftieth anniversary of his death. It would be inspiring to have a movement initiated and effectuated that would bring his body "home," by that time, to the State that claimed him in life for 77 years, and that would be honored to hold his remains in watchful respect and affectionate regard until the Resurrection Morn.

THE BISHOPS ADDRESS THE CHURCH

As your chief pastors, charged with the spiritual oversight of the Church, we are deeply concerned regarding the spirit of the times in which we are living. These are no ordinary days. To be blind to the signs of the times is to miss the deeper significance of the very events through which God would lead us into a richer experience of His grace.

On every hand are evidences of depression. Many of our people have suffered in body and mind and spirit. The shadow of a heavy cross has lain upon many a hearthstone and many an altar. Anxieties and prayers have pressed upon us everywhere until our human resources have seemed pitifully inadequate in the face of our conscious needs. Many of our local churches are embarrassed over shortened budgets; our missionary enterprises face heart-breaking retrenchment; all the glorious causes of our beloved Church are imperiled because of the depression of the spirits and fortunes of our people.

And yet there is no fundamental ground for discouragement. The ancient resources of faith and courage are still ours. God is with us. Christ is sufficient. The Church is not ours but His and to its life He has given His life, and is still giving it today through the power of the Spirit. Victory waits upon us, not upon Him. He would have us turn our material depression into spiritual exaltation. It may be that we have depended too much upon outward things; it may be that we have trusted too often to our own devices; it may be that we have tested a spiritual enterprise by an earthly standard of success. Let us, preachers and people alike, turn to God in humility and seek the old paths of power, confession of sins, heart-searching prayer, personal surrender and reconsecration. This is the road into the morning light of a new day. Shall we not take that pathway into a fresh experience of His love and a thrilling sense of newly discovered power? This alone shall make us the Church that God would have us be.

In the light of these facts, we are moved by the Spirit of God to call upon our people in every community to set apart one day upon which, as a united people, we shall humble ourselves before God and seek His blessing. We designate herewith Wednesday, June 17, as a day of fasting and prayer and urge our pastors and people to assemble as congregations or in smaller groups and spend a large portion of this day in earnest heart-searching and prayerful consideration of our spiritual needs and resources.

Signed: Warren A. Candler, Collins Denny, Edwin D. Mouzon, John M. Moore, William F. McMurry, U. V. W. Darlington, Horace M. DuBose, William N. Ainsworth, James Cannon, Jr., William B. Beauchamp, Samuel R. Hay, Hoyt M. Dobbs, Hiram A. Boaz, Arthur J. Moore, Paul B. Kern, A. Frank Smith.

THE BISHOPS' CALL TO PRAYER

There is a most important matter now before our Church in which the Commission on Spiritual Life is interested and desires to bring to the attention of the entire Church.

The College of Bishops has recently prepared a statement for the entire Church, calling our people to humility and heart-searching. They ask that Wednesday, June 17, be set apart as a day of fasting and prayer. Our people are requested to refrain from the mid-day meal, and either in the church or in community circles give themselves to earnest prayer. If at the close of such a day the regular Wednesday prayer service could be turned into a testimonial meeting, closing with the observance of the Lord's Supper, this will prove to be a day of signal power in our Church's experience.

We urge upon our preachers and people to participate in this season of heartsearching and intercession. There are multiplied evidences throughout the land of spiritual hunger and dissatisfactions. We must repent of our spiritual carelessness, and endeavor in every possible way to make this a season when the hearts of our people are revived, and the Church aroused to face its whole task with courage and hope.

The Commission on Spiritual Life requests our pastors and people to join heartily in the observance of this day of intercession, in which we are all asked to scrutinize ourselves, our ideals and our plans of work, believing it will help us on our way to a new spiritual awakening. The date is Wednesday, June 17.

ARTHUR J. MOORE.
Chairman Commission on Spiritual Life.

MEETING OF THE BISHOPS

By Bishop John M. Moore, Secretary

The College of Bishops met in the Bishops' Room in the Publishing House in Nashville, Tenn., May 1 and 2, 1931. The presiding bishop was Bishop W. B. Beauchamp. All the bishops were present except Bishop Warren A. Candler, who has been seriously ill for several weeks, but is now greatly improved and is coming back speedily to health and strength. He was assigned, as usual his quota of Conferences for episcopal supervision.

Upon the recommendation of the committee, no changes were made in the assignments from those of last year. The Collgee voted that the bishops be assigned to the various foreign fields as heretofore, notwithstanding the formation of new Churches, and that administrative service be such as may be deemed wise and necessary by the Board of Missions and under the conditions that may exist in any field. The bishops cannot hold the Conferences of the new Churches, but other service may be needed and rendered.

Bsihop Denny has furnished the manuscript of the revised edition of the "Manual of the Discipline." Instead of reviewing and passing upon this work, the College appointed Bishops Candler, Moore, McMurry, and Ainsworth to cooperate with Bishop Denny in this review and final determination of the contents and form of the new Manual.

The last General Conference instructed the bishops to appoint a committee of seven on Responsive Readings, especially from the Old Testament. The following were appointed: Bishop John M. Moore, Bishop W. A. Candler, Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, Rev. F. S. Parker, D.D., Rev. Nolan B. Harmon, D.D., Rev. Ivan Lee Holt, D.D., and President H. N. Snyder, LL.D.

The last General Conference ordered the appointment of a commission of five, to be composed of the two bishops in charge and three others, to make investigation concerning the question of territorial adjustment between the Kentucky, the West Virginia, and the Holston Conferences. The two bishops are Bishop McMurry and Bishop Du Bose. The college appointed Rev. J. L. Clark, D.D., Paris, Ky., Mr. George W. Bright, Beckley, W. Va., and Rev. S. D. Long, D.D., Tazewell, Va., as the other three commissioners.

Bishop Arthur J. Moore was appointed Fraternal Messenger, and President Henry N. Snyder, of Wofford College, the alternate to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which convenes in May, 1932.

The majority of the Annual Conferences last fall voted on the constitutional amendment handed down by the General Conference which establishes a Judicial Council. It has been the custom, if not the rule, for the College of Bishops to prepare the document that contains the proposed amendment and the form of the question to be asked. In this case the document was not prepared by the bishops, but by the careful editor of the "Journal of the General Conference." At the fall meeting of the bishops in Charlotte, N. C., last December the question was raised as to whether the document sent out agreed exactly with the paper upon which the General Conference acted. The matter was referred to a committee composed of Bishops Denny, Ainsworth, and John M. Moore. This committee on May 1 did faithfully compare this document which was sent out and which was acted upon by many of the Annual Conferences, and they found several minor differences, but one very serious discrepancy. As a result of this discrepancy the votes taken must be nullified, the corrected document sent out, and a new vote taken.

The serious defect is this: The printed "Journal of the General Conference," page 350, the paragraph entitled "Change in paragraph on Judicial Council," states: "J. S. French, clerical delegate from the Holston Conference, asked permission to make a correction in Section ii, paragraph 2, of the Judicial Council, as follows: 'Change Section i, paragraph 2, line 2, so that, instead of the words "twenty traveling elders and sixteen lay members," it shall read, "four times the number of traveling elders and lay members of the Church to be elected."'" Was that permission which was asked by Dr. French ever granted? No record exists anywhere in the manuscript Journal, in the printed Journal, or in the Daily Advocate that shows that it was granted. In all probability it was granted, but the record is the authority, and by it all must abide. So the document that was sent out was declared faulty, and the correct one has been prepared in accordance with the record, and the constitutional amendment will be submitted at the next sessions of the Annual Conferences.

The newspapers had given considerable publicity to what they called a petition which originated in Richmond, Va., and had been circulated for signatures, that had for its purpose the bringing about by the College of Bishops the resignation of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., from the episcopacy. The "petition" was sent out in full by the Associated Press and was published entirely by many daily newspapers and was given front-page position in the New York Times and in other great journals. Neither the petitioners nor the newspapers seemed to know—or if they did to regard the fact—that only the General Conference can, under the law of the Church, legitimately and legally request or accept the resignation of a bishop. The College of Bishops has no such power. Twenty-one of these circular petitions were received, bearing forty-four signatures, of which thirty-eight were from Virginia, three from North Carolina, two from Maryland, and one from Tennessee. There were two personal letters from Georgia, two from Virginia, one from South Carolina and one from Baltimore, bearing twelve signatures, and all to the same effect as the circular letter. All these communications were read to the College and the signatures announced. After the College adjourned, a half dozen others of the same tenor were received by the secretary. Ten tel grams came, half in criticism and half in appr val of Bishop Cannon. After adjournment, a hal dozen telegrams and as many letters came in ap proval of Bishop Cannon.

These persons complained that Bishop Canno had not been vindicated by the General Confer ence or the Committee on Investigation, that th proceedings of the committee had been kept s cret, and that for the peace of the Church h should resign his office and that he should n be allowed to become the presiding bishop of th College.

After the reading of the communications, Bis hop Cannon took the floor and in a quiet and straightforward way spoke of the implications and requests contained in the communications.

He said he had met every charge lodged against him through the legitimate channels of the Church. He said that the General Conference, the only body with power in the matter, did not ask for his resignation, but that it did by a two-thirds vote make him Chairman of its Board of Temperance and Social Service. He read a list of the distributions of the $48,300 to the various Congressional districts in Virginia, and said that he had made the same kind of report of these expenditures that the Democratic Committee made to Congress. He said he would welcome any investigation by any court of any charges of culpable misuse of these funds, but that he would resist the assumption by a Senate committee of the powers of a court of the land. He said he had not taken any of this money. He said he would not resign from the episcopacy. In conclusion, he read this statement: "The rule provides that the bishops are to preside over the College of Bishops for six months in the order of their election. The minutes state that in December, when it came my turn to preside, it was voted that, in view of the illness of Bishop Cannon, the presidency pass to Bishop Beauchamp. I, personally, see no reason to go backward on the list, and prefer that the presidency of the College shall continue to follow the regular order." Nothing further was said on the matter by any bishop.

Bishop Sam R. Hay, of Fort Worth, Tex., becomes the presiding bishop for the ensuing term, which ends at the close of the fall meeting of the bishops, which will be held in Atlanta, Ga., October 15, 1931.

The bishops met on May 6 and confirmed the election of Rev. A. R. Kasey, D.D., of Louisville, Ky., as a member of the Book Committee to succeed Rev. L. C. Branscomb, D.D., recently deceased.—Christian Advocate.

FORMAL PROTEST FILED BY BISHOP JAMES CANNON, JR., WITH NYE COMMITTEE

Hon. Gerald P. Nye,
Chairman Senate Committee
To Investigate Campaign Expenses,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Sir:

I hereby register with you as Chairman of the Senate Committee to Investigate Campaign Expenses a formal protest against the legality of Senate Resolution 403.

Under this resolution complaint has been filed against me by Congressman Tinkham, from a wet Roman Catholic district of Boston, of a violation of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act and a fraudulent conversion to private uses of campaign funds. I have not knowingly violated any section of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act, nor have I embezzled any campaign funds. But if any complaints are made that I have been guilty of such crimes I deny the right of a Senate Committee to investigate such complaints, for the Supreme Court has declared that, "If crime has been committed the grand jury shall investigate; if fraud, the courts of Equity and Law. All the judicial power is vested in the courts by the Constitution. Implied powers do not exist in either House."

I contend that Senate Resolution 403 states no case nor subject matter, about which a legislative body has jurisdiction to inquire. The resolution contemplates no legislation nor legislative duty, but is an attempt to authorize an investigation by a Senatorial Committee of complaints of commission of crimes, in which investigation the accused has no such protection as is guaranteed in a court of law, such as the right to object to the introduction of improper testimony or to cross-examine, but the ordinary guarantees of court procedure are not operative. Irrelevant, unwarranted and false statements can be placed unchallenged upon the record and made a part of a report to the Senate and be scattered broadcast by the press without restriction.

Without any constitutional authority whatever the resolution assigns to the Committee the functions of a Grand Jury, but in this case, with open doors, listening to any and all allegations and reporting the same to the Senate which, after the réception of such report from its Committee, has no authority to determine whether either crime or fraud has been committed, or to inflict any penalty for the commission of the same. All such investigating committees are declared by the Supreme Court to be "unauthorized and unwarranted by law," and are therefore infringements upon the constitutional rights of citizens of the United States.

Supporting this position, in the case of Kilbourn vs. Thompson, decided February 28, 1881, the U. S. Supreme Court declared: "All investigating committees ordered by the House (and the same applies to the Senate) unless authorized by an act of Congress passed to carry into execution one or more of the powers above named vested by the Constitution in the House of Representatives are unauthorized and unwarranted by law. If crime has been committed the grand jury shall investigate; if fraud, courts of Equity and Law. All the judicial power is vested in the courts by the Constitution. Implied powers do not exist in either House. . . . The original resolution by the House (in this case by the Senate) upon which the Investigating Committee was ordered stated no case nor subject matter about which a legislative body has jurisdiction to inquire. It contemplated no legislation nor legislative duty."

Continuing the Supreme Court declared: "We are of the opinion that the House of Representatives (in this case the Senate) not only exceeded the limit of its own authority but assumed a power which could only be properly exercised by another branch of the government because the power was in its nature purely judicial."

I insist therefore that complaints that I have committed any crimes be investigated and prosecuted by the regular processes of the law, and not by investigation of a legislative committee which has no authority under the Constitution to encroach upon the jurisdiction of the Judicial Department of the government.

In further support of this contention I quote the statement by Mr. Justice Field, In re Pacific Railway Commission, etc., who referring to the case of Kilbourn vs. Thompson mentioned above, said: "This case will stand for all time as a bulwark against the invasion of the right of the citizen to protection in his private affairs against the unlimited scrutiny of investigation by a Congressional Committee."

Furthermore, the U. S. Supreme Court, in Federal Trade Commission vs. American Tobacco Company, held: "Anyone who respects the spirit as well as the letter of the Fourth Amendment would be loath to believe that Congress intended to authorize one of its subordinate agencies to sweep all our traditions into the fire, and to direct fishing expeditions into private papers on the possibility that they may disclose evidence of crime. . . . It is contrary to the first principles of justice to allow a search through all the respondent's records, relevant or irrelevant, in the hope that something will turn up."

I insist that there is no other purpose stated for the "fishing expedition" authorized by Senate Resolution 403 than that the Committee shall as soon as practicable make a full report thereon to the Senate, and under the authorities quoted above this the only avowed purpose is not sufficient to clothe the Committee with power to make such an inquiry as is contemplated by the resolution.

I insist therefore that the action taken by the Committee on February 11, 1931, in summonsing and placing upon record matters pertaining to my private business affairs was a violation of my constitutional rights as a citizen, and that the record so made and the copies of bank records so secured be destroyed, and that further proceedings under the resolution be estopped as a violation of my constitutional rights as a citizen of the United States who demands that any complaints that he has committed any crime be prosecuted in the courts and not, as Mr. Justice Field says, through the "unlimited scrutiny of investigation by Congressional Committee, which is governed in its activity by no judicial code.

Finally, and preeminently, I contend that such provisions of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act of 1925 as attempt to prescribe regulations concerning the election of presidential and vice-presidential electors are unconstitutional and, therefore, null and void.

Article I, Section 4, of the Constitution of the United States declares: "The times, places and manner of holding elections for senators and representatives shall be prescribed in each state by the legislature thereof, but Congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations except as the places of choosing senators." Under this provision Congress had power to pass the Federal Corrupt Practices Act so far as it makes regulations concerning the holding of elections for senators and representatives, including the expenditure of money and report of such expenditures.

Article II., Section 2, of the Constitution declares: "Each state shall appoint in such manner as the legislatures thereof may direct a number of electors equal to the whole number of senators and representatives to which the state may be entitled in Congress."

Section 4 declares: "Congress may determine the time of choosing electors and the day on which they shall give their votes, which day shall be the same throughout the United States."

While Congress may determine the time it is given no power to make regulations concerning the "manner of holding elections" for presidential and vice-presidential electors. It can not limit, as in the case of senators and congressmen, the amount of money expended nor require any accounting therefor, because presidential and vice-presidential electors are specifically indicated in the Constitution as state appointees, the election of whom must therefore be regulated by the laws enacted by the several states and not enacted by Congress. Complaints concerning activities in connection with the election of presidential electors are matters for state and not for Federal action.

Inasmuch as the complaint made against me by Congressman Tinkham alleges violation of the provisions of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act in reference to the election of presidential and vice-presidential electors in 1928, and inasmuch as indicated above I hold such provisions of that Act to be unconstitutional, I contend that in this regard also Senate Resolution 403 insofar as it attempts to confer authority to investigate campaign expenditures for presidential and vice-presidential electors is unconstitutional and, therefore, null and void.

For the foregoing reasons I hereby file this formal protest against the legality of Senate Resolution 403 and of the investigation which is being conducted under authority of that resolution. I respectfully request that this formal protest be carefully considered by the Committee before it proceeds further with the investigation, and that the Committee notify me as promptly as possible of the conclusion reached by it concerning the same, and that this protest and the decision reached by the Committee thereupon be made a part of the record and reported to the Senate.

Respectfully submitted.
JAMES CANNON, JR.

P. S.—If the Committee desires, I shall be glad to present and discuss this protest before the Committee in person, either at an executive session of the Committee or at the public hearing.

SUPPLEMENTARY STATEMENT EMPHASIZING PROTEST

Gentlemen:

In further support of my contention in the formal protest sent to the Committee today that "such provisions of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act of 1925 as attempt to prescribe regulations concerning the election of presidential and vice-presidential electors are unconstitutional" I beg leave to submit the following citation from the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Fitzgerald vs. Green, 134 U. S., 377; L.Ed. 951.

Mr. Justice Gray, delivering the opinion of the Court, said: "The only rights and duties expressly vested by the Constitution in the National Government, with regard to the appointment or the votes of presidential electors, are by those provisions which authorize Congress to determine the time of choosing the electors and the day on which they shall give their votes and which direct that the certificates of their votes shall be opened by the President of the Senate in the presence of the two Houses of Congress and the vote shall then be counted. . . . Although the electors are appointed and act under and pursuant to the Constitution of the United States they are no more officers or agents of the United States than are the members of the State Legislatures, when acting as electors of Federal Senators, or the people of the state when acting as electors of representatives in Congress."

Continuing, in the same opinion, Justice Gray declared: "Congress has never undertaken to interfere with the manner of the appointment of electors or where (according to the now general usage) the mode of appoinotment prescribed by the law of the state is election by the people to regulate the conduct of such elections or punish any fraud in voting for electors but has left these matters to the control of the state."

To the same effect that presidential electors are state officers see also McPherson vs. Blackmer, 146 U. S., 1; 36 L.Ed. 869.

In view of the importance of the constitutional questions which have been raised in my formal protest may I not ask that the Committee give very thorough consideration to the legal questions involved before proceeding further with the proposed investigation?

Respectfully submitted,
JAMES CANNON, JR.

Washington, D. C.
May 21, 1931.

Hon. Gerald P. Nye,
Chairman Senate Committee Investigating Campaign Expenditures,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Sir:

Your letter of May 19th was a surprise.

I called on you on Monday, May 18th, according to previous agreement, to learn the decision of the Committee as to dates of future hearings, as I desired to be present at all the hearings. I had not asked for any further delay but when you stated that you did not think it probable that the Committee would hold any hearings until the latter part of August, I then said that if the hearings would not be resumed until the latter part of August I would be glad if they could be delayed until the 20th of September, as I desired to attend important Church and prohibition conferences in Europe. I gave you the dates as of Aug. 18, 22, September 1 and 10, and said that by taking a fast steamer I could get home by September 20th.

My request that there be no hearings of the Committee between May 1st and 6th was not granted and I was obliged to be absent from my Nashville engagements in order to be in Washington. If the Committee has decided not to hold any hearings until the last of August I shall be glad if it will delay hearings until September 20th that I may attend the international Church and prohibition conferences in Europe which I have attended for many years.

I note that the principal reason assigned for a probable refusal of my request for postponement until September 20th is "that the statute of limitations will begin to run with reference to the first of the contributions of Mr. Jameson three years after date of that particular contribution, that is, on September 18, 1931." Concerning this I would say that on September 13 and 26, October 9, 16 and 19, December 6, 1928, and January 14, 1929, Mr. Jameson placed in my hands money to be used by me personally (not as chairman of any committee) how, when or where to accomplish the defeat of the wet Tammany candidate, Alfred E. Smith. It was distinctly and positively understood that I was to use my own personal judgment as to the disposition of every dollar of that money. I have had no intimation that there has been any dissatisfaction on the part of Mr. Jameson with the way in which the money was used or with the results accomplished. I did not decide until February 11, 1929, to give any or how much of that money to the Headquarters Committee of the Anti-Smith Democrats. And I decided on that day because I was sailing on February 14th to be gone on a cruise of three months, and as my health was uncertain and various contingencies might arise, I wanted to settle finally everything connected with the 1928 campaign. After a thorough examination of all the accounts I decided to use for the work of the Headquarters Committee of the Anti-Smith Democrats $17,000 of the money put into my hands by Mr. Jameson to be used in any way I thought proper for the defeat of Alfred E. Smith.

On June 5, 1930, I gave to the press a statement of how $48,300 of the money put into my hands by Mr. Jameson had been used in Virginia, indicating the amount expended for general purposes and the amount in each Congressional district.

As a matter of fact, therefore, the statute of limitations above referred to does not apply to any of the money put into my hands by Mr. Jameson. But if it does apply, the dates in October, December and January give ample margin for hearings begun on September 20th.

In closing, I must say that this reference to the Statute of Limitations clearly indicates that the Chairman of the Committee does consider that the Committee is acting in the capacity of a Grand Jury investigating a complaint that I have committed a crime for which I must be indicted before the expiration of the three year limit. Therefore, my formal protest against the legality of Resolution 403 is fully sustained, in that Resolution 403 did charge the Committee to perform the function of a Grand Jury. As I stated in my protest, the Supreme Court has declared that "If crime has been committed the Grand Jury shall investigate. All the judicial power is vested in the courts by the Constitution. We are of the opinion that the House of Representatives not only exceeded the limits of its own authority but assumed a power which could only be exercised by another branch of the Government because the power was in its nature purely judicial."

I here again emphasize that I have never at any time denied the right of the Grand Jury to investigate my conduct, but have insisted that complaints that I have committed any crime be investigated and prosecuted by the regular processes of the law and not by any legislative committee which has no such authority under the Constitution to investigate any allegations of crime or to return any indictment therefor.

My correspondence indicates that many persons think that the purpose underlying Senate Resolution 403 is an effort to use your committee as an instrument to please Congressman Tinkham's wet Roman Catholic Boston constituency, to gratify the anger and wounded vanity of certain Virginia Democrats, and to secure, if possible, the list of names of those who worked in Virginia cities, districts and precincts to defeat Alfred E. Smith, in order that, if possible, they may be so intimidated and harassed that they will fear to do such work again. That list will certainly not be furnished by me.

Sincerely,
JAMES CANNON, JR.

IN MEMORIAM
DR. BEVERLY CARRADINE

By Rev. Franklin Parker, D. D.

Recently the news of the death of Doctor Carradine was announced in the church papers. This brings to my memory the time, years ago, when he was transferred from the Mississippi Conference to the Louisiana Conference and stationed at Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, in the early part of the 80's. My father's family resided in the vicinity of this church and Doctor Carradine became our pastor. I remember well the early impression he made upon the church and the community.

He was a man of charming personality, a mind richly furnished with human interest and a knowledge of human nature much above the average. He possesed a quality of magnetic sympathy and insight into the ways of everyday people. He was himself intensely human. He was always a welcome guest in the home. As a conversationalist he interested pretty much everybody with whom he came in contact. There was a deep spiritual interest in old and young and his mind seemed to discern the open places in the hearts of most of the people to whom he ministered.

As a pastor in the time of sorrow or trouble his ministry was most gracious. Nothing could be more tender than Doctor Carradine in family prayer in the house of those to whom death and other more peculiar sorrows came. He found a word and a note of sympathy for the needs of those who were most distressed—one of the most successful pastoral workers I ever knew.

As a preacher, his sermons abounded in happy illustrations, pungent applications and points that were always vivid and frequently extremely instructive. His homiletic methods were his own and there was always freshness, originality and spiritual point in his discourses.

After he was stationed at the Carondelet Street Methodist Church he entered upon a wider range of ministerial service and became one of the principal leaders, if not the first man, to really strike a vigorous note in the anti-lottery campaign, which issued in the final extermination of that evil in the State of Louisiana and the nation. It is my judgment that no man had more, or as much, to do in starting this campaign than Doctor Carradine. His sermons and addresses dealing with questions of public morals were courageous and vivid. He was a preacher of evangelical fervor and power. He made many friends, some very intimate friends and everywhere was in demand as preacher for occasions and special interests.

During his Carondelet Street pastorate he became much interested in the doctrine and experience of entire sanctification, and became an earnest advocate of this experience. Having closed his ministry in Carondelet Street Church he was transferred to St. Louis, where he began a pastorate of growing interest in that city. He eventually became convinced that his work was in the evangelistic field and gave up the pastoral work in which he had rendered so great a service and spent the remainder of his career in the evangelistic field.

Doctor Carradine was an exceptionally gifted writer. Even before his call to the ministry he had exhibited talent for writing in the newspapers and he continued to do this. His articles prepared for the church press were pungent and pertinent and dealing with current needs. Later on he wrote a number of sketches, the people he had observed and incidents and anecdotes based upon personal observation, and replete with a fine sense of humor and vivid characterization. He had passed, by several years I think, into his eighties, after a number of years of ill-health and retirement from the activities of the ministry. I remeber many encouraging words extended to me as a young minister by Doctor Carradine and I feel deeply grateful for the help, guidance and inspiration of those early days of my ministry in New Orleans.

MEMOIR OF REV. H. W. MAY

By Rev. Jno. F. Foster, D.D.

One of our comrades who has gone in and out among us for many years has fallen on death and in his going our Conference and Church is the poorer.

Rev. H. W. May was born in Prattville, Ala., June 20, 1861, and died in Zachary, La., May 12, 1931, being a few weeks under seventy years of age. His last appointment was Zachary, being assigned to this charge by the Conference of November, 1926, and at the following Conference meeting in Baton Rouge, November, 1927, he was placed on the honor roll of the Conference, becoming a superannuate. He was licensed a local preacher October 31, 1885, and received into full connection in the Louisiana Conference January, 1888, being ordained deacon in 1888 and elder in 1889.

Brother May fought his superannuation, saying that he had been called by God to preach and that this was his duty. He was fully convinced that before God he should not accept this relationship and accepted it under protest.

Frequently has he told the writer that God had called him to preach, that it was a duty laid upon him and that only thus would he do his duty. With this thought before him he failed to see the limitations of age and was unhappy not having work.

Bro. May was a true man, faithful in his work, devoted to his church and loyal in service to his God and Master.

He studied the Word and had much of it by heart, and was unusually apt in quoting passages of Scripture.

Like most of mankind he had some individualities, more or less pronounced, but wherever sent his word was that of a Christian, a loyal churchman and a faithful servant of God.

He held many circuits and stations and was presiding elder on three districts, some of his station work being among the strong appointments of the Conference.

On Monday, May 11, he retired as usual and when he was called the next morning it was found that he had passed away in his sleep. His body was buried in Zachary, La., on May 13, 1931.

"God buries his workmen, but carries on His Work."

A TRIBUTE FROM RAYNE MEMORIAL TO OUR PASTOR'S WIFE

Less than two years ago there came to us Rev. and Mrs. O. W. Bradley. Gladly were they welcomed by the congregation and joyfully they entered into their work. It did not take long to know that Mrs. Bradley came up in every way to the requirements of a minister's wife. Possessed of a wonderful personality she soon became acquainted with every member and won her way into their hearts. She readily took hold of Sabbath school and church work and so gifted was she that she was in demand on all programs. It was only a short while when she had to relinquish activities of every kind and undergo an operation. Speedily she seemed to recover and it was the desire of her heart to get busy, but it was not long before she had to again give up. No word of complaint was heard. Sweetly she accepted the role of invalidism, but from her sick bed she radiated sunshine so that it was a pleasure to visit her. As wife, mother, friend she was all that could be desired. Long before she let her dear ones know it, she realized that her stay on earth was short, but she was not afraid to die, only shrank from leaving those so dear to her. As sweetly, as quietly, as gently as she lived she passed, after untold suffering, from death unto life eternal.

"From all sorrow and all trial
From all shadow and all gloom,
Just a stepping, oh, so gently,
To the Master's other room."

Our hearts sorrow with our pastor and his children. We cannnot tell why this trial should come. Why one so needed was taken. We fail to understand. We can only trust Him who makes all things work together for our good.

"Not till the loom is silent,
And the shuttles cease to fly,
Shall God unroll the canvass,
And explain the reason why
The dark threads are as needful
In the Weaver's skillful hand
As the threads of gold and silver
In the pattern He has planned."

MRS. GEORGE S. BROWN.

MRS. O. W. BRADLEY—AN APPRECIATION

By T. W. Holloman

A new voice has been added to the invisible choir. Clothed in the wedding garment, washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb, the beautiful soul of Annie Berry Bradley has joined the innumerable throng that stands in the presence of the Holy One and sings: "Alleluia; Salvation, and glory, and honor, and power, unto the Lord our God."

For pain, peace; for sorrow, joy; for death, life; for a limited sphere of love and service, an unlimited and endless ministry; such is her portion.

"He that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." She lost her life in helpfulness to her husband as a minister of the Glad Tidings. She depreciated herself that he might increase. Through a lingering illness she never allowed him to miss a service or an appointment. She denied herself for her children. She took little that they might have more. She denied herself for others. Time and again the flowers sent by loving friends were sent to the sick rooms where there were no flowers. With Christian fortitude she bore her own illness as if it were a passing shadow, and always was the most cheerful person in any company.

She taught and served the youth whom she touched. Her ministry of teaching of youth and adult will live on. She made people happy. She was selfless in her attitude toward life. Nothing was for herself, everything was for others. She exemplified and demonstrated the truth of that marvelous philisophy of our Master, and, losing her life for His sake, she found the abundant life here, and has entered into the inheritance of life eternal. "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things."

All that husband, children, friends or medical science could do, was done. But the course of her human life was run, and she has become a citizen of that land for which she was prepared. Some day we may understand the divine wisdom that calls on those who seem so essential and who render such beautiful service here.

"Henceforth there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give to me at that day; and not only to me, but also to all them that have loved his appearing."

A MESSAGE FROM THE CONFERENCE LAY LEADER OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Dear Brethren: The second Sunday in June has been designated by the General Board of Lay Activities as "Laymen's Day," and plans have been made for its observance throughout our Church. Our own Annual Conference has given approval to the plan, and it is earnestly hoped by your Conference lay leader that, without any interference with the plan of work of the pastor in charge, the suggested program centering around a most timely and challenging theme, "The Way to Spiritual Power," can be effectively used in every church. Is it not an unusual opportunity to bring a large body of our laymen into co-operative participation in the study and presentation of a vital subject in such way as to stir the Church to a new inspiration and deeper consecration, and to conduct a service that will be mutually helpful and satisfactory to both pastors and laymen. On this day let us not forget the presentation of the Methodist Layman as a worthy part of the program. This magazine is sent by the Conference Board to every preacher of the Conference and goes by subscription to little more than one hundred and fifty laymen, all of whom no doubt appreciate its influence and value. There should be at least one thousand lay subscribers to the Methodist Layman in this Conference. The April issue contained a leading article by the general secretary, Mr. G. L. Morelock, in appeal for an observance of "Laymen's Day," which was followed by a splendid discussion of the theme, "The Way to Spiritual Power."

Now is the time for every board of stewards to express their loyalty and co-operation with the lay program. In his general appeal to the Church, Mr. Morelock says: "The Board of Lay Activities earnestly covets the sympathetic and active co-operation and help of every presiding elder, pastor, district lay leader, charge lay leader, and board of stewards in seeking to reach the entire Church with this program upon this vital subject, "The Way to Spiritual Power."

To the pastors, let me say again that I earnestly hope you will find it consistent with the plan of your great undertaking in the name of the Master to observe "Laymen's Day" at the time indicated, or as near that date as possible. It would be fine if in every place of Methodist worship in our Conference, on June 14, we could realize that we were at practically the same hour in united consideration of "The Way to Spiritual Power," and prayer for deeper consecration and greater willingness to serve God through the plan of the Church.

J. MAGRUDER SULLIVAN,
Conference Lay Leader.

BOARD OF MISSIONS MEETING

By Rev. Elmer T. Clark, D.D.

That the missionary work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, must go ahead with zeal unaffected by economic depression; that whatever sacrifices are necessary in order to carry on the church's missionary program will be borne by doubling up of tasks, re-adjustments and other economies at home; that new strength has come to Methodism through the estahlsihment of national churches from erstwhile mission fields, from missionary movements directed by national Christians, through missionary education and promotion in the local church and by strengthening of missionary enterprises in the United States; and that the church faces an unparalleled opportunity to advance in every quarter of the globe; —these were some of the conclusions reached by the board of missions in its 85th annual meeting at Nashville, Tennessee, May 5th.

Bishop W. B. Beanchamp presided over the meeting. Other officers present were P. D. Maddin of Nashville, vice-prseident, and Mrs. Fred Lamb of Kansas City, recording secretary. The session comprised a full day of intensive work and the meeting did not adjourn until late Tuesday night. It was voted that in the future the board would not attempt to conclude its work in a single day.

Of outsanding interest at the recent meeting was the presence of practically all of the bishops of the church and the reports of those who have episcopal supervision in mission fields at home and abroad.

In the absence of Bishops Warren A. Candler and James Cannon, Jr., Dr. O. E. Goddard, secretary of foreign missions, told of the setting up of the autonomous church in Mexico and missionary advance in Africa. Dr. F. S. Onderdonk, spokesman for Bishop S. R. Hay, told of progress in the New Mexico and Texas-Mexican Conferences. Other reports of general superintendents were made as follows: Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, "Cuba and Commission on Autonomous Church in Brazil;" Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, "Europe;" Bishop Paul B. Kern, "The Orient;" Bishop Arthnr J. Moore, "Oriental Mission, Western Mexican, Arizona and the Northwest Conferences;" and Bishop A. Frank Smith, "Indian Mission."

A Memorial service during the afternoon session honored the life and work of the following leaders who have died during the past missionary year; Dr. W. W. Pinson, Mrs. F. F. Stephens, John R. Pepper, Dr. J. B. Ross, Mrs. Julia A. Gaither, Mrs. Marie Raffo Barr, Mrs. T. A. Hearn, Mrs. W. E. Towson, Mrs. J. W. Cline, Mrs. Mary Lipscomb Hargrove, and Mrs. W. Erskine Williams.

Approximately 200 deaconesses and home mission workers in the woman's section were assigned to their respective fields of labor at the night session.

Adoption of budget of $2,294,622 for the work in 1932 included appropriations for both the general and woman's work. J. F. Rawls, treasurer of the general section reported that the total income for missions during 1930 was $1,186,452; while Mrs. Ina Davis Fulton, treasurer of the woman's section, reported that Methodist women contributed $1,040,261 to mission causes during the past year.

Dr. W. G. Cram, general secretary, reviewed every phase of missionary work, including home and foreign enterprises and the attitude and spirit of the local church. He characterized the year 1930 as one of the greatest missionary years in the history of the church—a year marked by a series of missionary triumphs of world-wide scope.

Specifically, it was reported that "Chiang-Kai-Shek, of China, was baptized and received into the Young J. Allen Memorial Methodist Church in Shanghai, by the Rev. Z. T. Kaung." This church was built at a cost of $325. A nurses' home at Huchow, the gift of a wealthy Chinese, is now under construction to make the medical plant there one of the most efficient in China, the report read.

Conversion of approximately 300 natives of the Belgian Congo in Africa, with Chief Tunda, was shown. Autonomous churches were also set up in Brazil, Mexico and Korea, and clearing of titles of orphanages and industrial school property in Brazil gives 1700 acres, valued at a half million dollars, to the Methodist Church.

Account of the estahilshement of a $20,000 church in Liege, Belgium, by Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, was carried in the report.

A total of $66,684, he continued, was paid in cash wages to the poor and unemployed through the Methodist Goodwill industries. Three churches for the Kiowas and Comanches Indian tribes in Oklahoma, were built during the year.

In Japan, the University operated by the United Church of Canada and the M. E. Church, South, was granted full university status. Dr. S. H. Wainwright, Methodist missionary, was made a member of the Fourth Class order of the Rising Sun by the Japanese emperor. In Korea the association of parents and teachers built a spacious dormitory for Korean girls in connection with the Lucy Cnninggim school for girls in Wonsan, at a cost of $5000, Dr. Cram announced.

A gymnasium was added to the Bethlehem negro center in Nashville by members of the women's section of the home department as well as other notable additions in North Carolina and Alabama, it was shown. Paine negro college in Augusta, Ga., was granted status of A-grade.

The conversion of 1000 persons of the industrial center at Kingsport, Tenn., was reported by Dr. Cram as being characterized by the mayor of the town as "the most outstanding contribution of the year in the city's improvement."

RUSTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Ruston District Conference met in regular session in the Methodist Church of Jonesboro, La., April 30 and may 1, with the Rev. Robt. M. Brown, presiding elder of the Ruston District, in the chair. He conducted the Conference in his usual good fashion. The Conference was off to a good start with an inspiring sermon preached by the Rev. A. W. Townsend, of Farmerville.

The connectional interests were well represented.

The Board of Education was represented by Miss Elizabeth Langford, Rev. A. K. McLellan and by Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Holmes, of Alexandria, and by Rev. W. W. Drake, of Monroe. The Board of Missions was represented by the Conference Secretary of the Board, the Rev. H. N. Brown of Lafayette.

The Memorial Mercy Home of New Orleans was represented by Rev. J. G. Snelling. The Golden Cross was represented by Rev. L. W. Cain, P. E., Baton Rouge District. The New Orleans Christian Advocate was represented by the editor, Dr. J. L. Decell.

Laymen's work was represented by Judge E. L. Walker, District Lay Leader, and by Judge Clark of Monroe. The Methodist Layman was represented by Rev. L. P. Moreland of Bernice. Mrs. Carolyn Dawson, District Secretary, of Women's Work, represented this interest.

The first day of the conference was closed with an inspiring sermon by the Rev. W. C. Childress, of Homer.

The second day was opened with an old-fashioned love feast.

The spiritual life of the conference was promoted by two sermons, a love feast and testimony meeting, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper and some good spiritual singing led by Mr. Henry Riser, accompanied by the Rev. A. W. Townsend, and with a number of earnest prayers and talks by various members of the conference.

A number of preachers said it was the most Spiritual district conference they had ever attended. The committee on Spiritual Life made special mention of this fact in their report.

The pastor's reports were encouraging on the whole and most pastors were already praying and planning for revivals. A number reported having held meetings during the Lenten season to good advantage.

A resolution was adopted by the preachers pledging themselves to each give one per cent of his salary to be placed in the hands of the P. E. as a special fund to relieve any preacher who might be in special or peculiar need.

June 21st was fixed as the date for beginning District-wide training week in Ruston District.

The following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference in Monroe: E. L. Walker, J. P. Nelson, W. J. Hammons, T. L. James, Mrs. C. Dawson, J. E. Reynolds, H. P. Camp, Mrs. L. D. Garrett, and J. R. Bevell, the alternates elected were: G. Dawson, J. E. Napper, M. W. Moncrief and Mrs. K. W. Dodson. Homer was chosen as the seat of next conference.

The good people of Jonesboro entertained in a wonderful way and the pastor, Rev. J. S. Henley, proved himself the ideal host.

The new parsonage at Jonesboro was dedicated in an impressive service by Rev. R. M. Brown, presiding elder.

R. H. STAPLES, Secretary.

RETREAT, OF METHODIST YOUNG PEOPLE BATON ROUGE DISTRICT, CAMP BLUFF CREEK, MAY 2-3

Theme "The Quest"

With a registration of seventy-six a most successful week-end Retreat for the Methodist young people of Baton Rouge District was held at Camp Bluff Creek May 2-3. The first session was held at 10:30 Saturday morning when the speakers were introduced and a count of local church representatives present was taken. Bro. James B. Grambling of Hammond, welcomed the young people to Bluff Creek in the absence of the presiding elder, Rev. L. W. Cain, and Mrs. Chaney gave the response in behalf of those present. Willeway Wells, of First Church, Baton Rouge, was elected secretary and Mr. C. H. McEuen acted as song leader.

Rev. W. C. Scott spoke at 11 o'clock on the subject, "A Man and his Mate," or "The Ten Commandments for the Engaged," bringing out the essential things which young people should consider before becoming married.

Dinner was served at 12:30 by Mrs. Chaney, of Clinton. The meals were served outdoors where a spirit of fellowship prevailed.

Mr. Arden O. French, of L. S. U., led a supervised play period in the afternoon when swimming, baseball and croquet were enjoyed.

At the afternoon session Miss Langford, State Field Secretary, discussed "Conference Goals," explaining somewhat the new program of work and telling of the summer assemblies.

Report blanks were passed out by the District Secretary with the request that they be returned with the necessary information.

The Vesper service at 4:30 was one of the highest points of the Retreat. Miss Langford gave some beautiful thoughts of the subject. "The Adventure of Living," after which many young people expressed their thoughts on the adventure of Christian Living.

A weiner roast around the camp fire at six o'clock proved a delightful affair.

Mr. Dameron, of Jackson, brought the evening thoughts on the subject, "The Discovery of God," citing in his address the different schools of belief in God during this time.

Since rain prevented a play period, songs were sung until time for retiring.

Morning Watch was led at 7:45 by Donald Martin, of L. S. U., who discussed "The Love of God Shown Through Creative Action."

A Morning Worship service was held at 9:30 with the L. S. U. young people as leaders. Willieway Wells conducted the service, while Fred St. Amond gave a most inspirational talk of "The Modern Youth Meets the Master," using as a basis the scriptural text, "We Would See Jesus."

At 11 o'clock Mr. Arden O. French, of Baton Rouge, gave an inspiring talk on "The Discovery of Others," which made the young people realize more ully their responsibility to others in the program of living.

Much interest centered around the "Kangaroo Court," held in the afternoon, when seven boys were tried for disturbing the peace night before.

After a closing meeting, when resolutions were read and a consecration service was held, the young people pledging themselves to try to live the Christian program, the session adjourned. The young people voted it a most successful and inspirational Retreat.—R.

The Home Circle

EASTER

By M. C. Weyburn

I have heard the buds a-crackling,
When the warm spring rains appear;
Like the rifle crack of pickets,
When the foe was drawing near.
I have heard the deafening volley,
When the morning sun's bright rays
Awoke the winter sleep of forest,
For it was Easter, earth's resurrection day.

I have read from old Isaiah,
The councellor of the wise,
That the gold and silver worked for
Was of small worth in God's eyes!
How the soul to man he gaveth,
Would more be than they;
When he calls man to his Easter
On resurrection day.

I have read and read the story
Of the Christ they crucified,
Who was sealed in Joseph's tomb
Forever to abide;
How when the Marys early called,
Lo, the tomb door was open, the stone cast aside,
And an angel said, "He is risen,"
There to wait your Easter tide.

But he left the Easter lily
To mark his day for you,
And he left the Holy Spirit
To guide your life's path through;
That when he calls your earth's Easter
And stands to welcome you,
Shall verify Isaiah's prophecy,
Of a God that is ever true.

A SHINING EXAMPLE

By Willie C. Page

"Where are you, Grandmother dear?" called a clear young voice of a tall slender girl, who ran lightly up the steps of an old-fashioned house set back on the main street of a thriving Southern town.

Helen West passed through the hall and paused before the half-opened door of the living-room of her grandmother's home.

The room was bright with softly tinted cretonnes, window boxes of ferns and blooming flowers, gay with the song of many canaries, each seemed to vie with the other in making the sweetest melody. A white kitten was asleep on the lounge, on a rug before the glowing log fire a little boy was busily and happily building a railway track.

"Grandmother," repeated the girl softly.

"Here I am, dear," replie a small woman of seventy Maytimes, as she arose from an easy-chair near a sunny window and came forward smiling as she smotted her snow-white hair and arranged her modish gown of soft grey that suited her as the leaves and stems suit the violet, or the vine the wisteria.

"Why, it is Helen, my favorite granddaughter," exclaimed Mrs. Gale, brightly as she pulled a softly-cushioned chair before the fire. "Have this seat. Why, you are sprinkled with snow!"

Helen shook her furs, stretched out slender feet to the warmth of the fire with a sigh of rest.

"This is the most restful room I have ever seen, so much beautiful handwork and you are the brightest, sweetest, person in my whole knowledge."

"Please tell me the secret of it all?"

"Wait until I get my work," answered Grandmother as she drew her work-stand nearer the fire.

"What are you making now, Granny, dear?" demanded Helen in a tone of great interest.

"I am copying an old world bedspread. I found the directions in one of the new magazines. I am making it for a bridal present for a girl I know," replied Mrs. Gale smiling.

Helen blushed.

"When your grandfather died suddenly and left me practically unprovided for, with five little children to rear and educate, I did not know which way to turn the way seemed so dark and the burden more than I could bear; but I must say that always some unexpected event occurred, little things of everyday life happened to help me forget.

"I did the only thing possible at the time. I opened a preparatory school in my home and by this means was able to be with and care for the children. We did all the cooking, sewing and housework before and after school. Often I washed and pressed the children's clothing after they were asleep. Once your father had to stay in bed until I could make him a pair of trousers, as his fell in the fire and were burned," continued Mrs. Gale, reminiscently.

"I could have done this," affirmed Helen as she got up and walked restlessly about the room.

"I was cheerful and taught the children to be happy over the little things of life. Good books directs the trend of thought and has great influence over our lives," said Grandmother, pointing to the walls lined with worn volumes.

"I do not see how you could rear and educate five children and get them well established in the world," asserted the girl.

"Love, common sense, hard work and fervent prayer, a garden to dig in and make things grow are great helps in bringing up children in the right way," declared Mrs. Gale.

"Grandmother, do you believe money is essential to happiness?" asked Helen.

"No!" Mrs. Gale stopped to count the stitches of the basket of Irish crochet with its intricate border of filet roses, then resumed.

"No, not essential, but alright in its place. Much money diverts interest and often ruins a home by keeping the members apart. The happiest homes are those where each member helps and makes sacrifices for the other, and none are afraid of work."

"But it is hard to be poor, and not have nice things," declared Helen.

"Yes, dear, but people tire of a superabundance. Life is forever beginning anew, nothing is ever really finished or satisfying, the sorrow of today may be the joys of tomorrow. We need more faith in ourselves and in life itself."

"Why have you kept your own home all these years when your children are so anxious to have you live with them?" asked the girl earnestly.

"Because every person that can should have a home of his very own. Older people love their own fireside and candlestick. Old furniture is like old friends holding out loving arms of welcome and gives them a homey feeling found nowhere else no matter how grand and rich," replied Mrs. Gale.

"Margaret Gray is more of a friend than helper. When her only son died in the last war I had her move in the vacant room upstairs and legally adopted his motherless son, Billie, who is a great comfort to me, for there is nothing in life so sweet and draws us nearer heaven than the companionship of a little child," said Mrs. Gale softly.

"Granmuver, hug me a teeny little bit," said little Billie, as he left his blocks and snuggled his head under the arm of the lady of the loving heart.

"Study, hard work and many interests help one to keep young, as does a cheerful spirit and an understanding heart," said the lady.

She then went to the open piano and began to play that bit of exquisite music, Copin's Spring Song.

Helen tipped behind her and softly caressed the faded cheek then closed the door and went out of the house with unseeing eyes.

"I will emulate her example, for old age can be made beautiful."

AN OLD TULIP TREE

A famous old tulip tree at Falls Church, Virginia, to which George Washington tethered his horse when he attended Sunday services, has been saved for future generations by the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The tree was chosen in accordance with the society's plan to preserve one historic tree each year.

The Washington tulip is said to be one of the oldest trees in the State of Virginia. Scientists of the Department of Agriculture estimate that it was at least one hundred years old when the first Falls Church was built in 1734. Records of the church show that Washington attended services there for many years and that he took an active part in building a new church on the same site in 1763. His interest in the church continued for many years thereafter.

During the Revolutionary War, the church was a recruiting place for the company of Captain Charles Broadwater. In the Civil War, Union soldiers used the church first as a hospital and then as a stable, and partially dismantled it. In recent years the church has been so restored by ladies of the guild that it is said to be almost exactly the same as it was during the lifetime of Washington.

The plot of ground on which the church stands has also served as a cemetery. The old faded markings on the tombstones show that persons were buried there as long ago as 1750.

Last year the D. A. R. selected the famous Land Office elm at Marietta, Ohio, for preservation. The tree received its name because it formerly shaded the land office where final settlements were made of Revolutionary War scrip, and allotments of bounty lands were made and plots recorded. The tree had become so badly decayed that twenty-eight cavity fillings had to be made in its trunk and limbs in order to restore its structural strength.

The trees which are selected by the D. A. R. for preservation are treated by tree surgeons whose services are donated by former Congressman Martin L. Davey, head of the Davey Institute of Tree Surgery.—Akron News Service.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLES' ASSEMBLIES

The Epworth League Assemblies have become important events in the life of the Church, for they are times when the young people come together for study, recreation, felllowship and deeper consecration. Many a young person has found these Assemblies to be the time when they surrendered for full time Christian service; and many others have had their spiritual lives enriched and become better "laborers in the Master's Vineyard" in their local churches.

The Mississippi Conference Epworth League Assembly is to be at Whitworth College, Brookhaven, June 8-12; the Louisiana Conference at Mansfield College, Mansfield, June 10-16; and the North Mississippi at Grenada College, Grenada, June 15-19.

Appropriate courses of study and competent faculties have been secured; strong platform speakers, and wise spiritual directors have been selected for the three Assemblies. No local church could do a finer thing for their young people than to defray the expenses of delegates to these sessions. It will repay some thirty, sixty and a hundred fold.

Blessings on the Whitworth, Mansfield and Grenada hosts of Young People who gather in June.

SOAP AND NATIONAL STANDARDS

Soap is a criterion.

Mr. Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Chamber of Commerce, in comparing Russian and American standards, among other things said: "For a simple indication of the state of hygiene and health and social habits, I take the prosaic subject of laundry soap, 100,000 tons production in Russia, if raised to the standards of America, requiring 8,700,000 tons;" and of toilet soap, "Its 25,000 tons must rise to 250,000 tons under the standard of America. And I am not sure America has reached the proper standard."

The Mississippi Methodist Orphanage is undertaking to secure eight million Octagon soap (six products) coupons in order to pay off a $40,000 building debt. And, too, Borden Milk Company has agreed to co-operate so that now any coupon from the Eagle or Dime brand can of condensed milk will be credited as an Octagon soap coupon.

All Methodists and other friends of the orphanage are urged to save and send to the Home at Jackson, Miss., coupons from any of the six Octagon soap products and Eagle or Dime brand of condensed milk.

Soap and milk are criteria by which interest in orphans in Mississippi may be determined. The campaign is becoming closely organized and we wish it every success.

Rev. W. H. Giles preached the commencement sermon for the Tallulah, La., High School on Sunday, May 17. Brother Giles is reported to have delivered a strong and helpful message to the young people who composed the class of 1931.

Rev. B. M. Hunt, pastor Centenary, McComb, preached the commencement sermon at the Pike County Agricultural High School on Sunday, May 17. There were twenty-three young people who were members of the class that enjoyed the message.

Rev. W. P. Bailey, pastor at Horn Lake, Miss., has our thanks for a list of ten subscriptions with check to cover. This is splendid service in behalf of the Advocate and we believe that the paper will help in the development of that splendid charge.

The young people of the Benton, Miss., charge enjoyed a Jubilee Lawn Social Monday night, June 1, on the lawn of the parsonage at Benton. Rev. and Mrs. G. E. Allan are leading their young people into the finest things of the social as well as spiritual life.

Rev. James W. Sells, pastor Ocean Springs, Miss., and Executive Secretary Seashore Methodist Assembly, Biloxi, Miss., was in New Orleans on Friday, May 22, in the interest of the forthcoming season of the Assembly. He reports the prospects for a great season are encouraging.

Rev. John F. Foster, pastor, Bunkie, La., has our thanks for eleven subscriptions to the Advocate. Dr. Foster is in demand for special occasions throughout his section, but gives himself to the thorough cultivation of his local church and finds time to look after the interests of the Advocate.

Dr. John Brandon Peters, pastor First Church, New Orleans, has been sick for the past several days. Dr. Peters is a capable and energetic pastor and the multiplied demands upon him makes it difficult to conserve his strength. We sincerely hope that he will be fully restored at an early date.

Rev. W. C. Scott, pastor of the Elizabeth Sullivan Memorial Church, Bogalusa, La., delivered the commencement address for the High School of that city. Brother Scott is a "workman that needeth not to be ashamed" and gives a good account of his work wherever he is called to serve.

We acknowledge with appreciation receipt of the yearbook of the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church. This is the seventy-eighth year of its history and the yearbook is replete with interesting data. Rev. John L. Williams, the pastor, is doing fine work in that important section of New Orleans.

Professor J. R. Lin, dean of the department of philosophy and history at Millsaps College, delivered the commencement address at the Monticello, Miss., High School. Dr. Lin is a great teacher and exemplifies the high ethical and spiritual principles in daily life that he would impart to others.

Rev. Roy Wolfe, pastor of Hansboro, Miss., is having unusually good attendance at the mid-week prayer services. On May 13 there were sixty in attendance at Handsboro. He is soon to begin revival services at Nugent, which we trust will result in much good. We thank him for subscriptions to the Advocate.

Rev. James W. Gibson, pastor Weir-McCool, Miss., charge, has delighted the Advocate office by sending in thirteen subscriptions to the Advocate. The work on his charge is succeeding and the outlook for gracious revivals is encouraging. We thank Brother Gibson for his interest in behalf of the Conference organ.

Rev. H. E. Raley, the aggressive pastor at Harperville and Lena, Miss., has made the round of district conferences in the interest of the Golden Cross. He has recently closed a fine Cokesbury Training School at Harperville, which was taught by Miss Doris Alford. He is happy in his work and the charge is making progress along all lines.

The Baton Rouge District Conference is to convene at Ponchatoula, La., at 9:30 a. m., Thursday, June 4. Rev. L. W. Cain, the wide-awake presiding elder, is closing his fourth year and has arranged one of the best programs for the last. Dr. W. Angie Smith, pastor of First Church, Shreveport, is to do the preaching at the conference.

The Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., will hold the first annual session of their Southern Beach Summer Conference at the Seashore Methodist Assembly grounds, Biloxi, on August 4-12. These sacred grounds should be used all the year 'round by the various denominations in this section who may need such facilities for the promotion of their work.

Rev. B. M. Hunt, pastor, Centenary Church, McComb, Miss., and his people have made splendid progress for the first half of the Conference year. Fifty-nine people have united with the church, the Kingdom Extension quota of $750 paid in full, and $2100 paid on the building fund. Congregations are large and the spiritual state of the church is good.

Rev. Murray Cox, who has been serving Wesley Memorial charge, Biloxi, is to enter Southern Methodist University, at Dallas, Tex., in June. Rev. Olin Nix is to succeed Brother Cox at Biloxi. We are delighted that Brother Cox finds it possible to continue his studies, and doubt not that he and his people will be greatly benefitted by his attendance at S. M. U.

Miss Agnes Magee, Prentiss, Miss., sent us a check for one year's subscription to the Advocate to be sent to the Methodist ladies, at the Old Ladies' Home, Jackson, Miss. This was a gift from the primary dept. of the Sunday school at Prentiss. This is a beautiful deed and we thank Miss Magee and the children of the department for their thoughtfulness.

Rev. O. H. Scott, the evangelistic pastor at Enterprise, Miss., is meeting with good success in the work on his own charge and in services at other places. He recently held a great revival at Seventh Avenue Church, Meridian, where there were reclaimed or converted one hundred people. We thank Brother Scott for a list of subscriptions to the Advocate.

Rev. John W. Ramsey in sending us five subscriptions for which we thank him, wrote: "My second quarterly conference has just been held. Finances are in fairly good condition with the churches paying the pastor's salary monthly. I have received eighteen members into the church and we are looking forward to our revival campaign which starts soon."

Rev. Andrew J. Boyles was assisted in a revival meeting at McLain, Miss., by Rev. W. C. M. Baggett, of the Homewood charge. The pastor reports that the preaching was of a high order and that a number of reclamations and decisions for Christ were some of the results of the meeting. We thank Brother Boyles for new subscriptions to the Advocate.

Rev. H. W. Jordan, pastor Gordon Avenue, Monroe, La., on account of the ill health of his son, has transferred to the New Mexico Conference and is stationed at Clayton, New Mexico. Brother Jordan was in his second year at Gordon Avenue and he carries with him to his new field of labor the good wishes of his brethren and prayers that his son may be restored to health.

E. P. Harper, Star, Miss., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, wrote: "I have read the Advocate since I was a boy around my father's fireside. It has all along through the years helped a man out in the field to 'keep the faith' and strive for the ideals found in the Bible." Brother Harper is one of the faithful official members in the Jackson District and his life and work has exerted wide influence for good.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, pastor Picayune, Miss., announces the marriage of his daughter, Miss Hattie, to Mr. Julian Earl Frye of Hattiesburg. The wedding took place on May 30, the ceremony being performed by Brother Saunders. The bride is an accomplished young woman of refinement and culture and the groom is a promising young business man connected with the First National Bank at Hattisburg. We extend congratulations.

PROTECTION
AGAINST OLD AGE

We rejoice with Rev. R. E. Rutledge, pastor at Wesley Church, Seventh Avenue, Meridian, Miss., over the gracious revival that was recently held by Rev. O. H. Scott, Enterprise, Miss. There were one hundred professions of conversions and forty were added to the church, thirty-seven by profession of faith and three by certificate. A great revival will settle most of our problems and bring in the kingdom of God.

Rev. James W. Sells, pastor Ocean Springs, Miss., and Executive Secretary of the Seashore Methodist Assembly, Biloxi, preached the commencement sermon for the Harrison-Stone Junior College, Perkinston, Miss., on Sunday night, May 24, and on Sunday night following he preached at the Capitol St., Church, Jackson, with the high school graduates who are members of that church as special guests.

Rev. Aklis Burton Barry, pastor of Glendale Church, Jackson, Miss., is in the midst of a most promising revival meeting. He is doing the preaching himself and his church is thoroughly cooperating and committees have been provided to look after each detail of the services. Brother Barry has the shepherd's heart and is a gifted evangelistic preacher. We pray that gracious results may come from the revival.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton C. Swayze, Benton, Miss., announce the approaching marriage in June of their daughter, Miss Jennie Beth, to Mr. Olen V. Clark, of DeKalb, Mississippi. Miss Swayze is a graduate of Whitworth and Millsaps and Mr. Clark is a graduate of Mississippi A. & M. They were members of the Yazoo County Agricultural High School faculty last session. The Advocate joins their many friends in wishing them every happiness.

The first annual music festival and prize choral contest will be held at the tabernacle on the grounds of the Seashore Methodist Assembly, Tuesday night, June 2. This contest is limited to church choirs on the Mississippi Gulf Coast. To date, five choirs have entered, and Norwoods, Inc., of Gulfport, have offered a loving cup to be given to the winning choir. The latter part of the evening's entertainment will feature a number of the coast's leading musicians.

We were interested to see in an announcement of the revival services that among the number of special committees provided there was "The Cold Water Committee." We have known a number of meetings where cold water was thrown upon the services, but this is the first time that we have noticed that a special committee was raised to look after the cold water. It is doubtless wiser to locate the ice house in the beginning in order to restrict such activities.

Mr. Jefferson Koonce, a devoted member of the Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, died in a fwe hours after the death of Mrs. O. W. Bradley, the beloved wife of his pastor. He was buried from his home with the services being conducted by Dr. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the district. Brother Koonce was a member of the board of stewards of his church and secretary of the Federal Land Bank. Sincere sympathy is extended to the bereaved ones.

We join with the many friends of Rev. C. M. Morris, pastor at Mangham, La., in assuring him of sincerest sympathy in the death of his wife, who we learn from Brother W. R. Middleton, has passed away. Mrs. Morris has been sick for several months and her death has brought sorrow not only into the parsonage home at Mangham, but to many others who knew and loved her. We hope that some one will supply the Advocate with a fuller account of her life and work.

Rev. J. W. Loudenslager, the faithful pastor at Leakesville, Miss., writes, "We closed a revival meeting at Leakesville on Sunday, May 3. Rev. W. P. George, Barlow, did the preaching and Mr. L. A. Brine, Leakesville, led the singing. Both did fine work. Attendance was good, and the interest held up throughout the meeting. The Lord blessed us in each service. Two were received by profession of faith and several by letter. The church seems more alive than at any time during my pastorate."

Brother S. E. Carruth of Summit, Miss., writing from Wilmore, Ky., expresses his very great enjoyment of the Culpepper lectures on evangelism being delivered at Asbury College by the Rev. J. J. Rives, D.D., pastor of Francis Asbury M. E. Church, South, Washington, D. C. He says, "Although rather diminutive in stature Dr. Rives at once impresses an appreciative audience with his gigantic intellect, expansive versatility and deep spiritual insight. If the high standard of these addresses is maintained in his ministry at the national capital, the erstwhile reputation for pulpit excellence in Southern Methodism is safely represented by Dr. Rives." Brother Carruth further informs us that the Advocate is found on the faculty of Asbury. This is expected, especially since Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, so long successfully identified with varied church enterprises of this area, is now an honored acquisition to that world institution.

Death in its season and when expected is one of the awful things of nature. When it comes in the prime of life by the inroads of disease, it is untimely. But when it comes in the prime of life and by the infernal machinations of an assassin's hand, it is then tragic and uncalled for. Such is the death that CLYDE RIVERS of Blue Mountain. Miss., U. S. Deputy Marshall, with headquarters in Clarksdale, met at the hands of a bunch of foul assassins, bootleggers and moonshiners on Saturday night, between 10 and 11 o'clock, May 16, near Booneville, Miss. Clyde Rivers was born at Bethlehem, in Marshall Connty, Febraury 20, 1886. He was the second son of Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Rivers. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mattie Alexander Rivers, and five children, Jo. Nellie Ruth, Lee Dickson, Juanita and Martha Louise; his mother, Mrs. L. N. Rivers, and sister, Mrs. R. W. Griffith, all of Blue Mountain, Miss.; his brothers, Louis and Guy of Clarksdale, and Aqnilla of Marks, Miss.

R. W. G.

W. B. SIMS was horn June 25, 1857, and died April 24, 1931. William B. Sims and Miss Elizabeth Rozane were married on November 4, 1975. To this union there were born eleven children. Six of them preceded their father to their heavenly home. The other five are all here to mourn the departure of their sainted father. They are as follows: Mrs. C. M. Moody, Miss Roena Sims. Robert, D. F., and W. R. Sims, Jr., and one sister, Mrs. S. J. Stafford of Gilhertown, Ala. Brother Sims was converted in early life and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was ever afterwards a faithful and consistent memher of the same. He served his church as steward and trustee. About all of his active life he was president of the Frost Bridge Holiness Camp Meeting committee, while last summer, when he resigned on account of not being able to attend to the business and a younger man was elected to look after this important work. At 6 o'clock a. m. April 24, his spirit left his body and went to God who gave it. And at 10 o'clock, April 25 a large crowd of friends and relatives met at Salem Church and the funeral was preached by Rev. A. S. Oliver, a former pastor, assisted by the pastor, and Rev. Mr. Walley, a memher of M. P. Church. After the services in the chnrch the body was carried by the pall bearers, Brother Andrew Moody and his two sons and others out into the cemetery and there we laid the body away to await the resurrection of the just. So, dear friends, let us not weep as those who have no hope, for Jesus hath said:, "I am the resurrection and the life, and he that helieveth in me though he were dead, yet shall he live." And, "he that liveth and believeth in me shall never die." The Scriptures tell us that, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, yea, saith the spirit that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

A friend and pastor,
C. H. HERRING.

On the morning of May 1, 1931, as the day flung forth its challenge to the earth, in the home of her father, Mr. P. P. Keith, in Keithville, La., the weary spirit of MARY SLAUGHTER KEITH left its frail abode, and sought in flight a tranquility, freedom from pain and a longer-for peace in a home prepared for those who love and give in love. Those who loved her and found in her life an expression of those graces of personality that endear gracious women to all who know them, are passing down the shadowy lane, bridged over with their broken dreams, and are finding beyond the great salt fount of tears that garden, the Gethsemane through which sooner or later all in life pass. How they miss her cheering presence, her comforting words of sympathy and kindly expression; her generous thought, her never-failing love and devotion. Mary Keith was an outstanding woman in many respects. Her education was received at Mansfield College, where she graduated in 1900. The following year was spent in St. Louis, studying piano and voice. Early in life she professed faith in her Lord and united with the Methodist Church. She was well qualified to take her place in any sphere which she chose, hut preferred rather to devote her time and talents to the blessing of her father's and mother's home. Here she ministered unceasingly, bringing into play all those graces of life which she possessed and those natural talents which she had cultivated. Verily, she lived to bless their home.

Her church, too, knew her presence and devotion, for her beautifully gifted fingers often gave expression in service, on the piano, to the spirit within her, and her voice gave pleasure and inspiraiton to her pastor and friends. Her community life is feeling the vacancy left in her passing. Her visits and ministrations to those about had meant much to them; her kindly inquiries about those who were sick, or who were in need. Her family will miss her, oh! so much; the father, Mrs. P. P. Keith, a sister, Mrs. J. S. Darling; brothers, W. H. Keith, P. P. Keith; and uncle, F. C. Nagle; nephews, Arnold Keith, D. W. Keith, Jeb. Darby, and five nieces, Misses Kathryn and Dorothy Keith, Jananar Darhy, Mesdames Albin Mailhes and Robert Jackson, hesides many other relatives and friends. Her mother and hrother, D. W. Keith, had gone on to he ready to receive her in that home not made with hands.

"O, Death, where is thy sting?
O, Grave, where thy victory?
Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory!".

Then gently sleep, heloved one. May peace attend thee in thy slumber.

The noontide of life was scarcely past when the weariness of death o'ershadowed thee, calling thy spirit to rest in the chamher of silence.

Those beautiful flowers placed about thy couch are the fitting guardians of thy gentle spirit. Each one hreathes upon thee a blessing from some friend. Each hloom is a symhol of some loving thought, which in the past came from thy loving heart.

Sleep on, O, loved one.

MRS. D. W. KEITH.

WEST LAUREL METHODISTS ENJOY SPLENDID REVIVAL

Mr. Olen C. Hull, extension secretary, Mississippi Conference Board of Christian Education, has recently conducted a "Ten-Day Revival Campaign" in West Laurel Mission Church, with Rev. C. Y. Higginbotham, pastor. This meeting closed amidst fervent enthusiasm and conviction on Wednesday night, May 6. The church auditorium was crowded almost to its capacity every evening, and ofttimes scores of people were turned away for lack of space. A goodly number were added to the church membership, and an already rife and growing interest was greatly accelerated and exhibited. Much real good seems to have been accomplished. The pastor has been greatly gratified at the ground that has been gained by this little church the last few months, and is confident that it is winning the esteem of the people of its vicinity. He also endorses and appreciates the fine services rendered by Brother Hull.

Much credit and gratitude goes to Prof. Val Sumrall, local choir director and leader of the Laurel (Miss.) Firemen's Quartet, for the building of a splendid choir and the attraction of large crowds to the inspiring services held in this church prior to, and during the revival campaign just closed. His co-operation with the pastor and Mr. Hull in every way has been remarkahle. This church is to be congratulate on having such an able and admirable man to train and lead its choir. While he is not a member of the Methodist Church, this man is Christian in spirit and Methodistic in manner, and our people in West Laurel are duly proud of his services. Thanks to him and Brother Hull for the noble work they are doing for the church and Kingdom.—Laurel Daily Leader.

AUXILIARY ENTERTAINS GRANDMOTHERS

The Rolling Fork Auxiliary, Vicksburg district, Mississippi Conference, held its regular meeting on Monday, May 11, in the home of Mrs. J. E. Bunting, with the president, Mrs. Earle Perry, presiding.

The special guests for the afternoon were the grandmothers and great-grandmothers of the society.

The members were delighted to have Mrs. Fred McFadden conduct the devotional and her beautiful talk on Hannah, one of the noble Bible mothers, was greatly enjoyed.

The program, carefully prepared and led by Mrs. Estes Mathews, assisted by Mrs. Clarence Gilliland and Mrs. June McMahon, was most interesting and instructive.

As a small token of love and affection hoping to convey to them the message of their inspiration at all times to the society, the honor guests were presented with colorful corsages by the membership.

Mrs. J. G. Parham and Mrs. A. K. Barrier, the great-grandmothers present responded to this tribute most beautifully.

At the close of the meeting a delicious salad course was served by the hostesses.

JACKSON DISTRICT MEETING

The 1931 session of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Jackson district, Mississippi Conference, was called to order by Mrs. W. F. Mahaffy on May 7, in Millsaps Memorial Church, Fondren, Miss. Our presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Leggett, conducted the devotions.

The delegates had been asked to sit together by zones. The leaders were called upon for short reports. The attendance was as follows: Zone 1, Mrs. John Patton, leader, 35; Zone 2, Mrs. W. H. Ewing, leader, 9; Zone 3, Mrs. Paul Gates, leader, 34; Zone 4, Mrs. Lloyd Gaddis, leader, 18; Zone 5, Mrs. W. H. Bradley, leader, 18.

This was followed by a report from the district secretary. Because of her loyalty and good work, a rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. Mahaffey.

Mrs. Joseph A. Smith's message from the Council was inspiring. Her description of the Consecration Service made you feel that you were there. At the close of this talk, Mrs. Mahaffey thanked the auxiliaries for making it possible for her to attend Council, and she gave a few impressions she had received.

Mrs. Mahaffey presented badges to some of the societies that had won them, but were unable to attend conference at Gulfport.

Mrs. A. F. Watkins was given the opportunity to bring a message concerning the W. C. T. U. She stressed the fact that temperance and law observance are included in our new work. She insisted that where there is no W. C. T. U. organization, the Missionary Society take the fifth Monday for the study of temperance.

Mrs. Gordon Patton, our vice-president, brought a stirring message on "Spiritual Cultivation."

After enjoying a bountiful lunch, served by the ladies of Millsaps Memorial Church, we assembled at 1:30 o'clock, with Mrs. Mahaffey in the chair. Rev. T. O. Prewitt had charge of the devotionals. After the congregation sang "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," he read a lesson from Mathew, and gave a short message from it. Rev. Mr. Strait led the prayer.

Mrs. Cottrell, our new president, expressed her thanks to the women for her position. She began her talk by asking the question, "What does the Missionary Society mean to us? She spoke of the growth of the women's work in the last fifty years. She says that the Pacific ocean does not separate us from the countries across the way, but brings us together. "The autonomous churches have made a difference in our missions, though they are still our children. We find all of these churches growing and directing their work to others less fortunate than they. We find that the mission schools are of such fine type that the governments have copied them. The women's work includes many things, and one of the big ones is the making of literature. It is a pleasure to note that the women are taking more interest in our preachers's homes. The chief feature of the work in the Wesley and community houses, is teaching people to live day by day in a Christlike way."

A little time was devoted to the discussion of books to be studied. The question was asked if credit would be received for studying Grace Saxe's books and the answer was "No" from Mrs. Joseph A. Smith, who had a direct communication from Mrs. Lopscomb concerning the question.

Mrs. Riley was out of town, so Mrs. Bufkin had charge of the number, "Our Orphanage." Quite a few of the "Little Sisters" were present and sang "I'll Be a Sunbeam." Mrs. Swearingen read a poem, "The Octagon Soap Brigade." She, Mrs. Bufkin and Mrs. Shands made very earnest appeals in behalf of the Octagon soap campaign.

Mrs. J. Morgan Stevens gave a splendid talk on "Christian Social Relations." She stated that certificates may be obtained in this work, which is divided into two parts, preventive and reformatory. She stressed the necessity of sending in reports. At the close of her talk, she read a petition against lynching and asked that as many ladies as would, sign it.

Mrs. Thompson, chairman of the legislative committee, spoke briefly on the necessity of having a committee in each local auxiliary.

Mrs. John T. Sharp spoke on "Financing the Missionary Enterprise during a Financial Depression." Last year was the first time we ever had a deficit in our work. The first quarter of this year we were in arrears. What will it amount to during the year? There are 21,000 women in the Mississippi Conference who are not members of the missionary society; if we could enlist them and secure more life members we would solve a great financial problem.

Mrs. Simrall, of Madison Station, was given a few minutes in which she made a plea that the Mother's Day offering be sent to the Old Ladies' Home.

Mrs. Mahaffey urged that the Scarritt and Wesley House pledges be sent in at once. She spoke of the good attendance and was pleased to have so many pastors present. There was no invitation for the next meeting.

We were dismisssed with the benediction by Rev. T. O. Prewitt.

ESTHER TUCKER, Sec.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT

The southern division of the Alexandria district of Woman's Missionary Societies met at Opelousas, May 15, beginning at 9:30 a. m., with Mrs. O. E. Grant, district secretary, presiding.

Devotional was led by Rev. Knight, of Eunice.

The welcome address by Rev. Anders of Opelousas. The response to this address was given by Mrs. Anders of the Lottie auxiliary.

The roll call showed there were present, Bunkie 17, Eunice 4, Glenmora 10, Lottie 3, Oakdale 4, Opelousas 23, Rosedale 7, White Chapel 7, and visitors 8.

The message by our district secretary disclosed some interesting facts about the Alexandria district, among which are, the steady spiritual growth of the entire district in the face of adverse material conditions, a small reduction in the amount of the pledge

"A few years ago, I was in a very nervous condition," writes Mrs. P. L. Reynolds, 327 W. Main St., Spartanburg, S. C. "I was terribly depressed. I felt every day just like something awful was going to happen. I did not sleep well at night. I had awful crying spells and did not know what in the world I was crying about. My mother told me to try Cardui. After my first bottle, I was better. I took several bottles and it did me a world of good. I quit having the nervous, blue feeling, and was soon all right. I have taken it since, just as a tonic."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

God has blessed the work of your board marvelously The large number of new contributors to the mission fund and the fine offerings come in from Sunday school both evidence the faithful work of pastors and church workers for the cause of building the Kingdom of God. I wish it was possible for me to know accurately just how the response has been in the work of the Epworth League, from the leagues I have visited and met I had the privilege of hearing their reports, this same story can be told. God is with us unmistakably manifesting His presence and it makes us all very happy.

To the church that has not as yet observed Mission Day, or Sunday School Day, or League Anniversary Day, it is not TOO LATE. Your people will be blessed, it will encourage all the other work of the church and prove a lasting blessing. Materials may be secured through the board's office, 304 Millsaps Building, Jackson, Miss.

The fifth Sunday in May is College Day. This day should be observed in every church and a collection taken and sent in for this fund. Seventy-five per cent of this collection remains within the Conference to aid needy boys and girls in getting through school. Millsaps College has been getting $700 a year for the Wesley Foundation to aid young preachers they could use twice this amount. This is our opportunity to give it to the college. All of us giving a little will be able to do a large thing for these boys and then help others out of the Conference too. The programs have been published in the Advocate and in Christian Education Magazine; your pastor has this and will be glad to aid you in the service.

The Epworth League Assembly meets June 8 to 12. The Program has already appeared in the Advocate and will, I am sure, be sent out through the Conference before this is read. Study your program and come fully prepared to get the most out of this program. The officials in charge have done a good piece of work and deserve the encouragement o fthe entire Conference by a full and hearty support. Use your influence in making the attendance the largest and best it has ever been.

It was our great pleasure to attend the Brookhaven District Epworth League Institute. I enjoyed my day with this fine group of young people. They organized a baseball league among themselves and expect to play a series of games, the loser giving an entertainment for the other teams. I was delighted to see them providing for the girls to take part in these games. I am sure that this is going to prove a most happy and helpful social life for these fine young people.

Dr. Decell, the presiding elder of the district, gave a most pleasing address, which was much enjoyed by the leaguers and their friends. Mr. C. Alford, the district secretary, is in high favor with the young people, and got a most gratifying vote of thanks for his fine work among them.

The Norfield league provided entertainment which consisted of a treasure hunt and a baseball game. The boys played the girls. I really think the girls knocked more home runs and all had a happy time. This league also served supper, which was greatly enjoyed. These fine young people are to be congratulated upon the entertainment and pleasure they afforded their guests. Hold on to God through prayer and faith. God is going to answer our prayers. May our faith challenge us to ask big things of Him.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

On last Friday, the 22nd of May, we held a Christian Educational Conference for the southern half of the Greenville district, at Shaw. Reverend Melville Johnson, the district executive secretary, did some splendid work in preparation for this meeting and the meeting was very well attended in the face of many distractions. The various phases of the unified program were emphasized as well as other important phases of the educational work of the local church. The meeting was closed with a very fine and timely inspirational address by the presiding elder, Dr. E. Nash Broyles. Others taking part on the program were, Rev. Mellville Johnson, Rev. H. R. McKee, Rev. W. L. Robinson, Mrs. Mellville Johnson, Rev. E. G. Mohler and the writer. Rev. J. J. Baird and the good people of Shaw showed their usual generous hospitality by serving a most delectable lunch.

It was the writer's pleasure to visit the church at Greenwood last Sunday and preach for the pastor. Plans are fully under way to completely unify the young people's division of the Greenwood church. Rev. A. T. McIlwain, the pastor, has his local church board of Chrstian education functioning. I am sure that this leading church of our Conference stands at the top in its program of Christian education.

Grenada College has just cleosed a very successful session. Dr. D. H. Bishop, of Millsaps College, delivered the baccalaureate address, and Dr. J. B. Mitchell, of Memphis, preached the sermon. It is to the credit of our Conference that we have such a school as Grenada College. Full plans have been made for the best year of its history next session. It is a four-year fully accredited college, grade A. Its graduates have every privilege of those of any other grade A senior college. They are teaching in our best high schools and persuing their post-graduate studies in our leading universities, where some of them have achieved distinction. No young woman who is contemplating attending college next year will make any mistake in going to Grenada College.

The two real big things that are before us just at this time are the Leadership Training School, Grenada College, June 8-13, and Young People's Assembly, at Grenada College, June 15-19. We are expecting record attendance at both these gatherings. Make your plans to come. Expenses only one dollar per day.

Sunday School Day funds continue to come in. Have you observed the day and sent in your offering? Your prompt attention will be appreciated.

Epworth League

REPORT OF SENIOR EPWORTH LEAGUE OF CLEVELAND, MISS

The Senior Epworth League has been doing splendid work during the league year, especially in the social service department. At the beginning of the regular league year the leaguers decided that in making their contributions to the needy of the neighborhood they would give all their assistance to one or two families. This plan was decided upon because the finances of the league were low, and because they thought that more good could be rendered in this way than by scattering it out among several. The league has been taking care of two families, that is, as far as their finances will reach. One of these families is dependent entirely upon charity, as there is no male person in the family. The other receives practically no help from the father. At Thanksgiving, a committee from the league carried a nice box of food and clothing to one of these families. At Christmas, the other family was carried enough groceries and clothing to last through the holiday season. The league makes a visit to these families at least once every two weeks, and during the time of a serious case of illness in one of these families a visit was made every week. Below is an account of the work done in January, February and March: $11 for an operation for one family; food, clothing, and medicine for both families, including the other small gifts, $30. For the latter part of March, and for April and May, the following is an account of the expenses: $30 for food and medicine. Of course this amount does not include all of the smaller donations, such as magazines, food, clothing, etc., given by individuals. This department plans to continue the work through the summer, and do even greater things if it is possible to obtain the money. We believe that this work, though seemingly small, has been a great deal of help to those receiving it, and we know that the league has thoroughly enjoyed the work, and we feel that they have received a blessing from the rendering of this small service. The other departments of the league have also been doing splendid work, and we feel that this has been a very successful league year.

REVIVAL AT ROXIE

Our revival at Roxie closed last night, Sunday 17, conducted by Rev. Percy Vaughan, our pastor, who directed the singing also.

Two young ladies and one young man united with the church. Two others will probably come in soon. Very few who attended the services are not members of some church.

We feel sure that most all who are members of the different churches were reconsecrated and impressed us with the fact of their desire to be of greater service to the church.

The children and older people were organized into committees for the various needs of the revival, and everyone did his best.

The children were taught by Brother Vaughan to sing their songs, earnestly and impressively, and that melodies were sweetest when sung from their hearts, and they sang splendidly, as did the older people. So our song services added greatly to the success of the revival.

Quite a number said this was the best and most helpful and enjoyable meeting they ever attended; everyone seemed deeply interested and impressed. One good lady said, "If we are not a better people after attending these services, we certainly ought to be."

Brother Vaughan is earnest and sincere; is strictly orthodox and is strictly unsensational. We feel that he speaks directly from the heart the words God would have him speak.

After hearing him through this revival, we all feel that we are a better people, drawn closer together in Christian love, and thus to our Heavenly Father.

If any pastor wishes someone to help him in a meeting, we are sure you will not make a mistake in getting our pastor, Brother Vaughan. He strives to reach all in his services, from the oldest to the youngest, and never seems to be weary.

OAK RIDGE (LA.) CHARGE

Dear Advocate: Just a few lines, dear editor, to let you hear from us. We are getting along fine on the Oak Ridge and Little Creek charge and believe in every way our second year here will be the better of the two. I am privileged to serve a good people and am happy in my work.

Good Ole Brother Mac was with me all last Sunday with his picture show, and his friendly smile just won everyone as usual. He and I organized one Sunday school at Mann's Schoolhouse, with eighty-seven members present to start with. Soon it will be a hundred and fifty, we hope. There are some three hundred people in this community and they receive poor service, for I am the only preacher that serves them. I give them some

Lots of good people are wasting good prayers asking for money to be sent so they can serve such places. The only way I find is to go and trust God to take care of the rest and He always does.

If we take in as many as fifty on profession of faith in this meeting you will hear from us again.

Tell the brethren for me that I love them all and am praying for the best year we ever had in our report on profession of faith.

which is now $3400. Sixteen of the twenty-two active auxiliaries observed the Week of Prayer. Three hundred and two of the five hundred thirty-six members are in the Bible classes. Two hundred and ninety-six are members of mission study classes. Mrs. Grant made a strong plea for each auxiliary to make every effort to pay its pledge in full and when this is accomplished assume its share in financing the scholarship of two missionaries, Miss Berta Haspell and Miss Eva Martin. She made an appeal to complete the finished task and start the new one with greater zeal; she urged a deeper spiritual life.

A very beautiful appreciation of the life of Mrs. Stephens was given by Mrs. Campbell of White Chapel.

Mrs. Mantiply of Bunkie gave a splendid report of the annual conference, which made some of us who did not attend feel that we had missed a great treat. She stated that Mrs. Lipscomb, throughout her address urged deeper Christian experience and suggested greater Bible reading with a quiet hour following for meditation and prayer. She told of retreats where one can go to invite deeper spiritual experience.

Mrs. Powers, superintendent of young people's work, gave an address on this phase of work, after which Mrs. Holmes, conference superintendent of children's work, gave a short talk. Mrs. Schell and Mrs. Kerr gave a vocal duet which was very much enjoyed.

The morning session was closed with a very inspirational hour conducted by Mr. Schell.

Dinner was served under the wide-spreading oak trees by the church, with flowers everywhere near.

The afternoon session opened with prayer by Mrs. De Bore of Rosedale. It was found that Bunkie, Oakdale, Rosedale, Glenmora, Opelousas and Elizabeth are striving to reach the standard in Bible study. Mrs. Grant announced that this part of the year's program must be reported to Mrs. F. H. Bradshaw of Mansfield.

Mrs. Grant urged the attendance of vacation Bible schools. Mrs. Holmes suggested giving more time to religious education of our children with suggestions for the same, stating that programs for vacation sessions can be secured from Literary Headquarters, but must be financed locally, as no provision had been made for this.

Notes from a letter from Mrs. Carre were read by Mrs. Grant, in which she admonished each auxiliary to exercise care in making reports with a re-check when acknowledgment is returned. A letter from Mrs. Lipscomb called attention to the discrepancy of some reports. Accuracy was stressed for future reports.

Glenmora ladies gave a play in a most wholesome and pleasing manner. Miss Wilhemina Hoofer gave an address on our Council institutions. She is familiar with this work and the need of our mission schools. She gave a first hand account of the work done in them. She told of an art exhibit as an object lesson in American citizenship, used effectively at St. Marks' sewing classes are helping in the part of New Orleans. The work in the clinic there seems most worth while.

The Houma work is a wonderful help not only to the sixty-three boys and girls, but to this entire section of Louisiana. It was interesting to know that the girl who is supported by the Alexandria district will graduate this year. It was stated that she has finished the school with a bright prospect for the future and will be great help, if needs be, to the people in her community.

Dr. Foster of Bunkie gave an excellent address on how to finance missionary enterprises in an economic depression. He stated that the decrease in appropriation would close the work in Europe unless more funds are found. He felt that people were not curtailing pleasures, the social end of life had not been cut in a marked degree, he stated. Funds were found for what one wants. He closed with an expression of abiding faith in the final triumph of Christianity. A rising vote of thanks was extended to the Opelousas auxiliary.

A collection of $8.35 was taken. The next meeting will be of the entire district in Alexandria.

District Secretary.

ANNUAL MEETING SOUTHERN METHODIST ORPHANAGE CONFERENCE

The eleventh annual meeting of the Southern Methodist Orphanage Conference met in Richmond, Va., Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, April 27, 28 and 29.

All of the orphanages were represented in person or by a letter, except two, and it was one of the most interesting of all the meetings held since the organization.

The topics discussed were of vital interest and the speakers selected to discuss these topics showed unusual care in the preparation of addresses.

The Round-Table discussions were provocative of thought and many of the problems confronting orphanage workers had light thrown on them which will help all the homes, if the suggestions are carried out.

It is becoming more and more evident with each meeting of this association that the organization of this conference was one of the wisest moves of the children's homes since their beginning.

The heads of these homes have shown their appreciation of the intrinsic value by an increasing interest in the annual meetings, while those who have had the privilege and honor of entertaining the body have shown an increasing eagerness for the return of the workers to that home because of its influence over the workers and the children. Appreciating this fact also there is an increasing eagerness on the part of the homes who have not had the pleasure of entertaining, to secure the conference as is evidenced by the fact that for the last two or three years by a kind of tacit understanding the place of meeting is practically settled two or three years in advance.

One question of very vital moment which was discussed both on the floor and privately, was a suggestion made to the body by the Hospital Board that the Orphanage and Child Welfare work of our church be so correlated with that board that the work of the homes might be extended into new territory, and intensified in the conferences that have orphanages.

This matter has been under consideration by the members of the orphanage conference and the Hospital Board for the past six years and the General Conference at Dallas, Texas, last May, took action looking to some such move.

A committee was appointed to meet a like committee from the Hospital Board to thresh out the details of such correlation, and report back next year to the body. If such a basis can be agreed upon by the conference and the Hospital Board, the matter will be reported to the several Annual Conferences and to the approaching General Conference for action.

One thing the Orphanage Conference insists upon and it will not recede from it, that the integrity of orphanage work must be preserved. All of this is purely tentative as no such correlation can be had, however earnestly desired by both bodies until the General Conference takes action.

Rev. A. S. Bornes, superintendent of Methodist Orphanage, Raliegh, North Carolina, was elected president for the ensuing year. The next meeting goes to Columbia, South Carolina.

A WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Since the Woman's Missionary Council has discouraged the members of that society taking active part in the orphanage work, prefering that they should confine themselves to strictly society obligations, the women of the Virginia Conference have organized a "Woman's Auxiliary," to take over the work of the orphanage of that conference.

Through their aid during the past year the buildings of that home have been completely renovated and made attractive. They were aided in this by the federation of the men's Bible classes. Several members of this auxiliary visited the Orphanage Conference during its sessions and addressed us.

This movement, at present purely local, is destined to spread to other Conferences, thus taking over the work done by the local department of the Missionary Society before this restrictive action was taken. We will hear more about this organization later, we are sure.

ESPECIAL THANKS

Shortly after onr coupon campaign began a few friends said they could not gather coupons for us, but would we accept checks instead, these checks to take the same course as coupons. We answered promptly "Yes."

The other day we received two checks, each for fifty dollars for this fund.

Mr. Simon Marks, president of the Emporium Company of Jackson, sent us his checks for that amount, also Mrs. S. J. Johnson of this city. Both these checks came through the Woman's Missionary Society of Galloway Memorial Church, and has been credited to that society on this special fund.

We wish to especially thank Mr. Marks and Mrs. Johnson for this remembrance of our effort.

While we prefer the coupons, there may be others who feel as did these friends. If so, we will gladly accept check.

CHURCH BULLETIN NOTICES

We have noticed that many churches in other States have called attention to our Octagon coupon campaign in their weekly church bulletins. This is very gratifying to us and it is with great pleasure we publicly thank these friends for this publicity.

Dear friends: Send in coupons as fast as you get them. I find some who do not.

Brethren who have promised donations (some are old pledges), please send checks at your earliest convenience.

Those to whom our board sent letters, I am going as rapidly as possible, but please don't wait for me, do as a few have done, send contributions as early as possible and as large as you can. I will send you receipts. We are in great need.

W. M. SULLIVAN.

THE OCTAGON COUPONS

We wish to extend thanks to all friends of the State and surrounding States for their very enthusiastic help with our coupon campaign. We feel that we are coming along nicely and that the movement is just beginning to gain volume. It always takes a certain length of time to set up an organization and get it to working.

The fact that we are receiving this wonderful enthusiastic support, moves us to think that the next step is to harness this enthusiasm—harness this steam we have raised—so that it may get under and dig—big results! We have observed that when "Big Business" gets ready to do something big, it has a way of mapping out the job and assigning to each worker some definite task to be performed, saying to each, "When this thing is done, the job will have been put over." A goal toward which to drive is the necessary thing—after the preliminaries—rather than a haphazard driving, knowing not where we are going. So, we have attempted to work out a quota as a definite task.

As this effort has been projected through the channel of the Woman's Missionary Society, we have worked the quota out upon the basis of the membership of the Missionary Societies in Mississippi Methodism. This quota figures down to 1000 coupons for each memberf of the society for the entire campaign. This may seem stiff to some, but, if you think, it means that she has the entire membership of her church upon which to work, also her coterie of friends—she merely stands responsible for getting, we will say, eight or ten other users promised and for securing their coupons. This should be very easy! It is easy, once each woman sets herself really to the task!

The Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company tells us that already they sell Octagon products in the State of Mississippi to the amount of 8,000,000 coupons. In New Orleans, a city of 500,000 population, they redeem over 10,000,000 coupons each year. They also state that 40 per cent of their coupons are never redeemed. In this you will observe that we are not setting ourselves an impossible task. The coupons are already here. Let us line up ourselves, our churches and our friends 100 per cent in the use of all SIX products, not just one or two or three, but all SIX; in addition, let us try to round up every ACCUMULATION of coupons, already in the hands of friends.

The women of Galloway Memorial, Jackson, have organized definitely what they term "The Octagon Extension Department" of the society and th purpose of this is that each Monday cars from Galloway Memorial shall go out to surrounding churches to talk "Octagon coupons." Today they are visiting six churches, going a distance of fifty miles to one. The purpose is not to dictate to the churches visited as to how it is to be done, but it is for the giving and receiving of enthusiasm for a continued carrying on until "the task is done and the victory won."

May I plead with the women of every district in the State that this extension work be taken up at once. A blessing and a boost received in one channl of your work will carry over into the other channels and you will find that your entire program of work will be benefited.

Miss Zareda Greene of Fulton, Miss., has written a most interesting playlet along the line of our Octagon campaign. This would be most interesting either in the Woman's Society, the League or the children's division. Any one desiring a copy of this playlet may write us and we shall be glad to send one.

May we urge again that you send in your coupons monthly, be the number great or small! You are holding back money from us each time you hold your coupons.

There are other friends who are so situated that they cannot engage in this campaign, but who have given us checks in the place. Last week we received two checks for $50 each to be applied on this coupon fund for reducing the principal of our $40,000 indebtedness. We should be glad to have many more of this kind. Many thanks to those who have taken this privilege.

MRS. ALMA G. RILEY,
Campaign Director.

THE MINISTRY AND WAR

Recently a large number of ministers in the United States, some of them distinguished leaders, signed a questionnaire stating they would not sanction nor serve in any future war.

War is horrible and should be abolished.

War is an economic waste. Millions of strong men cannot be killed, their labor and purchasing power removed from the world and it prove an economic benefit. Regardless of indemnities which accrue to the victors, war is never ultimately profitable. Wartime commerce, heretofore, has proven a social travesty. Any system that conscripts manhood and contributes toward the money gathering of a comparative few, is inhuman. To allow some to make millions of dollars while millions of men give their all in battle is not economically sound, but intolerable. Business that profits by war and the system of making money should serve for the common welfare as unselfishly as men.

War is morally hazardous. The high tension to which a nation is wrought, the passions engendered, the restraints removed and the after-effects generate a maelstrom which all but paralyzes moral forces.

Moreover, war is spiritually perilous. To mobilize millions of men and marshal creative science and inventive genius in the one business of striking the enemy down borders on spiritual disaster.

Notwithstanding the voice of history thunders the horrors of war, gunpowder can now be smelled around the world. President Hoover told the International Chamber of Commerce, which met in Washington in May, that the world's annual expenditure on arms is approximately $5,000,000,000, which is an increase of nearly 70 per cent over what it was prior to 1914, the beginning of the World War; and that 5,500,000 men are actively under arms and 20,000,000 in army reserves. The Congressional Record, January 10, 1931, gives the United States' total army personnel as 807,880, and the amount Congress appropriated for the military establishment for 1932 was $334,956,880. In view of these facts patriotic citizens will agree with the President when he says, "It is time for nations to stop squandering wealth upon competitive armaments."

The will for peace should be strengthened. The League of Nations, World Court, Disarmament Conferences, and Peace Pacts are important agencies for promoting International Justice. Mr. William R. Castle, Jr., Under Secretary of State, says, "Justice, fair-mindedness, generosity on the part of all nations would make war impossible." There are sixty-five nations, none of them perfectly unselfish and many of them not very far advanced in the arts of peace, and to secure "justice, fair-mindedness, generosty on the part of all nations" may require more than a pacific declaration of refusal. It is not inconceivable that to acquire such beneficient ends for even an appreciable part of the world might require defense of the ideals of peace and the sacrifice of many lives on other battlefields.

While war, that which too often eventuates in but human suffering and death and economic distress, moral hazard and spiritual peril could never be justified on grounds of national selfishness or pride, there could arise conditions which, to tolerate, would be worse than war. Therefore, to say under no circumstances would the flag be followed into battle nor prayer be said in camps of war, is more than many thousands of consecrated ministers will say.

War will be abolished when its cause is removed. Popular negatives ingeniously framed so as to resemble higher affirmations disclose more of novelty than sacrifice and pacific refusals are inadequate. We are yet in an unredeemed world and there are forces aloose today that would destroy civilization, and these cannot be overcome by the flourish of the hand. To say to these maniacal forces of destruction: here are the sanctities of our American homes, temples of worship, standards of justice, and principles of honor which may be destroyed without resistance, would not preserve human rights nor promote the welfare of the world. The angels' song at the Birth of Christ points the way: When the nations give "Glory to God in the highest" then "on earth peace, good will toward men" will prevail and war will be abolished. For the dawn of that day we devoutly pray and toil.

However, until the United States of America enters war for selfish ends and to usurp the rights of other nations, which seems incredible, a declaration of refusal appears out of place. We would that the spirit of love would pervade the nations and make them one and all worthy of peace, we endeavor to die daily for the promotion of fair-mindedness and the enthronement of justice, but to protect the sacred heritage of our country and make secure the larger good for mankind, should necessity require, following her flag would be a privilege and to fall upon her battlefield would be an honor.

THY KINGDOM COME, O LORD

By F. L. Hosmer

Thy Kingdom come, O Lord,
Wide-circling as the sun;
Fulfil of old thy word
And make the nations one;

One in the bond of peace,
The service glad and free
Of truth and righteousness
Of love and equity.

Speed, speed the longed-for time
Foretold by raptured seers—
The prophecy sublime,
The hope of all the years;

Till rise at last, to span
Its firm foundation broad,
The commonwealth of man,
The city of our God.

OUR COLLEGE COMMENCEMENTS

Grenada, Whitworth, Centenary and Millsaps Colleges have closed their 1930-1931 sessions. The commencement occasions were inspiring and the future is faced with hope and determination. Presidents Countiss, Winfield, Sexton, and Key are to be congratulated upon the work achieved. The commencement sermons were by the following: Grenada, Rev. J. B. Mitchell, D.D., pastor, St. Johns, Memphis; Whitworth, Rev. J. A. Smith, D.D., pastor, Capitol Street, Jackson; Centenary, Rev. J. R. N. Score, D.D., pastor, St. Paul's, Houston; Millsaps, Bishop Collins Denny, D.D., LL.D., Richmond, Virginia. Baccalaureate addresses: Grenada, Dr. D. H. Bishop, Millsaps; Whitworth, Dr. George S. Sexton, Centenary; Centenary, Dr. L. A. Downs, president, Illinois Central Railroad; Millsaps, Dr. Edwin Mims, Vanderbilt. These sermons and addresses are reported to have been of high order and abiding worth to those who were fortunate enough to hear them. Colleges ought to see that their commencement sermons and baccalaureate addresses are published. They would be of interest to the general public and lasting benefit to members of graduating classes.

Centenary conferred four honorary degrees. The Doctor of Divinity degree was conferred upon Rev. C. C. Miller, of the Louisiana Conference, and Rev. J. R. N. Score, of the Texas Conference. The Doctor of Laws degree was conferred upon President L. A. Downs, of the Illinois Central Railroad, and President J. L. Lancaster of the Texas and Pacific Railroad. These honors were worthily bestowed and will be borne with credit to the institution by which they were conferred.

The splendid young ladies and young gentlemen who completed their work go on to further preparation or to take their places in the world's life. It is no common hour when forward looking youth are turned into the course of history prepared

The Winning of Souls

BY BISHOP W. A. CANDLER, D.D., LL.D.

The winning of souls occupies high place in the Holy scriptures.

Solomon said in the Proverbs, "He that winneth souls is wise," (Prov. 11:30). In the book of Daniel we read, "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever." (Daniel 12:3).

St. James, the foster brother of our Lord, declares in his epistle, "He which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins." (James 5:20).

The mission of our Saviour himself is set forth in his own words that "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which is lost." (Luke 19:10). The same truth is declared by St. Paul: "This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners," (First Timothy 1:15).

The rescuing of the perishing is the supreme mission and duty of the Church, and this fact should never be forgotten by the followers of Jesus Christ our Lord.

The Church may and should do many things of less importance; but the Church should know the relative importance of all secondary matters as compared with the obligation of saving the lost.

The Church should do a work of education, and its educational enterprises are not to be depreciated; but Christianity is not propagated by mere educational efforts or by any other benevolent enterprises for the improvement of the worldly condition of men.

The Church is not founded on educational and benevolent programs, but exists to save the souls of men.

And the work of winning souls must be done by men and women who themselves know Christ. Upon this matter the Western Christian Advocate of Cincinnati spoke most wisely in a recent editorial as follows:

"A Church cannot be founded on the educational and benevolent program. These enterprises of the church are not to be depreciated. They have their place. However, if a communion approaching any community has nothing more to offer than these, it will never root itself into the lives and hearts of the people. Christianity does not go forward on its educational and benevolent program; it must have someone to go about telling what Jesus Christ has done for him. The personal testimony to the individual is what wins men to Christ. It is not what we do for others that attracts them to Christ; it is what He has done for us. When we educate and when we bless by our benevolences, the thing that counts is the feeling we produce in the life of those who receive what we do for them. The felling that Jesus Christ has made us what we are in goodness, devotion, and benevolence counts most in the making of a new disciple."

The first apostles were won to Christ in this manner. Of Andrew, Simon Peter's Brother, it is said, "He first findeth his own brother Simon and saith unto him, We have found the Messiah, which is, being interpreted, the Christ. And he brought him to Jesus." (John 1:41). A similar method of winning a soul is recorded of St. Philip, of whom it is said:

"Philip findeth Nathanael, and saith unto him, We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph. And Nathanael said unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, Come and see. Jesus saw Nathanael coming to him, and saith of him, Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile! Nathanael saith unto him, Whench knowest thou me? Jesus answered and said unto him, Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig tree, I saw thee. Nathanael answered and saith unto him, Rabbi thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel. Jesus answered and said unto him, Because I said unto thee, I saw thee under the fig tree, believest thou? Thou shalt see greater things than these. And he saith unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man." (John 1:45-51).

It is not harsh criticism nor an unfounded fear to say that most of the members of the Church today never win souls at all. And such Christian work as they do consists largely of efforts to change the circumstances in and around the unconverted world, rather than to bring men to Christ. They seem to think that if the outward circumstances of life are made favorable, the salvation of the souls of men will follow inevitably. But this is a grave mistake.

Perhaps the basis of this serious blunder is found in the fact that multitudes of the members of the Church do not know Christ for themselves. They have formally united with the Church, but they have never vitally known the Lord of the Church. Hence, they cannot bring others to Christ because they have never come to him themselves.

There is much talk in our day of the imperative need of a great revival of religion, such a turning to God as the Great Awakening in America and the Wesleyan Revival in Great Britain. This supreme need cannot be emphasized too much; but such a revival cannot be brought to pass by the framing of programs, the appointment of committees, or by any other mechanical process. When such a turning to God comes to pass, it will begin with revived spiritual life among the members of the churches, and especially among the preachers.

No man can preach the gospel with power who has not experienced in his own soul the power of its regenerative force.

All the great revivals of the past have manifested themselves first in unexpected quarters; and this fact is explained by the truth that saved men and women alone can save others.

There was nothing in the Great Awakening achieved by mere mechanical processes. That great visitation of grace first appeared in the small town of Northampton under the ministry of Johnothan Edwards, who, at the time, was no more than an obscure preacher serving a rural charge.

In like manner the Wesleyan Revival began with young men comparatively unknown. The conspicuous leaders of the Church in Great Britain had little or no part in bringing it to pass. They were carrying out their ecclesiastical programs with precision, but they were leaving a nation without God and without hope. Accordingly Isaac Taylor said that John Wesley and his associates rediscovered God to the British people.

A notable preacher in a recent letter to the writer says, "I have not seen a burdened preacher in a long time." His experience accords with current conditions. In former days Godly men described concern for the salvation of souls as being "burdened for souls." But this descriptive phrase has passed away because that which it described has ceased to exist.

Very many preachers are deeply burdened with reference to reforming the social system; but their concern for the conversion of the unsaved is not conspicuous, to state the case mildly.

But the salvation of souls is the supreme concern of our Lord. Speaking to his twelve apostles, when his crucifixion was near, he asked, "What is a man profited if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" (Matt. 16:26). In keeping with his solemn question we may well ask, What will it profit the Church if it reform the whole world and lose the souls of men? How long will any real reform last which is not rooted and grounded in the presonal salvation of men? The work of the saving of souls during the first century which was done by St. Paul and his contemporaries reformed the Roman Empire as nothing had ever before done, and our disordered times must be reformed by the same saving force.

The Church needs to sing again as in former days it was accustomed to sing:

"What is the thing of greatest price,
The whole creation round?
That which was lost in Paradise,
That which in Christ is found:

The soul of man—Jehovah's breath—
That keeps two worlds at strife;
Hell moves beneath to work its death,
Heaven stoops to give it life.

God, to reclaim it, did not spare
His well-beloved Son;
Jesus, to save it, digne'd to bear
The sins of all in one.

The Holy Spirit sealed the plan,
And pledged the blood divine,
To ransom every soul of man—
That price was paid for mine.

And is this treasure borne below,
In earthen vessels frail?
Can none its utmost value know,
Till flesh and spirit fail?

Then let us gather round the cross,
That knowledge to obtain;
Not by the soul's eternal loss,
But everlasting gain."

To the consideration of this solemn matter expressed in this noble hymn the Churches must return, or they will continue to show decreases in membership, and decline in spiritual life.

THE ECUMENICAL METHODIST CONFERENCE, ATLANTA, GA.

October 16-25, 1931.

By Rev. A. J. Weeks, D.D.

It has been forty years since the Ecumenical Methodist Conference has been held in the United States. In October, 1891, the body met in Washington. There were about five hundred delegates present and the meeting continued fourteen days. On October 17, President Harrison visited the conference and delivered an address. Reverend William Arthur had been selected to deliver the opening sermon. He was present, but his voice was not equal to the task so the sermon was read by Dr. Stephenson, President of the Wesleyan Conference.

Next October this world conference of Methodism will again meet in the United States. About the same number of official delegates will be entitled to sit in the body—the exact number is five hundred and fifty—but while they will represent a smaller number of Methodist bodies they will represent a constituency almost twice as large as that of forty years ago. Again the opening sermon will be delivered by the President of the Wesleyan Conference, Reverend C. Ryder Smith, D.D., and an effort is being made to secure the attendance of the President of the United States for an address. The committee is trying to secure the attendance of the Prime Minister of Canada on the same day.

It is fitting that this meeting should be held in Georgia, the only State whose soil was pressed by the feet of the Wesleys. On February 6, 1736, General Oglethorpe landed with a second company of three hundred emigrants for his Georgia colony, among them certain Moravians and John and Charles Wesley. The ship on which they came was almost four months in crossing and the record of their employment during the weary voyage will convince anyone who reads it that their strictness was never surpassed. Practically every waking hour was given to religious activities and devotions. Charles Wesley was secretary to Oglethorpe.

John Wesley came in response to the missionary urge in his own heart. He expected to preach to the colonists and had an idea there would be opportunity to preach to the Indians as well. He found himself in a strange and uncomfortable environment. A long call from the streets of London to the marshes of Savannah; from Oxford University and St. Paul's Cathedral to the new settlement on the edge of a wilderness where a few score pioneer families had established their humble homes. There was no opportunity to preach to the Indians and his strictness and High church notions caused irritation and created oposition among the colonists. He could not immediately adjust himself to an environment so unlike anything he had ever known. In time he was able as few men have ever been to relate himself to any group or class he undertook to serve, but this he had not learned at the time of his sojourn in Georgia. He was devoted and unselfish but for him conditions were impossible.

After almost two years at Savannah he decided to go back to England but went hoping to return to America. His journal contains this entry: "I took my leave of America (though, if it please God, not forever)." He considered his mission to Georgia a failure. Some of his critics have been unfair in recounting his experiences there, but George Whitefield, who was on the ground a few months after Wesley's departure, speaks in the highest terms of his work. He declared: "The good that Mr. John Wesley has done in America is inexpressable. His name is very precious among the people and he has laid a foundation that I hope neither men nor devils will ever he able to shake. Oh that I may be able to follow him as he followed Christ!"

One can but wonder what a difference it would have made in modern religious and political history if Wesley had returned to the new world. Suppose he had come back. If Methodism had been born at all its base line would have been laid in the new world rather than in the old. This country was not mature enough to be the birthplace of an orderly dynamic religious movement such as the world needed and such as Methodism grew to be. But in the providence of God, Wesley did not return and the religious movement of which he was the leader took root in a compact nation in the best prepared soil in the world. It added strength to the foundations of Anglo-Saxon civilization and made a needed contribution to Anglo-Saxon stability and solidarity. When the Ecumenical Conference met in London ten years ago Mr. Lloyd George, the British Prime Minister, sent a message of greeting which was read to the body. In this he said: "The English speaking races owe a special debt of gratitude to John Wesley, the greatest spiritual leader and religious organizer they ever produced. The influence of his life work extended beyond the community he founded and constitutes today one of the greatest moral forces in the world."

Now almost two hundred years after Wesley sailed away from the new world with the hope that he would see the land again, his spiritual children are coming from far places over the wide world—coming to Georgia. There are more Methodists living in Georgia today than were in the whole world at the time of Wesley's death.

The program of the Conference is being brought to completion. The committee will hold its next meeting in Cincinnati, July 14th. The program will no doubt be finished at that meeting.

The conference begins Friday evening, October 16th, and closed Sunday afternoon, the 25th. On Wednesday, October 21st, the conference will be in Savannah visiting the scenes of Wesley's American labors.

While publication of the program cannot be made now, the public may be assured that every effort is being made to have a conference worthy of world Methodism. From the opening sermon Friday night to the closing service Sunday afternoon when two addresses on The Outlook will be delivered every hour will be an hour of high privilege.

Each week night great public meetings will be held. At one of these meetings Science and Religion will be the topic with one of the best known scientists in the world and one of the most distinguished educators and writers in America as the speaker. On another evening the topic will be Citizenship with a distinguished leader in American public life and a world traveler and world citizen the speaker. It is expected that at each of these meetings Gypsy Smith will deliver a brief closing address.

It is now fifty years since the first Ecumenical Conference was held in Wesley's Chapel, City Road, London. Great changes have occurred in the world, and in Methodism in these fifty years. The Methodist bodies of the world, with so much in common, so much that is distinctive, facing a world in such dire need, living in an hour so eventful, ought to set up some sort of agency through which they could speak with one voice to a world in confusion and unitedly help a world in distress. A world conference is well enough but more than that is needed.

The fact that the Ecumenical Conference will not meet in America again for twenty years adds to the interest all Methodists feel in the forthcoming conference at Atlanta.

UNDERLYING PRINCIPLES OF STEWARDSHIP

By James W. Hart

On what do we base our conviction that Jesus taught stewardship?

Before that question can be answered we must go back to the beginning of the idea of stewardship. When we read the Old Testament as the progressive revelation of God's efforts to lead men to an understanding of his nature and purpose for the world, we can better understand the teaching of Jesus. Even back in the earliest days of the Hebrew people we find the beginnings of conception of stewardship—a conception which God continually reinforced through his revelation to those prophets who could foretell his will to the people.

The first and fundamental principle of stewardship lies in God's ownership of all things—the ownership of creation. Often Jehovah reminds his people that man did not make the gold and silver that lies in the earth, that man cannot control the rain and the sun that causes the crops to grow, that man cannot and did not form the different ores that lie beneath us, which make the implements for our use, that man cannot control the streams, floods and freezes which may destroy our crops, and that man cannot by his will cause his flocks and herds to increase. "The silver and the gold is mine," said Jehovah. Again we are reminded that the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the air, the cattle of a thousand hills are His, His by right of creation. But we are prone to forget and to feel that property, or at least the fruitage was his own because he held it in his possession. So Jehovah warned: "Lest thou say in thine heart, my power and the might of my hand hath gotten me this wealth, thou shalt remember the Lord thy God, for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth."

We claim the land we hold. Who was the originator? Did God ever give a deed to any man? Then really who owns our land?

So many of us give such a grudgingly amount to the Lord that we never feel it, neither does the Lord feel or know it. Some of us have the nerve to give to God what we do not need ourselves. Do you think God is pleased with you for such giving? How can he expect to be blessed, happy and prosperous by such giving? Some of us will put money in the bank and when the collector comes around we will say, "I do not have anything to give."

Some of us give only a small amount to keep the Kingdom of God going, and seldom ever come to help carry out the work for the uplift of Christian and moral development of our community. But let one of our family get in trouble we will raise any amount to get them out. How much better to keep them out of trouble and have a pure life rather than to get them out of trouble and have the stain of crime on their life.

In regards to tithing, I will not attempt to explain it, as I think this is one of the deepest problems to solve I have ever attempted. I do say we should give and give willingly. I can clearly and truthfully say that the party who is a free giver is a party who is getting along well in almost every instance. Look around you and see the church miser and see if he is not a party who is up against it and all the time complaining. At our last district conference it was stressed by many of the speakers for the church stewards and helpers to have every member of our church to make an annual pledge of what they will give to the different benevolences of the church this year, and then to pay it weekly or monthly if within their power, as the different boards have to pay a large amount of interest every year on money borrowed to keep the different institutions of our church going. Let us do all within our power to see that this is carried out. Suppose we farmers would have to wait a whole year to get any money to live on, what would we do if our gardens and fields would fail to produce? Is not this the case with the ones who are at the head of our church, from our ministers up? They have to depend on us paying them so they can live. When they cannot get their money regularly they have to go to the merchant or banker and ask for credit, and ofttimes when it comes due we have not paid them what is due them, and then the one from whom they borrowed or bought on credit is not paid; their good intentions are questioned. Then the creditor does not realize that it was not the minister who did not meet his obligations, but it was us for not paying him what we owed him. Let us meet our obligations to God and His servants.

What, then, do we mean by stewardship? Certainly tithing and stewardship are not synonimous terms. We cannot call the self-righteous, strict tithing Pharisees Christian stewards, nor can we say that a man is a Christian steward who tithes, howsoever carefully or from whatever motives, and yet takes no thought to the Christian use of the rest of his income. The tithe has to do with a special portion. Stewardship involves all propery, or possessions in all stages and earnings, savings, spending and giving. Tithing is a good method, but it is only an act; stewardship is an attitude toward God and toward one's fellowman. A steward is one entrusted with property of another. It is always implied that the property is to be used primarily in the interest of the owner, not that of the steward. In its ideal state this is a partnership in which the interest of both are the same, the owner being the senior partner who furnishes the capital; the steward the one who administers it to their mutual benefit. So, applying this to us, God is the owner and we are the stewards.

BISHOP CANNON APPEALS TO CAESAR

CHALLENGES CONSTITUTIONALITY OF PROCEDURE

By Harry Earl Woolever
Editor of The National Methodist Press.

Certain scenes which occurred recently in the Senate committee room used by the Nye Committee will go down as precedents in the political and partisan history of Congress. The committee was investigating the anti-Smith campaign activities of James Cannon, Jr., a citizen of Virginia, under a resolution introduced in the Senate by another citizen of Virginia, Senator Carter Glass. Although proposed by a Senator in the opposite political camp, this resolution was in harmony with charges made by Republican Representative George Holden Tinkham of Boston, who recently has played the roll of chief accuser of dry and Protestant organizations. The prolonged and sharp character of these hearings, the biased reports by the wet press, and the evident political and selfish motives prompting certain elements to use a Senate committee for their own ulterior purposes, have caused a great number of queries as to what are the forces really at work.

To answer these queries and at the same time to avoid the non-political and the personal aspects of these senatorial investigations, is a difficult task but it is one which, in the interest of justice and truth, merits discussion. In the case under consideration, which deals with the campaign in 1928 to defeat the wet candidate for the presidency, Alfred E. Smith, Bishop Cannon stated that he acted apart from any capacity other than that of a private citizen. It is solely in his character as a private citizen and with regard to his constitutional rights as such in relationship to the activities in senatorial investigatons, that it is here proposed to discuss this important public issue.

Perverting Governmental Agencies

During the past few years there have been disclosed an effort to use the United States Congress to plunge this Nation into war with Mexico in order to stop the overthrow there of an age-long Roman domination; attempts of money interests to use the United States armed forces in friendly nations, especially in Central America, to protect property and to collect private debts; transactions involving documents purchased by William Randolph Hearst which, when placed before a senatorial committee, threatened to break our relations with our neighboring Republic until they were proven to be fraudulent, and repeated efforts to use the Government agencies to accomplish narrow partisan and personal political ends and revenges. Those who have most intimately and with the least bias followed the senatorial committee methods used respecting Bishop Cannon, are emphatic in saying that these recent attacks upon him belong to this last indicated category. The wet press has constantly used its pages to prejudice the reader against this outstanding Southern dry leader whose activities, with those of his associates, so overwhelmingly defeated the Al Smith forces in the South. It is said that the purpose is "so to destroy the reputation of Cannon by fair means or foul that he cannot lead and no one else will dare lead the dry Democrats of the South against Al Smith should he be the nominee in 1932."

Political Enemies Rage

When the United States Attorney General found no basis for Representative Tinkham's lobbying charges against the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals headed by Dr. Clarence True Wilson; the Board of Temperance and Social Service headed by Bishop James Cannon, Jr.; and the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America headed by Bishop Francis J. McConnell, this wet Boston Congressman filed charges against Bishop Cannon alleging improper use of the campaign funds of the Anti-Smith Democrats. Senator Glass, who supported Al Smith after the latter's nomination at Houston and who was thus politically lined up against the anti-Smith leadership, introduced a Senate resolution in line with the statements of Tinkham, proposing a special committee for the purpose of investigating these charges. Some of the older senators saw in this move clever political strategy. A number of them dodged the chairmanship of the committee. Finally, the task of working under the Glass resolution was passed over to the Nye Committee. Today some of the old political wiseacres say, "They got this young, inexperienced Senator to grab the bear by the tail and now he dassent let go." They say that Nye and his committee are being urged on to activity by pressure not only from Senator Glass, who presented the resolution, but also from the wets, and from the Knights of Columbus, "who would like to use the inquisition pinchers and burning irons on Cannon," while the drys and Protestants stand by dumbfounded by the tactics being used against a citizen.

Committee's Action Challenged

Bishop Cannon, repeating his assertion that these attempts to misrepresent and humiliate him before the country because of his acts as a citizen were the work of political enemies, challenged the authority of a congressional committee to investigate these charges under circumstances wherein he had no means by which he could subpoena or cross-examine witnesses or have the protection afforded by the courts. The protest he filed with the committee was in part as follows:

"I hereby register . . . a formal protest against the legality of Senate Resolution 403. Under this resolution complaint has been filed against me by Congressman Tinkham, from a wet Roman Catholic district of Boston, of a violation of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act and a fraudulent conversion to private uses of campaign funds. I have not knowingly violated any section of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act, nor have I embezzled any campaign funds. But if any complaints are made that I have been guilty of such crimes I deny the right of a Senate Committee to investigate such complaints, for the Supreme Court has declared that, 'If crime has been committed the grand jury shall investigate; if fraud, the courts of Equity and Law. All the judicial power is vested in the courts by the Constitution."

The Bishop's protest then quoted Supreme Court decisions showing that the elections of presidential electors were under the jurisdiction of the States and that Congress had no authority or jurisdiction in matters pertaining to such elections because presidential electors are state officers. He then quoted further decisions sustaining his contention that his rights as a citizen were being violated. He quoted Justice Field's reference in a similar case to a Supreme Court decision: "This case will stand for all time as a bulwark against invasion of the rights of a citizen to protection in his private affairs against the unlimited scrutiny of investigation by a congressional committee." Further quoting the Supreme Court: "Anyone who respects the spirit as well as the letter of the Fourth Amendment would be loath to believe that Congress intended to authorize one of its subordinate agencies to sweep all our traditions into the fire, and to direct fishing expeditions into private papers on the possibility that they may disclose evidence of crime. . . . It is contrary to the first principles of justice to allow a search through all the respondent's records in the hope that something will turn up."

After referring to the Committee's tactics in searching for evidence as a fishing expedition, the Bishop stated: "I insist therefore . . . that further procedings under this resolution be stopped as a violation of my constitutional rights as a citizen of the United States who demands that any complaints that he has committed any crime be prosecuted in the courts and not, as Mr. Justice Field says, through the 'unlimited scrutiny of investigation by a congressional committee,' which is governed in its activity by no judicial code."

The committee was face to face with a legal question the outcome of which is still to be seen. Miss Ada L. Burroughs of Richmond, who was treasurer of the Anti-Smith Democratic Campaign Fund, filed a similar challenge of the committee's authority.

The comment of the senators and Senate attaches who were sitting on the sidelines in this hearing indicated their belief that Bishop Cannon was legally correct. One Senator said, "This committee will carry on these methods too far and the country will react against them for the people will not stand too much of this."

A Serious Situation

The unfairness of the situation was pointed out in this fashion. Here sits a committee investigating charges implying crime. It has all the power of an ancient inquisitorial body but the condemned is deprived of all power or facilities granted in judicial courts to defeend himself. Sometimes this committee appears like a board of clever criminal lawyers trying to convict the witness who is helplessly alone without any of the protecting safeguards of a court. In such a circumstance, the unfriendly press picks out any fragments of testimony which will suit its purpose, publishing the same no matter how erroneous an impression it gives. This is one of the methods by which the functions of congressional committees are often perverted for the purpose of smearing individuals for political ends.

Not only was the influence of the anti-Protestant forces evidenced by the presence of numbers of representatives of the Knights of Columbus, but it was also seen in the reports of the Cannon protest in which reference was made to the wet, Roman Catholic influences working through Tinkham. The daily press, lacking either the fairness or the courage to carry this important reference to the potent influences at work, in most cases deleted this portion of the protest.

Throughout this whole proceeding, the nearer one comes to the machinery of it the more it appears to be a piece of petty political and bigoted spite work back of which are working those same unfortunate forces which were so pronounced in the presidential campaign of 1928. The wets, the Roman Catholics, and certain stand-pat partisans are fighting to overcome the drys and to discipline the leaders of certain Protestant and independent voter groups. Thus a spirit so often denounced in the presidential campaign is being kept alive. An interesting but significant incident occurred during the hearing under review. Not long after it became whispered about that a number of Knights of Columbus were at the hearing with an idea of bringing political pressure to bear on certain members of the committee, two prominent representatives of high Masonic circles made their appearance in the room all eyes to see what was happening. This is indicative of how a reaction sets in when a procedure of this character is carried beyond a certain point.

Cannon Appeals to Caesar

The objects and coloring of the picture are these. Congressman Tinkham, having failed in his lobbying charges against the dry and Protestant Church organizations and his case before the Attorney General having fallen flat, now charges Bishop Cannon with crime in the handling of campaign funds. Bishop Cannon states that he has committed no crime. The citizen is left to choose between the two statements. The dry leader protests against a legislative committee attempting to perform the functions of a grand jury. He asks why, if it is believed that he has committed a crime, the accuser has not taken his charges to the courts, and he demands that his constitutional rights as a free citizen be respected, appealing to the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States.

As the protest was read, an ex-Senator said to the writer, "At last the Bishop has appealed to Caesar." When questioned as to what he meant, he said: "One greater than Bishop Cannon is or would claim to be, when he was being persecuted by a group of enemies, said, 'I am a Roman citizen and demand my rights of citizenship. I appeal to Caesar.' Bishop Cannon has now appealed to the Constitution as the basis of his rights as a free citizen."

We looked up the Senator's reference in Acts: "And when it was day, the Jews banded together, and bound themselves under a curse, saying that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul. And they were more than forty that made this conspiracy. But Paul said . . . If I am a wrong-doer, and have committed anything worthy of death, I refuse not to die; but if none no man can give me up unto them. I appeal unto Caesar."

The appeal to Caesar has been made and the protection of the Constitution is invoked. Will public opinion demand that the citizens' rights be safeguarded by the laws which provide for punishment if guilty, but which leave the citizen possessed of all the benefits of innocence under the charges made until he is proven guilty? The American spirit demands that justice be arrived at by legal methods and that the punishment of guilt be administered wherever it may fall, but that method which smack of witchcraft and inquisitions be forever tabooed under the Stars and Stripes.

RECOLLECTIONS OF DR. BEVERLY CARRADINE

By Allen F. Godat

I was very sorry to learn from a recent number of the Advocate that Dr. Carradine had died. I hope with the editor that some one will prepare an adequate article on his life, for it would be most interesting and helpful, but perhaps a few lines from one who sat under his ministry during the four years he was at "Old Carondelet" and upon whom he made a deep and lasting impression may not be amiss.

Dr. Carradine possessed many outstanding characteristics, but perhaps the most marked were a keen sense of humor, great intellectual brilliancy, deep spirituality, and fearlessness in following his convictions. Bishop Keener is said to have pronounced him "the most brilliant preacher in the Soutthern Methodist Church." In conversation few could approach him for wit and cleverness, and he could manifest the keenest sympathy and appreciation when that was required. In his sermons and addresses the spiritual note was predominant and few went away with their spiritual hunger unsatisfied. As to moral courage he never hesitated to take a position regardless of its possible effect upon his fortunes or his popularity.

When he came to Carondelet after four years at Rayne Memorial he was easily the best known and most popular Methodist preacher in New Orleans, and if there was any other Protestant minister there more popular I cannot recall who it was. He had large congregations at both Sunday services, with large numbers of outsiders in attendance. But it was in the Wednesday evening prayer meetings that his success was most conspicuous. The church had always had good prayer meetings, but the attendance at his increased by leaps and bounds. The room in which they were held had a normal seating capacity of about three hundred, but it was not uncommon to have to bring in chairs and benches from adjoining rooms. The reason was that the meetings were worth while. He made careful preparation for them. There was a regular prayer meeting choir and an organist who could be depended upon. The hymns were carefully selected from the "Gospel Hymns" as the standard hymnal of the Church at that time was deficient in the brighter and newer hymns and music. The addresses were not preliminary drafts of future sermons, or old ones rehashed, but were specially prepared for the spiritual nourishment and upbuilding of those who heard them. I have often thought that if a dozen of the best of them could have been preserved and published they would have made a manual of devotion not unworthy of a place beside those of F. B. Meyer or Andrew Murray.

In the third year of his pastorate he asked the Rev. W. W. Hopper of Mississippi to assist him in a revival. Brother Hopper was a "Holiness" or "Second Blessing" evangelist and preached that doctrine. In a few days Dr. Carradine accepted it, sought the experience and professed to have obtained it. It was then that his spiritual and moral courage shone at its brightest. Rightly or wrongly the doctrine was not accepted by Methodists generally and much that was preached and demanded by its professors made it highly unpopular. But that made no difference to him. He threw all his wonderful powers of mind and soul into its advocacy and never faltered in following his light wherever it might seem to lead. He became the storm center of a great controversy; friends fell away, others were bound more closely to him, new ones rallied to his side, but he went on his way happy in the conviction that the Lord had called him to that battle. To me the entire movement was perhaps more profitable than happy. There was much in it that now seems trivial and absurd, but souls were born, others were led into a deeper consecration, backsliders were reclaimed, and perhaps best of all, a number of young men felt called into the ministry, some of whom are still active in it after forty years of great fruitfulness. At the end of that four years pastorate he "located" to engage in the work of a "Holiness" evangelist and for a long time the Church has heard but little of him. But now that he has gone those who knew him feel sure that an abundant entrance was given him into the eternal kingdom.

Probably, however, his most conspicuous service to the State and nation was his initiation of the fight against the Louisiana State Lottery Company. That institution had been chartered by the Legislature of 1868 for a period of twenty-five years. The Constitution of 1879 had recognized it as a vested interest, but provided that at the expiration of its charter in 1893 it should not be renewed, and that no other lotteries should be chartered. To secure a renewal, therefore, it was obviously necessary to amend the Constitution and the effort was to be made to have the Legislature submit the necessary amendment to the people. To prevent that or to defeat the amendment if submitted was the objective of the opponents of the lottery. While there had always been more or less opposition to it, it was unorganized and inarticulate, much like the "dry" sentiment in some hopelessly "wet" communities today. The lottery was believed to be not only impregnably intrenched financially and politically, but also socially. Its owners had a social standing which few brewers and distillers and no saloon keepers ever attained. To attack it was the height of folly. But that is just what Dr. Carradine did. It was in 1889 (or was it 1888?) when he was pastor of Carondelet. As already intimated he was one of the most popular preachers in the city, the Monday morning dailies frequently published synopses of his sermons, and when he was to preach on some theme of general interest he had but to send an announcement of it to the papers and it would be published, and reporters sent to the church. To open the attack he prepared a sermon entitled "Fifteen Objections to the Louisiana State Lottery." He sent the usual notices to the papers, but they were declined. He then offered to pay for their insertion at regular advertising rates, but that was also declined on the ground that the lottery was their largest patron and they could not afford to offend it. Nevertheless the word got out and on Sunday morning every seat in the church, galleries and all, was filled. There were those who had never been in the church before and who perhaps were never there again. For an hour or more they were held spellbound. There were wit, sarcasm, literary quotations, unassailable facts, logic, rare eloquence. In the preparation of that portion of the sermon dealing with the legal status of the lottery he had evidently had the assistance of able counsel. It must have been unanswerable, for it was never answered. The papers ignored it absolutely, but it was widely circulated in pamphlet form. At the close of his sermon he asked some forty leading citizens to meet the next evening and form an Anti-Lottery League. They did. The papers gave that meeting a half-dozen obscure lines. But the movement grew apace. Many meetings were held. The evangelical churches and ministers were generally on the anti-lottery side. But there were others with them, prominent among them being Rabbi Max Heller, of Temple Sinai. The great Dr. B. M. Palmer, of the First Presbyterian Church, who was not given to rushing into every little moral skirmish, threw his great influence against it. Soon the Catholic archbishop declared against the lottery. That was a terrific blow, for the lottery had counted largely on the Catholics because of its liberal gifts to their charitable institutions. Prominent citizens identified themselves with the cause, such men as Col. William Preston Johnson, the president of Tulane University; Murphy J. Foster, Donaldson Caffery, C. Harrison Parker, former editor of the Picayune; Judge Frank McGloin, a Catholic who in his little paper, "The Society of the Holy Spirit," did most valuable service, and, lastly, perhaps the greatest of them all, Edward Douglas White, afterward Chief Justice of the United States. The fight was fierce and acrimonious, but within less than five years of the date of Dr. Carradine's sermon, the Louisiana lottery's legal existence ceased. It ran a little while longer on a bootleg basis then died altogether. In the conflict many able men were engaged, but to Dr. Carradine was given the honor of calling them to battle and to final victory.

MISSISSIPPI METHODIST ORPHAN'S HOME

Dear Mr. Editor: I am submitting through the Advocate to the Methodists of the two Mississippi Conferences some facts with reference to our home.

Now, since I came here two and one-half years ago, I have raised in cash $29,460 and pledges for $2000 more. Some of these pledges will be paid and some will not.

Then, in addition to the above I have pledges for $1900 to be paid when we have secured enough to pay off the short time notes. I think every dollar of that amount is good.

Inasmuch as my work with the home ends with this Conference year, I am saying just this word, I think the board acted wisely in declining to keep an agent in the field, and requiring the superintendent to do that work, but I want these months that still remain to be filled with work. I am going as rapidly as possible to individuals already written to and doing all I can to collect, and speaking every Sunday in the interest of our institutions.

If we will all work together and work hard we can do great things before Conference. I will speak twice every day if I can get some folks to speak to in the interest of the work.

Let us pray much. Give me your co-operation.

This home does not belong to the trustees, or to the workers, but to the Methodists of Mississippi. Call me if you can use me.

Send me your checks to 214 Millsaps Avenue. Have we not some that will give us large contributions?

W. M. SULLIVAN,

SAFETY SIGNALS

By Rev. S. J. Davies

The leading article in the Advocate of May 14, by Bishop Candler, commenting on General Pershing's statement of "Christianity on the Defensive," is a call and a challenge. Right you are, bishop, in emphasizing the need of an aggressive gospel. The best way to defend Christianity is to so declare its warfare against the world, the flesh and the devil, as to put these emissaries of Satan on the defensive. Else what means all those clear and trenchant denunciations of sin contained in the four gospels, and those striking and forceful militant figures of speech in the Pauline epistles. Our Lord's command is to "go" and the apostle exhorts to pull down the strongholds of Satan. Stonewall Jackson and his legions never lost a battle, for they moved against the enemy with the impetuity of a descending avalanche and so horrified them with terror that the victory was half won by their very name, and their dauntless courage. Who is this modern Goliath defying the hosts of God's people? None other than the same spirit of blatant bragadocio that fell from the lips of the giant of Gath. David defied the giant in the name of Israel's God, and then ran to meet him. The shepherd youth had no defensive armor, his simple weapon was a sling and a stone. Listen, the giant wore the sword that beheaded him. I hope, preacher, you have acumen enough to hear and heed the lesson. For sin in the end carries its own ruin. God's laws not only concern the spiritual things of man's nature, but also economic and social affairs. No hunting hand ever followed its trail more surely, it will find you out. And again, the baying pack of blatant enemies of God and his righteousness, so evident in much modern writing, is only part of the game, a game as old as Sodom and as assuredly doomed. "Mene, mene, tekel upharsin" is written in letters of fire for every Beleshazer and his rebald company in the end.

Wherein lies the chief difference in the preaching of thirty or forty years ago and the preaching of today? For the last ten years I have been privileged at our various church gatherings and in our city to hear many of the leading ministers of our own and other churches. These sermons as a class were earnest, thoughtful, and, I presume, abreast with the spirit of the age, whatever this much used term may mean. The style, doctrine, delivery were a decided improvement on that of other years, now far below the bridge of time. May I, not in a spirit of carping criticism or unholy comparison, but only as a fact in the passing history of preaching, note a difference? The masters in the pulpit in these, now elder days, moved onward in their sermons with the swing and stride of a conquerer. They declared the counsel of God in a style and manner, that at times was breath-taking to saints and appalling to sinners. Munsey would lift congregations to their feet under the spell of his matchless, magnetic eloquence and hold them standing in rapt attention. Kavanaugh would cause men to fear that the very walls of the church building would collapse and bury them. Down at the Seashore Camp Ground in the year of our Lord 1886 I saw something over one hundred and sixty people joyously converted in one day, while men like Carter, Parker, Evans, Morrison, Mangham, Leftwich preaced with a power and fervor little short of the heavenly. Strong men, unused to tears would weep, and the eyes of cultured women shine with a light from the deep spiritual communion with the Blessed One. The difference, yes it is different now. There was a triumphant note, an assurance of abandoned faith, a confidence of victory, I miss in the pulpit of today.

BISHOP DENNY DEDICATES CHURCH

From the Pastor

Bishop Collins Denny dedicated our church at St. Andrew Chapel, on the Shubuta charge, Mar. 9. We had a house and yard full of folk, and the bishop preached a great sermon. He read for a Scripture lesson the 26th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, and took for a text, Romans I:14. "I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the Barbarians; both to the wise and to the unwise." He spoke of the man Paul before he had that wonderful experience when he met the Lord on the road to Damascus, and of Paul after he met the Lord. He said that Paul did not feel that he owed anybody anything before he met the Lord, but after this great experience which he had, he felt that he was in debt to all men everywhere, and he tried to pay the debt that he owed by denying himself and taking up his cross and following the Lord. It was a great spiritual message that the bishop brought to us and was greatly appreciated by the large congregation present.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, the presiding elder of the Meridian district, was present and led in the opening prayer. Rev. W. J. Dawson, pastor of Hawkins Memorial Church, Meridian, Miss., was also present and read the Old Testament lesson. Brother Dawson was pastor of the Shubuta charge when Andrew Chapel Church was built. We were glad to have him present. I am sorry that more of the former pastors were not present. Mr. Fairchilds of Shubuta sang for a solo "Softly Now the Light of Day." He rendered it in a beautiful way.

NEW ANDREW CHAPEL CHURCH
Rev. C. W. Wesley, Pastor

After the bishop's sermon and the dedication of the church, we had a bountiful meal served to all present. We really had "Dinner on the Ground." The ladies served us the most bountiful and appetizing meal I ever ate, for which I thank them from the depth of my heart.

Brother J. A. Carmichael, superintendent of the Sunday school at Andrew Chapel Church, said that it was the greatest occasion, the greatest day, he ever witnessed in that community and many others so testified.

C. W. WESLEY, Pastor.

From the Presiding Elder

March 19, 1931, Bishop Collins Denny dedicated Andrew Chapel Church, at Carmichael, Clarke County, Miss. He was assisted by the pastor, Rev. C. W. Wesley; Rev. W. J. Dawson, pastor of Hawkins Memorial Church, Meridian, and the writer.

Andrew Chapel is associated with Shubuta, and receives one full Sunday's service per month. The membership is composed of as loyal, faithful Methodists as can be found anywhere, and they have reflected honor on themselves, and rendered valuable service to the Church in the erection of the handsome, substantial structure in which they now worship.

The building dedicated by Bishop Denny was built during the pastorate of Rev. W. J. Dawson, 1926-29. It is built of select virgin yellow pine, supported by concrete and brick foundation, and covered with California Redwood shingles. It is of Doric design, and is so substantially built that only fire or a cyclone can destroy it. While practically all the membership participated in the building, and some contributions were received from others than the members of the church, especially the Long-Bell Lumber Company; the man to whom more credit is due than any other for this splendid edifice, is Mr. J. A. Carmichael, superintendent of the Sunday school, and the recognized leader in church work in the village of Carmichael.

Bishop Denny preached a soul-stirring sermon to the immense audience that assembled for the dedicatory service, using as a text, Romans 1:14. At the close of the sermon Mr. J. A. Carmichael and other members of the official board presented the building for dedication, and Bishop Denny pronounced the dedicatory sentence very impressively.

At the conclusion of the service, the ladies served all present to an elaborate dinner, which was spread under the forest trees that border the church yard.

This service of dedicating Andrew Chapel, while great in itself, and means much to Methodism in Clarke County and the Meridian district, it is only a small part of the valuable service being rendered to the Church by Bishop Denny. He has traveled in and done service for each of the fourteen districts embraced in the two Mississippi Conferences which constitute his episcopal district.

T. J. O'NEIL.

THE COLUMBUS DISTRICT CONFERENCE

On April 7, 1931, the Columbus District Conference met in the historic First Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss. Bishop Collins Denny occupied the chair. Bishop Denny's presidency of the conference was shared the second day by the presiding elder, W. N. Duncan. Rev. W. R. Lott was elected secretary. Dr. H. F. Brooks of Starkville was the conference devotional preacher. Audrey McKinley Mann and Louis Marion Wright were licensed to preach. Brooksville was selected as the place of meeting in 1932. The following were elected delegates to the Annual Confernce: J. H. McKinnon, Mrs. T. J. Lee, H. C. Campbell, W. S. McAlilly, J. B. Whisnant, E. F. Hardin, Dr. N. D. Guerry, F. S. Jackson, H. E. Sanders, Mrs. W. N. Duncan, Rev. A. P. Stephens, Miss Pearl Hughes, C. F. McGee, L. H. Roberts, Hon. Joe Cook, Mrs. R. G. A. Carlisle. Alternate delegates were: Mrs. C. W. Avery, N. C. Oakes, Dr. J. W. Lipscomb, Mrs. M. A. Parks, and C. C. Humphreys.

The following institutional representatives espoused their respective causes: Rev. J. E. Stephens, Christian Education; Dr. V. C. Curtis, New Orleans Advocate; Rev. R. G. Moore, Missions; Dr. J. G. Snelling, Memorial Mercy Home of New Orleans; Dr. J. M. Culbrith, Wesley Foundation; Rev. A. T. McIlwain, Superannuate Endowment; Rev. B. F. Lewis, Orphan's Home; Rev. H. C. Blackwell, Millsaps College; Rev. A. Y. Brown, Golden Cross. Evening session, first day, was devoted to lay activities program. Mr. J. G. Houston, Conference lay leader, delivered an address on Christian Stewardship. Mr. J. H. McKinnon was re-elected district lay leader for ensuing year. Rev. J. W. Ward, pastor of First church, and his people, entertained the conference royally.

An appreciative resolution for the proficient ministry and holy conversation of the retiring presiding elder, Rev. W. N. Duncan, was read by Mr. W. S. McAlilly of Louisville. The resolution was adopted joyfully by the conference.

EFFICIENCY OR PROTECTION

By Rev. J. F. Dring

My attention was called some time ago to an article in one of our daily papers, in an editorial, concerning teachers in our public schools, and I think it was Mr. Harris, our State Superintendent of Education, who stated that he had no objection to married women teaching, and gave his reasons for such a stand.

Later I noted a comment on the same subject, and commending Mr. Harris for his position in the matter. It seemed that in each case it was the ability of the teacher, rather than the marital relationship that concerned the leaders of education.

After reading this article with care and pondering over it, I wonder if it would be amiss in the Church of God for its leaders to pursue a like course in the selection of leadership in the church.

Some one has said, "efficiency counts" and we believe that is the whole truth, and if prepared teachers are a necessary element in the education of the child, it would seem to me that spiritual preparation would be a deciding factor in the leadership of the Church of God.

We have noticed that politics has entered into the whole life of man, and it is hard to do anything without that element creeping into it, and politics is blind, and oftimes is corrupt, and for it to enter into the church, would mean the final dissolution of the same, therefore we should not permit such an element or influence to come within the fold of the church.

Yet however much we try to keep it out, it creeps in, and the devil is a sly old rascal, and he will make preachers and elders and bishops and congregations play the game in the church.

The devil offers this kind of argument in the life of our Church. He says: "Now brethren, we cannot afford to send Bro. A over there, because he commands a better place, we must care for him; he has been to Yale or Vanderbilt, or some place, and he must be cared for. Now we know that this is a great field and needs a good man, but we just can't afford to send this brother down there.

Then elder Q speaks up and says: "I have a man that will be satisfied to go there; he won't raise a question; he is a good man, so they sometimes use him in that position just because he has too much religion, and has counted the cost, paid the price, settled the debt of selfishness, and is ready to be offered up. So down he goes."

I am wondering which it is of the twain we are trying to save, the individual preacher of the lost sheep of the house of Israel? Are we trying to protect the sheep of the Shepherd, or are we placing the man for the advancement of the Kingdom, or the Kingdom for the advancement of the man? What is our method? No preacher needs protection because he is a preacher, any more than the congregation needs protection against a preacher whose life is only a selfish one.

Tell me my brethren, what is the status of our church? Are we out to help preachers or people? Did I promise to go where I was sent, or did I say I would pull wires for my appointment? Did we say we would be subject to the appointment of the bishop and cabinet, or kick up like a bay steer if I were sent to Hickory circuit; what did I promise?

Does my appointment depend upon my efficiency, or my standing with the powers that be? Must I be married or single to get a place? If I am married to a certain one, or group, I get consideration; if I am not, then what? As for the writer, I have always considered my appointment to come from God, under the direction of the Holy Spirit, and issued by my church, and has always been as big as I was; I have always found better people than I expected. The Lord has helped me to do fairly well in my place.

But brethren, I believe if we could all be Methodist preachers and let God direct the placing of preachers in Louisiana, there would be some wonderful differences, and shaking up of dry bones in the valley.

Think of a Methodist preacher being placed so as not to hurt him. God help us. He must be put over there where he will get at least $3,000 because his standing demands it. Well that is all right, but what about the folks, the sheep are the ones to be protected, not the shepherd.

I am convinced that the churches of Louisiana need men who feel the burden of souls, and would wade through mud knee deep to rescue them if need be, but no church needs a shepherd who will deliberately toss a hundred members out to go to the devil just because they didn't pay. Jesus commanded us to go preach, and let me tell you, we may have to go afoot, and ragged to get to the lost lamb, but that is what we must do when necessity demands it. No Methodist preacher has a right to dictate where he shall or shall not go. No bishop or elder has a right to place a man for personal reasons. Let us remember that we are to go where we are sent, married or single, according to our fitness for the task assigned.

I want a revival, and I want it to start among the preachers, and I want all the selfishness to be mashed out of me the first one, and then let it spread out until it has gone all over Methodism. Then I want it to start among the sheep and get them so religious they will sing and pray and ask God to help them to let the elder and the bishop alone long enough to make the appointments, and while that is going on, don't you think it would be fine if God could just creep into the cabinet and direct the appointments?

J. F. DRING.

CONCERNING RECENT ARTICLE BY REVS. RAMSEY AND BAMBURG

Editor, New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Dear Sir: In a past issue of your paper, always containing material inspiring in character and elevating in spirit, I read with no little surprise an article by Rev. J. W. Ramsey, under the caption, "Is God the Father of All Men?"

This article elicited replies in the affirmative, vigorously and aggressively pursued by a Rev. Mr. Bamburg, in which followed a series of articles, or arguments, in several later editions, resulting in a spectacular pyrotechnical display of words, gratuitously decorated with a sprinkling of bombs, to lend variety. Then followed a miniature sham battle or rather a protracted target practice in which it appears that the Rev. Mr. Bamburg innocently or accidently hit the mark.

The ammunition used being of a sarcastic brand (not made by the Du Ponts) therefore not in the trust. The ordnance used consisted of mental-gymnastics, non-sequiters, reductum-ad-absurdums, locus-classicus, pardonnez-mois, and a non-mi-recordo.

As these pieces of armory are innocent in character, can by no stretch of the imagination of the war department be construed as contraband of war, therefore, no harm can result from this innocent prank. Except, perhaps, that the last-named implement (non-mi-recordo) having a very foreign texture, in view of the present unstable tariff situation, may raise a question with the collector of customs: Which, of course, has nothing to do with the question at issue, which gave rise to an argument that, if not bad form is, certainly bad taste.

It may be refreshing to state that the Holy Scriptures plainly reveal to babes and grown-ups, especially to babes, that even Rev. Mr. Ramsey is positively a son of God, and a member of the brotherhood of man, regardless of his reluctance to make claim to the title.

It is gratifying to most students of the Word that when perused with a singleness of heart, unfettered by dogmas, vain conjectures and uncontaminated by co-called scholastic theology, does always lead to a healthy understanding of the TRUTH.

I have no doubt that vain contentions such as these in question lead Jesus to warn His disciples from the "leaven" of the Pharisees and to further warn them "That unless your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no sense enter the kingdom of heaven."

However, the series of articles have at least provoked in many an appreciation of the gratification expressed by Jesus, found in the familiar passage recorded in St. Matthew: "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes."

In conclusion, I will quote the great citizen of Tarsus: "But avoid foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law; for they are unprofitable and vain."

"For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, he taketh the wise in their own craftiness."

"Professing themselves to be wise they became fools." Titus 3:9, 1 Cor. 3:19, Romans 1:22.

Yours very truly,

JOHN LIUZZA.

NOTES FROM MILLSAPS

Dr. D. M. Key, president, represented Millsaps at the Grenada and Greenville district conferences on May 6 and 7.

Dr. Edwin Mims, professor of English in Vanderbilt University, will deliver the commencement address at Millsaps on Tuesday, June 2.

Rev. H. Conrad Blackwell, associate professor of religion, preached at Galloway Memorial Church, Sunday morning, May 3, and Rev. Chas. F. Nesbitt preached at night. The pastor, Rev. L. L. Cowen, was in Lucedale to deliver the commencement sermon.

Dr. D. M. Key will take part in the ceremony for the inauguration of Dr. R. H. Ruff as president of Central College on May 2. Dr. Key is an alumnus of Central and Dr. Ruff is a graduate of Millsaps.

Drs. Sullivan and Key were elected delegates to the Annual Conference which meets in Columbia at the recent session of the Jackson District Conference, which met at Canton. Professor Harrell was elected a reserve delegate.

Professor H. Conrad Blackwell has recently been elected a member of the Lion's Club of Jackson. Other members of the faculty who are members of the Lion's Club are: President Key and Professors Sanders and White.

The department which offers courses in Bible and religious education at Millsaps has changed its name to the Department of Religion. It was formerly designated the Department of Religious Education. This change was perfected in order to carry out a suggestion made by the General Council of Christian Education in its annual session in Nashville in January and for the sake of standardizing the work of the department.

Francis Edwin Ballard graduated at Millsaps College before he was nineteen, and later at Vanderbilt University he took his M. A. Last week he received his Ph.D. from the Iowa State University. He has been elected an instructor in Princeton University and will enter upon his duties there next September. Dr. Ballard is only twenty-five years of age, and we rejoice in this grandson of a Methodist preacher making such splendid progress. He is a native Mississippian and will reflect credit, we are sure, upon his alma mater, Millsaps College.

to serve their day and generation. Elbert Hubbard said, "A college degree today is simply a social passport. It is no proof of ability." If this be true in even one instance it is a misfortune. However, first of all a diploma from a Christian College is a certificate of character. "Ten men have failed from defect in morals where one has failed from defect in intelligence," said a great educator. The Church, of course, is desirous that those who go out from her colleges shall have "ability" to perform well the tasks for which they have been fitted, but the primary reason she is in the field of education causes her to expect graduates to be Christian in faith and practice. It will be a greater reflection upon their alma mater for students to fail in being what they ought to be than it will to be unable to preform with the highest efficiency their chosen tasks. It is inspiring to feel that the hundreds of young men and women from Grenada, Whitworth, Centenary, and Millsaps have gone out to live righteously and toil honestly.

LAYMEN'S DAY

Next Sunday is Laymen's Day throughout the Church. The Methodist laymen are essential to the success of the Church. Thousands of them have been and are giving of their talent, time, and tithe to the extension of the Kingdom. They may not be as well organized, according to gender, as other departments of the Church, but nevertheless without them no department of the Church would have attained the success achieved. If their occupation has prevented their becoming as readily informed upon the details of organization as others, many of them have freely contributed both means and time toward sustaining and extending the success others have accomplished.

However, the day is here when more of the men of Methodism should give themselves more largely to the great enterprises and small details of the Church's work. They must know their Bibles, Discipline, and Church program in a fuller sense.

It is fitting that there should be a day when the importance of the laymen's service is recognized; and a day when the layman himself shall be constrained to value highly his privileges in the Church of God.

We purpose to place at the disposaal of our laymen in Louisiana and Mississippi a page in the Advocate for them to express themselves upon moral and religious subjects. We not only invite them but request that they do so, and begin now.

BISHOP DOBBS TO DEDICATE MERRYVILLE, LA., CHURCH

On Sunday, June 28, Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs will dedicate the church at Merryville, La. Rev. J. F. Waltman, pastor, is anxious that all former pastors who possibly can will attend the dedication services.

It is an event of great significance in any community to have a building set apart to the worship of Almighty God and for the welfare of mankind. We congratulate Brother Waltman and his people and wish for them the largest success.

Lecturer at Divinity School

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL

On June 16-26 the twenty-third session of the Seashore Divinity School will be held at Biloxi, Miss., on the Seashore Methodist Assembly Grounds. This probably is the last session of the Divinty School as it has been known for nearly twenty-five years. After this year most likely it will be merged into a Pastors' School under the auspices of the Seashore Methodist Assembly. The work will go on as heretofore, but under the Assembly direction.

The Divinity School has made history. It has been a greatly worthwhile institution for this section of the Church. For the last session, Dr. J. T. Leggett, president, has selected two of the outstanding ministers of our own church; and Dr. Harper, dean, has selected a competent faculty.

Dr. C. C. Selecman, president, Southern Methodist University, will speak twice daily, June 16-20; and Dr. Costen J. Harrell, pastor, Monument Church, Richmond, Virginia, will speak twice daily, June 21-26. This is the first time these distinguished ministers have been to the Seashore and we join the many friends of the school in extending them a most cordial welcome.

Preachers, laymen, and laywomen should attend in large numbers this year and benefit by hearing the lectures and enjoying the fellowship of a happy throng who will be present to rest and learn, to think and grow.

SEASHORE METHODIST ASSEMBLY OFFICIALLY OPENS FIRST SEASON

The first season of the Seashore Methodist Assembly at Biloxi, Miss., opened on Tuesday evening, June 2, with the first annual Musical Festival. The festival was participated in by choirs from Gulfport, Biloxi, Pascagoula and Saucier. Dr. E. O. Sellers, of the Baptist Bible Institute, New Orleans, was guest conductor and upon his decision the Norwood Music Cup was awarded to the choir from the Pascagoula Methodist Church.

Hon. John J. Kennedy, mayor of Biloxi, was present and addressed the audience, assuring them of his personal and official interest in the success of the Assembly. Rev. James W. Sells, executive secretary, responded to the mayor's address. The evening closed with numbers by the Boys' Band of Biloxi.

Just prior to going to press we received the following telegram from secretary Sells: "Faculty, preachers, and others attending Divinity School are invited to take supper in newly equipped dining room at Keller Lodge. Tuesday, June 16, the Lodge has been refurnished and all who stop with us there will be comfortable." The facilities at the Assembly Grounds are open to the public all year round and not merely during some special program.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

We are happy to learn of the arrival of a son born to Dr. and Mrs. A. M. Serex. Dr. Serex is pastor of New Iberia church.

Reports from the Rayville (La.) church indicate that Rev. Ollie Tucker, the pastor, is carrying on very happily and very effectively.

Wm. L. McDuff, a prominent young layman of Rayville, La., announces the birth of a son, William Lane, Jr. Mrs. McDuff was formerly Miss Lillie Mae Platt of Grand Cane. Both Mr. and Mrs. McDuff have been prominent in Epworth League and other church work. Congratulations to the young parents and good wishes to Junior.

Dr. F. M. Freeman, pastor, Trinity, El Paso, Texas, a former member of the Louisiana Conference, while on a recent visit to Louisiana relatives, preached for Rev. R. L. Clayton at St. Francisville. A large and appreciative audience heard Dr. Freeman's inspiring sermon.

A message from the Ministerial Association of the Columbus (Miss.) District brought us the sad intelligence that Brother J. A. Duncan, father of Rev. W. N. Duncan, presiding elder of the Columbus District, died at the Methodist Hospital, Memphis, Tenn., on Sunday, May 31. We extend to Brother Duncan and the other loved ones sincere sympathy.

Rev. H. M. Johnson, pastor, Ruston, La., has had Rev. Andrew Johnson, general evangelist, in a revival meeting in his church. The choir was led by Mr. Henry Riser, with Mrs. S. L. White serving as organist. We have not learned the statistical results of the meeting but we are sure that it was a gracious season. Dr. Johnson is a scholar of ability and preaches the gospel with power.

Mrs. Mary Hawkins Golden, Dallas, Tex., in renewing her subscription wrote: "My earliest recollection of the New Orleans Christian Advocate dates back to the days of my childhood when in the home of my father, Rev. Gabriel Hawkins, I learned to love its pages." We thank Mrs. Golden for her words of encouragement and recall with appreciation the ministry of her lamented husband, Rev. J. J. Golden, who was formerly a member of the Mississippi Conference.

In sending us six subscriptions, Rev. W. J. Walters, pastor Camden, Miss., wrote: "We had a fine day last Sunday, May 17. Rev. J. T. Leggett, our presiding elder preached a fine sermon in our new church at Farm Haven, and held the second quarterly conference in the afternoon with all the churches represented." We thank Brother Walters for his efforts in behalf of the Advocate and congratulate him and the good people on his charge on the success of their work.

Dr. W. Angie Smith, pastor, First Church, Shreveport, has been much in demand for special occasions. He delivered inspiring sermons at the recent Baton Rouge district conference, is to be the guest speaker at the South Georgia Epworth League Assembly, Macon, Ga.; the conference preacher at the Pacific Annual Conference in July, and fill an engagement at Estes Park, Colorado. These gatherings may expect great messages for they will not be disappointed.

In a letter from Mrs. Katherine Sells Emmerich, requesting a change of address from Seoul to Chulwan, Korea, we were happy to discover a note of buoyancy and victory in the important task that the church has called these splendid young Mississippians to do in that far-away but interesting land. Many will remember Mr. and Mrs. Earl B. Emmerich as splendid young Christian workers in the home land and will pray that a kindly Providence will overshadow them in their chosen field of service.

Dr. W. W. Holmes, the Executive Secretary of the Conference Board of Christian Education, has this word for the preachers of the Louisiana Conference: "The Service Department of the Board of Christian Education, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., is offering a binder loaded with materials concerning the new educationaal program for 50c postpaid. This material furnishes the information in succinct form that every preacher would like to have. All materials on this subject coming later from the press will be in the uniform size, and so punched as to fit into the binder."

Dr. John Paul, at fifty-three, has retired from a nine years program in the presidency of Taylor University, to "be relieved of the pressure and let fresh shoulders carry the load." Dr. Robert Lee Stuart becomes president. Dr. Paul returns to the field of evangelism. Some years ago in Japan he conducted the Conventions for the Deepening of Spiritual Life, under unofficial Church of England auspices. Though progressive in attitude he promotes a quiet, conservative type of teaching evangelism. His address is 1754 Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. D. E. Kelly has for sale the splendid library of her lamented husband, Rev. D. E. Kelly. The young preachers, especially, should visit Mrs. Kelly's home at Hattisburg, Miss., and select such books as they may need as they are most reasonably priced and should be at work in the libraries of Methodist preachers. Some of the books are, "Clarke's Commentary," six volumes, $4; "Chamber's Encyclopedia," $4; "Henry's Exposition," 6 volumes, $4; Life of Wesley, Moody, Beecher, Sam Jones and their sermons; volumes on Methodism, prayer, evangelism, parables and many commentaries, religious and historical books.

Rev. James H. Felts, presiding elder of the Corinth District sends us the following news: "Rev. L. M. James, our pastor at Potts Camp, closed a week's meeting last week. He did the preaching himself. Seven additions on profession of faith, and others coming in by letter. Brother James is eating no idle bread. He is in great favor on the whole charge. No man is doing more acceptable work. A diligent pastor, a clear and helpful preacher, and a pleasing personality happily combine in this splendid young man. We older men are encouraged and heartened when we find young men who believe in God convincingly, and put consecrated energy in their work. This man is growing every way that makes a Methodist preacher effective and acceptable. Potts Camp is growing under his leadership. His family is an asset in his work."

CORINTH, MISS., NOTES

By Rev. E. S. Lewis

Senator Hubert D. Stephens will speak in First Church, Corinth, Sunday morning, June 14. He comes upon the invitation of the pastor to make the main address at a Layman's Day service. Senator Stephens is as good a Methodist as he is United States Senator. He is not without honor in his own country.

Rev. T. W. Lewis of First Church, Jackson, Tennessee, will assist in a revival meeting in First Church, Corinth, beginning on the 21st of June. His coming to Corinth is looked forward to with keen delight. Years ago he was pastor of this congregation and served as presiding elder for one year. His coming back will delight his old friends and no doubt make new friends for himself and for the kingdom of Christ.

PROTECTION
AGAINST OLD AGE

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the Young Men's Bible class at First Church, Corinth, will be celebrated on the first Sunday in June. Rev. J. H. Felts, who organized the class and taught it for some time, will be the principal speaker. Mrs. S. H. C. Burgin will be remembered as the distinguished teacher for a number of years. This class has about 150 on its roll and has an average attendance of from sixty to seventy.

Forty have been received into the First Methodist Church at Corinth since the last Annual Conference. It is confidently expected that quite a number will be added to the church during the revival meeting soon to be held in this church.

Rev. W. O. Hunt is holding special revival services in his church at Southside, Corinth, having opened the meeting Sunday, May 31.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

The Board of Missions of the Louisiana Conference will furnish you with envelopes to be used in taking your Conference Benevolent Offering. On this envelope is printed the causes to which these benevolent offerings are directed. I found them very valuable when accompanied by a letter sent out to my people last year, and secured about $150, that would not otherwise have been secured. If you will write to me indicating that you will use them, I will have them printed at the Advocate office, and you can order them from Brother Chalmers there. But it will be necessary to have a sufficient number of promises to use them to make it worth while for the Board to provide for having them printed.

Missionary Secty., Louisiana Conference.

DR. J. M. MELEAR ON DR. COPELAND

Editor of N. Y. Christian Advocate, Southern Division

A special series of revival services lasting three weeks have just been concluded, in which the various churches of the city gave fine co-operation. It was good to see the pastors—Anderson, Dye, Kuykendall, Todd and other ministers, working so faithfully for the salvation of souls.

Mr. Murphy led the choir and did it well. The organist, pianist, violinists and choir were faithful and very efficient.

Dr. Theodore Copeland of Dallas, Texas, was the evangelist. He quickly won his way to the hearts of the people and demonstrated his ability to lead and inspire the large congregations in attendance. He is a most lovable man, wholly devoted to his work of winning souls. He uses no objectionable methods ,but preaches sanely, warns lovingly and entreats patiently.

It is not easy to say what Dr. Copeland is to those who do not know him, and it is quite difficult to say this to those who are acquainted with him. The outstanding recollection of him is that of Coleridge's:

Good great man. Three treasures—love and light
And calm thoughts, equable as an infant's breath.

But love and light and friendship are not easily susceptible to verbal expression. One must live in them to realize their beauty and power.

Dr. Copeland has an exceptional graciousness of manner, winsome urbanity, an affectionate good will toward all men, and eager to tell them of his love and high regards. He infuses the spirit of his Master and gives to his auditors nobler views of life and living. No title, no office could make him greater than his own manliness makes him. Always cheerful and buoyant in spirit, he is ever ready to preach, pray, sing or visit in the home or place of business. Approachable, broad-minded, sympathetic, he rises above partisanship and sectarianism. His Christian spirit and tolerance will never be forgotten by any Athenian who came to know him.

Good-bye, Dr. Copeland, good-bye. Simple, strong, unselfish, a brave knight of the twentieth century, your deeds of devotion and chivalry have heightened our manhood because of the lofty motives which actuate you in your noble work. Unselfish as Sydney, sympathetic as Drummond, honest as Napier, steadfast as Paul, good-bye.

"Unbounded courage and compassion join,
Tempering each other in the tenderest mind,
Alternately proclaim you good and great,
And make the hero and the man complete."

(Dr. Copeland is now in a gracious revival at Franklinton, La., and is to be at Bluff Creek and Topisaw Camp Meetings later in the summer. —Editor.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, our Heavenly Father has called from labor to rest our brother, friend and co-laborer in the church, Brother GRANVILLE D. CAMERON; therefore, be it Resolved, by the board of stewards of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Canton charge, Jackson district, that in the passing of Brother Cameron this board has lost one of its most faithful and efficient workers, the church a loyal and consecrated member and the city and country a citizen of the highest type—ever upright and honorable in his dealings before God and man. We shall miss, as the years go by, the genial, lovable character that was his as he went in and out among us.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon out church records, a copy sent to the devoted family of our departed brother and a copy furnished the Madison County Herald and the Christian Advocate for publication.

IN MEMORIAM

We are never ready for the passing of our loved ones. We go about life's duties almost forgetful that tomorrow may bring to our circle the liberation of a loved one that will leave in its place sorrow, gloom and sadness. MRS. VELMA L. STELLWAGON (nee Henry) was born August 21, 1904, at Wilhite, La., and departed this life, February 3, 1931, in Monroe, La. When a little girl, her parents moved to West Monroe. From there she attended the city school in Monroe, finishing her high school course in June, 1922, with high honors, being the valedictorian of her class. Being a great lover of fine arts and music, she pursued a course in the Conservatory of Music in Chicago, where she completed her course in June, 1925; in August, 1925, she was married to Russel B. Stellwagon of Pottsville, Pa., who was a graduate of the Chicago University. To this union was born one little son, Russell B., Jr. She was very deeply devoted to the interests of her little home, and the Christian training of her little son. She always put God first in her home, always honoring Him by her prayers and Bible Study and Breakfast table. Aside from this her spare time was spent in teaching music and helping in her church choir. From a small child she was devoted to her Sunday school and all church work. As a school girl, she never cared to run after the things of the world, but was always interested in Epworth League work, and was one of its zealous leaders. She was in declining health for several years previous to her death, but always hopeful, never complaining; finally, on January 31, 1931, she underwent a major operation in Monroe Sanitarium, and was desperately ill until the following Tuesday, February 3, at 5:45 p. m., she passed to be with Jesus. A little while before the end came she called her mother to her bedside and said, "Mama, I want to kiss you goodbye, the Lord has come for me, and I want to go." So, we know where to find her.

"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

Dear Bro. Morris: We, the members of the Ft. Necessity Sunday school, deeply realize that any expression of sympathy at a time like this seems futile. The Sunday school knows that nothing can make amends for the great loss you have sustained, yet we cannot but hope that the heartfelt sympathy of your sincere friends will not be deemed an intrusion on your grief. We would ease your sorrow, and yet know not how. We can only acknowledge that the affliction is God's will. Over in the beautiful land your dear wife is free from the pains that she so long endured here; and when we gather at the river, is it not sweet consolation to think that she will meet you on the other side?

Commending you to Him who doeth all things well, we remain,

Your sincere friends,

SOUTHERN GROUP, BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT

The southern group of the Brookhaven district met at Foxworth on Thursday, May 21, with Rev. J. L. Decell presiding. "I'm Bound for the Promised Land" was sung as the opening hymn, then Brother Decell led in prayer. J. H. Jolly discussed the subject, "The Pastor and His People." J. W. Hart made a few remarks on the layman's view of this subject. "I Am Thine, O Lord," was sung. L. M. Reeves presented "A First Century Christian Fellowship." The meeting recessed with the use of "Amazing Grace."

The worship service opened with the singing of the hymn, "Majestic Sweetness Sits Enthroned." E. B. Flurry led in prayer. The children, under the direction of Brother M. K. Miller, rendered several splendid selections. The congregation sang "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" Brother Miller preached the sermon of the day, using the text, "Show Me Thy Ways, O Lord; Teach, Me Thy Paths." (Psalm 25:4). With the singing of the hymn, "He Hideth My Soul," the meeting adjourned for lunch.

Brother L. F. Alford had charge of the devotional services in the afternoon session. He announced the hymn, "My Saviour's Love." After the singing of this hymn, Brother Alford led in prayer, then made some comments on the passage which he read, Acts 12:1-10. Other hymns sung were, "We're Marching to Zion," "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord," and "There's Power in the Blood." "How Firm a Foundation," was also sung. This was followed by a talk by Rev. W. B. Alsworth on "Pastor and Prayer Meeting," and further open discussion on this subject. "Sweet Hour of Prayer" was sung. It was decided that the place for the next meeting should be La Branch St., McComb. Brother Jolly read a resolution of thanks to the members of the Foxworth church for their delightful hospitality. The last address was delivered by Brother Decell on the subject, "Methodism Moves Forward." The meeting ended with the singing of "To the Work!" and the benediction by the presiding elder.

HAS GOD CHANGED?

I would like to know if God has changed, or do people think He is the same God who gave the law to Moses? And is His law the same when He Said: "Thou shalt not take my name in vain?" He said, "Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not lie, Thou shalt not steal." Do you think it is right to keep His law relative to these commands? Well then He has another command seemingly that we have forgotten: "Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy." It seems to me that we have forgotten this command, or we think God has changed, or that He did not mean what He said, and we are jumping that rule of the Church, when it says that "we must not do any ordinary work, nor buy nor sell on the Sabbath Day." And a majority of the ministers have hushed urging the people to observe the day and rest; and the majority of the people, or members of the churches buying and selling on the Sabbath Day. I hear them say: "All are doing it." In fact one man said that to me. But that does not say that God has changed or that He did not mean what He said; and it does not say that Hell is not large enough to accommodate all who will go there. I have heard preachers preach on the loving side and not condemn anything. We know God is love, but He condemned all sin. Jesus was loving and sympathetic, but condemned sin, and He taught, and charged the disciples to preach as He did, and He loves to save, but not in sin, but from sin, if we will comply with the conditions. He does not save people to "cuss," steal, kill, lie, rob, play cards, and violate the Sabbath Day. The editor had a piece on "Sabbath Observance" last year, which I heartily indorsed. And he said there was much said at Conference about "Sabbath Observance," but that it did not get back home. If the preacher does say anything about Sunday observance, why, the Church will whisper to the presiding elder, "You must send us another preacher."

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENCE

About one hundred persons, including conference officers, presiding elder, several pastors, delegates and visitors filled the lecture room of the MacDonnel School, at Houma, La., April 30, 1931, to attend the conference of the New Orleans district, Louisiana Conference Woman's Missionary Society.

Mrs. A. L. Swan, district secretary, presided. The hymn, "Lead On, Oh King Eternal," was followed by a few moments of silence, waiting on God, and closing with voluntary prayers.

Echoes from the Annual Conference were given by Mrs. Storm, calling special attention to the addresses, "The Newer Ideals of Democracy in Changing America," by Prof. C. W. Pitkin; "The Missionary Enterprise of Today," by Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb; "Missions the Unfinished Task of the Church," by Miss Elizabeth Claiborne.

A dialogue, "The Mite Box and the Band Box," by Mrs. George Brown and Mrs. Spencer, proved a very effective means of arousing interest and joy in giving for God's work.

Rev. W. L. Doss, presiding elder, spoke of the New Orleans district as a vast mission field. Methodism in New Orleans was made possible by Methodist people in other sections. Quoting from "The History of New Orleans Methodism," by Rev. Robert Cross, "One hundred years ago, the first Methodist church in New Orleans was built because the Methodist people in Mississippi saw the vision." There are communities in the vicinity of New Orleans into which the Methodist Church has not entered—Metairie, practically a part of New Orleans, has not been reached; from Donaldsonville to the gulf, and from Morgan City to the lake, are vast untouched areas. Driving through these sections after the General Missionary Conference, in February, Dr. Perry breathed a prayer that somehow the money would come to send workers. The need for a missionary or preacher to minister at all times to the Protestant patients in the Charity Hospital, is upon the hearts of the Methodist people. In conclusion, Dr. Doss asked that we remember these needs in our devotions.

SORENESS ALL OVER

"I was in a run-down condition and suffering with my back and sides," says Mrs. M. M. Cook, of Fort Payne, Ala. "The pain in my side was so great it caused a soreness all through my body. I was reading the newspaper and saw Cardui advertised. I thought it might help me. After my first bottle, I felt better. I took another, after which I was greatly improved, so much so that I have recommended Cardui since."

Mrs. Pharr read echoes of the spiritual program of the Annual Conference. The "Worship and Meditation," by Rev. F. L. Wells each morning, was not to teach the Bible, but to lead us to wait on God. During the "Quiet Hour," conducted by Mrs. Lipscomb, the desires and purposes of the Council for deepening our spiritual life was unfolded.

Mrs. Shedd spoke on "Missions in China."

The "Quiet Hour" was conducted by Miss Moorman. She said: "In everyday tasks one feels the need of power. We need to spend more time in quiet. A Quaker was brought to our Council and his puritanical manner was noted. The church needs more reverence, stillness. We need the faith of the man at the Mount of Transfiguration, who, in one breath, said, "Lord, I believe," and in the next breath said: "Help thou my unbelief." Faith is the attitude of one who has the consciousness of God. Hope follows after faith. If we have the love of Christ in our hearts, there will be a desire to spread out, to be a blessing, and the result will be, that we will pattern our lives after Jesus."

At noon, we enjoyed our lunch together, picnic on the beautiful grounds under the massive oaks, then visited the institution.

The afternoon devotional was given by Miss Lampard from Matthew, 13th chapter.

Miss Marshall gave "High Lights on Our Council."

Zone leaders were introduced and each one told of the work of her zone. The auxiliary presidents, who were present, told of their plans for the year.

There are five conference scholarships at Houma from the New Orleans district. Carrollton, Mrs. C. Keener, Rayne Memorial (the Harrell children in memory of Mrs. Belle O'Pry), Zone 5 and the New Orleans district. The five children were introduced. Mrs. Swan urged the payment of the balance due on scholarships for the year 1930-31, by June 1. Although the Louisiana Conference did not pay its 1930 pledge in full, the New Orleans district overpaid $450. A letter from Mrs. Lipscomb asked that the Louisiana Conference take care of the first year's salary for Miss Ava Martin, who has been assigned to China, and perhaps the salary of Miss Berta Hartzler, who has been assigned to Korea. Mrs. Swan asked that these girls be remembered in our devotionals.

Mrs. Wright sang "By the Waters of Babylon," accompanied by Mrs. Thatcher.

In speaking of the children's work, Mrs. Crichlow urged the women to see that there is a correlation between the work of the juniors in the Sunday school, and the Junior Missionary Society. The "Boys' and Girls' World Adventure Book" will be helpful to all mothers and leaders. Other leaflets may be secured, and she will help with information at any time.

The French section was presented by the pastors working in that part of Louisiana.

Mr. Martin, now at St. Martinville, says there are 24,000 people in Lafourche Parish and two missionary societies. Pray that the way may be opened that the gospel message can be brought them.

He sang a solo in French, "I Need Thee Every Hour."

Rev. A. D. Martin told about his work in the section of the seven bayous. Just seventeen miles from Houma on a Saturday a Frenchman asked him if he was the priest, as he wanted to have his children baptized. Mr. Martin told him that he was not a priest, but a preacher. This was satisfactory to the man, so they arranged to baptize the children Thursday. When he returned there was over 250 people gathered to hear the gospel message. He preaches there now twice a month.

Mr. A. Smith said his experience in missionary work in Catholic sections was that it made the Catholics wake up.

Miss Ella Hooper says the real work in Houma has just begun. The women of Louisiana have stood by and are more interested then ever before. The work done in the school will influence the whole section.

Rev. A. J. Alford spoke words of encouragement to the workers, and invited all present to visit St. Mark's Community Center, in New Orleans.

Mrs. Bobbett, mother of a missionary in Mexico, was introduced. She told of her joy in giving her daughter to the Lord's work, and especially since she had been to Mexico and seen the work. She said that she had just begun to read her Bible, that had been given to her by Miss Hooper, when her daughter went to Mexico, but now she loves that precious book. She spoke words of appreciation for the life of Miss Hooper and what it has meant to her.

Mr. Andrews told about his work in the church at Houma and paid tribute to Miss Hooper in her work.

The meeting closed with prayer by Mr. Andrews.

BROOKHAVE DISTRICT MEETING

Wednesday, May 13, is a day long to be remembered by the Magnolia auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society, for on this day she had the privilege of acting as hostess to the other auxiliaries of the Brookhaven district, Mississippi Conference, who annually meet to discuss various missionary problems.

Promptly at 10 o'clock, the meeting was called to order by the new district secretary, Mrs. C. A. Butterworth, of McComb.

Dr. J. L. Decell led the worship period, reading and commenting on Matthew 28, 17-20. Rev. G. P. McKeown led in prayer.

An inspiring paper, "What Our Wesley Houses Are Doing for the Foreigner," written by Mrs. Hollinger, of Meadville, was read by Mrs. E. P. Jones.

Mrs. C. L. Freiler, the new conference superintendent, discussed the Children's Work. She introduced two attractive little girls, Frances Freiler and Mary Kathryn Hendon, the former telling in an erudite manner the work of the "Boy's and Girl's World Club," the latter singing sweetly, "I Would Be True."

Mrs. V. M. Roby discussed "Zone Meetings," and, upon request, assumed the responsibility of reorganizing the Eastern Zone.

Dr. J. L. Decell spoke in the interest of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, urging its support by the women of the church.

A beautiful message in song, "Why Should He Love Me So," was brought by Mr. John Lamar Smith.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

A visitor to Gloster, recently, was one of the most pleasant visits it has been our fortune to make. The Gloster Methodist Church is in the midst of a real revival. They have built an annex to the church building to take care of the social life of the church and the young people and children. This, when equipped, will care for real church work as well as any building in the size community we have. A joy in connection with this building is that the debt upon it when completed will be very small.

One hundred fifty-three were present at Sunday school Sunday morning. I had the pleasure of teaching a class of twenty-three men. There were twenty-four women in the women's class. The men seemed determined to build up a good attendance and keep it. They were interested and anxious to do that which would build the kingdom of God permanently. They were proud of their achievement and were determined to push forward.

Brother J. H. Morrow, the pastor, is in high favor with his people and they are beginning to talk about a station. I pray that the development of the church will eventually demand a station. J. E. Brown, the superintendent of the Sunday school, was delighted at the remarkable growth and interest in the school. Men and women are coming into the church and giving themselves to God and His services.

Miss Helen Wright, a member of the Reeves Chapel church, Edwards charge, has done a most excellent piece of work with the children of her community. She was unwilling for them not to have the advantage of religious teaching, so she began gathering several at her home and teaching them. This action on her part created such interest until Reeves Chapel has a Sunday school with thirty members. A fine noble young girl with this interest and gifts and graces deserves our prayerful appreciation. Mr. W. B. Prassell is the superintendent of this school. We pray that they will have a long useful life of service to the community.

Mount Zion, on the Union charge, observed Sunday School Day and sent in a good report. They are planning to have a vacation school in their church for all their members. From beginners through the adults. This is the first time anything of this sort has ever happened and we are anxiously awaiting the outcome of this effort. If it succeeds we will surely tell about it.

It was our privilege to be in a session of the vacation church school at Morten. Mrs. J. L. Carter is leading the work and has charge of the junior department; Mrs. Lee Gainey has charge of the primary department, and Mrs. J. B. Cain the beginner. There were ten earnest Christian women giving themselves to this task and there were over eight children present to enjoy and profit by this work. They have enrolled 95, and their smallest attendance has been 82. It was a real inspiration to see these fine noble women working so earnestly and the eager, happy faces of these children. May more and more of our churches catch the vision and give to the children the teaching and direction they need. We feel that much lasting good will result from this effort at Morten.

Do not forget to observe Sunday School Day. Much of the field work for the summer and fall depends upon a fine observance of the day. The reports that have reached us have been very gratifying. May every church observe the day and send a generous offering.

Our Missionary collections are running behind what they were last year, we must get the information to the people through our programs and give all a chance. In order for us to pay our part in this great work it will mean that more churches and schools must begin to give the programs and send in the offerings. A large number of Sunday schools still do not observe Missionary Day.

When this appears in the Advocate, we will be in the midst of the Assembly. We trust you have prayed for this meeting and that you have made it possible for your young people to go.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

FROM CEDAR BLUFF, MISS.

Dear Brother Editor: I just want to let let you know how we are getting along at Cedar Bluff, and some of the things we are doing. On the second Sunday, May 10, "Mother's Day," at the 11 o'clock hour, we had a fine service. A nice Mother's Day program, and it was well carried out, and all present seemed to be delighted with it and enjoyed the service very much. That evening, we had a children's service. It was wonderful, the children did well and everyone enjoyed the service.

We have observed Sunday School Day at all the churches. We are praying that the Lord will give us great revivals in all our churches. I would like to mention the nice offering the W. M. S. of Columbus First Church, Miss., sent us, on the seventh of May, by our kind and much loved presiding elder. Words fail to express our gratitude for this kindness; we do appreciate it from the depth of our hearts. May the Lord's richest blessing be yours.

Fraternally,

R. G. A. CARLISLE, P. C.

THE RAMSEY FAMILY REUNION

On Sunday, May 31, the children and grandchildren of Rev. and Mrs. John W. Ramsey, of Vimville, Miss., assembled at the Vimville Methodist parsonage, the occasion being a family reunion. The morning was cloudy and the weather was threatening for a time, but the later hours brought sunshine, symbolic of the happiness which the presence of their sons and daughters brought to the lives of their parents. The forenoon was spent in gathering up the separated threads of the lives of children and parents and weaving them together again. When the noon hour arrived, dinner was announced and upon entering the dining room the company found the table loaded with good things to eat which were enjoyed by all those present. After partaking of this bountiful repast, the children, grandchildren, and their parents, numbering in all fourteen persons, reassembled in the living room, where the afternoon was spent in pleasant conversation. One of the happiest features of the afternoon was the dedication to God in baptism of Pauline Louise Adams, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Adams, of Meridian. The beautiful ceremony was performed by the grandfather, Rev. John W. Ramsey, the pastor of the local Methodist church, whose pleasure it has been to baptize all his grandchildren in infancy and to perform the marriage ceremony for all his children who have married.

While the entire company wished that the delightful gathering might continue indefinitely the close of the day necessitated their departure to their respective homes, each hoping that the future may bring them together again in another happy family reunion. Those present on this occasion were: Rev. and Mrs. John W. Ramsey; Mr. and Mrs. John E. Ram-

GREENWOOD DISTRICT GROUP MEETING

The Greenwood District Methodist Ministers' Association met in the Methodist church at Tutwiler, Miss., Tuesday, June 2, 1931, and in the absence of the president, Rev. A. T. Mcilwain, the pastor-host, Rev. W. M. Campbell, presided. Rev. G. A. Baker opened the services and Rev. B. F. Bullard led in prayer. WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Roll call showed one hundred thirty-three present, Centenary Church, McComb, leading with twenty.

Just before adjournment, at the noon hour, Mrs. L. W. Alford graciously introduced the ministers and the wives of the ministers to the audience.

The afternoon devotional was given by Rev. J. H. Jolly, who used Ex. 3, 1-10. Rev. B. M. Hunt led the prayer.

Mrs. C. C. Clark, conference superintendent, spoke on "The Importance of Young Women's Circles." She said our command is like that of Christ to His Disciples, "Launch out into the deep and let down your nets," and bring in the young women. Their organization is our greatest challenge for the year. May it be heeded.

Mrs. Alma Riley, of the Methodist Orphanage, made a plea for Octagon soap coupons as the very breath of life to that institution. A quota of 750,000 coupons was set for the Brookhaven district.

Mrs. G. P. McKeown, conference superintendent, presented "Supplies," saying she thought the name of her department should be changed to "Sunshine and Happiness." She made a plea for our Wesley Houses and their needs. She requested that we send supplies to the Moore Community House as well as the Wesley Houses.

Mrs. L. W. Alford spoke with optimism of our work for the year, placing greatest emphasis on spiritual cultivation. She read a petition against lynching and requested each woman to sign it. She advocated the plan of sending a worthy negro woman to the training school at Holly Springs.

Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, our new conference president, gave an interesting resume of our work for the past fifty years, following it with the thought that the paramount battleground of missions is America. As she closed her address, little Lemelia Goza presented her with a basket of beautiful flowers.

"The Importance of Zone Organization," was presented by Mrs. Frank DeCelle, who also spoke of the Children's Work.

Mrs. Anthony Fly read the report of the resolutions committee.

Rev. E. D. Simpson dismissed the meeting with prayer.

SLUGGISH FEELING

"I have used Thedford's Black-Draught off and on for twenty-five years," writes Mr. Dave Stewart, of 1912 E. 2nd St., Austin Texas.

"They used it in my father's home for many years and it was our general family medicine.

"My health was good, and that is about all I ever took. I used it for constipation and bilious sick headaches. It is a fine medicine to take when a man gets up in the morning feeling dull and sluggish. After a course of it I feel fine. It rids the system of poison which comes from constipation."

THE TUPELO CHURCH

We write you a few words to say that our church at Tupelo has been faithfully and diligently engaged in various activities. Our pastor, Dr. W. P. Buhrman, who was transferred to us from the Florida Conference, seems to believe in the general program of our Methodist Church. This policy is proving itself a good one in these "times" which are so much spoken of as times of difficulty. He has had our people engaged in reading and studying the book called "Methodism and Kingdom Extension;" has urged a canvass of individuals for funds for missions; has conducted pre-Easter services, concluding with a Sunday service in which church members were received; beginning with April 26, has had Dr. A. Fred Turner, presiding elder from Jacksonville, Fla., to lead us in evangelistic services continuing for two weeks; and immediately following we had conducted here a Standard Training School which issued some thirty credits.

Special mention should be made of the splendid work of Dr. Turner and his excellent preaching. He won the hearts of all who heard him.

I wish to add that a new organization in our church, a brotherhood, called by us the Methodist Men's Club, gives promise of developing for us a new force. Our pastor is working faithfully through this organization to interest the men who are outside the official group, as he puts it. Our congregations are good, somewhat better than usual, and altogether we are showing the activities of a live church.

Reports to date show us having already received members on profession of faith in a number far ahead of last year's record.

Very truly,

W. L. ELLRIN,
District and Church Lay Leader, and Chairman of the Board of Stewards.

POETICAL THOUGHTS

By Mrs. George S. Brown

For he shall be as a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth forth her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful in the year of drought, neither shall cease from yielding fruit.—Jer. 17;8.

THE TREE OF MY LIFE

My life is like a sturdy tree, deep grounded in God's care
And nourished well and made to grow by earnest, trusting prayer.
The roots are cords of reverent love and hold me firm for aye;
The trunk, undying faith that grows more strong from day to day.

The branches are the thoughts I think; the leaves the words I speak;
The blossoms are intents to do, however frail and weak.
As by its fruit the tree is known, so will my life be too;
And when my life is growing right, my deeds are kind and true.

—Harriette Wilbur.

I like to think of my life being like a tree for there is something so big and reliable and dependable in a tree. You are just sure you are always going to find it standing just where you last saw it, in it no variableness nor shadow of turning. The Psalmist likens the life of a righteous man to "a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth its fruit in due season; his leaf also shall not wither and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper."

The roots of a tree are so deep grounded. Some times they extend in many directions, and did you every try to pull up even one of its roots? You simply cannot do it. It is there to stay forever and ever. It has to be blasted if you really want to get rid of it. If our hearts are rooted and grounded in faith and love of God, then we too shall neither wither nor fail. May our roots be binding cords of reverent, overwhelming love!

The trunk seems to grow slowly but surely and unmistakably it develops and while once we may have clasped our hands around it, the time comes when we cannot even encircle it with our arms. Upward too, it climbs and ofttimes initials carved by boys and girls at the romantic age, are found way up, ten feet above ground. If we too possess faith we shall climb to unknown heights. The branches—how they spread until they become a canopy. Up in Audubon Park, here in New Orleans, branch meets branch from side to side of the walk, forming an arch far more beautiful than any man could build. There are two places on St. Charles Avenue on opposite sides of the street, a few blocks apart, that I always watch for with the same eagerness, particularly during summer when the sun is scorching in its intensity. The branches extend way out to the driveway and under them you feel so cool, for the shade shuts off the sun and you always want to drive slowly or stop and rest awhile. If branches represent thoughts, then surely the thoughts should be pure and sweet and good.

And then the leaves, from the pale little first formed leaves to the dark green of the full leaf, how lovely they are! If they are our words, how numerous! Really countless! If our words that come out so rapidly, so thoughlessly, could but mean as much beauty and sweetness as the leaves how everybody would want to hear us talk. Some trees have blossoms and they shed fragrance on the air. Our eyes revel in them. I had never thought before of blossoms being our intentions, but it is a good metaphor. Often our intentions blow about by every idle wind; sometimes they are scattered, maybe they droop and die. However, there are many that go on to fruition and I believe that we are all the better for having had them even if they never amount to anything, just as it is good to make resolutions though we fail to live up to them. At least we have had the desire for something better.

Last of all comes the fruit and that is the way we are actually known. "By theeir fruits ye shall know them." Men know they cannot gather grapes and figs where there are trees of thorns and thistles. The Master once saw a fig tree that should have been laden with fruit and when He found it barren, He made it wither and die. It was useless and so are we if we do not bear fruit. Our lives do not count for much if we do not fulfil our mission of fruit bearing. If we live right, if we do right, then will we go forth in the Master's name bearing precious fruit that all the world may be fed.

INTOLERANCE

By. D. W. Heidelberg

One of the greatest evils to which mankind has been subject is that of intolerance. It has been a great hinderance to the spread of the truth and the prolific cause of persecution, both political and religious.

Nothing could be further from the spirit of the Christian religion, as taught and practiced by Christ. Did not Christ say to Peter that all they that take the sword shall perish by the sword? Yet, during the past centuries the most bloody and disastrous wars of all the centuries were fought between Catholics and Protestants in the name of religion. Christians have been burned at the stake, their heads severed from the body, men, women and children have had to flee from their native land and brave the winds and currents of the ocean in order that they might enjoy religious freedom.

It was religious intolerance that caused the emperor, Nero, to set on fire the clothing of the early Christians, that his palace might be lighted while he sat and enjoyed their destruction by the flames. It was intolerance that caused the primitive Christians to be placed in the arena of the Roman Forum to be torn in pieces and devoured by wild beasts, in order to amuse the populace. It was intolerance that drove the early martyred Christians into the Catacombs of Rome, where their last resting places may be seen by the modern traveler.

It was political intolerance, during the French Revolution that caused the streets of Paris to flow with blood, and that murdered Louis XIX, and his innocent queen, Marie Antoinette. It was religious intolerance that caused the Parliament of England, during the reign of Queen Anne, to enact laws forbidding Catholics from attending religious worship. It was religious intolerance that caused innocent men and women to be burned at the stake for witchcraft in the State of Massachusetts. It was religious intolerance that made the Jews flee from their native land, and scatter throughout every country in the world, where they have been robbed and maltreated in every conceivable way.

It was religious intolerance that barred the pulpits of Protestant churches from being occupied by other Protestant ministers, and that caused a large part of the preaching to be on the non-essentials of religion. It is religious toleration that has opened the pulpits of Protestants to other Protestant preachers, and led them often to hold religious services together. It is religious intolerance that has separated the denominations into nearly 1600 branches with no essential difference between many of them. It is a growing spirit of toleration that is causing a widespread movement, headed by J. Parks Cadman, to unite many of the Protestant denominations into one denomination, such as has been done in the Dominion of Canada, where the Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregational churches have been united into one Church, and to bring into closer relationship all of the denominations of the world.

It was political intolerance that caused the United States Senate and the Republicans to vote against the League of Nations for the reason that it was mainly the creature of Mr. Wilson, a Democratic President.

It was political intolerance that caused the Democratic politicians and many of the Democratic newspapers of the South to denounce as Republicans true and tried Democrats, who refused to vote for Al Smith for President, because he was in sympathy with the infamous liquor traffic, and repudiated the Democratic platform on which he was nominated, which was in opposition to the saloon, and openly advocated the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

It was religious intolerance that caused many of the Democrats of the South to vote against Al Smith for President for no other reason than that he was a Roman Catholic.

HOLY LAND TRIP WITHIN REACH OF PASTORS

The following stay-at-home plan while your pastor has an opportunity to visit the Holy Land is proving a very popular one at a small cost to the individual.

Few congregations realize the fact that a trip to the Holy Land for their pastor would be of as much value to them as to him. The Pastor's knowledge is public property. The more light he has, the more enlightened is his congregation; the more historical data and first hand knowledge of the Bible he acquires, the better informed on Biblical facts become his parishioners. He collects knowledge from a large radius the more full of knowledge bceomes his community.

A Bible study trip to Bible Lands with the One Hundred Methodists will so extend this radius as to give it practically world wide dimensions. Each member of the congregation taking part in the Pastor Plan becomes the recipient of this vast wealth of information and thus receives full value for his or her participation. Members of the Pastor's "Stay At Home" club also receive, besides the spiritual and educational value from their investment, articles which apart from their intrinsic value are actually worth the membership fee.

The membership fee in the "Stay At Home" club will be $5.00.

Each member enrolling in the "Stay At Home" club will receive as a member of this club:

1. Seven letters mailed from seven points of interest on the trip, by the pastor. Four of these letters will come from Palestine proper and will include a flower card from the place it is mailed. These letters will come from Athens, Damascus, Galilee, Nazareth, Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Egypt.

2. A beautiful illustrated, olivewood-bound red letter Testament, 4 1-2 in. by 6 3-4 in. will be brought back by tho Pastor, and will be given to each member of the "Stay At Home" club. This Testament is the finest that can be purchased in Jerusalem.

Sending a pastor on a Bible Study trip to the Holy Land through the "Stay At Home" club method has many excellent features.

The sailing dates for this season are:

June 10th via England to the Holy Land and return $750.00.

July 2nd direct to the Holy Land $650.00.

July 17th via England to the Holy Land $725.00.

Those interested in either sending some one or accompanying the One Hundred Methodists who are planning a pilgrimage to the Holy Land this year should write or wire Rev. W. M. Cassetty, Jr., 810 Broadway, for accommodations.

HIGHER ORDER OF CHRISTIANS

There are two orders or ranks of Christians—the higher and lower. In the lower order legal conformity and practical performance of duty bind the believer to the way of Christian service. The colorless life is punctuated by periods of joy, but there are long, too long, stretches of drab dullness and shallow sameness. Christian activity is monotonous routine and wonders of grace fade away into the commonplace. Mr. Wesley said: "From long experience and observation I am inclined to think that whoever finds redemption in the blood of Jesus, whoever is justified, has the choice of walking in a higher or lower path. I believe the Holy Spirit at that time sets before him the more excellent way, and incites him to walk therein; to choose the narrowest path of the narrow way; to aspire after the heights and depths of holiness—after the entire image of God. But if he does not accept this offer, he insensibly declines into the lower order of Christians."

The times call for the higher order. There is enough distress and sorrow, questioning and despair, laxity and lament to mark buoyancy of hope, joyful service, and holy triumph as refreshing relief. Today is the time when Christians need to witness that they have been "strengthened with all might, according to His glorious power, unto all patience and longsuffering with joyfulness." This is no time for Zion to put more plaint than praise in her song. Not that conduct should be relieved from conformity to the highest standards of righteousness, nor duty any less honestly performed; but Zion needs to shout as Nehemiah did in dark days, "The joy of the Lord is your strength."

Sustaining joy in troublous times and exacting service is not to be found on the surface, its springs are in the unseen depths of the spirit and the invisible heights of communion and fellowship with the Eternal. From these hidden reaches come assurance of victory and refreshing powers that make Christian service a privilege to be enjoyed rather than a perfunctory task to be performed.

The great channels of Christian assurance and joy are open and accessible. They are not shrouded in forbidden ranges where only the astute and skilled may walk. Their replenishing streams of vital power flow by the faith-gate of the learned and unlearned, small and great, young and old. "Mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long suffering, forbearing one another, forgiving one another and charity which is the bond of perfectness" and "Faith, knowledge, temperance, godliness, and all diligence" are the things that be in the Christians of the higher order and are the unearthly weapons of their conquest.

What could be more highly satisfying than the consciousness that one is "working together with God" for the greatest good of mankind? What could be so inspiring as to be an agent of the Holy Spirit to convince the world of Christ and His Salvation? Is there any joy comparable to the exhiliration felt when sinners have been saved and heaven has come to the hopeless? An experience that will produce the conquering joys of the Christian Life will purify the social order, allay strife between nations, right industrial relations, freshen up the hours for individuals and make beautiful and happy the way for weary pilgrims.

TWO YOUNG MEN

Last week a young man who was an honor student in his class at the university was shot while robbing employees in the service of a public utility in the city where he was attending school. His home environment seems to have been good. Before he left for the university he participated in religious services for young people and was marked for a useful career. Possessed of attractive personality and native ability he soon won his place among his fellow students.

He disastrously departed from the precepts of his earlier training and left the ways of his faith. One reporter wrote: that he had determined to allow no restraint to keep him from being himself, and that he wanted to try every thrill once. Another wrote: that he ceased to believe in the faith of the rural section from which he came and had become an admirer of certain unbelievers. The youth himself admitted the robbery and that he had gambled away the funds sent to him by his parents to finish out the year and return home. Broken hearted parents waited by his bedside, while an armed policeman kept guard over his prostrate form.

The same week a forward-looking youth from the same State met death while at his post of duty. This second young man was a few years older, but met the privations of college days with economy and honor. He went out from a home where family prayer was the custom and where God's word was the rule of practice. Money was not plentiful, but sacrifice was a pleasure. His parents had not won scholastic degrees, but in his college days and the little time that remained after his graduation he found nothing better than the faith of his mother or the Christian courage of his father.

THE PUBLIC AND TRANSPORTATION

Railroads have been pioneers in inland progress and have not been equaled in their part in continued development. The success of railroads has become related to public welfare, and public welfare is of interest to the Church. We do not write as one claiming expert knowledge in economic matters, but as an unprejudiced citizen believing in the ethics of justice.

Motor busses and motor trucks have entered the field of transportation and in some instances have jeopardized the further operation of railroads. If the busses and trucks can render better and cheaper service than railroads there is a reason. However, it is questioned that motor-vehicles give the public as safe and dependable service as the railroads.

It isn't ethically just for railroads to be heavily taxed to build modern highways for their competitors—the busses and trucks to use, while they pay but a negligible amount of the cost of the roads over which they travel. If the busses and trucks are to operate as public carriers through the same territory where railroads run, they should be required to pay a just tax for the privilege, build stations for the comfort and protection of their patrons, post information as to daily schedules, and provide adequate reserve for possible damage to life and property. The public should not be called upon to provide the larger part of roadways for busses and trucks to use and thereby reduce the income and taxable property and employed personnel of railroads, whose tax payments have so largely contributed to the educational and charitable institutions that serve the various communities through which they operate.

Insufficiently regulated transportation that impairs the success of the railroads as public carriers is an unwise policy and in proportion that it is permitted the public is the loser. For the railroads employ large numbers of citizens and purchase immense quantities of supplies. In 1929 the railroads purchased 25 per cent of all soft coal, 20 per cent of all timber, 17 per cent of all steel and iron, and 10 per cent of all fuel oil, and many other items that touch the sustenance of the people. Besides, they employ almost two million men and pay in wages to their employees nearly three billion dollars a year, and pay in taxes one-third of another billion. These figures are stupendous, but they represent the meaning of an enterprise in which the public welfare is vitally involved. We doubt not that the initiative and experience of men who have the common good at heart will adjust transportation relations without discrimination and according to the best interest of the largest number.

LOOKING UNTO JESUS THE LAMB OF GOD

BY REV. H. A. WOOD

Text: "Behold the Lamb of God." John 1:36.

When John the Baptist, the immediate forerunner of Christ, found himself at the ford of the river Jordan surrounded by a crowd of anxious, inquiring, immortal souls, contented was he, then and there, again and again, regarding it as the some of his vocation, to point them to Christ the world's redeemer, saying in the words of the text, "Behold the lamb of God." And now at this hour, by the aid of the Holy Spirit, we humbly assay to imitate His example. We ask you to behold the most illustrious personage, and contemplate the most interesting character in the whole range of being, intelligence and action. We ask you to behold Him the one central theme of the Bible; behold Him in His person; behold Him in his advent from heaven to earth; behold Him embarked upon His mission of human redemption, and working out its fulfillment by means heightening the grandeur of the end; behold Him the salvation of His people; behold Him the strength and protection of His people; behold Him the light and guide of His people; behold Him the one need of this old world, upon whom we rise to heights sublime, or failing to behold Him aright, irreparable is our fall, failure, and loss; behold the lamb of God, now.

Behold Him the One Central Theme of the Bible.

The Bible with its sixty-six books is one volume with one central theme, Christ Jesus. Jehovah or Christ in the Old Testament, and Jesus, the Christ in the New. His name is written clear and plain in every part of it. He is seen in every sacrifice and feast of ancient Israel. There is no worship or devotion anywhere, anytime where Christ does not appear. We have much said disparingly today of Old Testament Christianity. But what is Christianity anywhere but Christ discerned? In the Old Testament afar off, in the New close at hand. Follow the gleam-Old Testament: He is coming; New Testament: He has come; Epistles: He is coming again. In the Old Testament we have the twinkling stars of prophecy. In the New dawn, the day.

> "In novo Testamento patet, > Quae in vetere latet."
> The New is in the Old contained,
> The Old is by the New explained.

And in all from the beginning to the end the one central theme is Christ Jesus.

If we turn to the Old Testament we find that He is always spoken of as actually already existing, and pre-eminently exalted in glory, unlimited and everlasting. The whole volume being filled with notices and disclosures to this effect. In Genesis as the seed of the woman, "He was to obtain a great triumph over the powers of darkness, in bruising the serpents head." In Exodus, the book of departure, He is the Passover Lamb. In Leviticus, the book of atonement, the atoning sacrifice. In Numbers, the book of the march and roll call, the smitten rock. In Deuteronomy, the book of remembrance, the prophet yet to come. Moses also announces Him the great Lawgiver of the Universe, and predicts the overthrow and down-fall of all those who reject Him. In Joshua, the book of conquest, He is the Captain of the Lord's Hosts. In Judges, the book of declension, the great deliverer. In Ruth, the book of the winsome love story, the Celestial Kinsman, the Heavenly Boaz. In Samuel and Kings. and Chronicles He is Christ the King. In Ezra, the book of restoration, the restorer of the temple. In Nehemiah, the restorer of the nation. In Esther, the book of Gods Providence, both advocate and propitiator. In Job, the book of patience, the ever living and redeeming God. In Psalms, the book of devotion, He is God, the All and in All. In Proverbs, the book of Wisdom; in Ecclesiastes, the book of experience; and in The Songs of Solomon, the Christian love story, he is the Beginning and Ending, the Center and Heart of all; the "Chief among ten thousand and altogether lovely." Isaiah, the Messianic Prophet, in his book of expectation, soars above all heights and proclaims Him, "Imanuel," God with us. "The Mighty God." "Jehovah, the Lord God of Hosts, and only Savior." Jeremiah, the warning prophet, in his book of admonition, glowingly depicts Him as "Jehovah our righteousness." In Lamentations, the warning prophet is weeping, and through his book of tears he portrays Jesus as the "Man of Sorrows." Ezekiel, the prophet of visions, in his book of encouragements for captive saints, declares Jesus to be the "only Shepherd." Daniel, the prophet of dreams, in his Sunrise book publishes Him the "object of worship." Hosea, the prophet of salvation, in his book of backsliders, predicts that "Jehovah will save the people by Jehovah." Joel, the prophet of the Spirit, in his book of pentecost, says expressly as quoted by St. Paul, "that He is Jehovah, and that all who call upon Him shall be saved." Amos, the farmer prophet, in his book of the plumb line, declares Him the "Heavenly Husband." Obadiah, the prophet of deliverance, in his book of possessions, sings of Him as "Savior and deliverer." Jonah, the missionary prophet, in his book of Gods mercy, sets Him forth as "the Resurrection and the Life." Micah, the herald prophet, in his book of the watch tower, declares Him the "Ruler in Israel." His going forth being from "Everlasting to everlasting." Nahum, the world's prophet, in his book of the burden, declares that "Zions God is a Jealous God." Habakkuk, the prophet of Hope, in his book of light in the darkness, sings in the night time, soaring on a high note, "Look up beleaguered soul, trust and be glad in the Lord." Zephaniah, the judgment prophet, in his book of the day of the Lord, anonunces Him the "Lord God, Mighty to save." Haggai, the prophet of restoration, in his builders book, portrays Him "the desire of all nations." Zechariah, the prophet of final things, in his book of the future, declares him to be "Jehovah sent by Jehovah to the nations." And Malachi who concludes all the prophetic utterances, notices and disclosures, in his sunset book, shouts "The Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to His temple."

Passing from the Old Testament to the New, allowing some three hundred—nearly four hundred years to pass away since Malachi's voice rang clear with the above promise, in St. Matthew's Gospel we hear the glad song of the angels syaing, "The promised Mesiah, the Lord whom ye seek has come, the King is here." Mark cries with shining eyes, "Have you seen Him?" This is what he said, this is what he did, this is what he really is "The Son of God with power." Luke's Gospel opens with a song, "Glory to God in the highest." It closes with a song blessing and praising God. And from that day to this the world has been singing and the bells of heaven ringing. John's gracious witness was to this end, "that ye might believe," sayeth he, "That Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God." His Gospel opens with Christ in the bosom of the Father, and closes with John in the bosom of Christ. In Acts we have the book of Witness, the Gospel of the Risen Christ, "Christ is not dead," says Luke in this his second message, "He is risen again, and is at the right hand of God, the Father." Paul in his epistles to the Romans, Corinthians, Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, Collossians, Thessalonians, to Timothy, Titus, Philemon, and to the Hebrews, shouts, "Eureka! I have found the way, 'Tis Jesus. He is our salvation, our righteousness, our grace, our comfort, our liberty, our riches. Fullness of life, fullness of joy, fullness of power. Our teacher, our healer, our master and owner. Our high priest and intercessor. Our heavenly guest, our portion forever and ever. Christ our all and in all, the glorified and coming one. James declares Him the pattern of our faith and works. Peter, the apostle of hope says, "cheer up there's light ahead, in and through the Christ of God our Savior." Jude in his epistle of steadfastness, shouts, "He is our keeper." "Now unto Him that is able to keep you, to the only wise God our Savior, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever." And now what sayeth John, the last witness of the Book of Books in his epistles and the Revelation. Listen attentively to his testimnoy. We know, we know sayeth John, there is no posibility of doubt about it, "That which was from the beginning, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of the word of life." 'Tis Jesus, we really and truly know Him. He is our glorified and coming one, King of Kings and Lord of Lords forever and ever. Having looked upon Jesus as the one central theme of the Book of Books, let us now

Behold Him in His Person.

It is not at all difficult to think of God the Son as regards His personality while in the flesh. We do not have to draw upon our imagination to see Him wrapped in swaddling clothes, and lying in a manger, and thus on and on during His militant state. Yet as surely as God's Word is true He is from everlasting to everlasting. There was a time when as yet the sun had not lighted up his fires, and sent golden rays upon the earth; a time when the moon had not been hung pendant in the heavens for man's profit and glory; a time when all we now behold of God's great universe was yet unborn, slumbering to be sure in the mind of God, but as yet uncreated and non-existent; yet there was God and He was "over all blessed forever." He is "Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end." Behold Him, the high and lofty one, heaven His throne, the earth His footstool. See Him as angels veil their faces with their wings, and cherubim and seraphim rest not day and night, saying, "Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty." Behold Him, very God of very God, coming from His throne in glory, bringing salvation, dying on Calvary's Cross, the "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." Behold Him rising again, as had been predicted by the prophets of the distant past, and as He had said He would. Behold Him ascending from Mount Olivet's brow. Behold Him sitting at the "right hand of God, making intercession for us." Behold Him as the great and eternal Judge in the final day.

Behold Him Upon His Mission of Human Redemption.

How painfully exercised He must have been in leaving His throne or regal splendor to come to our earth of sin and sorrow. What humiliation, what suffering, what torture, was that which He endured as He engaged in His mission of human redemption, working out its fulfillment by means heightening the grandeur of the end. Behold Him in his humiliation in the manger, His agony in the Garden, His sufferings on the cross. The greatest wonder of earth's miracles is the fact that "Christ suffered for us." Prophets, apostles, martyrs, and heroes and heroines, many have been stoned, banished, impaled, burned and sawn asunder, but no event that lives on the pages of history has ever been so attested by nature and nature's God as was the sufferings and death of Christ, "the Lamb of God." Jehovah speaks and the earth rocks to its center; yonder the sun is clothed in sack cloth and ashes for three hours; the graves give up their dead; at the psychological moment an unseen hand lays hold of the veil of the temple and rends it from top to bottom. But the ultimate substantiation of His claims as Savior, Lord and God stood intimately connected with the resurrection. Ancient prophecy had announced Him King in Zion, Ruler of His people Israel, and Lord over all; but as a final proof of His claims He must raise Himself from the dead as had been foretold by the prophets of the distant past, and as He had said He would; and heaven and earth bear witness to the fact that so He did. Thus rising from the dead as the Divinely accredited Head and Leader of God's people, His claim admits of no dispute, no uncertainty. By Divine purpose and appointment, the incarnation, life, death, resurrection, ascension of our Lord, and the subsequent descent of the Holy Spirit all occur in established connection as sequent and antecedent, proving the Lamb of God as Savior, Lord and Master, very God of very God.

Behold Him the Salvation of His People.

Just what the world long waited for. The awful fall of our first parent has been met in the redemptive scheme of a mighty Savior, our second parent. It is the privilege of every human being to comprehend through personal experience something of the might and majesty of the Incarnate Son of God. We know Him to be the regent of providence, the king of death, the conqueror of hell, the Lord of angels, the master of storms, and He that is "mighty to save." The word to save embraces all the work of salvation from the first holy desire, the first spiritual conviction, onward to complete sanctification. Through the Lamb of God we may have redemption from all sin as well as from our actual and willful transgressions. He is mighty not merely to put men in a salvable condition, but mighty, absolutely and entirely to save to the uttermost. "Wherefore He is able also to save them to the uttermost, that come unto God by Him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them." Behold the Savior as He stoops to solicit the possession of the sinners heart. Well may heaven and earth be called upon to behold an act of such condescension and grace.

Behold Him the Strength and Protection of His People.

In and through the Lamb of God our souls are being preserved, and clinging to Him is our protection, our help, and our shield. Heaven's pure intelligence shines on our pathway through Him, and His ministrations illumine the dark and dreary interval of human suffering and earthly pilgrimage. With our hold on Him we have nothing to fear, we rest secure in our place like the deep seated mountain rocked by the thunder and washed by the cataract, still breasting unmoved the strife of the storm and the roar of a thousand torrents.

"The soul that on Jesus still leans for repose,
I will not, I will not desert to His foes;
That soul, though all hell should endeavor to shake,
I'll never, no never, no never forsake!"

Behold Him the Light and Guide of His People.

He is "the way, the truth, and the life." "The light of the world." The light of the Lamb of God needs no touch of human perfection or earthly finish. Its every ray of light is a heaven transmitted beam, to the human understanding. To this light individuals and nations have clung at different times and periods as the last plank in the wide spread wreck of truth and goodness. Its light is shining alike amid Polynesian isles, and Carribean Archipelagos; while we address you, the gospel is heard in the hut of the Eskimo, and the pavilion of the Persian. It has superceded the victorious war dance amid the lakes of the north, and kindled its breathings in the Cinnamon groves of Ceylon. Its influence is felt in the mines of Golconda. Its warnings strike revelry dumb in the seraglio of the Mogul; and as a miracle of heavenly creation, it contains principles of boundless increase, that shall spread through every clime, and under every sky, until the voices of piety, the harps of Zion, and the hymns of her joy shall everywhere fling to the bending heavens and listening earth, their sweet and varied melody. It is under the light and guidance of Him, who is the light and guide of His people, that we see the bark of knowledge, where all beside was wreck, booming in safety over the rolling seas of time. Looking unto Jesus, our souls in radiant glow sing:

"We'll walk in the light, beautiful light,
Come where the dewdrops of mercy are bright,
Shine all around us by day and by night,
Jesus, the Light of the world."

Behold Him the One Need of Individuals, Nations and World.

That the needs of the confused and distracted world of today are various and many all thinking hearts will agree. But the one need that presupposes and includes every other need is Jesus. Moses predicted the failure and down-fall of all who reject Him, and we have but to unroll the records that bear in burning characters, the histories and achievements of individuals and nations for complete substantiations of his prophecy. Stand with me upon the crumbling fragments of grandeur where the Hall of Wisdom once stood, and the thunders of eloquence were once heard. You remember well her intellectual supremacy, that her statesmen and rulers like Pericles were both orators and poets, that dramatists and historians still guage their inspiration from their Athenian prototypes, that her soldiers like Xenophen not only could lead their phalanxes to battle, but with a pen of a mighty classic could write the imortal history of the deeds of arms in which they themselves participated. But for what end was all this miracle of Grecian lore, and temporary success? True she flourished and mankind stood astonished at the sublimnity of her career. But where, now, is the glory of Greece? Gothic ignorance now dwells upon the ruins of oriental greatness and the grandeur of Greece is no more, except upon the scroll of fame. She had her opportunity to behold the Lamb of God, and failing to behold Him aright she has come to utter failure and loss.

Look at Rome as once she sent forth her conquering legions to the north, south, east and west planting Roman sovereignty in every land. You remember that she became the mistress of the world; that on her walls waved the flags of all nations. But where now is mighty Rome? She too has been thrown over the precipice of the powerful action of yesterday, and there remains nothing of her greatness but the magnificent ruins of her capital city. She too failed to behold aright the Lamb of God.

Throw your eye yet again upon the page of History. Look at the Jews. See them cursed, scathed and scattered, "A nation peeled and trodden down," crushed and trampled beneath the hoof of an unfeeling world; look at "the seven churches of Asia," and the cities in which they were found, their noiseless streets, hymnless temples, and desolate altars. When you remember that Jesus was tried by a Roman judge, condemned in the Grecian tongue and crucified at the instigation of the Hebrew race, then the sad failure and loss of one and all is easily accounted for.

Whether we look at Egypt and Tyre, Babylon and Nineveh, Jerusalem and Rome, Spain and France, Germany and Russia, the scene is the same to one and all who reject God. And what is true of nations is true of individuals also. Look at Herod, Pilate, Julian, Maximiam, Valerius and the principal actors in the Neronian and Diocletian persecutions—dark, gloomy and ghostly are all our recollections of their madness in failing to behold the Lamb of God aright. Being convinced of our need of Him, and seeing that irreparable is our fall, failure and loss if we do not look unto Jesus, beholding Him aright, then we urge you to come without a moment's delay, and Rapidly, rapidly with every one of us the shadows are changing upon the circuit of the dial. We all know something of our transitory nature, something of the sad discontinuity of human life. It will not be long at best until it will be "ashes to ashes and dust to dust with every one of us," and parting with all we lived to love and cherish here, if we fail to behold the Lamb of God and live, heaven and earth with all the regrets of defeated kindness will urge the expostulation. Why die unprepared to meet God? Come, beleaguered soul, look up and live. Jesus stands ready, anxious and willing to do all for you that you can even wish or will. "Behold the Lamb of God," and live.

Behold Him Now

NOEL MEMORIAL METHODIST CHURCH

The Noel Memorial Methodist Church, located at Herndon Avenue and Stephens Street, in one of the finest residence sections of the city of Shreveport, La., is carried by the Advocate this week celebrating the liquidation of the final indebtedness occasioned by the building of this, one of the best arranged and equipped church plants in the State, following the disastrous fire which destroyed the original building in September, 1925.

The original building was a gift from Mr. and Mrs. James S. Noel as a memorial to their departed son, James S. Noel, Jr., and was formally opened on February 12, 1913. The church organization was an outgrowth of the "Shreveport City Mission," to which the Rev. R. J. Harp was appointed by Bishop Seth Ward in December, 1906, and now numbers approximately 1300 on its membership roll. Successful pastorates have been had at Noel Memorial by R. J. Harp, J. G. Snelling, F. A. Downs, F. R. Hill, Jr., W. W. Armstrong, E. K. Means, R. W. Tucker, W. W. Drake, W. W. Holmes, W. C. Scott, Cleanth Brooks and the present incumbent, T. M. Brownlee.

Following the fire of 1925, the congregation rebuilt the building within the original walls and with but very few changes from the original plans, and by official action of the quarterly conference the name was changed from "J. S. Noel, Jr., Memorial M. E. Church, South," to "Noel Memorial M. E. Church, South," thus dedicating it to the founders as well as to the the son for whom it was first named. A bronze tablet is soon to be unveiled within the building carrying a brief history of the church together with the change of name.

The plant represents an investment of approximately $185,000, and is one of the best arranged and equipped, as well as being one of the most beautiful buildings in the city or State. The auditorium is particularly commodious and attractive and the Sunday school space permits of seven separate departments operating at the same time with each department having separate assembly rooms for worship and departmental programs.

Recently the final payment on the new plant was made and in celebration the pastor and official board arranged a banquet and one hundred and fifty men gathered in the spacious dining-room, where they were served a sumptuous dinner by the women of the church. This was also held as a "get-together" banquet for the men of the congregation and proved to be such an outstanding success that it will undoubtedly become an annual affair. Judge William C. Barnette presided as toastmaster and introduced the guests. Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, Dr. Henry T. Carley, presiding elder, and Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, president of Centenary College, were the speakers for the occasion.

Noel Memorial, from the beginning, has had a fine, steady growth and for some years it has ranked with the best churches in the connection. During the present year, the Sunday school, Woman's Missionary Society and other organizations have had an unusual growth and about one hundred fifty new members have been received into the church. The present pastor, Dr. T. M. Brownlee, is a Mississippi man, having transferred to Louisiana last fall from Capitol Street Church, Jackson. He has also had successful pastorates in Clarksdale and other important cities of his native State.

COMMENCEMENT AT McDONELL FRENCH MISSION SCHOOL

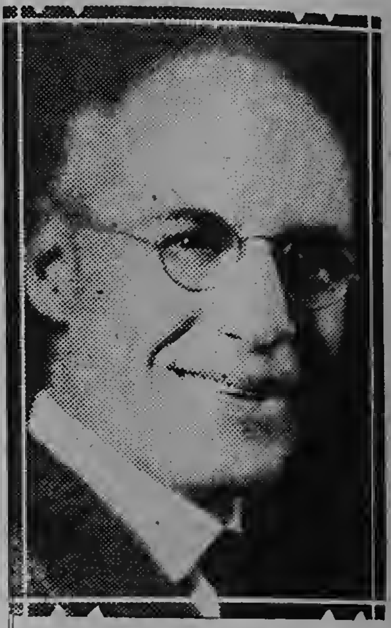
By Alvin P. Smith

The McDonell French Mission School has just closed out a very successful scholastic year. The last two weeks in May were given over to examinations and preparations for the commencement programs. In all school exercises the well-trained voices of the students are utilized and these last programs were agreeably filled with music. Realizing that these programs would be the last of the school year, teachers and pupils alike gave of their best in promoting and executing all events.

On Sunday morning, May 24, in the auditorium of the Houma First Methodist Church, Dr. D. B. Raulins, pastor of the Algiers Methodist Church, delivered the baccalaureate sermon. With the entire student body occupying the central tier, the large gathering filled all remaining space within the church. Aided by his experience as a teacher and his complete understanding of student life, Dr. Raulins gained and held the interest of all present, while he very ably endeavored to drive home a common sense message that could wisely be used by the entire congregation. On Tuesday night, May 26, in the same auditorium, the commencement exercises proper were held. Upon a garden-like platform, under a rose-entwined arch, the singers and speakers faced another happy looking assembly. The fathers, mothers, and friends of the students had driven in from the surrounding country in order to witness the last public appearance of the entire student body.

A piano solo, two choruses by the student body, one chorus by the girls, and the chorus by the boys constituted the musical program. On behalf of the school, Manny Barrios welcomed the gathering in a well thought out address, after which Mrs. J. A. Pharr, of Morgan City, told of her interest in the school and reviewed the past accomplishments of the institution in the community.

The principal address was made by Prof. N. P. Mitchell, Jr., of the Louisiana State University. In a strikingly whole-hearted way, he pleaded the cause of world peace and called the attention of the students to the fact that they, as future citizens and voters, could do much in carrying out such a Christlike aim. Rev. B. H. Andrews then distributed such awards and certificates as were earned by the students.



DR. T. M. BROWNLEE
Pastor Noel Memorial

In the afternoon of Thursday, May 28, an outdoor festival was held on the grounds of the school, beginning with the exhibition of the Evangeline Room and articles made and products grown by members of the student body. At 4 o'clock the platform program began with the dramatization of the parable of the Good Samaritan. Then again the musical talent of the students was put to a test when the operetta entitled "Mellilotte" was presented. The presentation was really remarkable considering the fact that not one of the participants could have been above 12 years of age.

The following day, Friday, the school year of 1930-31 was declared at an end and the students made their way happily home, to return, no doubt, just as happily when the school year opens again in September.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The session of the Baton Rouge District Conference at Ponchatoula, June 4 and 5, was one long to be remembered. Plans had been perfected for holding the conference at the Bluff Creek Camp Grounds, but owing to the fact that the extensive rebuilding program being carried out by the trustees and managers was not quite sufficiently advanced it was found necessary to change the place of meeting. Ponchatoula very graciously opened its doors to the conference and, in spite of the brief time allowed for preparation, exemplified beautifully that royal hospitality which has been so long a tradition of the Southland.

The Rev. J. H. Bowdon, pastor-host, was elected secretary of the body and ye Scribe was chosen as his assistant. The secretary performed well—working, as it were, with his left hand as host, while he wrought with his right hand as secretary. The assistant acted as pencil sharpener and sometimes interpreted to the left hand of the secretary that which his right hand had been doing.

The attendance, interest and spirit of the conference were fine. Our gracious presiding elder, Rev. L. W. Cain, allowed ample time for every speaker and for the discussion of every question. The fact that the conference extended through two full days did not affect the attendance adversely. Only a very few found it necessary to leave before the completion of the work of the conference. The attendance was exceptionally large both days.

Of special interest on the first day was the licensing of three fine young men to preach the gospel. These young men all expressed to the committee their purpose to complete their college work and enter the traveling connection. Their names are as follows: Albert Jerome Cain, the son of our presiding elder; William Willeroy Wells, son of Dr. F. L. Wells, of First Church, Baton Rouge, and Teddy Towndrow Howes, a fine young man from Hammond. It was a rare privilege to share with two such fathers as Brothers Cain and Wells the joyous office of welcoming their sons into the ministry.

The preaching of the conference was done by Dr. W. Angie Smith, of First Church, Shreveport. Dr. Smith brought three great messages to the conference as well as a brief address to the newly made preachers. The conference was greatly enriched in its spiritual tone by the spirit and ministry of Dr. Smith. Appropriate resolutions were adopted expressing the appreciation of the brethren for so fine a contribution to the conference and to the lives of its members.

Among the visitors attending the conference were: Rev. J. L. Decell, D.D.; Rev. J. G. Snelling, Rev. H. N. Brown, Rev. A. K. McLellan, and Rev. Robert Vaughn. These brethren brought the causes they represent before the conference in a fine way.

The following were elected as delegates and alternate delegates to the Annual Conference: Principals, Mrs. L. W. Cain, J. R. Abels, Mrs. A. M. Wynne, W. H. Underwood, K. I. Bean, Mrs. E. W. Chaney, W. S. Holmes, S. E. Cox, C. H. McEuen, Mrs. R. L. Clayton, A. A. McKnight, G. W. Nesom. Alternates, Mrs. L. N. Hoffpauir, Wiley Stafford, W. L. Haney, Mrs. R. S. Walton, Mrs. B. W. Waitman. It is noteworthy that Mrs. L. W. Cain has been chosen as a delegate each year during the four that she has resided within the bounds of the district.

This district conference has formed a fine climax to the others held by Brother Cain during his quadrennium on the district. It was a great conference and as such fitted very happily into Brother Cain's last year of four very strenuous and fruitful years of labor. The district has made great progress during these last years and no one has worked more diligently or more self-sacrificingly to achieve this progress than has Rev. L. W. Cain. The following paragraphs from resolutions adopted by the conference suggest the esteem in which Brother Cain is held by those who have worked with him as ministers and laymen:

"This has been a delightfully refreshing district conference and we hereby give expression of our thanks to our presiding elder, Rev. L. W. Cain, for planning such a splendid program, and for his courteous, efficient and genial guidance of the business of its sessions. We are thankful to God for the evident tokens of the presence of His Spirit helping us to let brotherly love continue among us.

"Our district has made most gratifying progress during the four years that Brother Cain has labored among us as our leader. We put on record our appreciation of his diligent efforts, his untiring labors, his unfailing interest in all that pertains to the temporal and spiritual welfare of the churches. We pray God to bless him and his family in all their work for the Kingdom of our Master.

"(Signed) W. C. Scott, F. L. Wells, C. E. McLean."

Too much could not be said in appreciation for the many kindnesses of the pastor and people of Ponchatoula nor for the ministry of those who appeared on the program of this most helpful conference.

CHARLES E. McLEAN,
District Scribe.

REV. BEVERLY CARRADINE, D.D.

By Rev. John F. Foster, D.D.

Some few weeks since, Dr. Carradine fell on death and in his death one of the most useful men in our ministry went from us.

The earlier part of his ministry was spent in the State of Mississippi, but in the early eighties he transferred to the Louisiana Conference, being stationed at Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, and later at old Carondelet Street Church, the forerunner of First Church, New Orleans.

His ministry was a most fruitful one, and in the pastorate, he was unusually successful. His gentle spirit and sincere manner won friends on all hands and opened hearts to him in a most remarkable manner. In the sick room he was at his best and shed sunshine and cheer, changing the atmosphere of the room, and frequently his coming would accomplish more than physician and medicine. He could adjust himself, adapting himself to all environments, as could few and not only imparted his own cheerful outlook on life, but brought His Lord to the bedside and left the patient cheered socially and spiritually. His was an unusual gift in this field of a pastor's life.

As a pulpit man, he was always optimistic, clear in his exposition of the Scripture and had a gift in getting hold of people and leading them to the Master.

I was a boy when I first met Dr. Carradine and he won me from the first and held me to the close of our association.

He was bold and courageous in his pulpit work and was willing to attempt things before which others paused, as was evidenced by his starting a campaign against the Louisiana lottery.

When he leveled his guns on the Lottery, all felt that it was a useless attack, that naught could be done, but Dr. Carradine went on just the same. Later, he accepted the Second Blessing concept of sanctification and became the leading apostle of that school of thought and while many of his former friends could not follow him in his views and exposition of Scripture and the positions he took, they all felt that he was sincere and devoted to his work.

The last few years of his life he was semi-invalided and fell on death in Chicago, some weeks since, his body being buried in Vicksburg, the scene of his early ministry, and where under God he led a successful pastorate.

His later life I knew little, but fondly remember him as a sincere and unusually successful servant of God who has gone to a rich reward.

RECREATIONAL MATERIALS AND METHODS

By E. O. Harbin, Author of "Phunology," etc.

Cokesbury Press, Nashville. 304 pages. $2.

"A new Harbin book is always an event in the play life of the Church. To young people and to leaders of young people Recreational Materials and Methods will bring an abundance of ideas.

"To preachers it will reveal a play program in keeping with Christian ideals. Its author is an ordained minister. He is a member of the staff of a large denominational Board of Christian Education. He knows the problems of the minister in the recreational field.

"In a way, this book is different from any other Harbin book. It satisfies the exacting requirements of the new science of play-time leadership. But it is also intensely practical. It is chockful of ideas. It is well printed, well bound.

"In a way, this book is different from any other book on recreation. It is the first bound book to present materials and methods tested in other fields and apply them to the needs of the Church. And the larger portion of the book is devoted to presenting programs and methods peculiar to the direct requirements of the Church.

"An immediate and hearty recognition is predicted for this book. It will prove a godsend to the Church which seeks to project a recreational program for its young people and adults and for the community in which it is located."

PERSONALITY IN ITS TEENS

By W. Ryland Boorman

Macmillan, $2.50.

"Anyone puzzled and troubled over what goes on in the skull of a boy in his teens—one of his own or boys of these ages under his care—will find this book most satisfying informative. Here these boys speak for themselves under as favorable conditions as could be arranged for obtaaining an inside view of their reactions to their differing circumstances and accounts of their private ideas concerning themselves. Some three hundred participated and twenty of them, selected to cover a wide diversity of dispositions, contribute particularly full and illuminating portraits of themselves.

"Growng up is trying work anyway and it has not become any easier in this post-war period for either the boys or their parents. Father and son sessions together with the material in this book serving to loosen up both their tongues, it is perhaps not over optimistic to say, might tighten the bond between them and clear up many a boy's future."

The Conference and district lay leaders will be glad to assist in holding inspirational meetings at strategic points with special emphasis on the benevolences. Present conditions may be discouraging, but the cause of the Church is a challenge to spirituality and liberality under all conditions.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS

By Rev. John W. Ramsey

Is censorship fundamentally right? Is it effective in controlling certain evils of the present day which are wrongly influencing the lives of our young people? Many think so; hence, committees and boards of censorship in our cities whose duties involve the censoring of theatrical plays and the films of the movies. If such scrutiny is necessary in these instances, should not a censorship be established for those publishing houses that are flooding the land with pernicious and impure literature? If this should be done, would it include the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South? There is at least one man who seems to think so. In his "Creole Cumbo," published in the Sunday editions of the Commercial Appeal, Dr. S. A. Steel says: "The imprimatur of the Cokesbury Press ought to be a guarantee that the book that bears it is all right; but since I saw Bob Ingersol's lectures in the show window of the Methodist Publishing House in Dallas, I have been in the habit of looking in the mouth of the literary horses they offer for sale." The writer has seen many books from our publishing house on display at the sessions of our Conferences that were very objectionable and which, in his opinion, should not be offered for sale by the publishing house of a great religious denomination whose chief mission is to carry the gospel of refinement, culture, and salvation to all the world.

The writer of these paragraphs is of the deliberate opinion that college fraternities should not be encouraged or even allowed on the campus of any of our Church's educational institutions. They promote class distinctions and foster worldly amusements, such as dancing, card playing, etc., and sometimes drinking. Where these fraternities exist at our church schools it is true that such things are not knowingly permitted on the campus or about the college buildings; but the management of these institutions cannot but know that the members of the fraternities do their dancing, etc., in the hotels and other places in college towns. A press dispatch states: "On the information of Shirly O'Tool, of Ann Arbor, Mich., who admitted to the police that he had driven Joseph Loony to deliver liquor at five fraternity houses at the University of Michigan, dry agents made raids which resulted in the arrest of seventy-nine students and caused the closing of the houses."

Intercollegiate athletics, especially football, is at present receiving more or less—who will say that it should not be more? —adverse criticism. One of the strangest things connected with intercollegiate and professional athletics is that some preachers will attend such games on a week day, and on the following Sunday enter their pulpits and in thunderous tones denounce gambling on horse racing! Why don't they level their guns at gambling on athletic games? Is it because they fear their guns will back-fire or have they evolved such a system of mental and spiritual gymnastics as to enable them to blink on college and professional athletics?

Some are telling us that if one of our church schools should abolish intercollegiate athletics such action would reduce its enrollment; but would it? The writer knows of one religious institution which does not permit such games, and it has as large an enrollment, if not larger, than any church school of similar grade. Columbia and Loyola Universities have discarded altogether intercollegiate games, the former being one of the largest institutions of learning in the nation. If such institutions can safely and with profit discard these games, can any one tell us why our church schools should not do the same? Do not our college authorities know that there are thousands of religious parents all over the land who are looking for an institution of learning where they can feel that their children are safe from demoralizing influences?

In a recent article, President Clarence M. Dannelly said: "Kentucky Wesleyan College, by unanimous recommendation of the faculty and by the formal action of the Board of Managers, announces the discontinuance of football as an intercollegiate activity, and in its place will substitute a program of required phyical education for every student in college . . . Circumstances incident to football itself necessitates its discontinuance . . . Football is an entertainment primarily and does not contribute largely to the development of students or even of college spirit . . . . It is believed that football tends to create an atmosphere out of harmony with the higher ideals of scholarship and character . . . . This institution is convinced that intercollegiate football cannot be justified. Football requires specialized attention on a relatively small number of students. Most other students take their physical training by proxy." As a matter of emphasis, I place one sentence in this statement in black type: "It is believed that football tends to create an atmosphere out of harmony with the higher ideals of scholarship and character." If our colleges are engaged in the production of beef no doubt they are profitably engaged while encouraging football; but if the high ideals of scholarship and character are the legitimate achievements of collegiate training, our colleges should abolish, and that quickly, all football activities, according to President Clarence M. Dannelly, of the Kentucky Wesleyan College.

Thomas S. Gates, president of the University of Pennsylvania, has given other colleges an example of action instead of talk in the much-discussed matter of athletic tail wagging the academic dog. President Gates has set "Old Penn" in a class by itself. He decreed that those ten and twenty thousand dollar coaches must become members of the faculty and receive the same salaries as teachers. There will be a department of physical education under a dean, and sports and games will be made to reach all students all the year. Spring football training will be abolished as will extensive football preparation and practices. It is to be earnestly hoped that this good work, once started, will spread to all colleges and universities, especially our church institutions where, as the writer believes, such things are out of place and are inconsistent with the teachings of the Christian religion.

The Path Finder pertinently remarks: "It was during and after the World War that thrones began to shake as in an earthquake and kings to topple over. And it is still going on. America was considered safe, but the tremors are now shaking things here, and one king shows signs of coming down. That is the football coach. At the University of Pennsylvania he has been degraded to the level of a faculty member with a regular faculty salary, and that action has met with such favorable comment that colleges all over the country are thinking about rebelling the same way. It looks as if these twenty-five and fifty thousand dollar football scholars who have been looking down on ten thousand dollar college presidents and five thousand dollar professors of Latin and economics will soon have the same kind of installment collectors coming around as regular teachers do. It will be an awful drop, but these are not good days for the king business."

Senator J. Ham Lewis recently said: "American colleges are doing as little as possible for the education of students and all of everything for sports and amusements."

So may the good work continue till every intercollegiate game, especially football, is driven from the campus of every college and university in the land, and the Lord our Christ is exalted as the head of every institution of learning, especially our church schools and colleges. Amen!

WASHINGTON'S BELIEF IN A SUPREME BEING SHOWN BY HIS OWN WRITINGS

The First President Had Strong Faith in God and Encouraged Religious Practices Among the People at Large

Occasionally statements are made that George Washington was not a religious man. Such statements, usually emanating from obscure sources, are easily refuted by reading Washington's own writings, according to the Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

George Washington was reared in a religious home. "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old, he will not depart from it," was an injunction believed in and practiced by the parents of our first President.

John Marshall, the great Chief Justice of the United States, said of Washington: "Without making ostentatious professions of religion, he was a sincere believer in the Christion faith, and truly a devout man."

At the age of 22, Washington, in a letter to Governor Dinwiddie of Virginia, dated at Great Meadows, said: "We have been six days without flour, and there is none upon the road for our relief that we know of. We have not provisions of any sort enough in camp to serve us two days. Once before we would have been four days without provisions, if Providence had not sent a trader from the Ohio to our relief."

All through his illustrious life Washington referred to the Providence of God. In a letter to his brother, written a few days after Braddock's defeat, he said:

Strong Belief in God

"By the all-powerful dispensations of Providence I have been protected beyond all human probability, or expectation; for I had four bullets through my coat, and two horses shot under me, yet escaped unhurt, although death was levelling my companions on every side of me."

In a letter to Governor Trumbull of Connecticut, in 1775, he said:

"As the cause of our common country calls us both to an active and dangerous duty, I trust that Divine Providence, which wisely orders the affairs of men, will enable us to discharge it with fidelity and successs."

About the same time he wrote General Gage, of the British Army, in answer to a letter from him: "May the God to whom you then appeal, judge between America and you. Under His Providence, those who influenced the Councils of America, and all the other inhabitants of the United Colonies at the hazard of their lives, are determined to hand down to posterity those just and invaluable privileges, which they received from their ancestors."

In a circular to his officers in 1775, Washington said: "* * * The success of such an enterprise depends, I well know, upon the All-Wise Dispenser of events, and it is not within the reach of human wisdom to foretell the issue."

A leter to Joseph Reed, January, 1776, reads: "* * * How it will end, God, in His great goodness, will direct. I am thankful for His protection to this time."

During the same month he wrote General Schuyler: "* * * That the Supreme Disposer of every good may bestow health, strength, and spirit, on you and your army, is the fervent wish of your most affectionate and obedient servant."

Replying to a communication from the General Assembly of Massachusetts, after the evacuation of Boston, he said: "* * * May that Being who is powerful to save, and in whose hands is the fate of nations, look down with an eye of tender pity and compassion upon the whole of the United Colonies; may He continue to smile on their councils and arms, and crown them with success, whilst employed in the cause of virtue and mankind. May this distressed colony and its capital, and every part of this wide continent, through His divine favor, be restored to more than their former lustre and once happy state, and have peace, liberty, and safety, secured upon a solid, permanent and lasting foundation."

In expectation of an attack by the combined British forces, Washington, on July 2, 1776, issued the following order: "The time is now near at hand which must probably determine whether Americans are to be freemen or slaves; whether they are to have any property they can call their own; whether their houses and farms are to he pillaged and destroyed, and they consigned to a state of wretchedness, from which no human efforts will probably deliver them. The fate of unborn millions will now depend, under God, on the courage and conduct of this army. Our cruel and unrelenting enemy leaves us no choice but a brave resistance or the most abject submission. This is all that we can expect. We have, therefore, to resolve to conquer or die. Our own country's honor calls upon us for a vigorous and manly exertion, and if we now shamefully fail, we shall become infamous to the whole world. Let us rely upon the goodness of the cause and the aid of the Supreme Being, in whose hands victory is, to animate and encourage us to great and noble actions."

Act of Providence

From Morristown, N. J., July 4, 1777, he wrote to General Armstrong: "The evacuation of Jersey at this time is a peculiar mark of Providence, as the inhabitants have an opportunity of securing their harvests of ha yand grain, the latter of which would, in all probability, have undergone the same fate with many farmhouses, had it been ripe enough to take fire. The distress of many of the inhabitants, who were plundered not only of their effects, but of their provision of every kind, was such, that I sent down wagonloads of meat and flour to supply their present wants."

Commenting on the surrender of Burgoyne, he wrote: "Should Providence be pleased to crown our arms in the course of the campaign, with one more fortunate stroke, I think we shall have no great cause for anxiety respecting the future designs of Britain. I trust all will be well in His good time."

Writing to Landon Carter, of Virginia, he uttered this trusting prophecy: "I flatter myself that a superintending Providence is ordering everything for the best, and that, in due time, all will end well."

At Valley Forge

Valley Forge, May 30, 1778, was the date line of a letter which read: "To paint the distresses and perilous situation of this army, in the course of last winter, for want of clothes, provisions, and almost every other necessary essential to the well-being, I may say existence of an army, would require more time and an abler pen than mine; nor, since our prospects have so miraculously brightened, shall I attempt it, or even bear it in remembrance, further than as a memento of what is due to the Great Author of all the care and good that have been extended in relieving us in difficulties and distress."

To Benjamin Harrison, Virginia, December 30, 1778, he wrote:

"Providence has heretofore taken us up when all other means and hopes seemed to be departing from us. In this I will confide."

In acknowledging the congratulations of the Continental Congress on his success at Yorktown, Washington said: "I take particular pleasure in acknowledging, that the interposing hand of Heaven, in the various instances of our extensive preparations for this operation, have been most conspicuous and remarkable."

In his farewell address to the armies of the United States, the old warrior said: "A contemplation of the complete attainment (at a period earlier than could have been expected), of the object for which we contended, against so formidable a power, can not but inspire us with astonishment and gratitude. The disadvantageous circumstances, on our part, under which the war was undertaken, can never be forgotton. The singular interpositions of Providence, in our feeble condition, were such as could scarcely escape the attention of the most unobserving."

Inaugural Address

Washington was inaugurated President of the United States, April 30, 1789. In his inaugural address made in New York, he said, among other things:

"Such being the impressions under which I have, in obedience to the public summons, repaired to the present station, it would be peculiarly improper to omit, in this first official act, my fervent supplications to that Almighty Being who rules over the universe—who presides in the councils of nations—and whose providential aids can supply every human defect—that his benediction may consecrate to the liberties and happiness of the people of the United States, a government instituted by themselves for these essential purposes; any may enable every instrument employed in its administration, to execute with success the functions allotted to his charge. In tendering this homage to the Great Author of every public and private good, I assure myself that it expresses your sentiments not less than my own; nor those of my fellow citizens at large less than either. No people can be bound to acknowledge and adore the invisible Hand which conducts the affairs of men, more than the people of the United States. Every step by which they have advanced to the character of an independent nation, seems to have been disinguished by some token of providential agency. And in the important revolution just accomplished, in the system of their united government, the tranquil deliberation and voluntary consent of so many distinct communities, from which the event has resulted, can not be compared with the means by which most governments have been established, without some return of pious gratitude, along with an humble anticipation of the future blessings, which the past seems to presage. These reflections, arising out of the present crisis, have forced themselves too strongly on my mind to be suppressed. * * *

"Having thus imparted to you my sentiments, as they have been awakened by the occasion which brings us together, I shall take my present leave; but not without resorting once more to the benign Parent of the human race, in humble supplication, that since He has been pleased to favor the American people with opportunities for deliberating in perfect tranquility, and dispositions for deciding with unparalleled unanimity, on a form of government for the securing of their union, and the advancement of their happiness; so His Divine blessing may be equally conspicuous in the enlarged views, the temperate consultations and the wise measures on which the success of this government must depend."

TWO YOUNG MEN

Ten months before his untimely death he led his sweetheart of a neighboring community to the holy altars of matrimony. Their young lives were blended into one and he labored for and dreamed of a future that would be resplendent with joy and devotion.

Some day young and old will come to realize that "the gospel of Jesus Christ is the power of God unto salvation"—and the only power of economic, social and spiritual redemption. It has been written in words of Revelation and in the history of the race, but multitudes have been slow of heart and unwilling to learn. Likewise many have refused to read the signs that are stained with blood and bordered with shame, which prove that disregarding the claims of Christ and venturing into the ways of ease, speculation and sin carries inevitable defeat.

These two young men speak in unmistakable terms to the youth of their day: "We set before you this day the way of life and death, choose life." The first, from the shadows of a blighted career; and the second, from the sunny highroad of faith and honor.

REV. J. R. JONES PASSED TO HIS ETERNAL REWARD LAST SUNDAY

Rev. J. R. Jones, father of Rev. Claude P. Jones, pastor Biloxi, Miss., and a superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, died at the Methodist Hospital at Hattiesburg, Miss., Sunday, June 14, 1931.

The funeral services were held from the Court Street Church, Hattiesburg, Monday afternoon, with Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Jackson District, in charge. Revs. L. L. Roberts, J. A. Interment was at Hattiesburg.

A number of brother preachers and many other friends were present to pay their respects to the departed and to comfort Rev. C. P. Jones, his son, who is the only surviving member of his immediate family, Mrs. Jones, the devoted wife and mother, having died in 1928.

John Robert Jones, of the Forest District, was admitted on trial into the Mississippi Conference at its eighty-sixth session, which was held in Vicksburg in 1899, Bishop W. W. Duncan presiding. He was ordained deacon at McComb in 1901 by Bishop H. C. Morrison; and elder at Meridian in 1903 by Bishop Joseph S. Key.

He was a mature man when admitted and was superintendent of education for Newton County just prior to his joining the Conference. His first charge was South Warren, in the Vicksburg District. METHODIST ORPHANAGE
JACKSON, MISS

Thus it is seen that he filled some of the largest responsibilities in his Conference. He was made presiding elder of the Jackson District, where he promoted the erection of the present commodious district parsonage, for his tenth year in the Conference. Bishop Morrison appointed him to the Jackson District; Bishop Atkins to the Seashore; Bishop Kilgo to the Vicksburg; and Bishop Candler to the Hattiesburg. John R. Jones was a loyal Methodist preacher of the gospel, a sympathetic pastor, a wise and capable presiding elder. He was a true friend, a man of conviction and courage, and stood for the best things in civic, social, and spiritual life.

He represented his Conference in three General Conferences: 1918, 1922 and 1926. He served his Annual Conference in many capacities as member of boards and committees, and was a member of the General Hospital Board.

Upon the death of his devoted wife in 1928, he himself began to go down physically under the great weight of sorrow and disability that was slowly but surely consuming his strength. After his superannuation at Philadelphia in 1928 he made his home in the parsonage home of his only son, Rev. C. P. Jones, who, with his wife, tenderly and constantly cared for him. A few weeks prior to his death he went to the Methodist Hospital in Hattiesburg for treatment. Here at the same place where his dear wife not many months before had passed away, he heard the final summons of his Saviour to come up higher, and fell on sleep about six o'clock in the evening of June 14.

Farewell, our brother, but not forever; we shall meet thee in the bye and bye where partings are no more.

PROTECTION
AGAINST OLD AGE

Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Rutledge, Seventh Avenue Meridian, Miss., were painfully, though not seriously, injured when their automobile left the highway while they were en route to the Young People's Conference at Brookhaven on Monday, June 6. The injured were carried to a Jackson hospital, where, after treatment, they were carried to the home of Professor John Rutledge, a son, at Pocahontas. We are thankful that the injuries were no more serious and trust that these faithful workers will soon be able to resume their loved employ.

Dr. and Mrs. Alfred Franklin Smith, Nashville, Tenn., have the affectionate sympathy of the Church in the death of their daughter, Mrs. Mildred Smith Loud, who died in St. Louis, Mo., on Monday, June 6. Dr. Smith was pastor at Galloway Memorial, Jackson, and many Mississippians recall the two lovely daughters, Mildred and Hortense. Both of these have now passed away. The gospel of comfort he so sympathetically has preached to others will prove sufficient to sustain him and his devoted wife in this hour of sorrow.

Arthur Davis Little, son of Rev. and Mrs. Otto Little, Caseyville, Miss., died in Los Angeles, California, Tuesday, June 9. He was married last summer to Miss Ruth Patterson, Wesson, Miss. Their young lives were happily united and they were looking forward to many years. Arthur was a young man of exemplary character and strong ability. His wife, father and mother, a brother, Prof. W. W. Little, Pensacola, Fla., and a sister, Miss Nannie Little, Wesson, Miss., survive. To these and other loved ones we extend deepest sympathy.

ADVOCATE SUBSCRIPTION CAMPAIGN RESULTS

Bishop Denny and Bishop Dobbs met with the Executive Committee of the Publishing Committee of the Advocate which held a session at the office during the Missionary Council in February.

In order to meet current expenses and be prepared to pay the bank $3000 which would be due June 1, it was concluded that from February 24 to May 15, each district would be requested to secure 100 new cash subscriptions. Of course, any subscriptions sent in prior to February 24 was not to be credited on this allotment of 100.

Notwithstanding the time was extended the number of cash subscribers was not realized and, of course, some friends had to assume some personal responsibility to help re-finance the loan with the bank. However, were it not for the previous indebtedness the Advocate would be more than paying its way—if the lean months of summer could prove replenishing to our subscribers' list. But the debt is on us and the pastors and people in the three Conferences can greatly help by seeing that their district quota is yet completed and where it is, to keep on helping.

The list below is the report of actual new cash subscriptions received at the office. Some have yet to send in lists which they accepted responsibility for securing and when they are sent in due credit will be given. From now on it will be "Carry on Advocate Effort" which will be without quotas, but every one requested to assist as far as they can. The manager and editor sincerely thank everyone who has helped the Advocate in this time of need. Those who have not completed their quotas, we feel sure, are loyal and faithful and we can but believe the good work will go on.

Credit new cash subscriptions since February 24 are as follows:

ANDREW JEFFERSON DUNCAN, the subject of this sketch, was born in Tippah County, Miss., November 2, 1854, and under the guiding hand of godly parents he grew up to manhood. Brother Duncan grew up on the farm where the glittering rays of the sunshine and the gentle breezes of the morning mingled themselves together and assisted in the formation of those great godly virtues of purity, honesty, and truthfulness as ever being the motto of his life. He was a devoted father, a good neighbor, and loyal to his church. He made a practice of paying his assessment the first of the year. He was modest and unassuming in his demeanor, a man of faith and prayer, his children grew up around the family altar. Brother Duncan was married in 1874 to Miss Francis Rainey. To this union were born three children. The youngest died in infancy, and the other two, Rev. W. N. Duncan, presiding elder of the Columbus district of the North Mississippi Conference, and Mr. R. F. Duncan of Memphis, Tenn., survive. In 1881, his wife went to her reward and left her husband and two sons to mourn her going, and in December, 1884, Brother Duncan was married to Mrs. Lucy J. Duncan. To them were born three children. Two of these died in infancy, and the other, Carl L. Duncan, of Memphis, and one brother, Mr. J. F. Duncan, of Earle, Arkansas, and a step-daughter, Mrs. Helen Dawkins, of Eads, Tenn., survive him, his last wife having died February 17, 1928.

At the age of seventeen, Brother Duncan was converted and joined the Methodist Church. For more than forty years he served in some official capacity in his church. About thirty-five years ago he moved to Memphis and connected himself with what is now Union Avenue Methodist Church. The last few months of his life were spent with his son, the Rev. W. N. Duncan, of Columbus. A few days before his going his son brought him to the Methodist Hospital for treatment, where, on Sunday, May 31, 1931, he passed away to be at rest.

Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. Mack Jenkins, assisted by the writer, and his remains were laid to rest at old Mullin's Chapel to await the resurrection. Another good man in Israel has fallen.

REV. R. S. LAWSON.

Memphis, Tenn.

The subject of this sketch, MRS. MARY DU BOSE DAVIS, oldest daughter of Rev. H. Dubose, was born in Eufaula, Ala., June 17, 1848, and departed this life from the home of her oldest daughter, Mrs. E. F. Bell, Laurel, Miss., April 10, 1931. In her seventh year she joined the Methodist Church and lived a most consistent and loyal member. In her early young womanhood she was happily married to Mr. A. J. Davis, to which union there were born two sons and three daughters, all of whom are still living to mourn her going, save the husband and father, who passed to his reward some thirty years ago. During the years of her widowhood she made her home with her son-in-law, Mr. E. F. Bell, in which she was given every consideration and she added her part to make home happy and useful. The writer visited her often during her last illness and found her cheerful and hopeful. The Christ whom she had so faithfully served failed her not in the last hour. Three brothers and three sisters mourn her passing with her children, Bishop H. M. Dubose, of Nashville, Tenn.; O. E. Dubose of Beaumont, Texas; W. J. Dubose, of Pacomia, California; Mrs. W. G. Gray, of Waynesboro, Miss.; Mrs. W. J. Holland, of Berkeley, California, and Miss Alice Dubose, of Los Angeles, Calif.

A large and sympathetic congregation assembled in the First Methodist Church, Saturday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, for the funeral, which was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. R. H. Clegg, of Hattiesburg.

Rev. L. L. Roberts, Rev. W. H. Lewis, of Hattiesburg; Rev. F. B. Ormand, of Ellisville; Rev. Mr. Higginbotham, and Rev. J. A. Wells, of Laurel, acted as pallbearers. Interment was in the Hickory Grove Cemetery. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors."

W. J. FERGUSON.

We have sustained a great loss to our church at Sherard, Miss., in the death of JAMES L. McKEOWN, a true Christian gentleman, loved by all who know him. He leaves the wife and one daughter. He was the son of our beloved brother, L. A. McKeown, the pioneer Methodist preacher of the Mississippi delta. The funeral service was conducted by the pastor, assisted by Revs. V. C. Curtis and J. J. Garner. Interment was at Clarksdale, Miss. A host of friends in attendance at the service evidenced the great esteem in which he was held.

WALTER W. JONES,
Pastor.

REV. H. B. PATE, an honored local preacher of our church, died at Water Valley, on April 27, and was buried at Goshen M. E. Church, South, on the following day. The funeral was conducted by his pastor, at the North Main Street M. E. Church, South, assisted by Rev. E. H. Cunningham and Rev. W. L. Robinson. Rev. Mr. Pate was married June 3, 1878, and six children now survive him: Nettie, Fanny, Laura, Johny, Bertha and Oscar. He was licensed to preach at the Elm Baptist Church on July 23, 1898, and in 1898 came into our church as a local preacher. Brother Pate was a true servant of God, who lived a life of spotless purity among men and preached with power and fervor.

GROVER C. SCHWARTZ,
Pastor.

On Thursday, May 14, word was passed from home to home throughout Avoyelles parish that "MOTHER HARDIE" had quietly moved from the old Billington home to a mansion in Heaven, and wherever the news went there were wet cheeks and dimmed eyes, for there was never a soul who was more beloved than "Mother Hardie." in eighteen days, she would have passed her eighty-fifth milestone. Born of pionerr parents, her father being Martin Billington of Liverpool, England, and moving to the Bay Hills in her childhood, she has had her part in every advance the church has made in nearly seventy years, and her mantle has in recent years fallen on the shoulders of her children who are worthily carrying on the work she started. Of her ten children six survive her and emulate her faith in a living God, their father, James Hardie, a Scotchman, who spent much of his life at sea, having left them the aroma of a good name, but having as a matter of course had little to do with their religious training. Sister Hardie's greatest joy was in "her church" and Sunday school, in the Bay Hills, where she laid deep foundations for the building of Christian character, under the spreading live oaks and magnolias, long before there was a church building to house them.

Her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Evergreen, La., on May 16, 1931, by Rev. C. C. Wier, assisted by Rev. R. A. Cross and Rev. Mr. Hazlewood.

REV. W. G. EVANS.

FROM HODGE, LA.

On May 18 we began a revival meeting in the Union Church, at Hodge, La., and closed on the 27th. The meeting was a success from the very beginning, large congregations attended the service and on several occasions the church was taxed to the limit of its capacity. On one evening a large delegation from Jonesboro attended, bringing with them an orchestra of several instruments, and gave us some fine music. On the morning of the closing day we held an old-fashioned love feast, which was much enjoyed, especially by the older people of the congregation, who can remember when such services were practiced frequently in the churches. The young people also enjoyed it as something new to them, and many of them entered into the spirit of the service like veterans. It is our opinion that the church would do well to revive this fine old service.

Mr. Henry G. Riser of Ruston was in charge of the singing and rendered fine service as song leader and soloist. From the very beginning he captured the congregation by his fine personality and splendid talents. His work with the children and young people was especially good, and from the first he had a bevy of children with him all the time. He had so endeared himself to them that on the closing day of the meeting the children gave him a handkerchief and sock shower and a table in the church was literally piled high with these gifts. Any pastor needing the services of a song leader and worker among young people would make no mistake in using this splendid young man.

QUESTIONS OF IMPORTANCE ANSWERED BY MRS. B. W. LIPSCOMB

Will Bible Study Books, by Grace Saxe, receive credit?

"In regard to Grace Saxe's books, I would say that we have not said that a society studying these books could not get credit toward the standard of excellence as they have done in the past. We do not endorse the books in any cordial way. They do not serve the purpose that we wish Bible Study to serve for the Woman's Missionary Society, and they are not listed among our accredited books, but we have never failed to give credit for them. I think the time is coming to do that, as the time is coming to develop inexpensive books. It would be much better to have the women use some of the pamphlets that are coming out in connection with the Spiritual Life groups than to use these books of Grace Saxe. 'The Challenge of Change' will not be taught until autumn. The book on Korea will be ready at that time, but I am hoping that 'The Challenge of Change' will be the first study. The 'Helps for Leaders' are not ready on either of these books yet. In fact, the book on Korea is not off the press. 'The Challenge of Change' will be taught in the summer schools."

We are hoping that many of our women will attend one of these schools at Mount Sequoyah, Ark., June 30, to July 11; Lake Junaluska, N. C., July 15-28. For information, write Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, Doctors' Building, Nashville, Tenn., or Dr. E. H. Rawlings, same address.

LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT MEETING

The district conference of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Lake Charles district, Louisiana Conference, was held at Many, Thursday, May 21, with Mrs. J. N. McDonald, district secretary, presiding.

The meeting was opened with a hymn, "The Kingdom Coming," followed by a prayer led by Bro. Maskburn.

A hearty welcome was given by Mrs. S. L. Carroll, president of Many auxiliary, in which she tendered to the visitors the keys to the hearts of the Many women and stressed the value of friendship among the members of the auxiliaries.

Mrs. Jones, of Leesville, responded beautifully; closing her remarks with a quotation from Edgar Guest.

The devotional, a message of "Love and Service," Phil. 11 chapter, was given by Mrs. W. T. Cumingham of Natchitoches. Mrs. Robert Jackson then sang "The House by the Side of the Road."

Time was then given for the recognition of delegates and visitors: Many, Leesville, Merryville, Lucky Grove, Gueydan, Natchitoches, Hornbeck and Mansfield. We were glad to have with us Mrs. S. J. Williams of Many, district, secretary of the Baptist W. M. U.

Miss Ora Hooper, our district "rural worker," gave a most instructive talk on the importance of the rural work in every community, and urged the women to put forth every effort toward the advancement of the cause. Miss Hooper has planned the work carefully. She gave six means by which the work may be promoted: zone work, Gibson division, daily vacation Bible schools, survey work and prayer.

Mrs. Henry and Mrs. W. S. Mitchell gave the report of the annual conference held at Baton Rouge. This was followed by a very interesting playlet given by the Natchitoches auxiliary, stressing publicity in church as well as club work. Our pastor, Bro. J. E. Selfe, welcomed the delegates and visitors to our city, and made the announcements for the remainder of the day.

The noon hour was a delightful time of feasting and fellowship. A most tempting luncheon was served at the Lion's club hall by the Many auxiliary assisted by the young girls of the church.

The afternoon session opened by singing "Sweet Hour of Prayer," and the afternoon devotional was given by Mrs. C. E. Roberts of Leesville, Isaiah, 35 chapter, stressing happiness and the sunshine of Christian life.

A quartette from Leesville, composed of Miss Mattie Rose Fergerson, Mrs. H. E. Werner, Mrs. D. G. Allen and Mrs. Verien McClure, sang, after which Mrs. W. T. Cunningham of Natchitoches brought us the "Quiet Hour" taken from the first chapter af Mark. A very touching explanation of Spiritual Cultivation was given by Mrs. W. S. Mitchell. Mrs. Palmer of Natchitoches presented very ably the unfinished work in Mission fields, giving facts and information and needs of foreign and home countries.

Preceding the offertory, Miss Sue Lyn Carroll gave a well chosen reading.

Mrs. J. F. McCoy presented the French work at the Houma Mission in a very interesting manner, after which the Rev. J. F. McCoy sang a French song. The presidents of the different auxiliaries of the district were then asked to make reports of their plans for the year's work.

Leesville auxiliary extended a cordial invitation to the district to meet with them next year.

Mrs. McDonald, our efficient secretary, expressed her appreciation of the co-operation of her co-workers.

Dr. Henry Harper, of Lake Charles, a guest of the meeting, was called upon and responded with a most interesting talk. Mrs. Harper told of the hospitality of the people of South Louisiana and what we could gain from them. Afternoon session closed with a few appropriate remarks by the Rev. J. F. Waltman of Merryville.

At the close of the afternoon session, the delegates visited the park at historic old Fort Jesup and other places of interest.

A buffet supper was served at the home of Mrs. O. E. Williams.

The evening session was opened by singing "Holy, Holy, Holy." Prayer was led by Rev. J. M. Pate, pastor of the Many Baptist Church. After the offering, the Misses Williams rendered a musical number on trumpet, saxophone and piano. Junior work was ably presented by Mrs. Henry Harper, of Lake Charles. She said, "The home, church, school, and community should co-operate in this great work." Her strong point was—we should think more about the boys and girls than the organizations.

Mr. Hadnut, of Leesville, favored us with the always beautiful song, "My Task," accompanied by Mrs. Jones.

Rev. J. F. McCoy, pastor of the Leesville church, gave the evening message.

LA FIESTA DE LOS ANGELES

La Fiesta de Los Angeles, 150th anniversary celebration of the California city to extend from September 4 to 13, is to be the occasion of most impressive and beautiful religious services, according to plans now maturing.

The scene of the Protestant services will be Hollywood Bowl. They will be held on the afternoon of Sunday, September 6. The famous Bowl, whose marvelous acoustics make possible the perfect rendering of the "Symphonies Under the Stars," seats 35,000; and persons in all of those, of course, will hear the addresses and music.

You'll Find a Complete Line of "KEN - WEL"
GOLF-TENNIS-BASEBALL
Equipment at
D. H. HOLMES CO.
LIMITED

It is the intention, however, to have a national radio broadcast. To measure up to the opportunity for sending out a historic message, some speaker of international distinction is to be secured, according to the present purpose.

Likewise as to singers and instrumentalists who will be engaged to render the memorable sacred concert—they are to be the greatest artists obtainable. Happily, many of the nation's outstanding performers live in or near Los Angeles, and it is already indicated they will be glad to donate their services to such a splendid cause.

One of the features will be a tremendous chorus, the greatest ever assembled in the West, it is said. A mighty volume of melody will sing through the Bowl, to be carried on the air to the farthest bounds of the nation.

The theme of the 150th anniversary is sufficiently significant, it is believed, to inspire musical compositions of the highest order. There is not the least doubt in the minds of planners that the vesper service for Hollywood Bowl will give to the world some very great new music.

All realize that the city of Los Angeles has had a history that is distinctive and, in some respects, illustrious. Although the Catholic Church launched the pueblo and guided its spiritual career in the early stages, Protestantism has taken a great part in the later development. It is the celebration of these chapters that will create in Hollywood Bowl a matchless scene and series of effects, which will lend the necessary spiritual background to the fiesta.

HEADACHES

"If I have the headache or feel the need of a purgative, I take Black-Draught," says Mr. Edgar Gamble, of 114 Fowler Ave., Hopkinsville, Ky. "It is easy to take and quick to relieve. I used to have dull headaches. My eyes would burn and when I would stoop over I seemed to turn blind. This isn't much of a good feeling when one has to work, and I have had to work hard in my time, being a timber man. This work takes me from home a good deal and one never likes to get sick, especially away from home. I found the best way to avoid this was to take an occasional dose of Black-Draught, and keep the system cleansed." FBA-8

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Our school at Mount Olive closed with thirty-nine credits. Mrs. W. H. Watkins taught "Religious Education of Adults," Miss Doris Alford taught "Worship" and J. C. Chambers taught "Christian Education in the Local Church." This is the best school we have had and is the fifth one. Collins, Magee and Mount Olive co-operated. Prentiss had a number present for two days, and Bassfield had representatives one day. It was regretted that these could not continue. The fine spirit of co-operation between these fine people is most wholesome and helpful. Four pastors were present in the school. Rev. W. M. Williams has a home department of 100 members and his presence was a decided contribution to the school. The thoughtfulness of people of Mount Olive to the comfort of the faculty was very much appreciated. It was a lovely and most encouraging week in the work of Christian education.

Sunday School Day offerings are coming in from all over the Conference. If we can secure $300 for this source this month your board will be able to meet its obligations in full for July. If every church, large and small, could hold a service and take an offering, we wuold be able to carry on and possibly expand our services in the matter of training. It is hoped that everyone who reads this item will use his influence to see that Sunday School Day is held in your own local church.

This is to call your attention to the great need of getting your workers equipped to do real Christian work. The General Board is making a very definite effort to get into the hands of every worker the information that they need. Encourage your people to get these booklets and to read them. Read the Sunday School Magazine. You will find most helpful articles.

We are hearing encouraging words about Conference claims. We are trusting that the Church will rally as never before ot this most worthy cause. Our home missionaries are dependent upon these funds. Our foreign work is trusting to us to do what we can to meet these claims. May we learn to put these sacred claims first and demonstrate to the people that must hold the line in this hour of our world's great need!

The prospects for a great crop in our territory is visible. Unless some unforeseen accident occurs, we are sure to reap a most bountiful harvest. There are signs of improvement on every hand. Yards are being beautified, houses fixed. Some public work is going on. Truck is moving and some money is beginning to be circulated. NOW is our time to make an effort to put the claims of our great causes before the minds of our people.

The address of Dr. Mimms at Millsaps commencement was one of the most masterful messages it has been my good fortune to hear in many a day. We feel sure that the fruits of this effort will be reaped in many lives.

The executive committee of the Board of Christian Education of the Mississippi Conference met in joint session with the Executive Committee of the North Mississippi Conference. At this meeting it was agreed that there were some of our people who preferred to send their daughters to a four-year girls' school. In the light of this it was agreed that Grenada College be invited to solicit students of this type in our territory. Grenada College is a member of the Southern Association of Colleges for Women, the Mississippi Association of Colleges and Universities and of the Methodist Educational Association. Its graduates receive professional license good for life. It is hoped that our Methodist people who prefer to send their girls to a four-year girl's college are urged to consider the claims of Grenada. Why send out of the State when we have such a splendid opportunity to give our girls Christian education so close home?

I wonder if we are remembering to pray for our Advocate and its editor? The work that Dr. Decell is doing deserves our highest praise and we trust that all of our people will sustain him with their prayers and efforts in behalf of the Advocate.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Rev. S. H. Caffey, of Belzoni, has recently taught a standard training class in his chucrh. The course offered was "Stewardship." I am sure that it will be of permanent value to that church.

Two standard classes in Bible have recently been taught by Rev. J. E. Stephens in his church at Lexington. They were well attended and proving very helpful to those who took the work as well as to the local church.

Rev. E. G. Mohler has been engaged in teaching a Cokesbury class this week at Tishomingo. Twelve were enrolled and there is a splendid response to the work there.

A fine Cokesbury class has recently been taught at Noxapater by the pastor, Rev. H. D. Suydam. This was a fine piece of work. Any charge is fortunate to have a pastor who can teach these courses. We need many more pastors to become accredited as instructors in both Cokesbury and Standard courses.

During the last five weeks, Rev. W. R. Hammontree has taught five classes in the Cokesbury work and held as many vacation schools. He has been working at Hamilton, Fulton, Houlka, Mathiston and Eupora. All these classes have been well attended, as has been the vacation schools.

Now is the time to arrange for a vacation school or a Cokesbury or Standard class. We are anxious to supply any pastor and his people with help in this work. Get in touch with us at once.

All roads lead toward Grenada, June 15, for the Young People's Assembly. We have the biggest and best program to offer that has ever been offered and we are looking for the biggest and best crowd that we have ever had. Be sure and have your young people represented in this assembly. Dr. Walter Towner, director of the Young People's Division of the General Board, will be with us for the assembly. We are very fortunate to have Dr. Towner to be the representative from the General Board, for he is one of the leading workers among young people in our Church.

If you wish to read a good stimulating book that deals with some of the powerful questions of our day, secure Dr. H. E. Luccock's "Jesus and the American Mind," and read it. This is indeed one of the recent great books. The author comes to grips with some of the paralysing powers of our national life.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

When you read this, we will probably be enjoying the Young People's Assembly at Grenada College. It looks now like we are going to have about the largest attendance we have ever had. A splendid program has been arranged and we are expecting a great time. Interest in League work all over the Conference is very keen and it is still growing.

Outstanding work is being done by some of our Epworth Leagues. We have just received a report from the League at Potts Camp. Rev. L. M. James is the pastor and Miss Leona Childs is president of this League. We give you the report just as it was given to us. We commend these young people for the splendid work which they are doing.

REPORT OF POTTS CAMP HI LEAGUE

The Potts Camp Epworth Hi League has completed a very successful year's work. The amount of $49.50 has been raised by the League during the year. It has paid in full the Mission pledge of $10, and also paid $6 on the pastor's salary. The League room has been equipped with furniture, such as table, book stand and other fixtures. The League library has been, and is being, stocked with many good books, magazines and other reading matter.

During the revival meeting the League formed a young people's choir of some thirty members, who were in their places at each service, ready to sing for tho Master. A nursery was also conducted by the League during the revival, caring for the babies and little folks while mother attended preaching services.

We have a membership of 21, of whom 17 are active. During the year, 56 devotional services were held, which were inspirational as well as educational.

All officers have their reports made out in full at the monthly business meetings. The quarterly report has been made out and filed with the district secretary each quarter. Each district meeting has been well attended by the members of the Potts Camp League.

From now until June 15 we shall work frantically for a one hundred per cent representation at the North Mississippi League Assembly at Grenada.

SOUTHERN GROUP, NEWTON DISTRICT

Dear Editor: The Southern group of pastors and laymen of the Newton district met at Raleigh, on May 21. Session called to order at 10 a. m. by Rev. J. W. Thompson, chairman.

Rev. J. H. Grice, pastor at Shiloh, conducted the devotional period. After Scripture reading, comments and prayer, B. W. Ware was asked to act as secretary in the absence of Rev. J. A. Wells, who is the duly elected secretary, who could not be present on account of the illness of Mrs. Wells. The following program was carried out.

"The Pastor His Own Evangelist," Rev. J. W. Thompson; "The Use of Special Evangelists," Rev. H. A. Gatlin. At this juncture the presence of Rev. H. E. Raley, and J. B. Cain, pastors respectively of Harpersville and Forest, and Rev. Mr. Bassett, local Baptist pastor, was noted.

In the absence of Rev. W. J. Ferguson, who was supposed to preach at 11 a. m., Rev. J. B. Cain was asked to bring the message. This he did very acceptably, after prefacing his sermon with some good remarks about the Sunday school under the new plan. Brother Cain's message had to do with "Salvation by Faith," which he defined as following God, not knowing where one was going. Everyone who heard the sermon was wonderfully helped.

After the sermon, B. W. Ware, pastor at Raleigh, made an announcement concerning lunch, which was gladly received by all. The splendid ladies of Raleigh served lunch in the church. They were ably assisted by several girls of the younger group.

Promptly at 1 p. m. we reconvened for the afternoon session. Rev. A. A. Kelly, local preacher of Raleigh charge, had charge of the devotional period. He read and gave some splendid comments on the 23rd Psalm. After the devotional period, Rev. H. E. Raley made an address on the importance of the Golden Cross. B. W. Ware was then asked to speak on conservation of the results of the revival. Judge E. M. Lane, local layman from Raleigh, spoke on "Do the Results of Foreign Missions Justify the Present Expenditure of Men and Money?" This was followed by a back up talk by Brother Gatlin. We all were led to believe more and more the results justify themselves. P. L. Blackwell, district lay leader, made some helpful remarks on the Methodist Layman, laymen's work, Missionary Voice, Sunday School Day, and benevolences. Motion mado and carried to dispense with further meetings until September. Date and place left with elder and committee. After a very helpful day, and one that was largely attended by the local people, benediction was pronounced.

FROM SHANNON, MISS.

Dear Advocate: The Ripley church, Rev. C. A. Northington, pastor, reports the Golden Cross enrollment completed with 84 members enrolled and $71 remitted to the Conference treasurer. The energetic and loyal people of the Ripley church are endeavoring, in an enthusiastic way, to follow the Master's instructions to "heal the sick." When more churches respond in proportionate way as Ripley has done Methodism will come into her own as a healing church.

Shannon church today began a Daily Vacation Bible School with six local teachers and about 50 pupils at the opening session. Mrs. J. P. Boozer and Miss Jessie Bealle Harris have charge of the school. The school will close with the presentation of a Missionary Pageant next Sunday night.

Tho pastor's wife is recovering rapidly from an operation for the removal of her tonsils in Grenada on Thursday of last week.

Rev. Jeff Cunningham, member of North Mississippi Conference, student in Emory, passed through here last Saturday on his way to Grenada to spend a few days with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. E. H. Cunningham.

Sincerely,

A. Y. BROWN.

DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL, MONTROSE, MISS.

Dear Brother Decell: I have been requested to write the Advocate something about the most excellent Daily Vacation Bible School that we have just completed here at Montrose. This is the third such school we have had here, and the second that we have had without the use of a worker furnished by the Conference Board. It seems that our vacation schools get better and better, possibly because of the cumulative experience on the part of the local volunteer workers.

This year we had Miss Hazel Alexander, a Presbyterian from Bay Springs, to work with us. She was unpaid and was in her first vacation school, but did excellent work and rendered valuable service.

About fifteen local workers put much work into the school. We met three times before the school opened, in order to pool our experiences and plan our work.

We began the school on Wednesday, May 20, and closed it on Sunday, May 31, having commencement exercises at the regular morning preaching hour. We met each morning from 8 until 10:30, when the hours were cool and the children fresh.

The morning was divided into Worship Period, Bible Story Hour, Bible Drill, Bible Study, Recreation, and Handwork Hour. The Juniors had no play period during the last week, because of their interest in their work. (However, the whole school met on Friday afternoon for a play hour and social, for fun and frolic.)

The nursery-primary department studied "The Little Child and the Heavenly Father." The primary department studied "The Shepherd Life of the Bible." The juniors studied "The Land in Which Jesus Lived." The primaries and juniors made note books, read and memorized Scripture passages, learned songs, made vases, drew maps of Palestine, learned a song by which to draw this map of Palestine, and various other interesting things.

About sixty children of the Methodist, Baptist, and Presbyterian churches enrolled, and forty-seven received the certificates for attendance and work completed: 21 Methodists, 14 Baptists, 12 Presbyterians. These certificates were issued at the commencement exercises, which exercises were attarctive and helpful.

All three denominations furnished workers and finances, and the enthusiasm on the part of children and parents was good. About twenty dollars was raised and used for books, papers and other materials needed.

Let us have more vacation schools. As much time can be utilized in two weeks to teach the child in a vacation school as is used the year around in regular Sunday school work.

Cordially,

GEO. H. JONES.

LETTER FROM BRO. PICKETT

Dear Advocate: Our work is promising. In meetings held at Simmsport, Bro. McLellan helping, ten accessions on profession, and at Jacoby, with Bro. Cross, good interest aroused in this needy and neglected field where they have had scarcely any services by any denomination since the overflow in '27. Increasing interest in our work at Melville, better attendance on preaching, good prayer-meeting crowds, and a very faithful Woman's Missionary Society organized and carrying on; a Hi-League at Palmetto. This due to faithful workers there.

R. T. PICKETT, P. C.

REVIVAL AT JONESVILLE, LA.

Dear Dr. Decell: It was my great pleasure recently, upon invitation of the pastor, the Rev. S. S. Holladay, Jr., to assist in a series of revival services at Jonesville, La. Rev. Otis W. Spinks, evangelistic singer, preached at both services on the opening day of the meeting, and led the chorus choir all through the meeting. Brother Spinks is a master as choir leader and soloist. To my way of thinking, he is unexcelled.

The meeting resulted in a greatly revived membership, and seven members were added to the church on profession of faith, with probably several more to be added by certificate. Two sermons on 'What Methodists Believe,' delivered at the request of the pastor and his people, perhaps helped to strengthen the denominational faith of the members of the church. At any rate, the sermons were well received.

Brother S. S. Holladay, Jr., the pastor, is in high favor with his people. This is his third year at Jonesville, and from what I heard while there the entire membership of the church would be happy to have the same pastor for another year. In fact, they are not making any plans for a change this year. Brother Holladay is doing constructive work at Jonesville. Mrs. Holloday is a real pastor's assistant. She is an accomplished musician, is a singer of ability, and is also doing a great work with the young people and children of the church.

Brother S. S. Holladay, Sr., father of the pastor, and an honored superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, was present the last three days of the meeting, and with his presence and his earnest prayers contributed to the success of the meeting. Brother Holladay, Sr., is also greatly beloved at Jonesville.

Jonesville is an attractive little city, situated on the west bank of Black River, in one of the richest farming sections of the State, and is made up of some of the finest citizens to be found anywhere. PAINFUL, WEAK CONDITION

Mrs. H. V. Skaggs, of Van, Texas, writes: "A number of years after I was married, my health was very poor. I suffered so much in my hips and shoulders. Had some pain across my body.

"I read of Cardui, took a bottle, and it did me good.

"I was weak before I took Cardui. I was yellow as a pumpkin. I was hardy able to get around. It sure did help me. I felt like a different woman after taking Cardui. It did me more good than anything I had ever taken."

ILLITERACY AND RELIGION

Churches should regard as especially significant the fact that one of the achievements of literacy in adults is the desire to read the Bible and listen to sermons.

The National Advisory Committee on Illiteracy has been impressed, in the course of its campaign jointly with the States to wipe out illteracy, by the expressions of gratitude from adults who, after learning to read, have eagerly turned to the Book of Books.

Recently the Secretary of the Interior, Ray Lyman Wilbur, announced that from a study of the reactions of illiterate people given an opportunity to listen to various radio programs, sermons ranked first in popularity.

This test was made off in the hills of Tennessee by Lincoln Memorial University at Harrogate. Through the co-operation of Secretary Wilbur, who is also chairman of the Illiteracy Committee, the United States Office of Education, the United States Chamber of Commerce, and the Radio Corporation of America, which donated a number of sets, an experiment was conducted in different sections of the country to find out just what the effect of radio on illiteracy would be. For the first time these persons heard broadcasting.

About 100 sets were placed in carefully selected areas. Lincoln Memorial University was allocated twenty-five sets. One set was placed in a country store, another in a village restaurant, two in high schools, two in rural elementary schools, and nineteen in private homes.

It was found that sermons were the most popular of all programs, the National Farm and Home Hour ranked second in popularity, while business talks and news flashes were third.

Letters received by State committees and the National Advisory Committee from adults, deeply moved by the great privilege of being able to read and write, bear touching testimony of their profound gratitude. In large numbers they have turned to the Bible, and, for the first time, comprehend more clearly its inspiring words.

Churches are co-opearting in the national movement to bring light to hundreds of thousands of our fellow-Americans—youths, adults, parents, and grandparents. Literacy means knowledge and knowledge is the torch lighting the way to higher individual and national morality.

EIGHT YEARS AMONG THE SYRIANS IN MISSISSIPPI

Work of the Rev. Chas. Assaf, Home Missionary from 1922 Through 1930

(Note—Mr. Assaf is at Work among his own Syrian people under the auspices of the Home Department of the Board of Missions.)

Services in churches, 1429; new members joined our churches, 1811; men licensed to preach, 4; infants baptized, 235; organized new churches or re-organized old, 17; Sunday schools organized or re-organized, 14; new Epworth Leagues formed, 13; missionary socieites organized, 15.

Those who have joined our churches are all kinds of people—Syrians, those of Syrian descent, Greeks, Italians, Germans, Mohammedans, Roman Catholics, Chinese, Jews, and Americans. Also people and children of these same races have attended the Sunday school. We have given them the Bible for every home, both in the English and the languages of the people above mentioned. This is the work that we have been doing through these years for our Lord and country through our beloved Methodist Church.

We have helped one girl of Syrian descent to go to business college and now she is working and several other boys and girls have been put in college. Now we have several young men and women of Syrian descent teaching in our public schools, colleges, and universities; also some preaching the gospel, and others as stewards and members in our churches, Epworth Leagues, Sunday schools, and missionary societies. They are doing a very good work for our Lord through our beloved church in our State and some other States. Also we have some very good Syrian Sunday school teachers, and all of our Syrian members are very active people in business and good, loyal citizens.

We have organized altar prayers in the homes, and several young people have offered themselves to the Lord for his mission work.

I have helped several American children and put them in the city schools of Jackson. A boy fourteen years old has been put in the Mississippi Industrial Training School. This boy's father was living in Fort Worth, Texas, and suffering from tuberculosis, and his mother was in the insane asylum at Jackson, Miss. The boy was sleeping in box cars in the yards of the Illinois Central Railroad and begging his meals. I arranged for him a room at a rooming house and meals at a cafe until the court gave us an order to take him to Columbus, Miss.

Shall we continue this work? It needs your help and your co-operation. There are people in your charge that I can reach for our Lord whom you can't. There are many people who come to our country every year and others who have been here many years who need you and me to do this work among them. To me, I do love the work and I am willing to do it with the help of the Lord and your co-operation. Pray and call on the Lord and let me come and do this work in your charges.

THE UNIFIED PROGRAM

BY REV D. B. RAULINS, ASSISTANT EDITOR

Two dangers face us regarding our recent General Conference legislation on Christian education. On the one hand there will be those who are disposed to move too rapidly, on the other will be those who will not move at all. Both attitudes are culpable in that they do not take time sufficiently to consider what is involved.

Methodism has been characterized by emphasis upon religious experience and religious education. In John Wesley these emphases were combined and balanced. No man was more concerned for the conversion of men, no man more concerned for making the most of that experience by the process of education. He organized churches and he organized schools. Methodists have not always kept these in proper balance. They have found themselves headed at times for the Scylla of over intellectual emphasis, at other times toward the Charybdis of unbalanced emphasis upoh religious experience. Some Methodists have attempted to divorce the two, forcing upon us a false alternative. The truth of the Scripture, "Ye must be born again," finds its completion in that found in, "Grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord." The recent legislation is in keeping with these traditional emphases of Methodism.

Southern Methodism, for some years, has enjoyed a place of advanced leadership among the churches, especially as to training of leadership for the local church. The new legislation is but the normal and inevitable outcome of the process, which, for some time, has been under way.

This article is written with the desire that the suggestions made may be of some value to those who are eager to realize fully upon the larger opportunities that are at hand. Some are more or less confused. In such a state of mind the best procedure is difficult if not impossible. We would avoid the two dangers mentioned above.

It should be noted in the outset that the action of the General Conference was not hasty. For eight years commissions have been studying the matter, reporting from time to time as to progress made. Not only so, but many of the Church have been thinking in this direction for even a longer period. We have the assurance that careful study was given to the plan. Furthermore, even with the careful study given, no one claims for the legislation perfection. As it is applied the weaknesses will be discovered. In the course of time adjustments and adaptations will be made.

No better approach to the application of the legislation can be made than a thorough study of it in the light of what evidently was in the minds of those sponsoring it. This will aid us in catching step with the movement that is not entirely new, but has entered upon a new day.

What is to be Seen in the Legislation?

1. In the new plan people and their needs and not organization are placed first. This is most worthy of our thought and appreciation. It is the method of Jesus. Human life, to him, was the matter of supreme importance. A trip through the gospels will convince anyone disposed to mark the direction of his ministry and this major emphasis of the Teacher come from God. Organizations, institutions, customs, traditions and laws, as important as they were, were all secondary to human life and its needs. They were good only to the extent that they ministered to and promoted human welfare and development. They became unnecessary the moment they ceased this ministry, and a curse the moment they became an obstacle to human progress. For this reason organizations and institutions must change and pass away, while human life continues. Under new conditions new needs will develop, and new organization must arise out of these new needs and changed conditions. The tragedy of the scribes and Pharisees is that they exalted organization and institutions above humanity. By such a method human life was cramped, cursed and destroyed.

This being the mind of the General Conference it aimed at opening up the way for this emphasis in the church. It is aimed to preserve the spirit and method of Jesus.

2. The new legislation conceives of personality as a unit. It is not something divided and scattered into departments and fragments, each acting more or less independently of the others.

In this the Church is keeping pace with the best findings of psychlogy and education. For many years we have labored under the handicap of what dependable thinkers call the "faculty" psychology. This type of thinkers conceives of personality as being cut up into separate and well nigh distinct faculties, each operating rather independently of the others. It cuts too keenly into divisions what is called Intellect, Sensibility and Will, assuming that a person acts as each of these separately. While acting as one of these the others were thought to be more or less quiescent and inactive.

Such a division of personality might have done very well for purposes of study. Analysis is important, but the analysis is not always the explanation of the thing analyzed. It is very important that the medical student have experience in "dissecting" bodies. Only by this method can he come at some things that he must know if he is to be fitted for the work of a physician. But it is to be observed that the medical school furnishes only dead bodies for this purpose. It has not been found advisable to provide living bodies for such work since there was no hope that the body would be in running order when the work was complete. Even so our earlier way of looking at personality, separating it into divisions, tended to overlook the matter of central importance, the person himself. It more or less ignored the fact that a person is a unit and that he operates and acts as such under normal conditions. No one ever acts wholly as intellect, or sensibility, or will. All these elements and more constitute personality, and their interaction is important. Whatever tends to divide personality tends to destroy personality. For that reason the Scriptures note the instability of the "double minded" person. Here is "inequality." The writers of the Scriptures, who lived very close to humanity as a practical concrete reality and not a theory, speak of "iniquity" (inequality and lack of balance) as destroying "integrity" (symetry, wholeness and soundness).

In this principle the legislation is in keeping with the principles, teachings and conduct of Jesus. Modern psychology, in its discoveries of importance, may be amazed to find that what it conceives of as new has already been demonstrated and exhibited by Jesus.

3. Conceiving of persons as units it was inevitable that the Church should come to the conviction that personality can find its symmetrical development only in a unified program.

Heretofore our church work, our effort to save and build souls, persons, has been too fragmentary, too scattered, and too spasmodic. The organizations of the Church, it is true, came into being to meet certain observable needs; but they came and developed largely as separate entities and groups. They were attached to the church, but too remotely to be called the Church. The Church could not be called a whole of which these organizations and programs made up all the necessary and symmetrical parts, which, when brought together, made the Church. What we call the church was but one of these scattered interests, sometimes subordinate to them. These are all to be praised for the excellent service they rendered, but it is not ours to become so attached to any organization or terminology that will render impossible the fullest and completest activity of the Church as a whole.

This principle also is in accord with the conduct of the Christ. He thought of men as individual units, each of inestimable value. Not only so, but he regarded the whole of one's life as sacred and important. It was not he who divided interests into the "sacred" and the "secular." It was he who said, "The Son of Man is come that they might have life."

4. In the new legislation the church conceives of its task in terms of education. The term as here used is inclusive being indifferent to no interest or factor that is essential to human development. It contemplates the symmetrical development of human beings in an environment by which they are influenced, but which, in turn, they are all the while changing and improving. The Church no longer thinks of remaking mankind by some spasmodic act. The task is a long one. The minds and lives of men change slowly. This approach does not discount anything of the spectacular in the change of individual

With Guard and Seal

BY COLONEL JULIAN E. YATES
CHIEF OF CHAPLAINS, U. S. ARMY

"So they went, and made the sepulchre sure, sealing the stone and setting a watch."—Matthew 27:66.

What an audacious challenge that was, when seen in the light of subsequent events! The rockhewn tomb of the Nazarene, who had been executed the day before by order of Pontius Pilate, was sealed and made doubly secure with a guard of Roman soldiers. Across the heavy stone door was stretched a stout cord, fastened at right and left to the solid stone with seals of wax or clay, which doubtless bore the insignia of the Roman empire. That the labor of sealing and setting a guard was done on the Jewish Sabbath indicated the desperate desire on the part of these devout religionists to stop once and for all this mad craze about the Nazarene whose crucifixion they had achieved.

It is remarkable the lengths to which religious prejudice and frenzy will sometimes impel men and women. The enemies of Christ carried their antagonism to the most extreme measures. As a babe he had to flee for safety with Mary and Joseph into Egypt. When as a young man he began to go about doing good to people of every walk in life, to heal the sick and bring sight to the blind and gladness to the sorrowing, he was hounded and harassed wherever he went, until all the accumulated hatred finally accomplished his death by crucifixion. And as if this were not enough, the venom expended upon him in life followed him into the tomb, sealing and guarding his dead body. But there are sitll a few things which defy the strength and conceited ingenuity of man. In fact most of the titanic forces of nature still stand as eloquent object lessons of man's smallness and weakness. Tornadoes and earthquakes down to date have pretty much their own way, in spite ow man's boast of power.

Truly inspired were the words of the Psalmist when he said: "Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee." By all these precautions the enemies of our Lord were only setting the stage for the most portentous act in his career. For with the first red glow of the dawn on that first Easter Sunday the earth was convulsed under the tread of its Creator. The seal was snapped, the stone door rolled back, and the Roman guard lay prostrate on the ground. So began the Messiah's triumphs. And since that day no power under the sun has been able to bind his kingdom.

How prophetic of subsequent events in the world was that dramatic episode! Although the same enemies have continued their efforts in a thousand different ways to bind and seal the spirit of the arisen Christ, their efforts have been futile. Let us examine a few of them.

When the prostrate form of Stephen lay quiet outside the gates of Jerusalem, those who had stoned him thought they had silenced his voice and sealed his lips forever. When Nero had snuffed out the lives of Paul and Peter and their brethren at Rome by sword, faggot and wild beasts, he supposed he was sealing for all time the fate of that heretical sect called Christians. And through the ten great persecutions, three centuries long, culminating in the wholesale slaughter by Diocletian, these enemies made titanic efforts to seal and still forever the spirit of Christ in the world.

But what was the outcome? Stephen and Peter and Paul and that valiant army of martyrs were more eloquent dead than alive. Literally the blood of the martyrs was the seed of the church, for persecution only served to scatter the seed far and wide to spring into harvest in many remote lands. The chains of Xerxes were more able to stay the stormy tides of the Heliespont than were the enemies of Christianity to stay its triumphal march. And from that first Easter morn down to the present moment, in spite of fire and sword, calumny and reproach, in spite of all the seals and guards which have been inflicted upon it, the progress of Christ's kingdom on earth has been one triumphal procession.

But let not the faithful deceive themselves that the last vindictive onslaught of the enemy has been made. Every day finds some man, or group of men, trying again to seal within stone doors the spirit of Christ, and placing themselves on guard to obstruct the roadway that his followers would take.

Some of the present-day seals bear new names, but they are as old as creation. Would-be scientists, for instance, from age to age have clothed the old materialistic philosophy in new garbs and given it new names with the ever-recurring hope of sealing forever the thing we call spirit, and ending all of our delusions that we are anything else than animal. They say to us, "There is no such thing as spirit in man which expresses itself in what you call ideal and aspiration. And, moreover, man possesses no such faculty as choice. Every single thing that he does is a conditioned reflex, the product of chemical or mechanical forces." And here they stop, failing to tell us who or what is back of those mechanical forces of which they prate so glibly.

In the dismal train of such a doctrine it is little wonder that crime increases by leaps and bounds. For, if man is a robot, a Frankenstein monster, neither capable of choice nor as such responsible for his actions, why indeed should he worry about ethical standards? Let us eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die! That is the only consistent conclusion of such a doctrine. And no matter whether you call yourself by the modern name Behaviorist or Determinist or a simon-pure Fatalist, it is the same animal philosophy which seeks to seal up and belie the spiritual in man. It is the same crude and half-baked fallacy which has persisted from ancient paganism to curse and deaden the race of men. Ah, what a menace such a creed holds for posterity if accepted and put into practice by men and women!

But in spite of its scientific pretentions it stands exposed and repudiated by the experience of men. For, ever since this brute philosophy was first perpetrated upon a believing world a few heroic men have continued to catch the gleam and follow it, have been fired by high and holy ideals and have resolutely set their faces and chosen their way in the world. Their spirits have refused to be bound by chemistry or mechanics, in spite of all kinds of adverse circumstances and their pseudo scientific teachers.

The fallacy of such a view of life is obvious to every thinking man. It is belied not only by the experience of the race of men who have gone before us, and who have struggled upward from barbarism, but most of all by the vivid and conscious experience of every man who lives and feels the call of ideal and high adventure. Every normal man is conscious that spirit and vision and faith are the very dynamic of all progress. He knows that man is neither test-tube nor machine nor animal but spirit, and as such bound only by the infinitude of God's power working in and through him.

One of the logical conclusions of that mechanistic philosophy s the assumpton that the resurrection of Christ and of man are delusions, contrary to the laws of the universe. And by the seal of scientific conceit these men think they have obliterated both the spirit of Christ and the spirit of man.

Now, the obvious weakness of this argument lies in the self-satisfied and puerile presumption that the scientist knows all the laws of the universe. For, should he once admit that even one of these laws is yet unmastered he must also admit, if he is honest with himself, that the resurrection might be accomplished through that one law which had eluded his grasp.

Dogmatism in the scientific realm, of which this is a brilliant example, has always been the ball-and-chain about the feet of progress. Not so many years ago it was the common belief among men that the earth is flat and surrounded by unfathomable seas which were inhabited by ferocious monsters. Science taught men that, and it came near defeating Columbus in his desire to establish the heretical theory that the earth is round. Less than a half century ago men died of ague and fever because of the miasma from the swamps. Night air was dangerous, and windows must be shut after dark to keep out this dangerous miasma! My grandmother lived and died in that belief because medical men gave it to her as scientific truth. And then came along a few men like Waiter Reed, who defied scientific dogmatism and upset this theory and gave to the mosquito the credit for what scientists had previously charged up to miasma. And I might give an endless recital of the absurd propositions, as we see them now, which science once set up as eternal truths, later to be discredited and discarded. Had my grandfather been told you could take a photograph of a living man's heart, and hear a man's voice and see his face a thousand miles away by means of the mysterious radio wave, he would have promptly answered that it is impossible and contrary to the laws of nature.

Now, I do not mean an attempt to discredit the real discoveries of science. I yield to no man in deference to true scientific attainment. I only mean to hold up to ridicule those dogmatic would-be scientists who delude themselves and others that they have reached the finality of truth, those who having a smattering of material facts at their command, make themselves ridiculous by stepping over into the realm of the spiritual and playing the part of oracle for humanity.

Be not deceived. They have not reached finality. If you and I live 25 years longer we shall see still greater wonders than X-ray and radio and television. Humanity will some day discover that one law which will support in a scientific way the resurrection and life beyond the grave. We know that the higher law always sets aside the lower law. From mineral through vegetable and animal to the spiritual there is one ascending scale of laws, each surpassing and abrogating those which are below. Man knows only a few of these laws. He stands in the eddying shallows of the sea of knowledge, while the great ocean of the things he does not know stretches beyond the horizon. And he is wise who can measure in some degree his own limitations, and take by faith some great fact which his finite mind cannot yet comprehend.

And that is the gist of my message today, that an acceptance of the portentous facts of that first Easter through the doorway of faith breaks the seal of conceit which holds enthralled the mind of the unregenerate man. The arisen Lord abiding in the life of a man creates a spirit of humility before which all the egotism and conceits in human character flee away as fog-clouds before the summer sunshine. In the conscious presence of God's infinite wisdom man sees the smallness and shallowness of his own life and store of knowledge.

And there is something more than conceit from which we are set free by the acceptance of our Lord's appraisal of man as exemplified in his resurrection. In the glorious light of this revelation man sees himself as something infinitely more than animal—as a living spirit. And how much of dignity and sublime significance comes to human life with this view of it! What a halo it casts around the head of the most humble of human creatures! The degraded, the criminal, the outcast become sons of God, heirs of his love and mercy and entitled to our sympathy and help. This divine view of man breaks down the barriers of caste and color, creed and country and makes all men everywhere neighbors and brothers under the skin. In fact this is the only way out of our present-day social, moral and economic jungle—the recognition of the divinity in man. And with this divine relationship accepted the resurrection becomes the logical sequence.

And what did that first Easter's events do for the product of that animal philosophy, namely, the fear of death? That leaden seal has cast its dark shadow athwart man's life from the cradle to the grave. And as his little day draws toward the sunset that fear grows more real and intense. His inherited and acquired dread of extinction makes him recoil at the dire end which this animal philosophy prophesies for him. And with this prospect he dreads something else even more, namely, the laying down of his working tools in life, the surrender of all his plans, ambitions and ideals, his mission in life.

The revelation of that first Easter, that man is spirit and defies dissolution, breaks that seal of fear in those who accept this divine appraisal of man and his mission. To him who by faith looks upon the crucified and arisen Lord, death, that last great enemy, loses its terrors in the certainty of victory. He accepts his Lord as his guide and conductor in this extreme episode of his experience. And when blindfold by death he feels the hand of his Lord leading him from the preparation room of this life through the open doorway. He knows that he is being led out of the cramped and unsatisfactory environment of this his apprenticeship into the Master Builder's perfect workshop, where he shall be permitted to bring to completion the glorious designs which were drawn for him here on life's trestleboard. With this comforting assurance he can say with confidence, "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me." He can now walk calm and unafraid down the hill towards the sunset with the exultant cry upon his lips, "I know that my Redeemer liveth." He can repeat such reassuring thoughts as those expressed by Victor Hugo when he said, "I feel in myself the future life. Winter is on my head, but eternal spring is in my heart. The nearer I approach the end the plainer I hear around me the immortal symphonies of the worlds which invite me. It is marvelous yet simple. It is a fairy tale, and it is history. For half a century I have been writing my thoughts in prose and verse, history, philosophy, drama, romance, tradition, satire, ode and song—I have tried all, but I feel I have not said the thousandth part of what is in me. When I go down to the grave I can say like so many others, 'I have finished my life.' My day's work will begin again the next morning. The tomb is not a blind alley; it is a thoroughfare. It closes on the twilight to open with the dawn."

And what is the meaning of that broken seal in your life today? Does it not have its deepest significance in the prophecy of your spiritual triumph here and now through his power? As he broke the Roman seal and the power of death, so he promises to break the power of sin and set you free from its bondage. In the prison-house and under the guard and burdensome seal of sin we can hear him speak to us today, "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

LETTER FROM CHIEF OF STAFF TO MR. KIRBY PAGE

Mr. Kirby Page, editor of The World Tomorrow, who recently sent out a questionnaire to clergymen inquiring their views as to whether they would bear arms in case of future war, requested the chief of staff, General Douglas MacArthur, to express an opinion for publication in his paper as to his views upon the result of the replies received from the clergymen.

General MacArthur wrote as follows:

"I appreciate very much the courtesy of the suggestion contained in your note of April 20, and am glad indeed to avail myself of the privilege of commenting on the general subject of the Church in war.

"My predominant feeling with reference to the majority of the replies received by your paper from 19,372 clergymen is that of surprise. Surprise at the knowledge that so many of the clergymen of our country have placed themselves on record as repudiating in advance the constitutional obligations that will fall upon them equally with all other elements of our citizenship in supporting this country in case of need. To exercise privilege without assuming attendant responsibility and obligation is to occupy a position of license, a position apparently sought by men who do not hesitate to avail themselves of the privileges conferred by our democracy upon its citizens, but who in effect proclaim their willingness to see this nation perish rather than participate in its defense.

"The question of war and peace is one that rests upon our form of government, in Congress. In exercising this authority Congress voices the will of the majority, whose right to rule is the cornerstone upon which our governmental edifice is built. Under the Constitution, its pronouncement on such a question is final, and is obligatory upon every citizen of the United States. That men who wear the cloth of the church should openly defend repudiation of the laws of the land, with the necessary implications and ramifications arising from such a general attitude toward our statutes, seems almost unbelievable. It will certainly hearten every potential or actual criminal and malefactor who either has or contemplates breaking some other law. Anomalous as it seems, it apparently stamps the clergyman as a leading exponent of law violation at individual pleasure.

"I am mindful of the right accorded every American citizen to endeavor by lawful means to secure such changes in the Constitution or statutes as he may desire. But to concede to him the right to defy existing law is to recognize a state of anarchy and the collapse of properly constituted authority. May I remark also that if we acknowledge the prerogative of the individual to disregard the obligations placed upon him by American citizenship, it seems only logical to ask him to forego all rights guaranteed by such citizenship.

"It also surprises me that while apparently entering a plea for freedom of conscience, these clergymen are attempting to dictate to the consciences of those who honestly differ from them over questions of national defense. Their sentiments and implied efforts are injecting the church into the affairs of State and endangering the very principles that they claim to uphold. Perhaps the greatest privilege of our country, which indeed was the genius of its foundation, is religious freedom. Religious freedom, however, can exist only so long as government survives. To render our country helpless would invite destruction, not only of our political and economic freedom, but also of our religion.

"Another surprise comes in the revelation that so many seem to be unfamiliar with the struggle of mankind for the free institutions that we enjoy. Magna Charta, The Declaration of Independence, the Emancipation, the rights of small nations, and other birthrights of this generation have been bought with the high price of human suffering and human sacrifice, much of it on the fields of battle.

"I am surprised that men of clear and logical minds confuse defensive warfare with the disease which it alone can cure when all other remedies have failed. Do they not know that police systems and armed national defense are the human agencies made necessary by the deep-seated disease of individual depravity, the menace of personal greed and hatred? Should not these clergymen turn their attention to the individual sinner and rid the country of crime rather than attack the national keepers of the peace, the most potent government agency yet devised for this very purpose? It is a distinct disappointment to know that men who are called to wield the sword of the spirit are deluded into believing that the mechanical expedient of disarming men will transform hatred into love, and selfishness into altruism.

"May I also express surprise that some have lost sight of the fact that in none of our past wars have clergymen been required to bear arms, and that under the terms of the Geneva Convention, ratified by the United States in 1907 (Secs. 130 and 132.; chaplains are non-cobmatants and not authorized to be armed. And if United States Army chaplains are ever guilty of using inflammatory propaganda such activity is without warrant or authority by any statute or order ever promulgated in the history of the country.

"Perhaps I should also remind them that under the terms of the League of Nations the United States would be required to maintain a standing army of at least a half million men in order to be able to carry out its mandates. I am curious to know how many of the clergymen who voted for the League have read the articles and understand that under them the peace of the world is to be maintained in the last analysis, by armed military forces. It is difficult to reconcile the faith of these people in the efficacy of newly organized international agencies to keep the peace and enforce respect for international covenants with their self-confessed intention to violate the existing laws of their own long-established government.

"A few questions occur to me that could appropriately be asked the clergymen who replied to your questionnaire. In stating that they were in favor of the United States taking the lead in reducing armament, even if compelled to make greater proportionate reductions than other countries might be willing to make, did they know that the existing total of our land forces, including Regular Army, National Guard, and Organized Reserves is about one-third of one per cent of our population? Did they know that in other great countries, except Germany, whose army is limited by treaty, this ratio is from three to forty-five times as great? Did they know our total forces in actual size are exceeded by those of at least fifteen other nations, although in population we are exceeded only by Russia, China, and India? Finally, did they consider the words of Our Lord as given in the 21st verse of the 11th chapter of St. Luke? 'When a strong man armed, keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace'?

"In all modesty may I not say to the opponents of national defense that Our Lord, who preached the Sermon on the Mount, later in his career declared: 'Think not that I am come to send peace on earth; I came not to send peace, but a sword.' St. Matthew, 10th chapter, 34th verse. It is my humble belief that the religion which He came to establish is based upon sacrifice, and that men and women who follow in His train are called by it to the defense of certain priceless principles even at the cost of their own lives. And I can think of no principles more high and holy than those for which our national sacrifices have been made in the past. History teaches us that religion and patriotism have always gone hand in hand, while atheism has invariably been accompanied by radicalism, communism, bolshevism, and other enemies of free government.

"Have not those who oppose our modest and reasonable efforts for national defense miscalculated the temper and innate spirit of patriotism in the average American? The fact that our Citizens' Military Training Camps are over-subscribed long before the opening of the camps comforts me that patriotism is still a dominant power in our land. Any organization which opposes the defense of homeland and the principles hallowed by the blood of our ancestors, which sets up internationalism in the place of patriotism, which teaches the passive submission of right to the forces of the predatory strong, cannot prevail against the demonstrated staunchiness of our population. I confidently believe that a red-blooded and virile humanity which loves peace devotedly, but is willing to die in the defense of the right, is Christian from center to circumfernce, and will continue to be dominant in the future as in the past."

souls. It will utilize this. But it is quite sure that the Kingdom does not come with observation. The process is a long and tedious one, but the "eternal years of God are hers."

This, too, is in keeping with the prinicples of Jesus. He selected "disciples." This simply means that he organized a class of "students," "learners," "pupils." He used the teaching process and the teaching method. He did not predetermine what his students should think of him or his cause. He aroused their spirit, wonder, curiosity, interest. He invited them to investigation, willing to commit himself and his cause to a group so aroused and interested. By association and fellowship with him they arrived at the point at which they could reply to his question, "Who do ye say that I am?" "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

Without in the least discounting the ministry of Jesus as preacher and herald of the Gospel, we must note his ministry of teaching. What we call the Sermon on the Mount is not so called by the Bible. Printers of the Bible have placed that title at the head of the column, but the word is as follows: "And seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain: and when he was set, his disciples came unto him, and he opened his mouth and taught them." Furthermore, the Great Commission as found in Matthew 28:19,20, our favorite missionary text, is not less, but more, the Great Commission for Christian education. Read it again: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations"—make disciples, students, baptizing them in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I command you: and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Herein is the educational task of the Church brought pointedly to our attention. This does not rob the text of its former meaning, so important to us; but by it it is invested with a fullness and finality not carried by our usual interpretation. For Christian education, therefore, there is the same authority, the same great challenge, the same universal sweep, the same religious appeal, the same assurance of divine comradeship, and the same guarantees of final results.

It means, therefore, that Southern Methodism seriously intends to fulfill its obligations in the field of Christian education, and to realize its original educational implications. It intends to make religion educational, and education Christian. In this program there is no conflict, but completeness. It includes all that we have been thinking of in missions, evangelism, worship, Christian service, and so on. It proposes a unified and unbroken process in man's development, individually and socially.

What, it may be asked, are some of the specific advantages of the new plan?

1. It conserves all the values involved in the older plan and widens to greater things. It is but the inevitable outcome of forces already at work in the older order of things. A careful examination of the legislation itself and the interpretations already coming out will substantiate this claim. The values and functions are not only conserved, but released for larger effectiveness. There is correlation and co-ordination that eliminate the friction points of the old and provide for formerly neglected areas of the church life.

2. It makes for economy of personnel and finance in operation. That has already been demonstrated. The staff of workers has been decreased and the work so organized as to mean a saving in thousands of dollars, while the effectiveness of the work has not been impaired. This is an item not to be overlooked in a Church that seeks to spend its men and money as economically and as effectively as possible.

3. The plan is adaptable. Much of our church effort has been projected on the scheme of a large or city congregation. As a matter of fact the majority of our churches are neither large nor urban. This plan is equally adaptable to the large and the small church, rural or city. This is a distinct gain. Our Church can afford to lose no time in regaining its hold upon the smaller and rural churches. They are worthy of the best plans. Our larger city churches have been fed by the smaller churches of country and small town. In the plan, the city church of large membership has lost nothing. A unified program of comprehensive proportions is now possible.

4. It challenges the initiative of the local church. This has been needed for a long time. We have boasted of our "connectionalism," but now we concern ourselves with the links in the connection and the foundations thereof.

For too long we have been pastor-centered and Nashville-centered. Without discounting either, we are now getting them in right relations. Nashville has been the factory for grinding out plans to be used as a substitute for the brains and energy of the local congregation. We have felt that we must wait for completed plans and methods of procedure issued from headquarters. Our Church has always tried to keep the best possible staff in Nashville, but to put people there intimately acquainted with the needs and opportunities and conditions of all local congregations was asking too much. Such a plan must inevitably result, at least in a good measure, in a uniformity and formality that tend to destroy initiative.

The local church, under the new plan, has the opportunity of studying its own community, locating its own needs, developing its own activities, and projecting its own organization in terms of those things vital to its life. We shall not need the Nashville office less, but more perhaps. However, it will be with a different relationship. It now becomes the counselor and assistant. It will be its business to make studies and explore fields and develop methods for experiment. It will dispense information and give guidance. It will become the agency through which the local churches may share in the experiences of the life of the whole Church. The successes and failures of all will become the concern of each, and the successes and failures of the local church will be the property of all.

5. It exalts and magnifies the Church. The Church is made up of all of its parts, but, with all parts working in functional harmony, it is more than all its parts. It gives it a meaning that it did not have in the older order of things. No longer is it called upou to operate in separate divisions that overlap, but leaving exposed needs that should be met. It calls upon the whole Church to meet the needs of the whole Church. It aims to reach the entire membership of the Church and to use the whole membership. That being the case, we now have the Adult Division of the Church, the Young People's Division of the Church, and the Children's Division of the Church, and not just divisions and departments of separate groups or organizations of the Church.

6. It is our Church's answer to the challenge of a world greatly changed from that of our fathers. New perils and new opportunities are upon us. Once more, with the whole world as the field, the ageless conflict is on. It is not yet finally determined that Christianity can survive and turn the battle from the gates. The life of which it is the keeper must once more face a world that is not friendly to the principles of Jesus Christ. It is not time to retire to the cloister for religious meditation and protection. It is no time to make terms with the cynicism, materialism and practical atheism of our time. It is the business of the Church to say whether or not Christian principles are to prevail in a world grown suddenly smaller and more compact in its contacts and friction points and suddenly larger in perils, responsibilities and opportunities; a world menaced at the points of international and racial contacts and industrial relations; a world that still waits to be made Christian.

Some time ago, when Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, himself a Methodist by birth and training, was asked to say a word for Methodism, in part replied: "When Methodists regain their religious fervor and enthusiasm, once more they will become the shock troops of the Kingdom." May God grant us that high favor.

MINISTERIAL SUPPORT

By Rev. A. W. O'Bryant

In many places our preachers are not paid a living salary although the people who constitute the membership are able. Some people pauperize their preachers. They fail to pay them a living salary for their service, and instead, dole out niggardly pittances which they call "Giving," as though they were beggars. This system is cursed with a curse because it robs God, dishonoring Him whose representative the preacher is.

The preacher is a representative or minister of God, an ambassador of heaven and a wrong or injustice done him in his ministerial capacity is an insult to Almighty God.

The minister or ambassador of any government is supported by the government he represents.

Paul says in II Cor. 5, 20, "Now then we ambassadors for Christ," if then you stint him you rob and insult Christ. Do not the Scriptures bear out this truth? "All the tithe is the Lord's," "the tenth shall be holy unto the Lord;" "Honor the Lord with thy substance, etc. Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me." Now God does not say, 'Honor the preacher with thy substance (Will a man rob the preacher), but, "Will a man rob God?" God makes the preacher of the gospel his minister and ordains that the minister shall be supported in his name. Hence the way many beggarize the minister by failing to pay (not give) him a just support is a mockery of heaven and an insult to Diety.

According to Malachi the messenger must have knowledge and be prepared. This requires at least two things. First, a suitable library, books, periodicals and his church paper for study.

These necessarily incur great expense; I know preachers who are today unable to pay for books bought and are subscribing for only their own Conference Advocate—and behind with that— because of inadequate salaries. Second, time to study. This he cannot have unless he and his family are properly cared for. I am very personally acquainted with at least one Methodist preacher who has been forced—though physically unable—to do a lot of manual labor to keep the wolf from the parsonage door, or else to go into debt with no probability of being able to pay for, which is against the General Rules of the Church. In the 10th chapter of Luke the source of supply is set forth. We must pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers. Ministers of the gospel are called of God and not made by schools and colleges. Although there seems to be a preference given the latter who quite often prove untrue to our beloved Zion and her teaching. When a man recognizes the Divine call to preach the gospel all we assume is hereby established. His support, then, will measure our obedience to God; the amount of our gifts, according to the requirements of the case and ability, will be and is represented by the minister.

If a corporation seeks an accountant, a firm a manager, or a farmer a laborer, the fact of seeking the man implies a willingness to pay him a living wage or salary for his service. So the prayer for laborers implies a willingness to provide an adequate support when the petition is answered and they are sent. And a failure and a refusal to provide for them is a breach of trust and a sin against high heaven.

The 16th verse of the 9th chapter of 1st Cor. says: "Woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel," tightening the lines already drawn. The preacher loses himself in his mission; necessity is laid upon him and he cries out with St. Paul: "Woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel;" with him it is not a matter of choice; you have prayed for laborers; God has heard your cry, and has laid it upon him to answer your call. He must do so, or reject the call of the Lord of the harvest to do so, which is to sin against God, and bring judgment upon his own soul. But he answers the call, and enters the vineyard of his Lord and yours. You rejoice in his ministry and preaching, but refuse him a decent living, and pauperize him among men. What is more heart-breaking to the man of God when some great intellectual feast is spread, and he has to stand back and eat the crumbs, or if he is so fortunate to get to attend, feel cramped because his clothes are some that the better paid minister has laid aside and sent him in a mission box, or even when some wealthy layman has died the clothes sent the underpaid pastor, that he does not wear in the city for fear of recognition by some friend of the deceased? Or when good and helpful books are advertised he is forced to wait until they are out of date and become shelf-worn before he can reach them from the modest salary received? He is greatly wronged, heaven is highly insulted, and the "Woe" that he escaped in answering the divine call falls with tremendous force upon the heads of those who pauperize him. "Ye are cursed" (?) for "Ye have robbed me," said the Lord of host.

In I Cor. 9-7, we read: "Who goeth a warfare at any time at his own charge?" Who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not the fruit thereof?" or "Who feedeth a flock, and eatheth not the milk thereof?"

No man must be left to feed himself while fighting the battle of another. We all recall how that we were called upon during the World War to observe meatless and wheatless and sugarless and various otherless days that our brave boys might have sufficient and even to spare to enable them to conquer the enemy and make the world a safe place in which to live. Yet there are those who profess to be citizens of the heavenly kingdom who never deny themselves one single pleasure that they might be able to help make the world a safe place in a spiritual way in which to live. "No laborers shall plant and till a vineyard and be denied the grapes therefrom, nor he who tendeth the flock the milk thereof." So also with God's ministers. Do we realize that according to I Cor. 9-13, which says: "Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things live of the things of the temple, and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar?" That God associates his ministers with the altar? If your substance then is laid on God's altar in consecration to his service, there will be no trouble about the preacher's salary, for God says, "He is partaker with the altar." While there is anything on God's altar his servant shall not want. And, brother, don't forget that, "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof," and if you withhold from God, you see at once the force of Malachi's searching question, "Will a man rob God?" In I Cor. 9-14 we read, "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they who preach the gospel shall live of the gospel." From this we understand that the minister shall be paid a living for his service. Yet we find people who argue that it is not right to pay the minister, that if he is called of God, God will take care of him. Which is the better authority, theirs or God's?

Those who oppose the support of the ministry in a decent way oppose God who ordained it, and such as slight and neglect it do so not simply to man but to God who sent him in answer to their petition. Our Lord tells us in Matthew's Gospel that the workman is entitled to his living. The preacher should be devoted to his work and diligent to his every duty. This done he should be paid like men in other vocations, and not in "chips and whetstones" at the end of the year, if at all, but at least each month. Then he can meet his obligations and demand and receive the respect and confidence of all men: His pay is not for his preaching on Sunday but for his weekday time as a student, and as a pastor devoting himself to the work of the Church. Stewards and collectors oftentimes beg for a "little something to keep the preachers and his family from want and suffering." Such a statement puts the minister of God on the plane of a pauper and is an insult to his manhood and to the church he serves and to God who ordained that he should live by his ministry. When any church member fails to support the pastor and meet all the claims of the church, when they are able, is not worthy to belong to the church. And when the ministry is paid a living salary so their wives will not have to say to the children, "No supper to-night," and be unable to get them sufficient clothing, school books, and be forced to do on less than is necessary, then the ministry will not be classed as a "necessary nuisance," and brought to want.

Withholding the minister's salary of which he is worthy is, according to St. James, to be guilty of fraud, and his cries will enter into the ears of the Lord. Judgment will come to his house and condemnation will rest upon his soul. May our people realize their duty to God and to their ministers and also to the church, that in all things, "that the gospel be not blamed."

Finally: Is it possible for a minister to pastor a charge where he is forced to use an automobile, keep two or three children in high school and as many in the grades, support himself and family, stay out of debt maintain the respect of the business world, and his dignity in the ministry on a salary (?) of $100 or less per capita? If not, who is to blame, and what is the remedy? If the preacher is not, then let's quit censuring him and try to help him.

ADVOCATING THE ADVOCATE

My Dear Dr. Decell: I have just read your report in the New Orleans Christian Advocate with reference to the campaign for subscriptions. I am both surprised and disappointed at the returns from the Louisiana Conference and, also, the Mississippi Conferences.

I feel, since I had some little part during my service of two years on the Advocate Committee in trying to bring the budget of the Advocate nearer in proportion to its income and because of your splendid co-operation and willingness to serve the Advocate for only a reasonable expense account for this year, our committee at that time felt that certainly all of the brethren would rally to bring the subscription list up to where it could take care of the Advocate in a comfortable way. I certainly believe the request made by our bishops to secure one hundred new subscriptions for each district is not more than might have been expected.

Since it appears, at least to all those who have talked to me about the Advocate, that you have not fallen one whit behind the several splendid editors that preceded you and since the news and messages of the Advocate mean far more than any of us may be able to estimate in the work we are trying to do in our churches, and since I have traveled over most of Louisiana and Mississippi within the last few weeks and find conditions no worse in Louisiana than in North Mississippi, I am compelled to believe that the loyal preachers of our Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences, who are men of vision and leadership will yet bring up the full assignment given them by our bishops and presiding elders.

This may not be one of the largest obligations resting upon our Conferences, but, in my opinion, it is one of the most serious, and unless a larger interest is taken in carrying out this reasonable plan for the rebuilding of the Advocate subscription list, I feel that I know enough about it to say that there will be embarrassment along all lines.

With sincere appreciation for the excellent paper you are giving us each week and thanking you for the many courtsies extended me in the work I am trying to do for our Church, I am,

Yours sincerely,

J. G. SNELLING.

The official 1931 season at Lake Junaluska opened June 11, when registration for the Junaluska Summer School took place. Class work in the Summer School began Friday morning, June 12. Dr. R. P. Shuler, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Los Angeles, Calif., delivered the opening sermon in the auditorium, Sunday, June 14, at 11 a. m. He also preached in the evening. Among the other speakers who have been secured for the summer are: Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, New York City; Dr. S. M. Zwemer, of Princeon; Dr. Fred B. Fisher, Ann Arbor, Mich.; Dr. R. E. Speer, New York City, and Dr. J. R. Sizoo, Washington.

THE NEED OF CHURCH EVANGELIZATION

By Rev. Henry G. Riser

(III.) Organization in the Church for Evangelism

"Christ recognized the universal social independence of humanity and sanctified all social relations and duties," Albert F. McGarrah, "Modern Church Management." We are independent; God has given man his own choice, and he can choose the life he so desires to live. And God had so planned for this, when he sent His Son into the world; He therefore gave Christ the knowledge and understanding to teach and show us the value of organization and plans along with evangelism, within the Church. We can have organization without evangelism but we cannot have evangelism without organization; and that is why I think it should be so stressed in an article on evangelism. I do not think I need go into explanation as to why we cannot have evangelism without organization, because the past few paragraphs makes that very clear and understandable.

If we are going to have the best results for the Church, we should begin with the young people, because they are the coming generation, and if we do not have them organized and prepared for the work, the Church will not be any better off tomorrow than it is today. As Mr. W. H. Leach says in his book, "How to Make a Church Go," "The Sunday school is a good place to begin, for it is a field which is always fruitful—there is never any question of results." It is here we can impress upon the mind the true worth of organization and the value and place that it has in the Church and a Christian life. If we can get the Sunday school lined up in the correct organized way it will help more than anything else to make the Church go. Dr. Benson has given to us in his book, "The Church at Work," some very helpful information and outlines. It would be to a great advantage if every Sunday school superintendent and every pastor had one of these books upon his desk; because we know that his plan can be carried out and be very succcessful, because he has tried them all out not only in one church but five different pastorates.

Many people have the wrong impression as to just what should be involved in church evangelism. Mr. F. A. Agar has given to us a very good statement in his book, "A Manual of Church Methods," "Evangelism involves every process which aims to produce people as disciples of the Lord, through faith in the Saviour." I think that is a very good explanation, because with this statement it is readily brought to our minds, the necessity of the unification of all the departments of the church in order to have evangelism. If evangelism involves all these different departments, and if they are separated, we can see at once that we do not have evangelism in the church. Therefore, we can realize the great importance of organization in the church in order to have evangelism.

We need organization in the church in order to educate the people to their duties and different tasks within the church. As I have said before, it is necessary to have all the church at work in order to have true evangelism in the church. Therefore, comes the great task of organization and education before the true spirit of evangelization; as William H. Leach says in his book, "How To Make a Church Go," "The church must be ready and the people must be willing and even anxious to serve on the various committees." We cannot expect them to want to serve on the committees when they are managed in a haphazard way, but when all is planned and organized, then comes a new spirit of enthusiasm, which is usually followed by the spirit of evangelism.

GRENADA COLLEGE TO RECEIVE HEARTY SUPPORT OF MISSISSIPPI METHODISTS

Mississippi Methodists are working out a plan for the closer co-ordination of their denominational colleges in the State. Through the executive committees of their boards of Christian education strong conviction in favor of closer co-ordination and larger support of the three denominational colleges in the State is being expressed.

At a joint meeting of the executive committees of the Board of Christian Education of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Annual Conferences, held in Jackson, the following resolution was adopted:

"First, we recommend to the Boards of Christian Education of the two Conferences, Mississippi and North Mississippi, that we consider our educational obligations and problems in Mississippi as one.

"Second, that we recommend to our respective Annual Conferences of the Methodist Church in Mississippi, that closer cooperation be sought between the three Methodist Colleges in the state.

"Third, that the two respective Boards of Christian Education, together with three representatives from each Board of Trustees of the said Colleges, be constituted a commission, which shall collaborate to the end of a unified system of Methodist Colleges in the state.

"Fourth, that such rocommendation be presented to our respective Annual Conferences at the ensuing session for action upon the same."

This would indicate a definite movement toward the strengthening and ultimate consolidation of the Methodist educational institutions in the state. It is believed that the Methodists of Mississippi would give their enthusiastic support to a unified system of colleges with Millsaps College at Jackson in the center as a standard co-educational institution, and with Grenada College as a standard four-year institution for women and Whitworth College as a standard Junior College for women.

The above action taken by the joint meeting of the Executive Committees of the Boards of Christian Education looks toward the pledging of the moral support of the Methodists throughout the entire state to Grenada College in so far as they may desire to send their daughters to a four-year college for women. Hundreds of Methodist parents definitely prefer this type of education for their daughters. With the support of these parents in the Mississippi Conference as well as the North Mississippi Conference, Grenada College can adequately supply this long felt need and can make a rich contribution to the future womanhood of the state.

CORNER-STONE AT FIRST METHODIST BUILDING IS LAID

A large congregation was present yesterday at the corner-stone laying of the Educational Buliding of the First Methodist Church. The Rev. T. M. Bradley, pastor of the church, had charge of the service, assisted by W. P. Kretschmar, who has served efficiently as Sunday school superintendent for many years. For a number of years the Methodists of Greenville have had no adequate facilities for taking proper care of the educational work of the church. The growth of the church and Sunday school recently has made more acute the lack of ample Sunday school rooms.

The building when completed will take care of around six hundred pupils, which will provide for present needs and be ample for some years to come, to meet the needs of the school. The building will be one of the most modern and best equipped educational buildings in the North Mississippi Conference.—Exchange.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE NEWS ITEMS

Millsaps College closed a successful year with a notable commencement sermon Sunday, May 31, by Bishop Collins Denny. Baccalaureate address Tuesday, June 2, by Dr. Edwin Mims, of Vanderbilt University. Eighty graduates, of whom 47 secured the B. A. degree and 33 secured the B. S. degree. Four graduated with high honors, namely, Kenyon Fielding Hill, Lealon Eldridge Martin, Jr., Lemma Lucile Gordon, and Wesley Norton Miller.

The board of trustees announced that the dean of women for the coming session will be Mrs. Mary B. Stone, B. A., Randolph Macon Woman's Coollege, M. A. Columbia. Professor M. C. White, who has been on leave for one year, will return, and Dr. David H. Bishop will remain on the faculty. Professor White, Dr. Bishop, and Mrs. Stone will constitute the strongest English staff the college has ever had. Other than these, no important changes in the faculty were announced.

Plans are being matured for the second normal school for county superintendents on the 7th to 9th of September. The conference for county superintendents held last summer was so well received that an even better program is being arranged for this one. The principal lecturer will be Dr. L. Thomas Hopkins of Teachers College, Columbia University. Room and meals will be furnished by Millsaps College at $1 per day.

Among facuty members on leave this summer will be Professor F. C. Jenkins, who will spend the summer in research work at Peabody and Columbia University; Professor C. F. Nesbit, who will be in residence at the University of Chicago; Professor L. E. Leaver, who will be a member of the summer school faculty of the University of Tennessee; Professor N. F. Wilkinson, who will complete work on a doctoral dissertation at the University of Chicago, and Instructor J. B. Price, who will do graduate work at the University of Atlanta. An unusually strong summer school faculty will include the following members of the teaching staff: Professors Hamilton, Harrell, Sullivan, Mitchel, Sanders, White, Bishop, Moore, Blackwell and Haynes. Mr. Slater and Mrs. Roberts of the department of music will both give regular instruction in music in the summer session. The session begins June 9 and closes August 24.

Mr. V. B. Hathorn, the bursar, has been directed by the board, in addition to his other duties, to travel in the interest of the college during the months of June, July and August. He will interview and select students and visit alumni in the interest of the funds needed before the erection of the new gymnasium can be undertaken.

Millsaps College has just been advised by the Carnegie corporation of a grant of $10,000 for the purchase of books for the Carnegie-Millsaps Library. This is the third grant made from this source for Millsaps College. In 1906, Mr. Carnegie gave the first library buliding. Major Millsaps giving a sum equal to its cost for endowment. In 1926, the Carnegie corporation gave $50,000 for the replacement. This library is sometimes said to be the only library given by the Carnegie corporation to a college and the only Carnegie library which has the name Carnegie associated with another.

We are grateful to Rev. T. H. Porter, Senatobia, whom, though he is on the retired honor roll, is active in such service as he can render. We thank him for six new subscriptions recently sent in. He writes of his pastor, Rev. B. F. Luter, as follows: "He preaches plain, practical and well-thought-out sermons. His earnestness convinces hearers that he has authority and means all he says. Happy is the pastor that has a superannuate soldier of the Cross who encourages and helps in the work.

The Home Circle

THE OLD-FASHIONED WAY

"I'm behind the times," well perhaps it is true,
My boy said tonight,
For my poor old brain cannot see through
These new-fangled notions of right.
When I was a lass, 'twas years ago,
Ah! times have changed since then;
We did not think, as they seem to think now,
That tobacco and beer made men.

Our lads were as manly, for naught I can see,
As the fast young men of today;
Tho' their hands were hardened with honest toil,
And they didn't dress quite so gay.
And at night when the daily tasks were o'er
We would rest 'neath the old roof tree;
While billiards and pool were the unknown
To the lads who grew up with me.

But times have changed, my boy says so,
And people have wiser grown;
My old-fashioned ways are all out of date,
Like the days when I was young.
Well, perhaps it is true, but I wish he would stay
As pure as he used to be,
When he knelt at my feet in the oldfashioned way,
With his curly head on my knee.

But now he comes home with an unsteady step,
And his blue eyes are bleared and dim,
And my heart, with the old-fashioned mother's love
Grows sick with fear for him;
For I know that his feet have entered the way;
Broad and flowery though it may be,
Which the good old Book says leads down to death,
And an endless eternity.

But tho' times have changed, our God is the same
As He was in the days of yore,
And the Staff and Shield of my widowed years
Is strong for evermore.
I bear my boy in the arms of faith
To the throne day after day,
For I know that He who changes not,
Still saves in the old-fashioned way.

"THANK GOD"

By Rev. W. G. Evans

This city was startled the other day when it became known that the life of a marine diver was in jeopardy for twenty-five hours under 27 feet of water on one of the great drainage pumping stations being constructed near this city. Caught between piling and held by a swift current he soon realized his serious predicament and signaled to his helpers of his danger.

In speaking of the matter, Captain Danese remarked:

"You don't know how an experience like that gives a man chance to reflect. I thought about a million things. My past life and all. You see, it was a horrible experience, but a fellow doesn't really realize how horrible it all is until he gets out and looks back on it.

"I thought about a lot of things. I thought about my childhood. I thought about my 42 years of diving. I thought about my good deeds and my bad deeds. I weighed them and I wasn't afraid to face death.

"But I didn't think I was going to die. I felt sure I'd be saved.

"My first thought down there was—'Well, Nick, here you are." My first thought when I got out was to thank God. I'd prayed while I was down there, too, although I'm not a very religious man. You see, I thought I was content to die. I've lived a long time, but life is still sweet."

As soon as he had his helmet off, he wore no other diving equipment, Denese turned to the crowd that was cheering his rescue and said:

"Everybody get down on their knees with me."

As they knelt the aged man lifted his arms and said, "Thank God!"

Here was a man who realized that his life was in jeopardy and in his crisis acted intelligently. Death was very near and he realized it.

There are thousands of men and women in this city who constantly neglect their best and highest interests until some crisis in life looms up before them.

The business of the churches of this city is to prepare men for the best in this world and in the world to come.

Go to church tomorrow and hear its message of hope.—New Orleans Item.

MRS. ROBIN GOES HOUSE HUNTING

"I don't care!" pouted Mrs. Robin. "It does seem as if I might have the kind of a house that I want. It is the very first nest that we have ever built, and I am sure that no house could be too fine to hold it."

"But, my dear," said her mate, much worried, "who ever heard of a bird's having a bright red house? Besides, the smell of paint might make you sick. Let us ask Mrs. Tomtit, who is making her nest in that dear little house across the way, what she thinks about the red house."

As they came closer the robins saw that Mrs. Tomtit's house was made of a small log hollowed out and then wired together again. There was a small hole just large enough to make a front door for the Tomtits.

"Good morning,'" called Mrs. Tomtit. "How lucky that you have come early before all the good houses are gone!"

"Yes," said Mrs. Robin, "we thought that we would have to nest among the branches. How did there happen to be so many houses?"

"Well," said Mrs. Tomtit, "for many years my family has built a nest in a woodpeckers' hole in a hollow tree which stood on this spot, but this winter the tree blew down. Robert, the little boy whose yard this is, set this house up on tall iron props just where the tree had stood, and we found it waiting when we came. Now, Harold, who lives over here,'" and she pointed one wing toward the house on the right, "and Jack, who lives over there," pointing toward the left, "saw Robert's bird house and wanted to build one too. Harold built that bright red one wih a little porch and steps. What bird did he suppose would ever be senseless enough to want a house whose brightness would attract all of its enemies?"

Mrs. Robin hoped that she didn't look as foolish as she felt, and Mrs. Tomtit went on: "But wait until you see Jack's house. It certainly is a model."

They all flew over into the next yard and saw a house made of plain boards high up in the apple tree.

"See how the roof slopes to shed rain," explained Mrs. Tomtit. "Jack has even remembered to put a broad piece of tin around the trunk of the tree as protection against cats."

The robins set up housekeeping in Jack's house and soon had some warm bedding in the form of a nest. While she was sitting on her eggs Mrs. Robin just couldn't help casting longing glances at the pretty red house; but as the season wore on and it was still for rent she saw that no bird would be so unwise as to risk the lives of her babies just for show.

One day when she was flying home with a nice fat caterpillar for her little ones Mrs. Robin saw a wicked-looking cat standing on the roof of the red house, and her heart beat fast until she reached her own snug home and saw everyone of her babies safe and sound, waiting for her with their mouths open.

"How glad I am that we chose this dear little brown house!" she said. "It has made such a safe home."—May Dittmar, in Christian Observer.

THE UNUSED VIOLIN

Every one of us shall give an account of himself to God.

In one of the rooms of the Tursi Palace, now devoted to municipal uses, is preserved under a seal a precious Garneri violin of Paganini. Kocain, the Bohemian violinist, visiting Genoa, asked to be allowed to play the instrument. The mayor granted the request and invited members of the aristocracy and several musicians. Kocain played one of Bach's airs, and a concerto from Paganini. The audience was greatly impressed.

The violin was then replaced in the glass box, where it had rested sixty-five years, and was again sealed in the presence of the spectators. It is rather a pity that this magnificent violin, which was thrilled at the touch of a master's hand, should live upon its past glories and be locked inside a glass case, and yet many a so-called child of God is like that and for the music that might thrill in their lives, and the comforts and inspiration which might come from their presence, if the obligation is not met, there will be an accounting at the judgment seat of Christ. —J. Wilbur Chapman.

DAVID AND THE RABBIT

David went to the door when the doorbell rang.

"Do you want something?" asked a gruff, kindly-faced mountaineer. "I've brought it down especially for you."

David nodded.

He could scarcely retain his curiosity as the mountaineer took from his wagon a small box. David looked through the strips nailed over the top. Inside was a very small rabbit, not more than three or four weeks old.

"And this is for me?" asked David, excitedly.

"It's yours, if you want it. I caught it while up in the mountains especially for you."

"Oh, thank you, thank you. I've always wanted a rabbit," said David, in great rapture.

David spent a day building a pen for the rabbit. He was very careful to see that he fixed it so that the little animal couldn't burrow out and make his escape. The rabbit grew fast, and in another month was growing fat. David was very proud, feeding and watering it every day.

But when the rabbit was half grown a change came over it. It ate less and less. The choice plantin and alfalfa leaves that David gave it were left untouched. Choice grains, bran and bread it treated the same way. It never seemed to drink any more. It became thinner and thinner, more and more listless. And David grew sadder and sadder. If this kept up, the rabbit could not live very much longer. David thought and thought and thought. Finally, he made his decision.

"It must be," he mused to himself. "It would be different if this were a tame rabbit. But to take one, used to the freedom of the mountains and the fields, and expect it to be happy, and grow, and thrive in a pen four feet square is asking too much, even of Mother Nature. How would I feel if I were shut up in a room, never allowed out, and gazed at nearly all the time? Guess I'd feel about the same way, and lose my appetite and grow thin."

He put the listless rabbit in a box and went up to the edge of the mountain. There he set it free. He could not help thinking of a poem he had read not long before, one by James Whitcomb Riley, his favorite poem, called, "Good bye. Jim, Take Care o' Yourself." As the rabbit scampered joyously away among the trees. David whistled to it, and called, "Goodby, bunny! Take care o' yourself."—Our Dumb Animals.

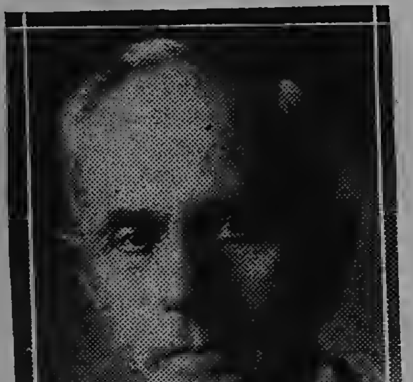
CENTENARY COLLEGE CONFERS DESERVED HONOR ON REV. C. C. MILLER

At the recent commencement of Centenary College, Rev. C. C. Miller, now pastor at Kentwood, La., was honored with the degree of Doctor of Divinity. This won the approbation of all who know Dr. Miller. He has been in the forefront of the great movements of Methodism in his Conference and the church and it has brought delight to his friends to have his splendid services recognized by Centenary College.

Rev. C. C. Miller, upon whom his alma mater, Centenary College, conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity enjoys a unique relation to that institution. His connection with Centenary reaches back 61 years to the year 1870, when he, as a student, entered the preparatory department. He graduated in 1883. For a number of years he served on the board of trustees. Subsequently, he became principal of the preparatory department. Later, he filled the chair of natural science, and finally became president of the college while it was situated at Jackson, La., previous to its removal to Shreveport. Dr. Miller declared today that he is proud of his relation to this venerable and time-honored seat of learning. His father, the Rev. A. G. Miller, was a member of the faculty for more than forty years, and his uncle, the Rev. J. C. Miller, D.D., was president of the college during its palmiest ante-bellum days. Dr. Miller says he was born under the shadow of Centenary College and through the Miller connections with the college he feels bound to it almost with blood ties. He rejoices in its glorious past and the magnificent contribution it is bestowing upon the Church, the nation and human progress, under the presiidency of Dr. George S. Sexton and his excellent co-laborers.



REV. C. C. MILLER, D.D.

The Advocate is confident that Dr. Miller will wear these honors worthily and reflect credit upon the institution that he has served so well himself and that is now facing the new era with determination and faith. We wish for him many more years of happiness and usefulness.

THE BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Baton Rouge District Conference which was held at Ponchatoula, La., on June 4 and 5, was said to be one of the best that has ever been held in that historic district. Rev. L. W. Cain, the enterprising presiding elder, had arranged and executed a most helpful program. He dispatches business with a deft hand and keeps the movement of the conference going toward a definite objective.

Dr. W. Angie Smith, pastor, First Church, Shreveport, was the conference preacher and he brought inspiring and uplifting messages to the large audience that waited upon his ministry.

Visitors to the conference were cordially welcome and given ample opportunity to represent the causes committed to their care. The editor of the Advocate was accorded every courtesy and the presiding elder exhorted after the presentation of the claim of the Advocate and largely increased the number of subscriptions from that district by taking cash subscriptions and pledges from the pastors to secure others upon their return home. Had all the expected subscriptions been sent in by the time that the campaign closed the Baton Rouge district would have led all of the 22 districts in the three Conferences. We thank Brother Cain for his abiding interest in the Advocate and for the splendid efforts he has put forth in its behalf. We appreciate the spirit and manner in which his pastors and laymen have followed his leadership in the Advocate cause.

One of the unusual and inspiring events during the conference was the licensing to preach of Albert Jerome Cain, son of the presiding elder, and Wm. Willeroy Wells, son of Dr. F. L. Wells, pastor, First Church, Baton Rouge, and Teddy Towndrow Howes, a splendid young man from Hammond. Acting under the authority conferred upon him by the Discipline and with the approbation of Bishop Dobbs, Brother Cain, at the conclusion of the district conference, announced the first appointment of his son to a charge within his own district. We trust that the young man will prove a great success as he wears the mantle of his father and carries the good news of the gospel to the waiting people.

This is the fourth year of Brother Cain and the conference passed suitable resolutions of appreciation for him and his labors. The conference adjourned in good time in the afternoon of the second day completing all the work without haste, and giving due emphasis to the matters coming before them. It was a pleasure for us to attend the conference and we join with the pastors and people in expressing our appreciation for the presiding elder and wish for him and them continual joy and success in the work of the Lord.

Rev. W. N. Dodds, Pontotoc, Miss., in a letter to the office says: "I think every Methodist home should have the Advocate. The paper is worthy of a place in the esteem and thinking of all our people." We thank Brother Dodds for seven subscriptions with check to cover.

Rev. and Mrs. G. A. Baker, of the Cruger and Sidon charge of the North Mississppi Conference, are to be congratulated upon the birth of a son, who was born to them on June 9. We trust that the little man will grow up and be of great usefulness for his Lord and country.

We thank Brother Matheny for subscriptions sent in and pray that his work may increase in every way.

Rev. E. W. Wedgeworth, among the many other responsibilities, has found time to wedge in the interest of the Advocate on his charge, the Cleveland Circuit, Mississippi Conference, and we thank him for subscriptions recently sent in. We trust that his work may go forward and splendid revivals will be had at all his churches.

Rev. H. B. Hines, Elizabeth, La., delivered the baccalaureate sermon for the Elizabeth high school, using for his subject, "More Beyond." Brother Hines is in his fifth year and has delivered the sermons or addresses for the Elizabeth high school each of the years he has resided at Elizabeth.

We acknowledge with appreciation an invitation from Robert S. Rickey, son of Rev. and Mrs. Harry W. Rickey, to the graduation exercises of the Abbeville high school. We congratulate the young man upon his achievement and trust that he may have unhindered progress in further preparations for life.

We were grieved to learn that B. F. Crook died at Forest, Miss. Frank was once a member of the Mississippi Conference and after a few years located at his own request. His course was not a smooth one, but he longed to be of use in the ministry. Rev. F. L. Applewhite and Rev. J. B. Cain conducted the last rites.

Rev. W. B. Alsworth, pastor, Tylertown, Miss., favored us with seven new subscriptions which make 41 subscriptions from his charge to date. Brother Alsworth and his people have reconditioned their church building and all of the work is going forward under his leadership. We thank him for his splendid services in behalf of the Advocate.

We thank Rev. R. C. Mayo, pastor, Shuford, Miss., North Mississippi Conference, for subscriptions recently sent in. His work goes forward and he expects good results from every department of the work in this Conference year. We trust that when he goes up to Greenwood that he will have realized his fondest hopes for the year's work.

Rev. J. B. Cain, pastor at Forest and Morton, assisted Rev. J. H. Jolly and his people in a revival at LaBranch Street, McComb, Miss., last week. People from all over the city attended the services and the last report we had of the meeting was that a gracious revival was under way. We hope to have a fuller report of the meeting for the Advocate.

Dr. S. A. Steele, the Knight of the Pelican Pines, Mansfield, La., has written a new book on "Lee: The Passing of the Old South." This is issued by the Banner Press, Emory University, Georgia, and should be read by both young and old, who will be charmed by its eloquence and strengthened by its beauty, as well as informed upon important historic events.

Bruce Stiliman Hemphill, son of Rev. and Mrs. S. M. Hemphill, Winona circuit, North Mississippi Conference, left his home June 17 for Annapolis, where he will enter the U. S. Naval Academy. PROTECTION
AGAINST OLD AGE

Mrs. Burnaman, formerly a member of the Carrollton Avenue, New Orleans, Church, has moved to Jackson, Miss., and identified herself with the Capitol Street Methodist Church. On a recent Sunday Mrs. Burnaman delighted a large audience with a solo. The Capitol Street congregation is delighted to have this talented musician to join their church and choir.

Upon reliable authority we are informed that there is a young man going around in Mississippi, particularly North Mississippi, who claims he has a father or brother in the Conference and appeals for help on that basis. Our informant, who knows the party and circumstances, states that the young man does not deserve the consideration he asks and "no courtesy should be shown him."

Mrs. F. E. Sewell, Lootahoma, Miss., on the Tyro charge, writes words of encouragement concerning the work of the pastor Rev. Mr. Davenport, and believes that the Octagon soap coupons should be actively pushed in order to release the orphanage indebtedness. Mrs. Sewell is a practical nurse and has rendered good service in securing coupons in the homes where she has attended the sick.

Rev. J. W. Campbell, who was for a number of years a member of the Mississippi Conference, but who now is pastor of the Presbyterian church in Mart, Texas, recently conducted a union meeting with the Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist pastors at Benoit, Miss. The meeting was one of great interest and proved wonderfully successful. Rev. H. P. Lewis, of Rosedale, is our Methodist pastor at Benoit.

The Coast pastors' group meeting of the Seashore district has organized by electing Rev. C. C. Clark, Bay St. Louis, president, and Rev. H. L. Daniels, Long Beach, as secretary. Their last meeting was held at Handsboro, where a helpful program was rendered and a delicious luncheon enjoyed, being served by the ladies of the Handsboro church. Coalville was chosen as the next meeting place on July 24.

Rev T. O. Prewitt, pastor at Millsaps Memorial, Jackson, Miss., has done most excellent services for the Advocate and we thank him and his people for their interest. Brother Prewitt is in his fifth year and is leading his people in a successful participation in the program of the church and in constant efforts to bring others to Christ. He recently addressed the Pythian Sisters of Mississippi on "Fraternalism."

Rev. Porter M. Caraway, pastor, East End, Meridian, Miss., is having a successful pastorate in that growing opportunity. On the first Sunday in June, the Sunday school attendance at the Methodist churches were as follows: Central, 446; East End, 305; Fifth Street, 237; Wesley Memorial, 136; Poplar Springs, 72. Total, 1,196. Brother Caraway is assisting Rev. H. C. Castle in a revival meeting at Lucedale, Miss.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth says that the North Alabama Conference has received nearly four times as much on benevolences as was remitted at this time last year. It is interesting to note that this comes to pass in the midst of the successful campaign to increase the circulation of the Alabama Christian Advocate. We congratulate the Advocate on the success of its campaign and Alabama Methodism on the progress it is making.

The Greenville Ministerial Association spent a delightful day at a fish fry on Moon Lake, June 4. E. B. Sharp, of Lula, provided the fish and the good ladies of his charge served the dinner. That princely layman J. H. Sherard, gave the association the privileges of his summer cottage on the lake. The ministers present had a profitable discussion of the rural problem and the foreign element problem of the Delta. Their next meeting will be at Rosedale.

The first church service radio broadcast from Vicksburg, Miss., went on the air Sunday morning, June 14. This broadcast was at the services of the Crawford Street Methodist Church and Rev. J. L. Neill, pastor, had the distinction of preaching the first sermon that went out over WQBC. The subject was appropriate, "The Majesty of Prayer." We are sure that this enlarged audience was profited by hearing the message on the important subject of prayer.

Dr. D. R. Anderson, for eleven years president of Randolph-Macon College for Women, Lynchburg, Va., has recently accepted the presidency of Wesleyan College, succeeding Dr. W. F. Quillian, who resigned to accept the secretaryship of the General Board of Christian Education. Until the present time, Dr. Quillian has been acting president. Wesleyan is a pioneer college for women, and has the distinction of being the first chartered college for women in the world to confer a degree on a woman. This degree was conferred upon the mother of Admiral W. S. Benson of the U. S. Navy. Dr. Anderson was born in Charlottesville, Va., and holds degrees from Randolph-Macon College, Ashland, the University of Chicago, and an honorary degree from William and Mary College. He is author of several volumes.

After an illness of a very short duration, MRS. GEORGIA ANDERS died at the McComb Sanitarium, Saturday, March 28, having reached the age of seventy-three years.

She began early to build her spiritual life on the firm foundation of Jesus Christ. In early girlhood she united with the old Salme Church at Amite County, and was faithful unto death. She delighted to attend upon its ordinances, always being present as long as she was physically able.

Fifty years ago she was married to Calvin Anders. To this union ten children were born, one of whom, together with her husband have passed on in death before her. Though she has ceased to be one in our midst her influence lives on and her beautiful character is reflected in the lives of her children. The funeral service was held in her church, at Liberty, Miss., Sunday, March 29. In the absence of her pastor, Dr. E. K. Cox, Rev. Mr. Webb, and her kinsman, Rev. L. P. Anders, conducted the funeral rites. Flowers were in profusion, while friends and loved ones filled the church to pay this tribute of respect and love. She will be missed in her home, her cuhrch, and in the community where she lived and labored these many years. May her memory and influence live on in the hearts and lives of those who have known her.

Her pastor,
J. H. MORROW.

MRS. KATHERINE RYAN HERMAN, beloved wife of Lawrence Herman, New Orleans, La., passed from this life on April 29, 1931. Mrs. Herman was a faithful wife, a devoted mother, and a tender, true friend. Hers was the spirit of a Christian soldier, who, though in bondage to physical suffering for many years, was actively engaged in expressing love and comfort, helpfulness and encouragement to her family and the friends who visited her. To the writer she was one of the most unselfish characters she has ever known and her example will ever be an inspiration to nerve endeavor. The friends who were privileged to know her will long remember the compassionate, friendly atmosphere which she radiated. Mrs. Herman was a member of Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, New Orleans.

"Mother has passed from our midst,
Yet her inspiration shall e'er abide:
Her tender love, courage, patience,
cheer,
A hallowed influence—a gentle guide.

"'Love suffereth long and is kind,
Vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up.'"
Her life this precept calls to mind
To those favored ones privileged with her to sup.

"Father, Thou carest for the one we hold dear,
She is safe with you while to us her memory brings
The earnest desire to live as she hath lived,
The love that 'hopeth all things endureth all things.'"

NEOLA CHALMERS HERMAN.

Our people were greatly shocked Wednesday morning when it was learned that MRS. C. E. DUNN had suddenly passed away at 10:45, and the death of this splendid woman has cast a gloom over the entire community. Mrs. Dunn, who a fortnight ago underwent a successful major operation in the hospital here, had improved so rapidly that she was to return to her home that afternoon, when, due to some overexertion, a blood vessel was broken, and the end came almost immediately. Our town has never had a finer woman, or one whose personality or influence will be more greatly missed. She had long been a devout member of the Methodist Church, her perfect faith in her Redeemer having never faltered, but seemed to grow stronger with the passing of the years. Mrs. Dunn was loyal and steadfast in her friendships, never hesitating, when the opportunity presented itself, to perform some act of service for one she loved. She was an affectionate wife and sister, and a most devoted mother, her life being wrapped up in her children and grandchildren. Words cannot picture the sorrow that enters a home when a dearly loved one is taken, but the grief-stricken family must find consolation in the knowledge that "Miss Ella" is resting safely in the arms of Jesus, and that there is a happy reunion awaiting them on the other shore, where they will be reunited for all time.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Dunn is survived by three children and two grandchildren, Mrs. J. A. Rogers, with son, Charles Edward, from McComb; Mrs. Olin Anderson, with son, Olin, Jr., from Tylertown; Lieut. Com. L. C. Dunn, from Washington, D. C.; four sisters, Mrs O. A. Harrison, Memphis; Mrs. G. L. Carlysle, from Louisville; Mrs. C. R. Beik, from Bessemer; Mrs. H. N. Nunnery, from Clarksdale; one brother, Mr. W. F. Henry, of this place, and many other loved ones. To each of these, The Democrat extends heartfelt sympathy. Lieutenant Com. L. C. Dunn and wife are expected to arrive from Washington at noon tomorrow (Friday), and it is now thought that the funeral will be held in the afternoon from the First Methodist Church.—Water Valley (Miss.) Democrat.

MISS MARGARET CORNELIA LUSK was born in Jackson, Miss., of which place her parents were pioneer settlers, following in the footsteps of their ancestors, who in the early days helped with brain and brawn to hew a course helping to bring Mississippi to its present state of progress and enlightenment. She was a woman of vision and her ambition was to serve to the greatest good of the greatest number. So her life work was that of a teacher. This profession she regarded as a holy calling wherein lay the highest opportunity for noble character building. Her greatest, highest aim was to mould her pupils into real men and women. In this work no attribute was neglected or permitted to die for lack of cultivation, for this really wonderful teacher felt always that her work in the schoolroom was the talent given to her by God and to be accounted for to Him. On every hand we see the evidences of the lasting impress of her far-reaching influence left as the seed she planted long ago now blossomed into fine womanhood and splendid manhood. A loyal friend, seeing always the best in one's character, forgiving to a fault, willing to divide her last dollar with the unfortunate, and to those she loved no sacrifice was too great. Her attainments were of marvelous scope and of most varied range. Her memory retained almost every item of importance and varied was her ability to impart these gems of knowelge to anyone desirous of learning them. She was what might be called a woman rare and unusual in her generation.

Miss Cornelia, as we loved to call her, joined the Methodist church in Jackson while still a young girl and sat under the ministry of the choicest and most honored men of God who filled the pulpit of what is now called Galloway Memorial Church, and though her duties as a teacher called her to other States and other cities, the church in Jackson was ever the church of her love. Miss Cornelia represented the old South; her home was one of perfect Christian hospitality. How charming her smile, how cordial her welcome, the latch string was ever on the outside. She was my friend in every sense of the word, not a birth or death, an honor or pleasure ever escaped her thought of me and mine, and she never failed of sharing with me every experience which a friend could share. Miss Cornelia was a great soul, never swerving from her highest purposes, facing all obstacles with a fine spirit of fortitude, yet withal a woman of exceeding modesty, sweetness and charm that won for her a wide circle of friends. On March 21, surrounded by her friends and a number of her pupils, little boys now grown to splendid manhood she "slipped away to be with God." Dr. Cowan and Dr. Jos. Smith said the last sad rites at the home on North Street in the presence of many bereaved friends.

JOINING THE CHURCH

Did I ever join the church? I tried;
Preacher preached about sin 'til I cried;
At his call I went to the altar with fear;
I was ragged, "Sure you want to join here?"

"Had you not better join on Rambo Street?
There is where your kind usually meet."
Dr. Great advised that I go away and pray,
And see him on some other Sabbath
day.

Weeks afterward he met me down in town;
He said, "Recently I've not seen you around;
Did you pray, and please what did God say?"
O, yes, I prayed with many, many tears;
"Never mind my child, not been in myself for ten years."

I had taken small stock in a silver mine,
And stock went up ten thousand times.
I went back again a very rich man;
Dr. Great met me and took me by the hand:

"I've been looking for you, O so much,
Are you coming now to join my church?"
No, thank you, down on Rambo Street,
There is where my kind usually meet.

FAREWELL PARTY FOR MISSIONARY

The auxiliaries of Zone One, Minden district consisting of Alden Bridge, Benton, Cotton Valley, Plain Dealing and Springhill, held their second meeting at Alden Bridge on June 10, 1931, and gave a farewell party for Miss Ava Morton.

The program given was a very interesting and instructive one. The zone was honored by the presence of Miss Ava Morton of Cotton Valley, who has chosen her life work as a missionary in the foreign field. Miss Morton was recently graduated from Scarritte College and will leave in the near future for China, to serve as a nurse. She gave a delightful talk on Scarritt College and its work. After her talk the zone presented her a beautiful trunk, which contained some uniforms and articles which she will need. This was presented as a love gift to her from her own zone. A member from each auxiliary held a large letter spelling the word China. A short message was given by each as they held their letters to her. This was followed by a solo, "Others."

A delicious barbecue was served picnic fashion under beautiful oak trees which surround the church. The members were very apreciative of such a splendid dinner, and everyone went to her home feeling that God has been good to this zone by selecting one of its worthy members to do this service.

The zone had as its guests Mrs. H. B. Wren, district secretary of the Shreveport district, and Miss Mary Nichols, deaconess at Jubilee Inn, Shreveport, La.

COAHOMA ZONE MEETING

Zone Number 3, consisting of the Woman's Missionary societies of Coahoma, Jonestown, Lula and Dundee, met in the Methodist church at Coahoma, May 29. Mrs. Geo. Morgan, chairman, had charge of meeting, which opened with singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers." A prayer by Bro. Gladney followed. A report from the president of each auxiliary was heard. Miss Dorothy Gladney gave a cornet solo, with Mrs. Carlton Shelby playing piano accompaniment.

Mrs. Shelby Wilson, president of Dundee auxiliary, presented the program, which begun with singing "More Like the Master." She read the last of Christ's Sermon on the Mount as recorded in the 7th chapter of Matthew, concluding with the Lord's prayer. We were favored with special songs and music by Mesdames Brevard and Harrison. A quiz on minutes of annual meeting was conducted and proved very instructive. Piano solo by Mrs. Harrison was rendered. "Membership Drive" was next given by Mrs. M. P. Meyers. Mrs. Gladney made an impressive talk on our new work, the Octagon soap proposition, how to take hold, etc.

During a social hour, we enjoyed delicious refreshments, after which we adjourned to meet at Dundee in September.

REPORTER.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY

On Tuesday morning, June 2, at 9:30 o'clock, Mrs. W. T. Hegman called the conference to order in Jefferson Street Church, Natchez. The day was so calm and bright, the flowers so beautiful and the church so quiet and restful that it seemed as if the Heavenly Father had indeed furnished his children an ideal setting for the carrying on of the work of His Kingdom.

After warm words of greeting from our chairman, the devotional service was conducted by the pastor-host, Rev. H. G. Hawkins. "Jesus Calls Us," our State Conference Hymn, was sung, after which Rev. Hawkins gave us a very beautiful message on "Prayer." He selected for his Scripture reading Phillipians 2:10-21. This good message gave us a deeper appreciation of a loving Heavenly Father than we had had before and made us realize more keenly what it meant to be a co-worker with Him. Surely at the present time it is well for us to remember that we are not laboring alone, but can claim his strength, encouragement, guidance and aid, through the asking. After a period of silent meditation, Rev. F. J. Jones closed with prayer.

Mrs. Hegman then introduced the zone leaders, Mrs. Z. D. Clark, Vicksburg; Mrs. A. A. Lyon, Fayette, and Mrs. Nettie Priest, Gloster. These leaders then called the auxiliaries of their respective zones, which evidenced a good representation.

Just at this time each one present sang with interest our new district song, entitled, "Workers With Jesus." The song very beautifully carrying out the theme of the meeting. Mrs. M. L. King, of Gibson Memorial auxiliary, Vicksburg, composed the song:

"Workers With Jesus"

(Tune—"Jesus Loves Me")

Vicksburg district, this we know,
Has a mission here below,
Plan and pow'r to Him belong,
Tho' we falter, He is strong.
Chorus
Workers with Jesus, strong, true and brave,
Workers with Jesus, O, see our banners wave.

Vicksburg district, sure must lead,
Giving thought to every need,
Fall in line, and do your best,
Work and pray for the W. M. S.

Vicksburg district, members all—
Listen to the clarion call,
Raise your banner up on high,
God is guiding, He is night.

Mrs. A. A. Lyon then presented the helpful literature available for carrying on our work in a better way. The contents of the Voice, Yearbook, Young People's Magazines and programs were all splendidly reviewed and explained.

Mrs. P. E. Cunningham, Vicksburg, represented the conference minutes, which, though small in size, are of inestimable value to auxiliary leaders. In many instances it is the chief means of keeping in touch with the general work. There is a wealth of information within the small volume for those who make proper use of it.

The use of the Handbook was ably explained by Mrs. J. E. J. Ferguson, of Centreville. All who were not making the proper use of their copies were urged to do so and many new copies were given out where needed.

The following conference officers were then presented: Mrs. T. B. Cottrel, president; Mrs. J. Morgan Stevens, superintendent of Christian Social Relations; Mrs. G. P. McKeown, superintendent of supplies; Mrs. C. L. Freiler, superintendent of children's work.

Just at this time Mrs. Riley gave us a talk on the Octagon coupon campaign, making it very clear to us just how much each one's help was needed in order to clear off the indebtedness on the orphanage. We were made to feel that we were not just collecting coupons, but making a happy home possible for unfortunate little children.

An invitation was extended by the Crawford Street Auxiliary, Vicksburg, to have the 1932 conference meet with them. This invitation was unanimously accepted. Vicksburg is looking forward with pleasure toward the coming of these good men and women into their midst.

Our district secretary then gave an inspiring message, asking for cooperation in making this a banner year for our district. Urging every member and every auxiliary to make a pledge, that our funds may be ample for the task. This she assured us could be done if we but remember that He will be with us always; and reminding us that we do not have to go forth in our own strength.

Our secretary loves her work so well that her co-workers become more zealous in an effort to match her enthusiasm. The meeting was then adjourned for lunch.

Lunch was served by the Natchez auxiliary in the basement of the church. Those present need not be told what a delicious noonday treat we had, but to those absent let me say that you missed a treat. Our hostesses were thoughtful of our every need and the day will long remain a pleasant memory.

The conference reconvened at 1 p. m., with the singing of "Lead on, Oh, King Eternal." Rev. T. B. Cottrell then led us in a fervent prayer.

Our new superintendent of children's work, Mrs. C. L. Freiler, spoke to us at this time on her department of work. Each one present enjoyed her sweet wholesome message. She is indeed filled with love for and interest in little children. Making each one feel it a God-given privilege to train up little children in the way they should go. Mrs. Freiler brought two of her juniors with her who gave us an unexpected treat. Mary Katherine Hendon sang, "I Will Be True," accompanied by Frances Freiler.

Then Mrs. Stevens explained some important phases of her work. She told of the advantages to be gained by the social relations committees of different churches being federated. Some worthwhile projects being carried out by that department were: training schools for negroes, matrons at sta-

They are given to the Advocate at this time to assure all church workers that the same fine supervision of the Epworth League work will be carried on and that there will be additional aid to the workers in the local churches in their Sunday school work.

The assembly had the largest attendance it has had in some time past. The Newton district won the cup for athletics. The Meridian district retained the Winfield cup for the most miles traveled by their delegates the largest percentage of Epworth League membership present at the assembly and the highest percentage of honors won by the standings of their Leagues on the standards of efficiency.

There were many things that transpired that made all of us who are older feel that we were blessed with the finest type of young people possible. We pray that the new organization will prove even a larger stimulant and aid in developing these fine upstanding young people in the church for Christian living.

We are pleased to announced that the Mission receipts for May showed a decided increase over April. We appreciate the fine faithfulness and sacrifice of the church workers in this great undertaking. We do pray that the Mississippi Conference will meet its full obligations to the Board of Missions and that no missionary will have to be recalled on our account. May every contributor to this sacred fund find a joy and a peace that he has never found before and may this express itself in the life of the local church in such a way that more of the needy and unreached may be ministered to.

Churches are being revived. New Leagues are being organized. New Sunday schools are being organized. Many churches are seeking a richer, deeper spiritual life. God is on the giving hand. We do have many adversaries, but there is a GREAT and effectual DOOR opened to us. I thank God for the heroic souls who are giving themselves to the possession of the land through these doors.

Only one church has sent a College Day offering. We trust there are many others who will yet take the collection and make it possible for the board to aid some worthy boy or girl to finish their education.

Sunday School Day funds are coming in about the same as last year. This is an expression of earnestness and prayers and faithfulness upon the part of the local workers. It is hoped that this good work will go on and that we will be able to reach every Sunday school with a program and that they will make an offering to this cause.

Pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The recent session of the conference leaderinp training school was pronounced one of the best ever held. The attendance was beyond our anticipation in the face of the financial depression. One hundred forty-five people were enrolled in the eight classes and 134 credits were issued with four others to receive office credit; sixty-four churches were represented; forty-two pastors were in attendance and three presiding elders. At the closing exercises the districts were represented as follows: Aberdeen, 26; Columbus, 15; Corinth, 12; Greenville, 8; Greenwood, 14; Grenada, 50; Sardis, 14. A few who came to the school were not present for this count.

The spirit of the school was most excellent. There was not a hitch or a complaint. An earnest, devout and studious atmosphere characterized the entire school. Almost every person took one course for credit and audited another one at the other recitation hour. There was not a loafer about the school. The usual rich Christian fellowship pervaded the entire campus.

The class work of both the faculty and students was of the highest type and character and will have a far-reaching effect in our conference.

The evening platform hour was most enjoyable and inspirational. Special music was furnished by Grenada and Millsaps college students. The fine worship programs were prepared and presented by these students. Dr. W. M. Alexander, Dr. E. C. Rule and Rev. L. P. Wasson were the speakers and brought most inspiring messages. On Friday night emphasis was given to the Unified Program of Christian Education in the local church.

Much splendid work was done by the many friends of the school as well as by Rev. E. H. Cunningham and the effective board of managers. We are deeply grateful for the help of everyone.

The annual Young People's Assembly is in session this week. Over 200 young people are in attendance coming from every quarter of the Conference. Rev. W. L. Robinson, as president of the assembly, and Rev. W. C. Newman, as dean, have worked out a most effective program. Rev. J. E. Stephens is bringing spiritual messages at the evening hour.

We are still looking for your Sunday School Day offering. If you have not sent it in yet, do so at once. Send it to the Board of Christian Education, Grenada, Miss.

SOUTHERN GROUP, VICKSBURG DISTRICT MEETING

The pastors of the southern end of the Vicksburg District assembled in Stephen Church, Thursday, June 4, and organized for the remainder of the year.

Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson was elected chairman, and J. H. Morrow, secretary. The following brethren were present: Rev. L. E. Alford, J. L. Neill, J. E. J. Ferguson, G. P. McKeown, Percy Vaughn, T. B. Cottrell, S. W. Bryant, F. J. Jones, H. G. Hawkins, and J. H. Morrow.

After the devotional conducted by J. H. Morrow, Revs. Neill, Hawkins, and Cottrell told of the impressions gained while attending the missionary conference in New Orleans, La. Rev. G. P. McKeown brought a most helpful message on the subject, "The Preacher As a leader of Community Ideals." Dr. Hawkins spoke on the pastor as director of the whole church program, pointing out that if a pastor is to carry out the whole program of the church, he must of necessity be versatile, energetic, and spiritual.

Rev. Percy Vaughn spoke on the subject, "Some Evangelistic Goals for the Summer," At this time reports were made on Advocate subscriptions; all are hopeful that the quota will be reached. Rev. L. E. Alford spoke on behalf of the church colleges and urged every pastor to be diligent in securing students for the coming session. At this juncture a general discussion was entered into touching on the various departments of church work. Brother Neill told of plans being formulated for a more adequate support of the mission charges.

Upon invitation of Brother Vaughn, Knoxville was selected as the next meeting place. After the benediction, the ladies of the church served a delightful lunch, for which all were grateful.

tions for colored as well as white, interracial literature, etc. Specially emphasizing the importance of being helpful and charitably inclined toward those with whom we come in daily contact.

Mrs. McKeown told us of our responsibility to our own conference institutions. Their needs were made so plain to us that I feel sure those attending the conference will make a greater effort than in times past to remember more generously our Wesley houses and other community centers.

Our own Mrs. Cottrell, Conference president, we saved until last and her message was a fitting climax for a day well spent. "The Task That Is Ours" was the subject of her address. In this she told of our task in the home and community, and then as Missionary women. We were made to feel that there is no depression for those who drink at the fountain of life, for with Him all things are possible. After a period of meditation, Miss Hall sang prayerfully, "Have Thine Way, Lord." At Mrs. Hegmans request everyone present then came forward and knelt around the altar while Brother Percy Vaughn led us to the throne of grace in such a fervent prayer that we could feel ourselves in the presence of the Holy Spirit.

The following pastors were present and their help and encouragement was indeed appreciated by everyone present: Revs. T. B. Cottrell, H. B. Hawkins, J. E. J. Ferguson, Geo. P. McKeown, Percy Vaughn, F. J. Jones.

A LETTER WORTHY OF PUBLICATION

Dear Brother Snelling: Please find enclosed postoffice money order for $4.73 to be applied on the support of our Memorial Mercy Home. I have presented this worthy cause at all of my churches and to each congregation on my charge. I did this on Mother's Day and as near that day as possible. I tried to lay this matter upon their hearts. This is only a small offering, yet I feel as if each church and every congregation was only given the opportunity to make a free will offering that all would be well and our home would be amply supplied with sufficient funds for its needs.

Yours truly,

G. B. LOVE.

"NEITHER HAS EVER FAILED ME"

(From the Board of Missions)

"I go by faith—100 per cent faith in God and 100 per cent faith in man, and neither has ever failed me," says the Rev. T. Kumagai, that most interesting little blind Methodist preacher from Japan.

Mr. Kumagai came all the way from Japan to America alone and then after attending the International Conference for the Blind in New York, came on to Nashville, Tenn., to renew acquaintance with Methodist leaders whom he had known in his native country.

Blind and traveling around the world alone! When asked how he did it, Mr. Kumagai gave the answer quoted above—"One hundred per cent faith in God and 100 per cent faith in man and neither has ever failed me."

Mr. Kumagai has found the people in America especially kind and helpful, directing him as to how he should go and helping him at street crossings and other ways. America, he declares, measures up well to all his preconceived ideas of the country.

The life of the little blind preacher has not been an easy one. As a little blind boy, he lost first his father and then his only remaining protector, his grandmother, by death. Whereupon the government authorities sent him away to receive training as a masseur that he might be self-supporting. His life was full of hardships and he often thought of suicide. Unhappy and miserable, he spent much time wandering from place to place, often in all sorts of dens of vice.

Wandering thus, he stumbled one night into a little Methodist prayer meeting at Sapporo. At this time he was an avowed atheist, for he could not accept the many gods of the Buddhist religion. In this little Methodist meeting he heard for the first time of the one God, who not only ruled all lands and countries, but over the universe, the stars and the whole realm of nature. This new idea, he says, transformed his whole life.

Sixteen years ago Mr. Kumagai became a Methodist preacher. He is known as unusually capable, regularly getting books from London in Braille on the most profound subjects. By his preaching, his tract distribution and his personal interviews, he is constantly trying to pass on to his people the "good news" which has changed his whole life. Mr. Kumagai is a close friend of Kagawa, the outstanding Japanese Christian leader in the world today, and the leader of the great "Million for Christ" movement now going forward in Japan. Mr. Kumagai's wife is a Bible woman in the same church of which he is pastor.

Mr. Kumagai expects to spend a year in study at Drew University before returning to Japan. Here he plans to write a history of his life.

DRINK TRADE PROSPERS, CRIME GROWS UNDER "GOVERNMENT CONTROL"

Toronto, Ontario, (Special).—"Official reports just out show that Canadians spent legally for intoxicating liquor, in 1930, the enormous sum of $192,589,568, which is almost double the amount of the national drink bill in pre-war days, when the old license system was in full swing," declares Ben H. Spence, a Canadian journalist, in a statement to a representative of the American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation.

"Similar systems operating in the United States, as effectively as they do in seven Canadian provinces, would pile up an American drink bill of over $2,500,000,000 for a single year.

"This Canadian expenditure is $30,034 less than in 1929. The slight reduction, however, is more than accounted for by the lowering of liquor prices in several of the provinces. As a matter of fact," continued Mr. Spence, "the consumption of liquor in Canada is increasing in startling fashion, notwithstanding the economic depression and the great falling off of tourist trade. Other business may suffer, but the legal 'Liquor Traffic' flourishes, and bootlegging is increasing.

"There has been established in the provinces of Canada a marketing set-up for the disposition of the product of Canadian distilleries, wineries and breweries, even more satisfactory and profitable, in many respects, to the manufacturing liquor trade than the old license liquor system ever was.

"Today, what is to all intents and purposes a system of chain liquor stores, spreads over eight of the nine provinces of the Dominion. The Nova Scotia chain, however, was only established last November. It is just getting into running order. Figures for that province are not included herein.

"These nation-wide selling agencies include twenty-five distilleries, fifty-two wineries and eighty-four breweries. This constitutes the manufacturing end of the business. In addition, there are 413 government liquor stores, 138 brewery agencies, 1480 beer saloons, 1829 beer shops, 297 clubs, 708 hotels and restaurants (selling wine and beer), 122 other selling agencies of various kinds, a total of 161 manufacturing establishments and 4987 retail establishments, a grand total of 5148.

"Beer by the glass is sold in beer saloons in British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba and Quebec. Wine is sold at licensed hotels and restaurants in Quebec. Spirituous liquors are sold only by the governments in all the provinces.

"A study of this selling set-up gives the answer to some claims that are made by those who advocate such systems. Four things may be noted:

"First: 'Private' not 'public' ownership is supreme.

"Of the 5148 liquor selling establishments, only 588 are owned and operated by any government. 4560 are privately owned and privately operated by private capital for private profit. Further, all the liquor sold by the 588 government establishments is purchased from private manufacturers or dealers and before the governments gets it, pays its toll of private profit to private interests.

"Second: 'Sale' not 'control' is the dominating characteristic.

"In the very nature of the case, the government does not, and cannot, control liquor either before it purchases it or after it sells it. The only time the government can or does control any liquor is during the brief period the liquor stands harmlessly upon the shop shelves, in containers with the cork in. As soon as that liquor becomes a potential danger to the community, as it is in the hands of the consumer, with the cork out, the government has not and cannot have control over it.

"Third: The 'saloon' or 'bar room' persists though under another name.

"A place where liquor is sold or consumption on the premises is actually a 'saloon' no matter by what name it may be called. While there are no places called 'saloons' in Canada, 2,607, or more than one-half, of the total number of the liquor-selling places, sell beer by the glass for consumption upon the premises. Moreover, the moral effect and influence in the community of the government controlled liquor dispensaries closely resemble that of the old saloon.

"Fourth: 'Bootlegging' or 'illicit sale' has not been abolished.

"On the contrary, it is very definitely on the increase. Convictions for violation of liquor laws in 1922 were 8500. In 1929 they were 19,327. The drink bill given above is only for legal sale. To arrive at the actual sum that drink costs the drinkers of Canada, allowance must be made for this fact. Canada's total liquor bill is probably over $200,000.000.

"Viewed from the standpoint of those who make and who wish to derive a profit from the sale of liquor, and those who buy, and wish to derive sensations of intoxication from the consumption of liquor, government liquor 'control' so far appears to be a success; but from the standpoint of those who seek to remedy the evils of alcohol it clearly leaves much to be desired."—American B. FROM COALVILLE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Decell: I am before you again begging a small space in your paper in which to thank you for the wonderful paper you are giving us and at the same time to give a few news items from the Coalville charge, by which I truly hope to enable myself to interest more of our people in taking the Advocate.

I have been a subscriber to the Advocate for nearly fifty years and I have found it to be to me and my church like the sail on the ship that carries itself and the load of the ship. The Advocate will pay for itself and greatly carry the load of the church if only we could get our people to take it and give it the merited opportunity.

I believe we have sent you more subscriptions than ever sent in before on this charge and we will never be satisfied until we have it paying its weekly visits to every home. How a professed Christian can neglect his church paper I cannot see, and again how any pastor can in any sense neglect to see that every family takes the Advocate, is a greater surprise. The pastor can have no greater helper than the Advocate—a paper that informs his people and instructs them in the work of the church with such wonderful force as to impel them to stand by the pastor and the church. My experience in the ministry for 46 years has convinced me that everywhere you see a church that takes the Advocate you find a church that pays the pastor and stands by the church and where you find a congregation that will not take the organ of the church they are invariably behind with all their assessments, the pastor not excepted.

There has been raised several thousands of dollars this year for the building of a very fine church in the Coalville community. This church is one of the best I have ever seen, in fact the most beautiful frame building I have ever seen used for a church house. This building is just about finished and paid for. Now we needed the building and we have it and are happy to have it, but at the same time it looks to me the man who raised the money for this church, going up into thousands of dollars, if he had the correct idea of things would busy himself in seeing that every poor family had the Advocate. In other words, if a man can build a fine building like the new Coalville church he ought to be able to raise the money for the more important things, such as his "Special Mission." The church paper and other important things. It is true that our people are destitute of money. The Coalville charge is in the worst financial condition in its history, it is a fact that the membership are unable to do much themselves, but I believe that if a man can get money somewhere to build a fine church he could get money somewhere to see that his poor people had the church paper.

I have but a short time longer to stay on earth and I am determined to spend the last days of my life in fighting for larger subscriptions to our church paper, which can visit our sick people and our homes every week, whether or not the pastor can. And also for larger collections for missions, the world's greatest need.

Your brother,

REV. L. FAYARD, L. E.

Human Progress and National Destiny

The progress of its people determines the destiny of the nation. A progress that sustains growth and presages a high destiny must of necessity bear marks of more than material development; it must possess spiritual character.

America Proof of Progress

The United States of America was born to a high mission. Her commercial and industrial development, educational and scientific advance, social and spiritual vision, witness that she has made progress, and certifies capacity for fulfilling her mission. In the large, there is encouragement, but there are particular problems which beset her course and emphasize attainment of a higher national life is to be at the cost of struggle and sacrifice. The abolition of human slavery and the outlawing of the liquor traffic did not complete the triumph. There are momentous issues before the republic: reduction in armaments, a more equitable distribution of wealth, prohibition, protection against unemployment, care for the aged, preservation of a virile patriotism, respect for the Constitution and obedience to law are but a few of the major items in the task. Likewise, there are grave menaces facing the nation: acute atheism, defiance of authority, communism, moral laxity, lawlessness, and spiritual unconcern.

The World Not Hopeless

The Christian can no longer limit his interest to his nation alone, but he is concerned for the well-being of all mankind. Our times register a restless world. One that is yet submerged in grief over the death of millions, staggering under debts and depression with animosities and rivalries raging in the capitals of the nations. In the face of such facts is there hope for progress toward a better future? The Darwinian theory that progress is inevitable has turned out to be no more than the evanescence of another Arabian Night's dream. Its futility has been proven. So much is this true that there has settled upon the hearts of many a pall of pessimism, and Dean Inge and Spengler lead a school who have put modern garments on Plato's cyclical theory that life may be no more than "progress and regress within bounds of unchanging shores," which is to say that the world is to be no better than it has been. Still, the hope for a better tomorrow is not a conclusion without an adequate premise, progress has been made and many continue to believe that further progress is conditionally possible.

The Inextinguishable Gleam

Isaiah and other Old Testament prophets sang of a new future for mankind. Isocrates and Seneca caught the gleam. Plato hoped for a New Republic, as crude as it was. Queen Elizabeth in her "Great Design," Henry the Fourth's "The Christian Republic," and Sir Thomas Moore in his "Utopia" led out the Anglo-Saxon mind toward a better future. Kant, in his "Perpetual Peace," opened a window through which Germany might look toward peace, but Nietzsche and his school shut the blinds. These longings after a better future have been reciprocated in our land by such worthies as William Penn, Benjamin Franklin and Woodrow Wilson, a crucified knight of an unrealized aim, and many others. To secure a nobler destiny for the nations requires more than disbanding armies and dismantling navies, however important that may be; it demands defeat of wrong and the triumph of Truth. Peace is no more a supine yielding to evil than it is belligerency towards others. The picture of peace that shows a lion and a lamb grazing under the mouth of an old rusty cannon mounted among the daisies, with a child in the midst, is less real than that of a man in his garden killing weeds and cultivating food and flowers to be shared with others. Evil has a way when removed in one form of breaking out in new departures and seers of a better day have too often limited their vision to temporary comforts and negative processes.

The Full Orbed Sun

"The Son of Righteousness has risen with healing in his wings." Jesus Christ has become the desire, need and necessity for all nations. It is not a platitudinous and intolerant insistence upon small matters to say again that Jesus and His way of living is the only hope for national survival and security. John Morley says, "No permanent transformation of society, we may be sure, can ever take place until a transformation has been accomplished in the spiritual basis of thought." Jesus is more than a wayshower to the nations; He is the vital force of progress and as they come to know Him and practice His principles their progress is assured. The Church has a mission to all nations. It is not through regulatory enactments and supervisory control to bring the nations to Christ, but by a living faith and a holy walk to carry Him to the nations. The Word is, "I, if I be lifted up; I will draw all men unto me." To reverse the order and endeavor, Titan-like, to lift the world is to fail. The Church is to build men more than she is to manage them. With her glorious mission of salvation she can help the nations to a high destiny. For, as Dr. James Orr asks: "What did Christ come for if not to impart a new life to humanity, which, working from within and outward, is destined to transform all human relations, all family and social life, all industry and commerce, all art and literature, all government and relations among peoples till the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ?" More than a reflector of the light of the Son, the Church is the conveyor of His redeeming grace to the nations.

Shadows on the Dial

Substitutes for the antagonists to the ways of the "Prince of Peace" for man and his government have made a confusion of tongues. The Marxian theory, and its progeny, would make climate and food the controlling motives in men. Good climate, plenty of food and physical comfort have a here and now appeal that leads man on his stomach to his destiny. A snake heaven isn't very inspiring. If these be the sole objectives in life then nations may get along without God, religion, virtue and property. Equable climate, convenient houses and dainty dishes offer too low a goal for humanity.

The humanistic scientists who claim that man's personality is produced by the "cosmic elements of his environment" would achieve a higher destiny for the race by eliminating God and enjoy the benefits of a society which faith in Him has built. No sane person discounts the value of the contributions to man's knowledge, convenience, and comfort, which have been made by men who have studied and used nature's laws. The new knowledge may inform, but it cannot redeem. The old Socratic idea that the more a man knows the better he is, continues a fallacy which has been more harmful than the ancients' idea that the world was flat. These new intellectualists have plied the years with their penny page philosophies and panaceas until their devotees would substitute calculus for Christ, chemistry for Christianity and sociology for salvation and crucify youth on a question mark. Human progress does depend upon the diffusion of knowledge, but the content of that knowledge comprehends, "To know Thee, the only true God and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent." To face a bewildering future with confidence, the nations must make their way not through the shadows of powerless substitutes, but in the light that comes from the face of the Son of God.

TAXES TOO HEAVY AND OFFICIALS TOO COSTLY

BY BISHOP WARREN A. CANDLER, D.D., LL.D.

Following the World War our people fell into habits of unprecedented extravagance. They wasted many millions on pleasures which were hurtful to their souls.

The habits of personal extravagance naturally led to habits of public extravagance.

The federal, the state, and the municipal governments all fell under the spell of this wasteful spirit. Needless offices were created and appropriations were made which exceeded all reason. By consequence, taxes were increased.

Many of the things, for the procuring of which taxes were levied, were good things; but governments, like individuals, must forego many good things for lack of adequate means to supply them. Apart from any questions of wrongdoing, the increased taxation which has been laid upon the people has burdened people beyond endurance.

Some months ago the writer of this article pointed out the evil and danger of excessive taxation. The article was read by a good woman who suffered much by the burdens laid upon her. Referring to my article she wrote me: "I am only a small sufferer, but I have suffered. I am a widow with a mortgage of $2500 on my home which was made seven years ago. I still carry the mortgage and am barely able to keep up the taxes and interest on the mortgage. I am doing any work I can get to help meet these demands. My place has deteriorated in value, yet I pay more taxes now than when I bought it and I face the possibility of having it sold for taxes. During this terrible depression I am about to be forced out of my home."

There are thousands of helpless widows who are thus made to suffer by extravagant appropriations and intolerable taxes; and such persons should not be forgotten when officials who have authority to tax people levy taxes which cannot be borne by multitudes of good but poor people. Much of this excessive taxation grows out of the creation of unnecessary offices in order to supply salaries for officials whose services are not really required for the public good. Politicians too often pay their politcal debts by the process of creating offices for their friends and supporters. Thereby, they purchase place and power by extracting money from all the people.

To lay needless burdens on the rich is nothing less than a crime; but to lay such burdens on the poor is cruel criminality.

The public service does not require the number of officials now engaged and paid out of public funds.

Salaries in every walk of life—commerce, agriculture and all other departments of life—have been reduced; but salaries of public officials have in the meantime been increased. The final outcome to such process will be popular discontent of a perilous nature.

No patriotic person fails to appreciate education, but there are expenditures in the realm of the common schools which bear too heavily upon the people, especially upon poor people. Teachers must learn to share the hardships of the people rather than to agitate for higher salaries, by which intolerable burdens are laid upon widows like the case of the woman from whose letter a passage has been quoted. The cause of education will be greatly damaged by excessive salaries paid to teachers and a greater number of teachers employed than the work really requires.

Education at public expense is really a form of socialism, and if its cost be increased unreasonably, we may expect courses in the direction of socialism even more radical.

Next to religion, education is the most important interest of the nation; but if it is purchased by extravagant taxation, it may easily produce a generation which looks to the public treasury for everything it desires. Such education may suppress individuality, discourage individual effort, and dissipate individual energy. No child can grow to usefulness in mature life when such a child is accustomed to look to the state for all good things. The main function of good government is to do justice rather than to distribute good things.

There is much extravagance made to promote interests far less sacred and important than education. Many officials, having power to impose taxes, seek to project the government into the world of business; but into that sphere government should never enter. It should protect the rights and promote the welfare of the people; but to do this, government is not required to enter the commercial world.

One of the favorite methods of political extravagance is the excessive issuance of bonds. The large increase of bonded indebtedness by state governments, city governments and the federal government has had no little to do with creating and continuing the present period of depression. Money has been drawn away from productive industry and invested in bonds which will have to be paid sooner or later by taxation. The bonded indebtedness of the various forms of government in our country is beyond all calculation.

It is a very easy thing to vote for the issuance of bonds that a later generation must pay, to sell the future good for present gratification.

When civil government enters into the field of business, it almost always conducts its enterprises extravagantly. Projects cost, when paid for by public taxation, far more than they cost when undertaken by wise business men.

Many reforms may be needed in our country, but none is more urgent than the reduction of taxation and the bringing of public enterprises within reasonable limits of cost.

The people delude themselves when they imagine that they get something for nothing when it is paid for out of governmental funds. Civil government has no money to expend except that which it extracts from the pockets of its citizens, and the cost of its collection reduces the amount that can be expended for the public good. The carrying of money from the pockets of the people into the treasury of the government and bringing it back to the people is an expensive process. The process gives salaries to officials while it decreases the good which the people might secure for themselves if they did not look to government to do for them what they can better do for themselves.

In truth, civil government is always a pauper until it secures the money of the people. The omission of taxes for one year by civil government would leave its treasury empty, and the laying of excessive taxation for one year creates funds which invite extravagance and lead to corruption. Where the carcass of public funds is found the eagles of public plunder always gather. Appropriations and expenditures made today would have been thought impossible and unthinkable twenty-five years ago. Step by step encroachments have been made upon the money of the people until taxation has become intolerable.

The time has come for the people to curtail their extravagance, foster economy, and seek prosperity by industry and frugality; and their governments must follow in the same course. The period of wild expenditures must speedily come to an end, or the gravest consequences of popular discontent and disorder will follow.

CANADIAN LIQUOR CONTROL

By Rev. A. M. Shaw

Since many of the unwary may fall for the propaganda that is offering the "Canadian System of Liquor Control" as a cure for the ills of Prohibition, some facts and figures should be passed on; and I beg our ministers to pass them to their people. Mr. Ben H. Spence, a Canadian journalist who has spent much time in Washington, D. C., as a correspondent, and has made a careful study of liquor laws, both in the United States and Canada, publishes in the Christian Century, January 28 and February 4, 1931, an illuminating array of such facts and figures. I give only a few at this time.

First, there is no "government system," but nine different provincial systems in the provinces of Canada. And none of them is a "control" system; but all are government sale systems, affording liquor manufacturers a most profitable marketing set up. Canada has today the following liquor selling agencies: Distilleries, 25; wineries, 52; breweries, 84; government stores, 413; brewers' agencies, 138; beer saloons, 1,480; beer shops, 1,829; clubs, 297; hotels and restaurants, 708; other selling agencies, 122. A total of 5,148.

Second, the governments neither own the selling agencies nor control the liquors. The government-owned liquor stores number only 588; the remaining 4,560 selling agencies are privately owned. Even the liquor sold in government stores is bought from breweries and distilleries owned and controlled by private companies, who not only make their full profits on their products, but, because the government sells for smaller profits than private concerns could—thus reducing the retail price—increase their sales and make larger profits, without any risk, than would be possible if they sold to private retailers. The government of Ontario sells beer at cost. The brewers make all the profits; and the government does not "control" these liquors before they reach the government stores; nor for one minute after they pass into the hand or stomach of the customer!

Third, the facts explode the fiction that, "There are no saloons in Canada." Of the 5,148 liquor selling agencies in Canada, 2,607—or more than half—sell by the glass for consumption on the premises. And many of these "beer parlors"—differing from saloons only in that the patron sits down to drink!—have the moral equivalent of the disreputable oldtime "Ladies' Entrance."

Fourth, the new sales system works. In 1929, in seven provinces: British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick—from a population of 9,147,900, the system took in $192,619,602.84. Supposing such a system to operate with equal efficiency in the United States—with its population about twelve and one-half times that of Canada—the sales would amount to $2,407,745,033 per year. If drinking increased in the United States as it is increasing in Canada, the amounts thus squandered would soon double. The increase in Canada in six years, from 1923 to 1929, was as follows—amounts being given in gallons:

Spirits	1923	1,734,779
Spirits	1929	3,130,119
Malt liquors	1923	35,436,690
Malt liquors	1929	61,868,349
Wine	1923	1,112,260
Wine	1929	5,450,642
Total liquor	1923	38,383,729
Total liquor	1929	70,449,110
Absolute alcohol	1923	2,418,438
Absolute alcohol	1929	4,693,870

"Give them beer, and they won't want whiskey," we are told. The figures above show that they have been given beer in Canada; for in the four years, 1925 to 1929, beer drinking increased 39 per cent. But in the same four years there was an increase of 96 per cent in the use of spirits!

Such government supervision of the liquor traffic as obtains in Canada has several advantages, one of which is that you don't have to make yourself ridiculous by such a patch-work of guessing, exaggerating and deliberate lying as is the "estimate" of America's drink bill recently offered by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. The figures given above are official, and you may rely on them. And—they damn the "Canadian System." We'll see more later.

Vinton, La.

EVANGELINE BOOTH ON PROHIBITION

When Miss Evangeline Booth, commander of the American Salvation Army, was recently in England, the Manchester Guardian asked her for two articles setting down her personal experiences of prohibition in the United States.

"The report of lawlessness in the United States," said Miss Booth, "should be read in the light of history. It is a drama that covers a century.

"In 1900 the rate for homicide was 2.1 per 100,000 of population. Under the regulation of liquor that rate rose rapidly to 7.5 in 1919—that is, it was more than trebled. Such crime is, as it were, cumulative, and once permitted, tends to increase by its own momentum. But despite the moral disturbance of the war and all that we have heard about bootlegging, the rate was in effect stationary at 8.6 in the year 1925—a figure which means that the whole of these illegalities and degradation of public life including a high rate for murder and banditry, were antecedent to prohibition, and, indeed, created the situaiton with which prohibition has to grapple. The question is not whether prohibition has led to lawlessness. The only question is as to the extent to which the enforcement of prohibition is progressively restricting the lawlessness organized by the liquor trade before this measure was adopted. Before prohibition and after prohibition the drink trade, legal or illegal, has flourished most where crime also has been most prevalent.

Not a Failure

"Faced by prohibition, the liquor trade wherever it is carried on, and in whatever form,with its associated less respectable enterprises has been mobilized as a solid unit of opposition. Every weapon of ridicule and of misrepresentation has been brought into play against 'the noble experiment,' and in particular, the avenues of publicity have been filled with assumptions that prohibition is a hypocritical failure. That is what liquor in Europe wants Europe to believe, but for Great Britain, confronted by a serious industrial situation, it is important, surely, to study the facts of the case."

Miss Booth here speaks of the economic benefit of the policy and says that in one great corporation employing 101,000 workers, there were only thirty men discharged in 1927 for intoxication, whereas in 1915, there were 202 employes out of 8,755 dismissed for drinking, or 2.31 per cent. In 1925, only 118 men out of 13,100 were so dismissed, or .89 per cent. In 1911, the number of discharges for liquor on an elevated railroad in New England was 81. In 1926, it was 8.

"The population of the United States is today 122,000,000. A reasonable estimate of the position is that 100,000,000 people are keeping the law. Of the remaining 22,000,000 we may assume, perhaps, that half are well-to-do and half are of the wage-earning class. From these figures, sufficiently near the mark to form a basis for judgment, it will be seen at once that statistics may be very misleading to the eye. Suppose that each of the 22,000,000 wets spends a dollar a week on liquor, it would work out at over $1,000,000,000, or 200,000,000 pounds sterling a year, yet for each consumer it would only mean one drink every three days."

Miss Booth states as her opinion that under the Eighteenth Amendment, consumption of liquor has been enormously reduced from the pre-prohibition level of 22.66 gallons per capita annually, and she quotes Thomas Edison as being of the opinion that the liquor law is sixty per cent enforced, which is rather higher than the enforcement of many other laws. Miss Booth continues:

"The enormous decrease of expenditure is reflected in statistics, the meaning of which is unmistakable. In 1919 there were 18,000,000 savings accounts, totalling $13,000,000,000. Ten years later there were 53,000,000 accounts, totalling $28,500,000,000. The sensational increase in insurance tells the same story. When the Eighteenth Amendment was carried, the amount of insurance was under $30,000,000. It is now over $100,000,000,000. It has more than trebled, and the numbers of holders of stocks and bonds doubled.

"Among numerous testimonies, here is one from a firm where there used to be 50 to 100 wives after every pay-day asking for advances because the husband's wages had gone to the saloon. In three years under prohibition there were two such applications. I can testify to the fact that such instances could be found in every centre of industry from coast to coast."

The Salvation Army, which is feeding 35,000 persons a day in New York, finds the relief problem much simplified after the open saloon has been closed, according to its commander. "If a law is 90 per cent enforced, the American claims it is 90 per cent a success," says Miss Booth. "The Englishman answers that it is 10 per cent a failure, but the real question is not whether 'anyone can get it,' but how many people do get it. When the theatres are closing on Broadway, the throngs go to the ice cream counters and cafes. In the smoking room of a Pullman train, some traveler may pull a flask from his hip pocket, but the main body of passengers travel for days and nights, taking their meals en route without indulging in any breach of the law."

She states as her opinion that the workers of the United States "have been benefited beyond all expectations by the Eighteenth Amendment. A new era has been inaugurated.

"In Chicago we have two hotels; respectively, they accommodate 511 and 250 men. Ten years ago one-third of these men would have been described as drunks. On a given Sunday not long ago, selected because Sunday falls on a week-end, it was found that there were six drunks only. In January, 1930, the larger of these hotels was subjected to an unforeseen test. Owing to a report of smallpox in the city, all of the men were vaccinated without notice by an independent physician. Not one man was found to be under the influence of liquor—this in Chicago. On February 25, 1927, the Associated Press reported that in Chicago the two or three drunks per week did not justify the continuance of the Night Court, which hitherto had sat regularly to deal with such cases.

"From industrial homes and other institutions and from stores for the disposal of second-hand goods the verdict is all in the same direction. In New York City the famous night consecrated to rescue of drunks from streets and parks has had to be abandoned. There were not enough drunks in the streets and parks to justify that special evangelism. The experience of many charities tends in this direction."

Formerly, says Miss Booth, the Bowery in New York was notorious as the great crime center of the metropolis, if not of the country. There were four saloons to every block. The lodging houses in those days were notorious for the peddling of rum, dope, stolen goods, and debauchery. Prohibition has driven all this illicit traffic under cover and out of sight.

"There was much bootlegging going on in the days of the saloon—more than in these days. In fact, I have had policemen, some of them now retired, tell me that the Bowery and Third Avenue was a veritable hell on earth from the vice and brawls that went on, not only from the gangsters and the tough boys of the neighborhood, but many families as well.

"A great change has come over the working man. They have gotten away, more or less, from the idea of the treating habit. They have gotten away from the habit of visiting the corner saloon; they are now saving their money, a fact which can be corroborated by the savings institutions, and some of the largest in New York City are located on the Bowery. There are more banks on the Bowery today than there are places where drink can be bought. I am speaking of the Bowery itself, not counting the intersecting side streets. There are more places of worship on the Bowery than speakeasies. There are more restaurants and coffee-houses; in fact, the Bowery is the headquarters of jobbers who supply equipment for the 'Coffee Pot' in greater New York. They are the substitutes for the saloons."—Exchange.

MEMOIR OF DR. BEVERLY CARRADINE

By Rev. Nolan B. Harmon, Sr.

The funeral service of Dr. Beverly Carradine was conducted at the Crawford St. Methodist Church on April 25th by the writer, assisted by the pastor, Rev. J. L. Neill. He was born at the Altamont Plantation near Yazoo City on April 4, 1848, and died April 22 at Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Carradine enlisted in 1864 in the Confederate Army, Camp K, Wood's Regiment of Cavalry, Wirt Adams Brigade under General John Morgan. He was honorably discharged when the war closed. He graduated from the University of Mississippi at Oxford in 1867, accomplishing four years' work in two years. He studied medicine one year. His first marriage was in 1870, to Miss Laura Reed, a granddaughter of Senator Thomas B. Reed, of Mississippi. His second wife was Modesta Burke, whom he married in 1884, she being the daughter of Glendy Burke of New Orleans, once president of the Canal Bank of New Orleans and well known for philanthropic and educational activities. She passed the Great Divide about eight years ago.

He lived first in Louisiana in 1870, thence moved to Virginia. He joined the Methodist Church in 1874 and was called to preach the same year. His first charge was Vernon, Miss., in 1875, the second Madison Circuit in 1876. Then followed his appointment to Brandon, Miss., where he served from 1877 to 1881. His next charge was Crystal Springs in 1881 and from there he was appointed to Crawford St. Methodist Church, Vicksburg, where he served from December, 1881, to December, 1882. He was then transferred to the Louisiana Conference where he was stationed at Rayne Memorial, New Orleans, remaining there from 1883 to 1886. His next appointment was Carondelet St., New Orleans, then the largest and most influential church in the Louisiana Conference. While at Carondelet St., Dr. Carradine called to his aid Rev. W. W. Hopper, of the Mississippi Conference. The meeting in which Brother Hopper assisted was the transitional period in Dr. Carradine's ministerial life. It was then he heard the preacher say: "We bring to you the Wesleyan Doctrine of a Second Work of Grace." It was this doctrine which swept the church for a decade and more and created two distinct schools of theologians. Dr. Carradine accepted the doctrine and through his wonderful personality and luminous exposition of the Scripture gathered about him a great company from all denominations. By preaching and writing he became the leading exponent of what is termed "The Second Work of Grace." The Carondelet St. congregation was so captivated by his personality and preaching that they provided means for him to go to the Holy Land in 1890.

Upon Dr. Carradine's return from the Holy Land he was transferred to the St. Louis Conference and stationed at Centenary, St. Louis, and afterwards was sent to the First Methodist Church, serving there during the years 1892 and 1893. It was this last year that he entered the evangelistic work, in which he toured the country until 1918. In a meeting at Seattle he met with a serious accident which forced him to give up his active work. As a preacher he was marvelously gifted. The late Bishop Linus Parker arose at 11 o'clock one Sunday morning in the pulpit of Rayne Memorial Church and said: "We sent you first the great W. E. Munsey. His sermons were theological treatises. But he seemed not to suit you. Then he was followed by the eloquent evangelistic preacher, John Matthews, who swept crowds before him like the wind whirling autumn leaves. At last we sent to Virginia and selected John Hannon, popular with all classes and noted for his tropes and oratory, and he did not seem to suit you. So we have gone to the piney woods of Mississippi and have sent you Beverly Carradine and we are certain he will be acceptable to all." The prophecy was true, for the congregation loathed to let him go. He was declared by some to be the greatest American preacher. Dr. C. K. Marshall, himself a great orator and eloquent preacher, said to a number of ministers: "Beverly Carradine is the Spurgeon of the American pulpit." He was a charming writer. He published thirty-five or forty books before his retirement. His booklet on the Louisiana State Lottery was instrumental in abolishing that evil. His trenchant pen stabbed that monster to the heart and drew its life's blood.

His book, "Sanctification and the Old Man," caused many of his ministerial brethren to differ from him. When Dr. John Matthews was pastor at Centenary, St. Louis, Dr. Carradine at the same time being at the First Methodist, Dr. Matthews said: "We do not oppose him. We just do not believe as he does." He once edited the Christian Witness, the Gospel Herald, and also the Way of Faith. In 1911 he went to England and there held successful meetings, drawing great crowds to hear him. He wrote many stories in Mississippi Negro dialect.

Many of the older members of the church and the older preachers will recall his contributions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. One especially will be remembered, entitled "Zion Is Looking Up." It was an amusing criticism upon the indifference of many, for Zion was on her back and had to look up. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Wightman and also held elder's orders. He was a pastor nineteen years, editor three years, and an evangelist twenty-one years. There is scarcely a great camp meeting or great church from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Gulf of Mexico to the Northern Lakes, where he has not held wonderful revival services. During his retirement he was constantly writing and there are unpublished a great many books, chiefly on the "Inner Christ" and "Christology." The late Dr. C. G. Andrews once said: "Dr. Carradine has the most spiritual and largest prayer meetings I ever attended." The writer once heard him say that in pastoral visiting he would ask if that was the usual number they had at prayer meeting, and immediately the question would come as to how many were there. He would then tell them to come next Wednesday night and see. They generally went and he held them. At times there was scarcely standing room at the prayer service. This great preacher and writer passed to his reward far away from his place of burial. His request was to be laid to rest by the side of his first wife, in Vicksburg. His two sons, Guy and Reed, also lie there until the resurrection.

Robert Louis Stevenson, just before his death in the Samoan Islands, wrote:

> "This be the verse you grave for me,
> Here he lies where he longed to be,
> Home is the Sailor, home from the sea,
> And the Hunter, home from the hill."

And thus his last request has been fulfilled and he lies by the side of his loved ones in Vicksburg.

HONOLULU LETTERS

By Donald Lewis

Dearest People on Earth: Yesterday I received several letters, one from the family, one from mother ten pages long and every word of it was enjoyed, and a mighty sweet one from M——. You know, people, she certainly is a wonderful little girl. I went out in the beautiful park behind the school to read them. This park is a wonderful place to read letters. The palm trees and flowers are so pretty, and the grass is very nice to lie on, and this is where a man can enjoy life to the fullest.

Well, I will tell you a few things I have been doing lately that have been very interesting. One day I went down to the water front and went on two boats to look them over. One of them was the Empress of Canada, of the Canadian Pacific lines, and the other was the President Grant, of the Dollar steamship line. Both boats were on their way to the Orient, and while I was down there a boat came in from the Orient, and of all the Japanese you never saw the like. I certainly did enjoy going through the Empress of Canada. It is an English boat and the rooms and dance hall are certainly pretty. There were also a swimming pool and gym on it. There are four floors of passenger rooms and an elevator. It would indeed be an experience to ride on that boat. The President Grant is not so large; but it is a nice boat also.

Another day I went through the U. S. Cruiser S. S. Louisville. It is a brand new boat, and believe me it has some class to it. This is its first trip, and it is certainly up to the last minute in modern attachments. One of the boys of the boat was ordered to show us around. They are leaving here for the South Seas, and then back to San Diego. From there they will try the speed of the boat, which is estimated at 36 knots. The sailors and marines on deck will get to cross the equator, which will be quite an experience for them.

One night I attended a lecture down town at the Academy of Arts on "The Great Expedition in the Gobi Desert." It was very interesting. They found many things that have aided science in the study of ancient life. They found dinosaur eggs that are estimated to be 95,000,000 years old. Now, who would believe that? They have plenty of such eggs, some were half-hatched, others more so, and still others dried up I suppose. We have quite an opportunity to get good lectures here by people who make this a stop on their way from place to place. This man, Dr. Anderson, is on his way back to the desert for more research work. He has movie pictures and slides of all his expeditions.

The other day, on a trip up the mountain, I saw some flowers of kinds I have never seen before. I love to get out and study nature and think how wonderful God is to make for us this beautiful place to live in. How people can live and enjoy the blessings of this world and not believe in God is more than I can understand. I looked out from the top of the mountain and saw two of the other islands of this group. I also looked out to sea for a great distance, and there was nothing but water. It makes a fellow feel, when he is out here, that he is on a mighty small dot of this world's surface.

One Saturday night when I was on duty, and after the boys were supposed to be in bed, I went up to check on them and found that they were causing trouble, and had taken the knob off the light switch so I couldn't turn on the light. I made them all get up and told them that if I couldn't find out who did it that they would have to stay up all night. All night we stayed up. There were two other teachers who helped me. We made the boys stand up all night. We didn't find out who did it, so we promised them the same thing for the next night if we didn't find out during the day. We found out, so they were very quiet the following night. They slept all Sunday afternoon and night. I slept a little Sunday morning and then again that night until about eight the following morning. They were certainly a tired bunch. You see that is a good way to punish them. It is hard that the whole bunch has to suffer; but it does them all good. They had been making noise for several weeks after time for them to go to bed, so I thought it would do them all good. Of course I suppose my name was taken in vain Sunday and many times since; but it is for their good. The boys know that I mean what I say. We have to do what we say we will, or they would not mind us at any time. They are different from white pople in many ways. Things have to be pouded into their heads, and then sometimes it won't stick.

Dr. Headley, our Methodist pastor, recently announced that he was leaving this charge in June for a mission charge on one of the other islands. He said that his work is with the Orientals and missionary work. In this present appointment he isn't with Orientals very much. He has for years been a missionary in China. His work on the other island will be much harder and I suppose for less pay; but he feels he is called to go there. This church will certainly miss him; for he is a wonderful preacher.

I love you all, and will sign off by saying.

DONALD,

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUPERANNUATES

To the Conference Claimants, Mississippi Conference.

My Dear Brethren and Sisters: I take this method of informing you that unless some large sums of money are sent in to our Conference treasurer in the next few days it will be impossible for us to pay anything the second quarter. We had great difficulty in borrowing for the first we sent you. We all know the situation of the banks in our country.

My dear friends, you need not write us telling how hard it is, for we know it and feel it. It is indeed painful to me to write this, but our hands are tied.

May I appeal to the pastors to help us, and help us now.

W. M. SULLIVAN,
Chairman Finance Board.

BARNEY WASHINGTON LEWIS

1867 - 1931

While Rev. Henry P. Lewis was on the Mt. Carmel charge, there was born to him and his devoted wife, Rebekah Ann Lewis, their fifth child, a son, whom they named Barney Washington. This son came to rejoice their hearts on November 11, 1867.

The son was sent to the public schools of that time, and in due course was placed in Kavanaugh College, Holmesville, and later in Centenary, at Jackson, La. Having been born into a home of prayer and faith, B. W. Lewis early in life accepted Christ and united with the Church. At the age of twenty he was licensed to preach, and during his student days at Centenary he decided to join the Conference. He was admitted on trial into the Mississippi Conference at Crystal Springs in 1889, a Conference over which Bishop Galloway presided. The Minutes show the interesting fact that his first two appointments were as junior preacher on the Benton circuit, where his father was pastor. His first appointment where he was pastor in charge was the Lehanon circuit, in the Brookhaven District. At the Conference held in Brookhaven in 1891 he was ordained deacon by Bishop E. R. Hendrix, and at the Conference in Yazoo City in 1895 he was ordained elder by Bishop W. W. Duncan. Thus is the official record of the beginnings of the ministry of one who was to travel for forty-one years as an itinerant Methodist preacher. He served the following charges: Lebanon, Martinsville, Pleasant Grove, Fannin, Chunky, DeKalb, Bucatunna, Scooba, Enterprise, Summit, Utica, Flora, Eden, Stillmors, Meadville, Homewood, Foxworth and Georgetown.

Crystal Springs was the place of his admission on trial and it was destined to be the place of another important event in his life. It was there on July 24, 1894 he was married to Miss Ella Fry. She proved to he an ideal preacher's wife and aided his work as they itinerated together for thirty-seven years. To their home was born six children, who are: Mrs. Christine Crawford, Marion, Ark.; Mrs. Lentie Kyzar, Alexandria, La.; Mrs. Julia McDaniel, Chicago, Ill; Barney W. Lewis, Marion, Ark.; Mrs. Rebekah Williams, Miss Evelyn Lewis, Jackson, Miss.

Barney Washington Lewis was a Methodist preacher to the manner born. His father was for 46 years a memher of the Mississippi Conference; his uncle, W. B. Lewis, was for a long time a member of the same Conference, and his four hrothers, J. T. and H. P., of the North Mississippi Conference, and J. M. and O. S., and a hrother-in-law, Rev. W. A. Terry, of the Mississippi Conference. Revs. B. F. and W. H. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference, are cousins.

In pastoral ministry I have known no man to surpass him. His gospel messages were uplifting, and he looked after the work of his charge with faithfulness. He loved to sing and not only was a member of the Lewis Brothers' Quartett that so often stirred Annual Conferences, but he led his own people and taught the little children in singing the great hymns of the church. As presiding elder, it was my privilege to observe his preaching and pastoral work into the third year. His reports were accurate and ready and he endeavored to do something for every interest committed to his hands. I have known no pastor to begin more happily or successfully, and to he more universally loved than he on his last charge, Georgetown. When he became sick with influenza and it developed that he was critically ill, the anxiety of his people was expressed in prayers and sympathetic attention for his welfare, and not only his people but many of other denominations.

During his last illness, he had the ministry of physicians, devoted wife, nurses, children, brothers and members, hut above all, the Great Physician was by his side. One of the last words he ever uttered, he said: "I have talked it over with Christ and it is all right." Thus the blessed Saviour whom he preached to others and with whose gospel he had comforted others failed him not in the hour of his passing.

The funeral services were conducted from around the altars of his own pulpit at Georgetown on the morning of January 30, 1931, by Rev. J. L. Decell, his presiding elder, who was assisted by Rev. J. T. Leggett, J. E. Gray, G. F. Winfield, and C. A. Schultz and F. L. Applewhite. These services were attended by all the members of his immediate family, his two sisters, Mrs. W. A. Terry, and Miss Pattie Lewis; and twenty-seven of his brother ministers, which included his four brothers and brother-in-law, and Revs. Jones and Wilkinson, Baptist pastors, a large number of members of his last and former charges and many other friends. His body was laid to rest in the Georgetown Cemetery with his stewards serving as active pallbearers, and his brother ministers as honorary.

Rev. J. E. Cunningham, a member of the North Mississippi Conference, in writing to Rev. H. P. Lewis concerning the death of Brother Barney, said: "Barney and I used to play ball together more than forty years ago. He played hard and always fair, like the gentleman he was. And so he played for more than sixty years, modest, and unassuming, yet unafraid. I think there was not a finer, truer man in Methodism."

Brother Barney was always fair with his hrethren. He was conscious of his own human frailties, but one of the virtues of his life was to refrain from speaking unkindly of others.

When Barney Washington Lewis died in the early morning, January 29, 1931, the circle of five preacher brothers was broken, yes, and a parsonage home was bereft and a minister beloved was taken from the ranks of the Mississippi Conference Brotherhood, hut "It is all right." God is love, and Heaven is a home where loved ones and friends will meet to part no more.

J. L. DECELL.

AN APPRECIATION OF MRS. WILLIAM H. SAUNDERS

By Rev. Charles William Crisler

Mrs. James Dunton Saunders, wife of Rev. W. H. Saunders, pastor Methodist Church at Picayune, Miss., passed to her reward at the parsonage home, Wednesday morning at one o'clock, January twenty-eighth, nineteen hundred thirty-one, surrounded by members of her immediate family. Her health had not been good for several years but the end came without warning and as a distinct shock to her loved ones and many friends throughout the State. Several hours after a short walk with her husband around the block late Sunday evening for her usual exercise she was stricken with double pneumonia which indicated its fatal nature from the beginning. After two days of physical suffering she died early Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Saunders, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Dunton, was horn in Clinton, Miss., February 3, 1871, six months after her father's death. After receiving liberal educational training in ths old Central Female Institute, now Hillman College, she taught for a short time in the public schools of Louisiana and Mississippi before her marriage.

In the home of her childhood she grew into that beauty of character and gentleness of spirit which were distinguishing traits throughout the years of her useful life and which universally commanded love and admiration of all who knew her. As a daughter, sister, friend, neighbor, wife, mother, and Christian, she possessed characteristics which at once set her apart as a woman of superior charm and magnetic personality. She was patient and adaptable, always loving the place and people where she lived and labored, breaking the strong ties of friendship always with regret when, according to the rule of an itinerant's family, she was compelled to move to a new field of service and conquest.

On October 25, 1893, she was happily married to Rev. W. H. Saunders, then a member of the North Mississippi Conference, and immediately joined her husband's church, having been reared a Presbyterian. In the winter of 1900 she and her young hushand were transferred to ths Mississippi Conference where they have labored ever since. For thirty-seven years she shared the hardships and sacrifices with the abundant joys and privileges of a Methodist preacher's life, but possessing the rare gifts and graces of a cultured Christian woman she met privations heroically, shared the mutual burdens graciously, and did her part faithfully and efficiently. Her sudden translation was a distinct loss to society and the cause of our holy Christianity, and a great bereavement to both her family and friends.
